Between the time when he left his desk at Washington on Aug. 18 last and his return to the capital on Dec. 20, William H. Taft, secretary of war, set foot in eight countries, was received in private audience by the emperor of Japan, with honors accorded only to the most exalted personages; opened the first assembly of the Filipino people, delivered two speeches of international importance and participated in a score of other events, which were factors in as notable a journey as was ever undertaken by a representative of the United States government.

Primarily, the object of the secretary of war's trip was to utter the words that would officially set in motion the machinery of practical self-government in the Philippines. All the other correlated occurrences of the journey were incidental to this, and in a measure subordinate.

Keeps Promise to Filipinos.

Mr. Taft, when he was governor of the Philippines, promised the people for whom he labored so long and so arduously that when they should prove their governing capacity to an extent to warrant the right of franchise being extended to them he would personally preside at the inauguration of the initial assembly of the Philippine islands. It chanced that the convening of the assembly fell upon a time when the secretary could ill afford to be absent from the United States. Public affairs were no less pressing than the interests of self, which argued against a prospective candidate for president of the United States quitting the country regardless of the fate of his interests. But Mr. Taft had passed his word. It never for a moment occurred to him to put off the Filipinos with a subterfuge.

Girdles the Globe.

Courtesy demanded that he stop in Nippon on the outward passage, in recognition of tokens of esteem conferred upon him previously by the mikado and the Japanese government. Considerations akin to these, based upon the broad and disinterested foundation of official etiquette, induced him to tarry for a brief interval in Russia to call upon the czar. Demands of time, coupled with an anxiety to return to his duties in Washington by the speediest path, impelled Mr. Taft to choose the route through Russia, instead of the way across the Pacific.

To those who followed the secretary in the wake of the receding sun until the globe had been girdled, the tour was replete with wonderful and brilliant pictures, of scenes set in the environment of the glowing and romantic East, the austere winter aspects of Siberia, the barbaric splendor of Moscow and the Kremlin, and the broad far-flung vistas of gay, glittering St. Petersburg.

Showered With Honors.

But the dominant figure in the memories which each member of the party has garnered will always be that of the most traveled American statesman of his generation, serene, dignified and affable, simple in his bearing and language, and accepting modestly, not for the individual but as the secretary of war of a world power, the honors showered upon him.

In a brief resume of the trip it is possible to touch upon only a few of the major happenings of the scores of incidents that are worthy to be ranked as momentous. When Mr. Taft sailed from Seattle on Friday, Sept. 13, there were shakings of heads and portentous mutterings by believers in the ominous. The signs and tokens of evil must have operated in inverse ratio, for the tour was free from accidents, illness or untoward happenings.

Guest of the Mikado.

Representatives of the emperor received Mr. Taft at Yokohama on Sept. 28 and conveyed to him his imperial majesty's pleasure that the secretary should be his personal guest. Unusually enough, the invitation proceeded directly from the emperor, and was not transmitted through the American embassy in Tokyo. This made Mr. Taft the personal guest of the emperor and not merely the official guest of the empire. The Shiba palace was placed at the disposal of the secretary. The beautiful little building, together with the famous gardens surrounding it and the emperor's entourage of servants, equipages and guards were entirely within the control of the secretary.

It was in Tokyo at a dinner given in his honor by the municipality, that Mr. Taft uttered the first of his speeches which reflected importantly upon international affairs.

Dispels War Cloud.

So earnestly that his tone carried positive conviction, coequal with his words, the secretary of war told the Japanese, as well as the world at large, that talk of war between their country and ours was foolish and futile. The effect of his declaration and the weight which is universally conceded to a statement emanating from Mr. Taft was immediately discernible in the tone of the press comments, both in the Japanese and American newspapers, as well as in the journals of Europe, which ceased considering hostilities even as a speculative probability. In so doing they proclaimed the efficiency of Mr. Taft as the bearer and the mouthpiece of a message of peace. As a matter of fact, Mr. Taft's peace talk was a spontaneous deliverance. It was inspired only a few hours prior to the banquet by the publication in sundry papers of flagrant and ridiculous misrepresentations of the object of the sending of the American fleet to the Pacific.

Emperor's Tribute to Taft.

Fetes, dinners and entertainments of the most elaborate character, offered by high Japanese officials and attended by representative Japanese soldiers, sailors, statesmen and men of affairs filled to brimming the four days' sojourn of the secretary in the mikado's capital. The crowning tribute to Taft, the man, and Taft, the secretary of war and representative of the United States, came in the reception of the secretary by the emperor. His majesty chatted in private with Mr. Taft for half an hour. Mrs. Taft was given an audience by the empress, and, with the secretary lunched with their majesties. The citizens of Yokohama presented Mrs. Taft a magnificent silver tea service at a reception arranged for her and the secretary.

The effect of Mr. Taft's visit to Japan, and his peace speech became apparent before he left the country on Oct. 5 in the mild and friendly editorial utterances, even of the yellowest of the organs of the Japanese jingos.

Important Utterance.

What occurred when Mr. Taft reached Shanghai on Oct. 8 resolved itself into a matter of international moment, chiefly through the energy and acumen of leading members of the American Association of China. American trade interests in China, as well as our diplomatic interests, have not prospered as they should have done. Mr. Taft was asked to be the guest of honor at a banquet given by the association and to deliver an address. An intimation was supplied that what the Americans in China wanted was an utterance approximating ex-cathedra from a representative of the government as to what was the attitude of the United States in and toward China.

This was supplied by the secretary with the clarity, emphasis and straightforwardness with which he invests all of his utterances, public or private. By reason of his familiarity with conditions in the Far East, Mr. Taft was able to speak understandingly and to the point.

Maintain Open Door.

Although his remarks were conservative, they embodied a ringing declaration of the intentions of the United States to maintain the open door in China, and were, as well, expressive of our disinterested friendship toward China and of our disposition to see that she did not suffer from the aggressions of other nations.

Outbursts of applause, which could not be restrained, proceeding from the 500 Americans who surrounded Mr. Taft, greeted his speech. Impetus to American trade and confidence in the disposition of our government to back up Americans engaged in legitimate enterprises in the kingdom were infused into the minds of the Americans in China by Mr. Taft's talk.

China's Good Feeling.

China's eagerness to proclaim her confidence in the integrity of our position with respect to her, as well as to make amends for the futile boycott against Americans and American products, was evinced by the elaborate garden party arranged for the secretary and Mrs. Taft by the thirty-two Chinese guilds in Shanghai. Such a demonstration as they prepared for Mr. Taft has no parallel, it is said, in Chinese history. In Shanghai the acts of the guilds was regarded as an apology for the boycott, and as a tacit admission of regret that such a step had been countenanced.

Official and private courtesies were bestowed upon Mr. Taft in the few hours during which the party remained in Hongkong before transshipping to Manila.

Ovation at Manila.

The capital of the Philippines was reached on Oct. 15, the day prior to the organization of the new assembly. His welcome was a revelation to one wont to witness so-called enthusiastic demonstrations by the slow-pulsed peoples of the temperate zones. If ever a man came into his own it was Mr. Taft on that day when his launch moved slowly up the narrow Pasig under arches of flowers and between banks lined with cheering men and women, whose welcoming shouts were drowned in the roar of the cannon from Fort Santiago's ancient brown ramparts. Then they laughed. When he left Manila three weeks later they cheered as loudly, but their laughter had given way to tears which dropped even from the eyes of the men who tossed the traces by which the horses were attached to his carriage, and drew the secretary behind them to the landing stage.

Americans Join in Greeting.

Americans, as well as Filipinos, joined in manifestations of keenest appreciation of Mr. Taft's presence and of the personal sacrifice he had made to come to the islands at that time. Every condition that rewarded Mr. Taft's official scrutiny was a vindication, in a greater or a lesser degree, of our Philippine policies. Especially was this true of certain principles laid down by Mr. Taft to govern our attitude toward the Filipinos and tenaciously adhered to, in spite of opposition bitter, rabid and unjust.

Up to the present the assembly's demeanor has supplied one of the most potent arguments in support of Mr. Taft and his constant, unshakable faith in the Filipinos. Instead of immediately degenerating into a disorderly, hot-headed, irresponsible mob of radical tendencies, as it was freely prophesied it would, the assembly, although by political selection radical in a large majority, has borne itself temperately, conservatively and with as much decorum as is exhibited by most similar bodies throughout the world.

Every Day a Day of Work.

Every day of Mr. Taft's sojourn in the Philippines, excepting Sunday, was a work day. Matters had been held awaiting his coming and his decision until the accumulation was enormous. There also were official functions seemingly without end, as well as tours of inspection of public works and institutions, until even the superabundant vitality and energy of the secretary were taxed to the limit in the tropical climate of Manila. So that various subjects might receive his attention Mr. Taft was compelled to extend his stay in Manila nearly a week. It was not until Nov. 9 that the homeward-bound party steamed past Corregidor and headed northward for Vladivostok, aboard the Rainbow, flagship of Rear Admiral Joseph Hemphill, and escorted by the cruisers Galveston and Chattanooga. Aides waited upon Mr. Taft when the Rainbow ended her eight-day run to Vladivostok on the morning of Nov. 17. They acted as his escorts until he departed for Moscow on the 19th.

Trip Across Siberia.

Vladivostok was swarming with soldiers, martial law prevailing because of the attempted revolution of a few days before in which the crews of four torpedo boats mutinied. Most of the mutineers were shot summarily, or hanged later. By reason of the disturbed state of the town the secretary and his party remained aboard the Rainbow. Eleven days, from the 19th to the evening of Nov. 30, were spent in continuous travel over the great Trans-Siberian railway to Moscow, through the waste places and mountains of Manchuria and Mongolia, by the cold, blue waters of Lake Baikal, climbing the pine-topped Urals, traversing the fertile steppes of Western Siberia, the future granary of the earth, then snow-covered for the most part, and so into the populous regions of Eastern Russia.

Tragic Episode at Moscow.

It was in Moscow that the secretary and his companions came to realize what it means to live under the oppressive shadow of fear, in constant apprehension of assassination, remorseless and unheralded. One night Mr. Taft dined with Herschelmann, the governor general of Moscow, proceeding directly from the table to the train for St. Petersburg. Before noon the next day the secretary's host was made the target of a bomb, which destroyed his horses and the sleigh in which he was riding, killing his coachman, but sparing the governor general. The American colony in Moscow were the hosts of Secretary and Mrs. Taft. A special performance was given for them in the court theater and varied and elaborate courtesies lavished upon them. One morning was devoted to an inspection of the Kremlin and its wonderful treasures of historical as well as of intrinsic worth. Through the low-groined, vault-like apartments in the ancient citadel the secretary roamed, pausing by the bed of Peter the Great, the traveling sledge of Catherine, lifting the battle swords and armor of the famous soldier-potentates of the realm and inscribing his autograph in the visitors' book kept to record only the signatures of sovereigns, princes and men and women of rank or of deeds of accomplishment.

Shows Taft's Kindly Nature.

It was here that an incident occurred which displayed an insight into the kindly nature of Mr. Taft, of the human interest side of the man. Standing somewhat in the shadow as the secretary passed from one department to another was a member of the palace guard, a time-blasted soldier with a gray beard that swept his breast. Upon his tunic were pinned medals for service and valor, a dozen of them. The gray cloth of the left sleeve of his uniform was nearly covered from shoulder to cuff with service stripes of gold braid. The soldier was very old. His eyes were filmy, but he stood rigidly and straightly at salute. Through an interpreter the secretary questioned him:

Touches Old Veteran's Heart.

"How long have you been in the service?"

"Forty-eight years, excellency."

"How old are you?"

"Seventy-five, excellency."

"You have been wounded?"

"Seven times, excellency; four times by bullets, three by saber."

The secretary offered his hand. The old man lifted his shoulders a trifle, but did not bring his left palm from his cap or thrust out his right.

"Tell him that if his officer will permit it, I should like to shake hands with him," said the secretary. The officer granted permission, and the old man, tears of pride brightening for a moment his dim, cloudy eyes, laid his hand within that of the secretary. The secretary wished him long life and told him good-by, passing on, while the veteran clicked his heels together proudly, if slowly, and with his lean, trembling fingers touched his cap's visor.

Short Stay in St. Petersburg.

St. Petersburg held the party only two days, the last entertainments comprising a dinner by the Americans in the city and a dinner and a reception by the minister of foreign affairs. Berlin was reached on the evening of Dec. 6, where the secretary dined with Ambassador Tower and later attended a reception at the American embassy. Official escorts remained in attendance until he boarded the steamship for home at Cuxhaven on the following day.

Mr. Taft was compelled, because of the necessity of no longer delaying his return to his duties, to decline invitations extended by Emperor William, King Edward and the president of France.

STRIKES.

"Everybody admits their destructive character (strikes) and that all means should be resorted to to avoid them. Still there are times when nothing but a strike will accomplish the legitimate purpose of labor. . . . I know at times there has been a suggestion in the law that no strike can be legal. I deny this. Men have the right to leave the employ of their employer in a body in order to impose on him as great an inconvenience as possible to induce him to come to their terms. They have the right in their labor unions to delegate to their leaders the power to say when to strike. They have the right to use persuasion with all other laborers who are invited to take their places, in order to convince them of the advantage to labor of united action. It is the business of the courts and of the police to respect these rights with the same degree of care that they respect the rights of owners of capital to the protection of their property and business."

TAFTISMS: PITHY AND POINTED

Extracts From Speeches of Secretary Taft on Important Issues of the Day.

The following are striking passages from Secretary Taft's address on Capital and Labor, delivered before the Cooper Union, New York city, Friday, Jan. 10, 1908:

"Labor needs capital to secure the best production, while capital needs labor in producing anything."

"No amount of lawlessness on the part of the labor striker will justify the lawlessness on the part of the employer. Such a course means a recurrence of civil war and anarchy.

"A second abuse which employers are sometimes guilty of is what is technically known as blacklisting, by which laboring men, solely because they may have been advocates of a strike, or have been against a compromise in a labor dispute are tagged by one employer of labor, and all other employers of labor are forbidden on penalty of business ostracism to give them a means of livelihood. This is unlawful and should be condemned. It is the counterpart of the boycott, or indeed it is itself a boycott in one form."

"The really practical justification for popular representative government rests upon this truth that any set of men or class in a political community are better able to look after their own interests and more certain to keep those interests constantly in mind than the members of any other class or set of men, however altruistic. This truth is fully exemplified in the course which legislation has taken since labor has organized and has made a systematic effort to secure laws to protect the workingman by mandatory provision against the heartlessness or ignorance of the employer."

+ + +

"What the capitalist who is the employer of labor must face is that the organization of labor—the labor union—is a permanent condition in the industrial world. It has come to stay. If the employer would consult his own interest, he must admit this and act on it. Under existing conditions the blindest course that an employer of labor can pursue is to decline to recognize labor unions as a controlling influence in the labor market, and to insist upon dealing only with his particular employes."

+ + +

"It has been said that the writ of injunction has been abused in this country in labor disputes. I agree that there has been abuse in this regard."

+ + +

"The laboring man should be the last to object to the rapid accumulation of capital in the hands of those who use it for the reproduction of capital. The thoughtful and intelligent laborer has therefore no feeling of hostility toward combinations of capital in lawful business methods."

+ + +

"The capitalist, however wealthy, who is willing to devote his nights and days to the investment of his capital in profitable lawful business or manufacture, and who studies methods of reducing the cost of production and economizing expenses therein should be regarded with favor by the workingman, because, while his motive is merely one of accumulation, he is working not only for himself but for labor and for society at large."

+ + +

"Certainly the laborer who is thrown out of his employment by the hard times is innocent and suffers more than the capitalist, whether innocent or guilty, who has money to live on meantime until prosperity shall be restored.

"The conclusion I seek to reach is that the workingman who entertains a prejudice against the lawful capitalist because he is wealthy, who votes with unction for the men who are urging unjust and unfair legislation against him, and who makes demagogic appeals to acquire popular support in what they are doing is standing in his own light, is blind to his own interests, and is cutting off the limb on which he sits."

"Organized labor, if acting with reasonable discretion, can secure much greater promptness in the advance of wages than if it were left to the slow operation of natural laws, and in the same way, as hard times come on, the too eager employer may be restrained from undue haste in reducing wages.

"The organization of capital into corporations, with the position of advantage which this gives it in a dispute with single laborers over wages, makes it absolutely necessary for labor to unite to maintain itself."

"The diverse interests of capital and labor are wider considerably than the mere pecuniary question of the amount of wages. They cover all the terms of the employment and include not only the compensation, but also the circumstances that affect the comfort and condition of the workingman, including the daily hours of work, the place in which they work, the provisions for their safety from accident, and everything else that is germane to the employment."

+ + +

"Those leaders of labor unions who have learned to pursue conservative methods have added greatly to the strength of their cause, and have given the unions a much better standing with the great body of the people who are neither capitalists nor laborers, and only favor the greatest good for the greatest number."

LONG-CHERISHED AMBITION IS THRICE BRUSHED ASIDE

High Sense of Public Duty Prompts Secretary Taft Three Times to Decline Elevation to the Supreme Bench of the United States.

Desire to Complete Important Work Which He Had Carefully Mapped Out Caused Taft to Refuse Promotion Offered by President Roosevelt.

Upon three different occasions Secretary Taft has put aside the opportunity of attaining the goal of his earlier life's ambition—a place upon the supreme bench of the United States—in order that he might continue his activities in other fields of usefulness and complete the arduous work which he had undertaken.

In 1900 President McKinley had in mind a plan for the establishment of a civil government in the Philippine islands. That such an undertaking would be no light task Mr. McKinley well knew, and for the work he wanted a man strong, honest and tactful. It chanced that about this time the president was traveling on a railroad train in company with his former law partner, and the man whom he afterwards made a member of the supreme court of the United States, Justice William R. Day. The president expressed his feelings regarding the Philippines freely to Justice Day. He indicated the sort of man he wanted for the work in the Philippines.

"You have described Judge Taft," was the remark of Justice Day, who for years had been associated with Judge Taft on the Sixth judicial circuit.

Mr. McKinley accepted the suggestion gladly, for he, too, had some acquaintance with the abilities of Judge Taft. Forthwith Judge Taft was summoned to Washington. There was a conference at the White House at which Mr. Elihu Root, then secretary of war, was present. The president in his clear, straightforward manner explained to the Ohio jurist the situation in the Philippines, what his plans were and how he hoped to accomplish them: Judge Taft to undertake the work.

Judge Taft was equally frank. "Why," he exclaimed in astonishment when the president had concluded, for he had had no previous knowledge of the president's purposes, "I am not the man you want. In the first place, I have never approved of keeping the islands."

Mr. McKinley explained that such had not been his desire either, but that certain obligations toward the Philippines had been forced upon the United States, and that it was impossible, even if there was an inclination, to shift the responsibility.

Judge Taft then saw the matter in another and a new light. The acceptance of the president's invitation then appealed to him as a matter of duty. Judge Taft thought the matter over, resolved to put aside the ermine and to undertake the difficult task because he believed he could accomplish a good work in the islands.

Two years later while governor general of the Philippines Judge Taft was afforded another opportunity to realize his most cherished ambition. There was a vacancy on the supreme bench, and President Roosevelt, fully cognizant of the great work which Mr. Taft accomplished in the islands, and as a sort of reward for that service tendered him the position. This time there was no hesitation on the part of Mr. Taft in declining the honor, and in doing so he was obliged to overcome the strong will and determination of so determined a man as President Roosevelt. The offer of an appointment to the supreme court went to Gov. Taft by cable. Gov. Taft's declination came back promptly by the same means of communication, accompanied by the explanation that his duty was in the Philippines. President Roosevelt is not one who readily submits to a refusal. Back to Gov. Taft went a cablegram couched in no uncertain language; it was virtually a command that Gov. Taft should come home and accept the position which he had offered him. It went on to say that the president saw the whole situation, took a broad view of the matter, and was in a better position to judge than was Gov. Taft. But Gov. Taft refused to reconsider his determination. He knew that the work which he had carefully mapped out had not been completed, and so forcible and clear did he express himself to the president that the latter saw the light as Gov. Taft saw it, yielded to him and cabled again, "All right, old fellow, you may stay."

Although broken in health from overwork in the tropics, Gov. Taft did remain in the islands for two years longer, returning to this country only to give an account of affairs in the islands before the committees of congress which were called upon to legislate for the Philippines. Subsequent developments in the working out of the plan for the establishment of a civil government in the Philippines proved the wisdom of the course which Gov. Taft pursued.

Finally when the work was completed Gov. Taft relinquished his post in the islands and returned to Washington to become secretary of war in President Roosevelt's cabinet. Again there came another opportunity for the president to place Mr. Taft upon the supreme bench, and again he refused in order that he might carry on the work which he had begun as secretary of war. It does not fall to the lot of many men to put aside high judicial honors three times and then to be nominated for the highest office in the gift of the American people.

GENEALOGY OF THE TAFTS

In the last years of her life the mother of the secretary of war, Mrs. Louisa M. Taft, who died recently, devoted much of her time in compiling the history on this side of the water of the Taft family and of her own family, the Torreys. Secretary Taft's first ancestor in New England, according to data compiled by the secretary's father, the late Judge Alphonso Taft, was Robert Taft. Robert was a housewright, who settled in Menton, Mass., in 1669, going there from the province of Braintree. Joseph, one of his five sons, married Elizabeth Emerson, who was the granddaughter of the first minister of Menton. Joseph's second son was Capt. Peter Taft, and his third son was Aaron, who was born in 1743. He prepared for Princeton, but, although he established a reputation as a scholar, had to leave college before he graduated. Aaron lived at Uxbridge, Mass., and Townshend, Vt., and married Rhoda Rawson, the great-great-granddaughter of Edward Rawson, secretary of the Massachusetts Bay colony from 1650 to 1686.

Peter Rawson, the third son of Aaron, was successively a school teacher, a lawyer, judge of the common pleas, judge of the probate court, judge of the county court of Windham county, was a county commissioner and for many years a member of the legislature. He removed to Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1841, where he died and left one son, Alphonso, the father of Secretary Taft.

Alphonso Taft was born in Townshend in 1810, and was graduated from Yale in 1833. He taught in an academy in Ellington, Conn., and was a tutor at Yale. Following his admission to the bar in 1838 he went to Cincinnati. One of the notable cases was his appearance in the United States Supreme court, where he successfully argued the claim of the city for a bequest, which was the nucleus of the endowment fund for the University of Cincinnati.

Judge Taft's first wife was a daughter of Judge Charles Phelps of Townshend, Vt. When she died in 1851 she left two sons, Secretary Taft's half brothers. Charles Phelps Taft is the proprietor of the Cincinnati Times-Star. The other son, Peter Rawson, died in 1888. Judge Taft's second wife was Louisa Maria Torrey, whom he married in 1853. Her first son died in infancy. Secretary Taft was the second son, being born in 1857.

"The fact that Secretary Taft throughout his long and honorable public career has received promotion continuously is simple evidence of his capability and reliability and of the sterling integrity of his character. In October, 1906, he was sent to Cuba by President Roosevelt to direct the restoration of order, and discharged the delicate duties with signal sagacity and success."

Mrs. Taft was a direct descendant from William Torrey, who went from Somerset, England, to Weymouth, Mass., in 1640. He was long a member of the house of deputies and was invariably chosen clerk of that body. He was a magistrate and a captain in the militia. Mrs. Taft's grandfather, William Torrey, was the fifth William in the line of descent. He was a veritable son of Anak, tradition having it that he was six feet seven inches tall, and proportioned accordingly. Samuel Davenport Torrey was Mrs. Taft's father. Her mother was Susan Holman Waters, daughter of Asa Waters, who founded the village of Armory. She was a granddaughter of Col. Jonathan Holman, who raised a regiment during the Revolution and fought gallantly at the battle of Saratoga. Mrs. Taft's father accumulated a fortune in the West Indian trade, and retired in 1831 to Millbury, Mass.

Mrs. Taft delighted in tracing in William and her other children the striking characteristics which had marked their ancestors. Of her mother Mrs. Taft wrote:

"Mrs. Torrey was a woman of rare endowment and character, well educated for the period, and her highest interest was always in the world of thought. She had an irresistible desire to know the best that had been written in literature and philosophy, and she had the courage to follow the new views of truth, which her active and progressive mind attained, to their conclusions."

This was Mrs. Taft's estimation of the secretary's maternal grandfather:

"Mr. Torrey will be long remembered as a man of marked individuality, of thorough business methods, of inflexible integrity, with a decision and type of character which left a lasting impression wherever he was known. It happened that he was called upon to assist at the burial of many of his juniors.

"'In a green old age,
He seemed like an oak, worn but steady,
Amid the elements, whilst the younger trees
Fell fast around him.'

"Belonging to the heroic age of New England, he never for a moment lost the bearing of a gentleman of the old school. Without office, or the desire for office, he enjoyed the respect of all. To an unusual degree he possessed

"'That which should accompany old age,
As honor, love, obedience, troops of friends.'"

At the meeting of the board of directors of The Highlanding Creamery Association this week it was decided to hire I. J. Thorson by the day to take charge of the building operations, and to employ a sufficient number of other carpenters to complete the building in 30 days.

We see a man looking for a metting at Highlanding last Sunday, and we asked him, what kind of meeting he was looking for! A church meeting; a creamery meeting, or socialist meeting, as we had them all on tap. He concluded to take in the creamery meeting.

County road overseer C. H. Martz, was looking over what is called the town line road from St. Hilaire east to the eleven townships on Friday and Saturday last. This line runs between the towns of Highlanding and Deeer Park and the road is well graded on it to the line of the eleven townships, and it is proposed to extend this grade eastward and give us a good road to St. Hilaire, which would be the nearest market place for the territory lying south of the Red Lake River in the Eleven Towships.

Not Socialists Yet.

Laurance O Toole arrived here yesterday from Crystal N. D. to visit his brother Joe O' Toole. He says that the country out there has an overproduction of laboring men, that have been shiped out there from Chicago, and that they are hireing out to work on farms for fifteen and sixteen dollars per month. Some men just came from the old country and think they are lucky to get such a good job, at such big wages.

We suppose when they have been here a few years they will not work for three or four dollars a day but will sit around and talk socialist politicts, and cuss America, and want to whack up with Rockefeller, or anyone else that has more money than them-selves.

Telephone Meeting.

A telephone meeting has been called to meet at the Highlanding school house on Saturday April 4th, at 2 o'clock P. M. The purpose of this meeting is to form an organazition to build a telephone line from Brunkeberg to Hilda. Let all turn out to this meeting, from the north, south and the east and the west, and try to get one line through the country. This means you. If you want to see telephone lines, come to this meeting.

MARMY'S ROMANCE

By CONSTANCE SMEDLEY

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Marmy played the white-haired father in "The Whirlwind of Sin." Marmy was perfectly contented, and had never had an ambition in the world, except perhaps on one occasion; and then, if Marmy had been handsome and a gentleman—but there! Romances aren't as simple in real life as they are upon the stage; and so Marmy's romance was hardly a romance at all. What little there was took place at Hayfields.

"The Whirlwind of Sin" had had the good luck to get a three nights' bill at the theater there, because "The Sorrows of Satan" had proved a disappointment, and it was a choice of "The Whirlwind" or closing the house.

The company had arrived and Marmy was looking for a place to sleep when Marmy's romance began.

Down the High street came a dashing pair of horses, and behind them sat a young woman, whom Marmy described as a sort of queen. It wasn't her beauty so much as her air of breeding that conquered Marmy. This beautiful young creature looked Marmy straight in the eyes as her carriage passed, and Marmy believes she smiled at him, though I'm not sure but that Marmy is a little fanciful here; for though Marmy was fully satisfied with the frock coat which he had picked up in one of the towns on tour, still his Panama hat and large bow tie detracted from the air of smartness that one could wish for in a gentleman on Sunday.

However, whatever passed between the young woman and Marmy caused him such agitation that by the end of the evening Marmy had made himself a byword in the town, through the way in which he wandered up and down the High street, watching out, though vainly, for her carriage.

On the third and last day, Marmy, while out seeking another glance at the young woman, found himself making for the quiet of the country lanes surrounding Hayfields.

The road on which he stood ran along the hillside; then it twisted, and came back into the valley underneath. He raised his eyes and looked dejectedly along the road, twisting up among the bracken-fern and gorse bushes to the distant sky-line. Then, as he watched, mournful, despondent, the sharp sound of wheels came to him, and over the crest of the hill bowled a dog-cart, with the young woman he had seen in the High street seated in it. The horse was dashing along so quickly that Marmy had only time to grasp the bewildering fact that it was really she, before she had borne down on him and passed him. She was sitting up very proudly and holding the reins with perfect confidence, though Marmy observed at the time there was no groom behind; but she flew by so quickly that he was conscious only of a passionate desire to see her again, and in some way to attract her notice. The whole thing occurred so suddenly that before he knew what he was doing he found himself racing down, across the meadow, to the lower road along which the cart would have to pass in the next few minutes.

Anyway, he had tumbled down the hill, and was over the fence and standing by the roadside when the cart came tearing round the bend, and then, even Marmy, for all his amazing foolishness, saw that the horse was out of hand, and was running away. When the young woman saw Marmy standing there, she thought he had seen her danger from the first, and had dashed down the hill to save her; and according to Marmy, the most beautiful look of rapture came over her face, and if she didn't call out to him to help her, it was only because she had such complete confidence that he would do it.

Marmy has owned since that if he had had time to think he never could have brought himself to touch that horse, for it was snorting and biting the air till it seemed more like a raging lion than a domestic animal; but such is the surprisingness of life that Marmy caught on to the horse's head, and what is more surprising still—for horses were as much a mystery to Marmy as unborn babies—the horse was actually impressed by Marmy's bluff, and stopped. It was such a wonderful moment that, Marmy says, even before he released the panting steed—and you may be sure he got away from the animal as soon as he possibly could—he found himself pinching himself to see if it was really real. Then, as he stepped back, the hedgerows wavered and the skies descended, and he felt the ground slip quietly from his feet and he fell down on the grass right under the nose of the young woman. The heavenly providentialness of this amazes Marmy to this day; for if it had not happened nothing could have saved him from having to drive the lady home, which, Marmy says, he does not see how he could have done, having had a mortal fear of driving.

When Marmy recovered consciousness, he found himself lying on the grass with a sharp piece of flint in the middle of his back and the lovely young woman bending over him.

"How can I thank you, most noble and brave of all the men I ever saw?" said the young woman, according to Marmy.

"Don't mention it," said Marmy, feebly, and trying to wriggle off the flint.

"Poor, poor fellow!" said the young woman, and, to poor, foolish Marmy's rapture, asked if she might have the pleasure of driving him to her home to luncheon, as she would like her aunt to meet him and thank him.

And then Marmy's troubles began. The groom came running along the road at this moment. If Marmy had known what was in store for him at the Hall, uncomfortable as were his feelings in the dog cart, he would have remained in it till the crack of doom!

The meal that followed their arrival at the young lady's home, was, in Marmy's own words, "a record breaker in the anguish line." They had every single delicacy of the season that was difficult to eat. There were green peas so small and soft that it was absolutely impossible to place them on a fork in sufficient quantities to enjoy them. There was asparagus which, Marmy says, they ate with slippers.

Long and luxurious as was the meal, he never had a really hearty mouthful of anything, and it was fortunate that fright and nervousness had taken his appetite away. He daren't even take a sip of wine to cheer him up, he was so afraid of its getting into his head and making him act foolishly.

Marmy says he drew his first natural breath when he had ascended to the front seat of the dog cart and was driving off beside the groom who had been thrown out in the morning.

When they arrived at Hayfields, Marmy directed the groom to drive up to the principal hotel, as he thought he could stand about in the porch in a careless manner till the dog cart had driven off; but he had scarcely descended when the Boots came out to ask if he wanted anything, and though Marmy asked him haughtily not to give him any cheek, he had the humiliation of seeing the groom listening, open-mouthed. As Marmy strode off down the street he saw the groom was getting down, and he knew the Boots would enlighten him fully as to the extent of Marmy's patronage of the hotel.

"Paor, Poar, Fellaw," Said the Young Woman.

I don't think there could have been a more dejected creature than Marmy when he came into the theater that night. He sat on the edge of his basket in the wings and listened to the overture in a dreamy stupor.

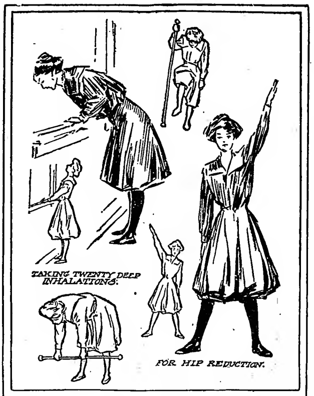
It was an extraordinary evening. I have seen plays fall flat, but I have never seen one fall so flat as that first act did. Marmy did not appear until the second act; and the hero's lofty sentiments passed absolutely unnoticed.

As the orchestra piano was tinkling out the last melancholy bars, Marmy had to take up his cane and handkerchief and make ready to appear. He was disclosed sitting in the garden of his parsonage, and directly the curtain drew up there rose such a shout from the audience that it made poor Marmy think he must be dreaming. He sat blinking his eyes at them for a moment, scarcely understanding what it meant. Then he caught sight of the groom sitting in the front row of the circle hurrahing like one mad; the audience cheered and waved and shouted like people possessed; for the groom had told the story at the hotel, and spread it through the town, just as he had heard it from Marmy's own lips; and as the young woman was the lady of the manor and absolutely idolized, the townspeople could not make enough of Marmy's heroism.

The audience was not content with hooting back everyone who came in front and calling vociferously for Marmy, but when at last Marmy did appear—and the delay was through no fault of his own but entirely that of the hero-manager—the mayor stood up and made a speech on Marmy's daring and handed him a purse as a token of the townspeople's gratitude.

"The Whirlwind of Sin" departed from Hayfields on the morrow, and he never heard of the young woman again, except that she prevented the full account of the accident from appearing in the Hayfield paper, which the mayor had promised should be done. Still, Marmy had had his hero's crown.

PHYSICAL CULTURE



It is during the age of adolescence that girls are most responsive to physical exercise and when their physical condition needs careful watching. Generally speaking, the age from 14 to 18 is the corrective age. Faults and defects which may develop into unattractiveness and serious ailments in womanhood are comparatively easy to overcome then by training. Beauty of face a girl may not possess, but if she is exquisitely molded in form and limb, is graceful in carriage and walk and has the rich coloring, the sparkling eyes and the cheerful, wholesome air that bespeak good health, her irregular features are forgotten in the admiration of her other attractive points.

There is a series of exercises recommended by Mr. Cooper for girls. They are all simple to perform and are effective. He recommends taking them in front of an open window, standing about four feet away from it, facing outward. No matter how cold the weather may be the exerciser will not catch cold, so he claims, if she wears a light dressing gown over her night gown and has her throat and chest protected from the cold. In some of the exercises a bell bar is used. This is a substantial wooden wand, about four feet long, tipped on the ends with wooden balls. It is light and serves only as an incidental feature of the exercises. They can be performed without any apparatus. The first exercise is one of the best for reducing the waist line and aiding digestion. Stand with the feet planted firmly on the floor and a foot or more apart. Grasp the wand or bell bar in the two hands, fingers curved downward over it, and the hands on a line with the shoulders. Bend the body forward with the knees and arms straight and the muscles of the abdomen rigid. Inhale a long breath as the head and trunk are raised and the body swung around to the right side, with the arms, elbows still straight, pointing backward. The head should be erect, the feet in the original position and the whole upper part of the body bent backward. This position stretches the muscles of the sides and abdomen. From the backward position the body should be turned forward again and the head bent low, as at first, and the breath exhaled as the return is made. Next the exercise should be repeated, turning the body to the left side and the motions continued, alternating right and left, for 12 or 15 times.

An exercise to strengthen the intestinal organs, the liver and kidneys is as follows: Stand with the bar vertical in front of the body at arms' length, with one end touching the floor and the other held in the right hand. Without moving the bar bend the head and shoulders forward and raise the left knee up as high as possible and inside the bar, keeping the foot horizontal and the toes pointing parallel with the right foot. Straighten the body, drop the left foot to its original position, then bend forward again and this time raise the right foot inside the bar in the same manner. If this exercise is done regularly every morning the intestines will be kept in perfect condition except in some extraordinary cases, says Mr. Cooper, who considers it one of the most important for young girls to take. The general state of health and the clearness of the complexion depend largely on the intestinal condition, and two or three minutes of this exercise are worth twice as many doses of medicine.

"Every deep breath of fresh air is a gain for beauty and health," says the instructor, and here is an exercise for deep breathing which can be taken by any girl. Stand before an open window with the feet planted far apart and the body well balanced. Stretch the arms out straight from the shoulders at the sides and hold them rigid. Then bend the body forward, at the same time swinging the straight arms in a circle in front, one arm moving inside of the other. Take a long, deep breath as the arms are started in the circular motion and make them describe circles twice before the arms are dropped at the side of the body and held perfectly rigid while the breath is exhaled. Twelve double dips of this kind with 12 long breaths will soon show a development of the chest and an improvement in the breathing and circulation.

For straightening the spine, correcting any slight defects and developing the chest at the same time the following exercise is unequaled: Take the bell wand and imagine that it weighs at least half your own weight. Hold the weight rigid in your hands straight out in front on a line with the shoulders. Raise the bar over the head, still imagining that it weighs 60 or 70 pounds. Take a deep breath as the bar is raised, and as it goes upward slide the hands toward the ends of the bar and then drop it gently over the shoulders, with the arms away and reaching as far back as possible. This exercise brings all the blood from the end of the spine and makes it circulate rapidly.

FROCKS FOR EVERY DAY.

Regulation Sailor Suit Has All Its Old-Time Popularity.

The little everyday frocks of wool batiste Indian cashmere, French gingham and Indian-head cotton are still being developed in the jumper and one-piece box-plaited models, made high-necked with the turn-down collar scalloped and embroidered by hand, or cut out in round or square outline and worn with a guimpe of white batiste or Victoria lawn. The regulation sailor suit with the short plaited skirt is an excellent model for early spring wear and is most attractive when developed in navy blue tennis flannel or serge, with collar, shield and cuffs in a contrasting color of flannel, trimmed with black or white braid, according to taste. These sailor suits are among the most satisfactory models for the growing girl and are especially suitable for that awkward age between 11 and 15, when everything else seems too young or too old. Pique or linen, in white, pink or blue, with collar and shield in light colors if the dress be white, and in white if the dress be in colors, is pretty for best dresses during the coming summer, and many of these suits have the belt made of the same material as the collar and shield, though a better plan is to have it of the same material as the dress, as this seems to decrease the size of the waist and hips.

IS RICHEST INDIAN

LON HILL OF TEXAS HAS FORTUNE OF $6,000,000.

Penniless Choctaw Brave Only Few Years Ago—Promoted Railroad, Bought Land Options and Money Flowed In.

Houston, Tex.—The richest Indian in the world is Lon Hill of Harlington, Tex. His wealth is conservatively estimated at $3,500,000. He owns more than 300,000 acres of the best land in Rio Grande valley. Every foot of it can be irrigated. At the rate which other land in this section of the same character is selling, $20 per acre for this 300,000 acres would not be an excessive figure. Figured on that basis this Indian is worth $6,000,000.

The marvelous thing about the great fortune which Hill now possesses is that he has accumulated it all during the last six years. He located at Brownsville, 25 miles below Harlington, a little more than six years ago. That was before a railroad had been built into the region. It was then 160 miles to the nearest railroad outlet to the outside world. Hill says that when he arrived in Brownsville he was "worse than broke." He did not have any money and his debts amounted to $200. He had been practicing law at Beeville, Tex. He had made a good reputation as a lawyer in southwest Texas, but he reached the conclusion that the time was not far distant when the valley of the lower Rio Grande would be transformed from its primitive wilderness of chaparral into cultivated farms and gardens.

When he had got well settled in the border town this progressive Indian began the work of interesting capital to build a railroad to the place. When the building of a road was practically assured the redskin lawyer began to secure options upon the rich valley land adjacent to Brownsville. This wild land was covered with an almost impenetrable growth of brush and small trees. It was considered almost unfit for grazing purposes, so thick was the chaparral upon it. The value placed upon the land ranged from one dollar to $1.50 per acre and some of the owners perhaps thought that they were robbing the prospective purchaser when they fixed those prices in the options. Hill, for his own purposes, was willing at that time to concede that he was agreeing to pay an exorbitant price for the land. The land which he had bought for one dollar and $1.50 per acre went to five dollars per acre before the railroad had reached Brownsville. When the line was finished and the influx of investors and homeseekers began land values mounted higher and higher.

Lan Hill.

Mr. Hill just now is completing a system of irrigating canals and ditches to irrigate 40,000 acres of his land. The main canal is more than 25 miles long, and runs from the Rio Grande to a point a short distance east of Harlingen. More than 25 miles of laterals are being built. All of this land is to be planted in sugar cane. Three large sugar mills are to be erected to care for the cane crop when the land is placed in cultivation. Sugar cane in the Rio Grande valley grows to a height of 12 feet and tests show that each stalk yields one and one-third pounds of sugar. One acre of cane will make about 12,000 pounds of sugar, worth about four cents a pound.

In addition to his vast landed holdings Hill owns the townsite of Harlingen. This place is situated at the junction of the main line of the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico railroad and its branch line which runs to San Fordyce.

Hill is married. He is devoted to his wife and children. Concerning his early life, he says:

"I punched cattle in Indian territory when a young man. I saw the need of an education and had acquired a fairly good start in that direction when I entered the University of Texas. I was 27 years old when I began to study law. I went through the University of Texas and graduated in the law department of the University of Virginia. I now am 49 years of age."

Patience—I have taken a great dislike to those new neighbors of ours.

Patrice—What's the matter—phonograph or chickens?—Yonkers Statesman.

The Evolution of Household Remedies.

In the early history of this country, EVERY FAMILY HAD ITS HOME-MADE MEDICINES. Herb teas, bitters, laxatives and tonics, were to be found in almost every house, compounded by the housewife, sometimes assisted by the apothecary or the family doctor. Such remedies as picra, which was aloes and quassia, dissolved in apple brandy. Sometimes a hop tonic, made of whiskey, hops and bitter barks. A score or more of popular, home-made remedies were thus compounded, the formulae for which were passed along from house to house, sometimes written, sometimes verbally communicated.

The patent medicine business is a natural outgrowth from this wholesome, old-time custom. In the beginning, some enterprising doctor, impressed by the usefulness of one of these home-made remedies, would take it up, improve it in many ways, manufacture it on a large scale, advertise it mainly through almanacs for the home, and thus it would become used over a large area. LATTERLY THE HOUSEHOLD REMEDY BUSINESS TOOK A MORE EXACT AND SCIENTIFIC FORM.

Peruna was originally one of these old-time remedies. It was used by the Mennonites, of Pennsylvania, before it was offered to the public for sale. Dr. Hartman, THE ORIGINAL COMPOUNDER OF PERUNA, is of Mennonite origin. First, he prescribed it for his neighbors and his patients. The sale of it increased, and at last he established a manufactory and furnished it to the general drug trade.

Peruna is useful in a great many climatic ailments, such as coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, and catarrhal diseases generally. THOUSANDS OF FAMILIES HAVE LEARNED THE USE OF PERUNA and its value in the treatment of these ailments. They have learned to trust and believe in Dr. Hartman's judgment, and to rely on his remedy, Peruna.

The Buck Coon of Shadow Lake

AN EPISODE IN WOODS AND WATER EXPLOITS

By
Ernest McGaffey
Author of Poems of Gun and Rod, Etc.

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

As soon as I heard that the ducks had begun to come in I packed my grip for Sowders', and sent Dib Sowders a telegram. That night I reached his farm, and the next night we were at camp.

Early the next morning I skipped out by myself to try a few ducks before we got things settled down so as to hunt together, and I found a likely-looking spot in among the willows after paddling a couple of miles from camp. I rowed in to some drift and willows, put out five live decoys, built up a little "blind," and had my duck "call" handy. The live decoys splashed and dove for smart-weed, and pretty soon a pair of mallards came over and saw them. They sailed around a couple of times over the willows and then came in grand. I salted both of them, and waded out and gathered them. After that I didn't see anything for a couple of hours, but a few flocked away to the north.

THE LIMB AND ME COME KA-WHALLOP ACROSS OLD LEANDER.

It was a warm, bright day, and the ducks weren't stirring around much. There was a big log about 30 feet from the "blind" that run out from the butt of a half-sunk sycamore. This sycamore was a whopping tree, and was connected with the shore on one side by a catch of drift-wood. Well, I heard a noise and turned around towards that log, peeking quiet out of the "blind," and there on that log sat the biggest raccoon I ever laid my eyes on.

He was squatting there listening. I took the 44, slipped it through a crack in the willows, and aimed for the juncture of his neck and shoulders. I touched the trigger, and the coon melted off that log like a dew-drop from a lily-pad. I got out and went around the log and there he laid as dead as Pharaoh.

After we had supper I showed Dib the coon, and he says: "He's a strappin' big fellow, ain't he? The biggest one I ever saw except that old buck coon on Shadow lake. And he was a giant. This lad ain't a rat alongside of him."

"Did you kill that one, Dib?" said I.

"No; but he came pretty near killing me," was Dib's response.

"How was it, Dib?" says I. "There must be a story to that coon somewhere."

"Well," says Dib, "I reckon there was a sort of tale to it. It'll kill a little time, and I don't mind telling you about it.

"You recollect old man Parrott? The man I introduced you to down at the depot last fall. Heavy-set fellow, big brown eyes, nose hooked like a chicken-hawk's beak, all the time smiling. Well, old Wib is the boss coon hunter anywhere along these bottoms. At that time he had the most surprisingest coon-dog that'd ever hit these parts.

"But the old man he allowed it was just the cross he wanted. Purehound for the scent and following the trail, part wolf for cunnin', and bull for hold-on. When that pup was only a few weeks old he came swimmin' after a skiff the old man and a fellow from Saint Looey was in, and the fellow says, 'What's his name?' And old Wib says 'I hain't named him yit.' 'Call him Leander,' says this here fellow. It seemed like a good mouth-fillin' name and so Wib christened him Leander.

"Well, they was a monster coon down on Shadow lake that had whipped all the dogs that was ever brought against him. He wasn't no ordinary coon, but nearly as big as a young bear, and every ounce bone and muscle. He'd get out into a little pond or piece of marsh and when a dog'd tackle him he'd souse the dog's head under water a few times, contributin' a few bites at the same time to make it binding.

"Old Wib hears of this coon, and he comes over for me, and a big crowd of us goes down to Shadow lake one moonlight night. Well, you know that country. Pucker-brush, swamp-holes, briers, dead logs, the worst ever. We got the trail of this big fellow easy enough, for he used to prowl down around Hogeye bend most all the time, and in about half an hour Leander barked 'treed.'

"When we got to where it was, the coon had got out on an old basswood that stood in a little pond where we couldn't well use the axes, and we could see him away up and out on a big limb that slanted across this here pond. I allowed I'd climb up and shake him down, and one of the boys gave me a hist and up I went. When I got out to where he was I couldn't jar him loose.

"But finally all of a sudden he clawed loose from the limb and down he went into the pond with about a bushel of bark and grape-vine and splinters around him, and the minute he lit Leander and some more of the dogs flew out to where he was. I squirms around on my perch, about 10 foot from the water, to get a look at the fight, and just as the buck coon and Leander has arranged to ketch holts, whack goes my limb and down I come before I could holler, 'Look out below.'

"Well, the best thing me and the limb could do was to come ka-whallop right across old Leander and bury him down in the mud at the bottom of this shallow pond. Two of his ribs was stove in, and he was otherwise damaged, includin' breakin' his back. I reckon I might have kicked the coon in the face with one of my spare feet as I lit, but I ain't certain about that. Of course I was knocked senseless, and the boys ran in and got me out on the bank and poured vinegar into me and finally brought me to again. Old Wib had left me cold as soon as he sensed how bad Leander was hurt, and at last I gets my bearings again, shakes myself and find I'm all right, no bones broke, and just jarred some. Leander and the water had busted the force of the fall, you see.

"I goes over to where the boys had built a fire and, say, I was plumb sorry for old Wib. This here Leander was layin' out on his belly and every once in awhile he'd let out a yelp. I says to the old man, 'I'm terrible sorry, Wib,' and he says, 'I don't blame you, Dib, it was that blasted limb.' He didn't cuss any, for old Wib was a church member. He says, 'What is to be happens. Put him out of his misery, boys, I can't do it.' So Dad Oliver swung an ax, and I don't reckon old Leander knowed what hit him.

"'Put him in the sack,' says Wib. 'I'll give him a Christian burial, coffin and all. There's all that's left of the best hound that ever nosed a trail or h'isted a bristle.' It was a mighty solemn thing to old Wib, lemme tell you. 'The Lord gives, and the Lord He takes away,' says the old man, 'blest be the name of the Lord.' Why they said around Slabtown that he thought as much of that Leander dog as he did of his own wife and family, and he was a good husband and father, too."

Dib paused and snaked a live coal out of the fireplace with the end of a shovel, and deftly shunted it into the bowl of his pipe with a segment of hickory chip. Then he puffed reminiscently.

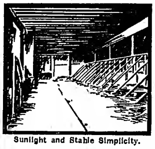
"What became of the buck coon, Dib?" was my query. Dib stretched his massive legs out so as to get the full blaze of the logs on them and said: "Oh! that pesky critter? Why, he just naturally got away durin' the excitement."

THE DAIRY

STABLE STALLS

Arrangement Which Will Prove the Best for Cow Barn.

Plain concrete, solidly laid and roughened on the surface, is the best floor for a cow stable. The illustration shows the interior of a modern stable in which concrete has been used, showing how simple the stall arrangements may be made. Here the cows have plenty of room to move about, yet in stalls 3½ feet wide they do not tread upon each other when they lie down.



Sunlight and Stable Simplicity.

Simple chain ties are used, says the Farm and Home, and the manger is level with the floor and can be readily cleaned. There is no woodwork in the way of cleaning out the manure. The rear end of the slanting stall partitions is securely fastened by a single bolt placed in the concrete when it was laid. The entire woodwork can be removed if desired, leaving a perfectly plain floor should the building be used for other purposes than a dairy stable.

A GOOD RATION.

Below we give a ration for a 1,200 pound cow giving 30 pounds of 3.5 per cent. daily:

Food of maintenance	.84	8.4	.12
Milk	1.12	5.2	.35
Pounds daily	1.96	13.6	.47

POUNDS OF FEED DAILY

	Pounds.	Protein.	Carbohydrates.	Fat
Prairie hay	10	.29	4.1	.12
Fodder corn	15	.38	5.2	.18
Cornmeal	2	.16	1.3	.08
Ground oats	4	.37	1.8	.16
Oil meal	2½	.73	.7	.17
Total		1.93	13.1	.71

It will be noted that this ration is a little low in carbohydrates, but is high in fat. All excess of the latter is used for the same purpose as carbohydrates and is 2.2 times as strong in comparison. The excess of fat in this ration will just about make up the deficiency in carbohydrates.

It will be noted that 8½ pounds of concentrates are used in this ration. The grain ration should be about one pound of grain to three pounds of four per cent. milk, and the amount of grain reduced or increased as the fat percentage of the milk is lower or higher than four per cent. This is a daily ration and should be fed half in the morning and half at night.

DAIRY NOTES.

All the stock needs salt, even in the summer time.

Flood your stables with sunlight and there will be less opportunity for disease to get in.

Don't neglect to strain the milk just because it is going to the creamery.

Cows must be healthy and clean in order to produce pure and wholesome milk.

The covered milk pail is quite as convenient as the open one, and it keeps out germs and dirt.

Don't keep the milk or cream in the barn or any other place where it can take on objectionable flavors.

Yes, it pays to feed high-priced grain to the cows if they will make milk out of it and not put it on their backs. That is the whole thing in a nutshell.

The bull at best is a treacherous beast. Always keep your eye on him and be careful not to turn your back, unless he is tied.

You can treat the good buttermaker about as badly as you know how as long as you take him good sweet milk or cream and he will keep on smiling.

Sunshine in the Stables.

My cow stable is built of concrete nine feet in the clear where the cows are kept, and on the south I have one window 3x4 behind each of the 12 cows that stand on that side, the same on the north, at each end of the stable I have three windows the same size, writes a farmer in Farmers' Review. These windows are on the south five feet up, so as to let in the sunshine on the cows. On the other sides they are six feet for plenty of light, and I find that my stable is always warm and sweet, the main thing. When I bought this farm I found that in the horse barn there were no windows at all; so on the east, behind the horses, I cut a window 2x3 back of each horse, and I find it a great thing. It makes the stable much dryer and is kept clean much easier. I do not believe there is much danger in getting too much sunshine as there is not enough.

AN INTERESTING CHEMICAL EXPERIMENT

Anything in the nature of a chemical experiment is always interesting and usually educative. Here is a simple experiment which any child can perform and which is instructive in a very practical way: Get a bit of White Lead about the size of a pea, a piece of charcoal, a common candle in a candlestick, and a blow-pipe. Scoop out a little hollow in the charcoal to hold the White Lead, then light the candle, take the charcoal and lead in one hand and the blow-pipe in the other, with the large end of the blow-pipe between the lips; blow the flame of the candle steadily against the bit of White Lead on the charcoal and if the White Lead is pure it will presently resolve itself into little shining globules of metallic lead, under the intense heat of the blow-pipe, leaving no residue.

If, however, the White Lead is adulterated in the slightest degree, it will not wholly change into lead. So, it will be seen, that this experiment is not only an entertaining chemical demonstration, but also of practical use in the home. White Lead is the most important ingredient of paint. It should be bought pure and unadulterated and mixed with pure linseed oil. That is the best paint. The above easy experiment enables anyone to know whether the paint is the kind which will wear or not.

The National Lead Company guarantee that white lead taken from a package bearing their "Dutch Boy Painter" trade-mark will prove absolutely pure under the blow-pipe test; and to encourage people to make the test and prove the purity of paint before using it, they will send free a blow-pipe and a valuable booklet on paint to anyone writing them asking for Test Equipment. Address National Lead Company, Woodbridge Building, New York City.

A Powerful Combination.

Tim was a protege of Mr. Blank, a well-known Boston lawyer. He was often in trouble, but by personal influence with the courts Mr. Blank managed to have him let down easy, so it became a matter of talk, the Green Bag says, that he did not suffer greatly in being arrested.

"How is it, Tim," some one asked one day, "that you are arrested very often, but never go to jail nor pay any fines?"

"It's just this way," Tim replied. "I have Mr. Blank for me lawyer, and what he doesn't know about the law I tells him."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The Funny Things One Sees

By
MARSHALL P. WILDER

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

While at the Imperial hotel, Tokio, we were permitted to witness a portion of a Japanese wedding, that is, the feast and reception. Like our Hebrew friends in America, the Japs now hire the parlors of a hotel, chiefly because their little doll houses are so small. It was very funny; the women all like embarrassed images, done up in their best kimonos and not saying a word, while the men, in stiff, badly-fitting European "store clothes," stood around in little groups and talked, looking like animated tailors' dummies.

One young man picked out a native air on the piano with one finger, while the children were the only ones who were at all happy, or didn't look as if they wished they hadn't come.

Says Mrs. Peace to Miss Sharp, a caller: "My husband and I never dispute before the children. When a quarrel seems imminent, we always send them out."

Miss Sharp: "Ah, I've often wondered why they're so much in the street!"

Hateful thing, wasn't she?

* * *

Japanese trains are small and slow, and seem not to think it necessary ever to be on time. Smoking is allowed in every class, even in the sleeping cars.

The bedding is clean and sufficient, but there are no springs in the beds, absolutely no privacy, and one tiny window for the whole compartment, public opinion being usually divided as to whether it shall be opened or closed.

This reminds me of a story my friend, Col. Cody ("Buffalo Bill") used to tell. He said that once upon a time an Englishman who had never been in the west before was his guest. They were riding through a Rock Mountain canyon one day, when suddenly a tremendous gust of wind came swooping down upon them, and actually carried the Englishman clear off the wagon seat. After he had been picked up, he combed the sand and gravel out of his whiskers and said:

"I say! I think you overdo ventilation in this bloomin' country!"

My berth was over the wheels, and this, together with a roadbed of which a coal railroad in Pennsylvania would be ashamed, produced such jolts and bumps that my brain felt as though it had been through an egg-beater. The compartment was full, one occupant being a German army officer, who, beside being in full uniform, even to enormous fur-lined overcoat, sword and spurs, brought in to choke the little available space a satchel, a large flat wicker hamper and a packing box. He also had a very industrious and far-reaching snore with him.

The third occupant being a traveling Catholic priest and, like the soldier, a man of huge proportions, I was rather interested to know which of these was to occupy the berth over me, for it seemed a flimsy sort of affair, and I took particular pains to see that it was well propped up.

I was rather relieved to find it was to be the soldier, for I consoled myself with the old adage that the pen is mightier than the sword and decided it would be a worse calamity to have the church down on me than the army. Even if sleep with all these considerations had been possible, the frequent stops would have completely put it to flight, for the moment a train arrives at a station, no matter what the time of night, the sellers of lunch boxes, hot milk, tea or tobacco begin to cry their wares, in tones that are like the wailings of lost souls, and for penetration and volume unequalled by anything in my experience.

The sellers of tea at the stations will give one a small teapot filled with hot tea, and a tiny cup, all for three sen, or a cent and a half in American money.

* * *

At the railroad stations during the war with Russia one was sure to see parties of wounded soldiers returning from the front; or those who were departing for the seat of war. These latter were always attended by a crowd of men and women, who waved small Japanese flags and gave a shout as the train moved away. This shout is really more of a screech than a good, round cheer, such as would be heard in America, for it seems as if there is some physical reason why the Japanese people cannot raise their voices without producing the most blood-curdling sounds. The street cries are all strident and unpleasant; the commands of officers to their men tinny and rasping-like, while Japanese singing, to a foreigner, is conducive to nervous prostration.

* * *

I have spoken somewhat of the external attitude of these people. Of their interior attitude of heart and mind much more might be said, especially in regard to their late war with Russia, which was going on at the time of my visit. This was something they would not talk about. Any mention of the subject was met with an adroit change of the conversation into other channels; but intense patriotism, the most supreme confidence in their ultimate success reigned in every heart. Examples of the most heroic self-sacrifice were not lacking. A Japanese mother had given her three sons to the war. The first was reported slain. She smiled and said, "It is well. I am happy." The second lay dead upon the field. She smiled again, and said, "I am still happy." The third gave up his life, and they said to her: "At last you weep!" "Yes!" she said, "but it is because I have no more sons to give to my beloved country!"

Always Walk Ahead of the Horse and Dray.

Now, this is all very beautiful, but as my mission in life is laughter instead of tears, I want to say that it reminds me of a little story of our country and our war—the war of the great rebellion. When, in answer to the call for troops, the blood of our noble volunteers had been poured out upon southern fields for three long years, there arose a class of men called "bounty jumpers" who, acting as substitutes for drafted men and taking a large sum of money for the job, sometimes "jumped the bounty" and disappeared instead of going to the front to serve Uncle Sam. These men were subjected to a medical examination which, in the hands of unscrupulous physicians (who received a large fee if the man "passed"), was not always as rigorous as it should be. A doctor who was seen coming out of the examining room with a very sour face was greeted by a friend with a "Hello, Doc! What's the matter? Didn't you pass your man?"

"Why, he looked all right!"

"All right! Why he was sound as a nut; but the colonel of the regiment suggested we stand him up on a high table and make him jump to the floor, and, by Jove! if his confounded glass eye didn't fall out and spoil the whole business!"

* * *

The working class still cling to the ancient costume and methods. To-day ladders are made of bamboo, the rungs lashed fast with rope, as they have been made for generations. The streets are watered with little carts having a row of holes at the back, and pulled by men, who fill them slowly and laboriously one bucket at a time, while the sidewalks are watered by two perforated buckets, suspended from a bamboo pole laid across the shoulders of a man, who trots in and out between the people, turning and twisting until the walk is thoroughly sprinkled.

Everything seems to be done the hardest way, and those who work, work very hard. The few men who have a horse dray never sit and drive, even when the dray is empty, but always walk ahead, dragging the patient brute along. Loads are more frequently carried on hand-carts, pulled by men, women or boys. In going up a hill three or four men will pull or push, intoning a sort of droning song as they work.

In the country districts life in its most primitive and ancient aspects may be seen. In the rice fields man and women work side by side, their ankles bleeding from contact with the stubble, wielding tools of a pattern as old as the cultivation of the grain.

The evolution of the new Japan from the chrysalis of the old is an interesting study just now. All signs point toward the springing up of a new country, full-fledged, ready to spread its bright wings and fly away from the old, that has wrapped it close for so many centuries; but the time is not yet.

GO OUT FOR TRADE

MERCHANT SHOULD BE AN EXPERT IN HIS LINE.

WISE USE OF PRINTERS' INK

How Advertising by a Specialist Was Turned to Profit by a Wide-Awake Country Storekeeper.

One of the latest deals of the town-to-town man is the working up of sales for some local merchant. He enters the town and contracts with some storekeeper to hold a week's sale. What goods the merchant cannot supply he will have shipped in to add to the stock on hand. He is a worker for the percentage on the gross sales, and stands the advertising bills. He is a past-master in the art of country town advertising. He knows how to get out an attractive poster and how to reach the town people and the farmers as well. He covers the front of the store with signs calling attention to the sale. He has a force of specially trained clerks. He makes business fairly hum, unless he bucks up against another merchant in the town who knows a few things about getting business himself.

Not long ago in one of the small western cities one of the "experts" opened up a sale for a merchant who had a considerable stock of stale goods, particularly boots and shoes, on hand. The front of the store building was covered with attractive signs, thousands of posters and handbills were sent throughout the city and country, and the advertising began to show results. There was one live merchant in the town who saw a chance to reap a benefit from the efforts of the "expert." The sale had only fairly gotten under way when the dealer-up-to-date commenced placarding his store in the same block. He was not slow in the advertising line. When the sale manipulator hung out his sign, "Finest shoes in the town, $1.50 per pair," the up-to-date man met it with: "These shoes don't look like kid, they are not paper, but they will wear better than anything you can get for twice the money—only $1.05."

Other signs called attention to honest values; that there was no special sale on hand; it was regular business and regular prices—but prices were right, the goods were right and honest values, and invited comparison with "any other stock in town," and the people were interested.

Farmers understand the "bargain sale" deal, and at the end of the first day the up-to-date man had sold 139 pairs of shoes and rubbers. He didn't have to cut prices. He gathered up all his odds and ends of stock, placarded them so as to tell the people they were a little out of style, but honest bargains, and he did business in volumes as great as the expert bargain men, and convinced his customers that not alone on one day could they get full value for their money, but on any day.

It is well for the merchant in the small city to do judicious advertising. This will bring as good results, and save the percentage paid the "expert." In fact if the merchant would take the amount that would be paid out to the expert and use it in advertising in his home paper he would be the winner in the end. Then, again, the "expert" is out to make sales, and he makes them, sometimes in such a way as to turn away the trade of those who were good customers of the merchant.

D. M. CARR.

COUNTRY STORE EXPENSE LIGHT

Local Merchants Should Be Able to Meet City Store Competition.

In the matter of expense of conducting business, the country merchant has far the edge over the storekeeper of the large city. He has lower taxes, his insurance is not so high, neither has he to pay his help such high wages as the city merchant. In fact, the country merchant can sell goods lower than the big city store, and make money—that is if he is a good buyer and gets his goods at the price he ought to buy them at. It is all tommy-rot to say that the department store sells goods for quality any lower than does the average country merchant. The reason is plain—department storekeeper or the mail-order house can't do it, because expenses are so much higher. Walk into department store, ask to see a line of hats, men's hats, or a line of shoes. Note the prices marked and then drop into a country store, pick out the same quality, let it be the same make of goods. What will you find? That the country store asks fully 15 to 20 per cent. less than the same goods are sold for in the big city store.

Migratory Merchants.

Retail merchants in small towns have almost as bad competition with the traveling month-in-a-town fakir, as they have in the big catalogue houses. Many towns have ordinances and even state laws in some cases are in force, to control the wandering from town-to-town "merchant."

Those migratory dealers are handlers of job lots, seconds and stale goods and are adepts in the advertising art. They land in a town with a carload of their inferior goods; hire a vacant store room in some part of town, in or as near the business center as they can; distribute attractive posters throughout the town and country, and then glib salesmen start to work the unsophisticated. It is mainly in the boot and shoe, dry goods, clothing and the notion line the traveling merchant works.

BEING UP-TO-DATE.

Live Business Men the Ones Who Make the Greatest Success.

The man in business is out to win or he wouldn't be in business. There are many little details that must be looked after, must be studied and which are essential to success. Many merchants, particularly in small towns, are kept so busy wrapping up bits of ginghams, weighing out sugar and doing the hundred and three other things, that they think they have no time to give all these little essentials attention. These days the merchant is really up against a hard game, unless he keeps right in line and to the front. Statistics show that 90 per cent. of those who engage in the retail trade fail.

People must buy necessities. The average mortal wants the best he can get for the least money. Merchant Jones can't sell at any higher prices than Brown on the opposite side of the street sells like goods for, and Brown's method is pretty good.

Brown has captured a good trade, and on some lines gets stiffer prices. How does he do it? Look at the arrangement of his goods. He has a place for everything, and everything properly in its place, and displayed to the greatest advantage. He hasn't his potatoes and his apples mixed in a heap and his tomatoes and other canned goods of the vegetable class mixed with his jellies and his jams; neither are the labels so covered with dust that the goods look as if they were held in stock for years. You can just bet Brown is up-to-date, his goods are so arranged that people find a pleasure in stopping in front of the store and looking at the show windows, and go through the door and see the harmony and order in all the arrangement of his stock. Brown himself is no slouch, his attire is plain but neat, no gaudy display and his temper is always even, and a smile is for every customer, and all his clerks are required to keep themselves neat and show the greatest courtesy to everyone who enters the store. Then, again, he sees that goods are delivered promptly, no delay in getting your sugar, your butter and all that you order from Brown, for he is always Johnny-on-the-spot. Then again, he keeps all his customers feeling well; he always believes in an era of good feeling; he is sympathetic. Then Brown is a man who doesn't believe in keeping a set of books for the purpose of charging up poor accounts. He has a knack of collecting his bills so his customers feel they are under obligations to him, and while he is a stickler for making cash sales, sometimes good responsible customers want a little credit, and get it. Merchants like Brown are the kind that build up the home town.

MAIL-ORDER TRICKS.

Prices Manipulated to Give Erroneous Impressions of Cheapness.

The catalogue houses make such inroads into the business of the dealers who chiefly rely upon country trade, that in some localities merchants can't be blamed for the complaints they make. Much can be done by the merchant to prevent his customers sending to such concerns for goods, if he will but make the effort. Sometimes a little solid reasoning will have the right effect. Any man of common sense knows that the basis of all prices is the cost of production. There must be a paying profit in the business of manufacturing, and allowance made for cost of placing on the market. The purchaser should be satisfied that the manufacturer and the dealer made a fair, honest profit. The farmer estimates his profit on the cost of growing his products. On many crops and on his cattle and hogs his percentage of gain is much more than the storekeeper makes upon the goods he sells. A little reasoning along these lines with explanations that if low prices are made there must be inferior goods supplied, will perhaps help to keep many people from sending away for goods. One trick of the catalogue houses is to classify goods by sizes as to make a very low price on goods little in demand, and large profits on goods mostly called for. The one who looks at the list to see prices finds his eye first sees the low-priced goods and naturally concludes that the whole line is lower. If a careful examination of the list be made the trick would be found, and an average of the list would show that the articles most called for are higher than would be asked by the home merchant.

In a Presidential Year.

This is presidential year, and the alarmist, the dry-goods box philosopher and the calamity howlers of different breeds and opinions are abroad in the land. Presidential years are "off" years, so they say, and the most level-headed old-timer shakes his head with doubt when he speaks of the conditions throughout the land. There is a little cause for a tightening up in the affairs, more cautiousness in financial and commercial centers in general. This year there are no such "presentiments" of evil as generally mark presidential years. Business goes on just the same as it has during the past half dozen years or more, only there is evidence that men are not losing their heads and are carefully considering possibilities. The agricultural sections are particularly fortunate in the fact that their prosperity depends little upon the fluctuations of stocks or securities. 'Tis the wealth of land and live stock that counts, and while any depression may to a certain extent influence price, it will require a greater calamity than a change in administration to paralyze agricultural industries.

STAR SHORTSTOP TO RETIRE

Hans Wagner, the big Pittsburg shortstop, has refused absolutely to sign a contract for the present season, declaring he is going to rest for at least a year from the strenuous game.

HANS WAGNER DETERMINED TO HAVE SEASON'S REST

Star Pirate Shortstop Turns Down Tempting Offers—Will Raise Chickens This Year.

Hans Wagner gave Pittsburg baseball fans a jolt recently by announcing that he would not wear a Pirate uniform this season. There has been no trouble between President Dreyfuss and Wagner. Hans is not holding out for more money. He simply says he wants to get out of the game and will not play.

Wagner says when the season opens he will be found superintending his fine chicken farm near Carnegie. Wagner is worth more than $60,000, and has been anxious to quit playing ever since last season. Wagner declares his mind is made up and cannot be changed.

On finding that Wagner meant really to retire, the owners of the Pittsburg team offered him a straight salary of $15,000 and agreed to allow him to cut out the spring training. When he declined this bait a contract signed by the Pittsburg club, with only the salary line left blank, was shown to him, and he was asked to fill the figures himself and the club owners would pay it. This he refused also, saying there was not enough money in the world to make him play ball, this year at least.

There is intimation there was more than rheumatism back of Wagner's refusal to play ball this year. He has always been opposed to spring training trips, and, having always played his best ball with Ritchey, he felt somewhat aggrieved a year ago when, after a quarrel with one of the club officials, Ritchey was sent to Boston.

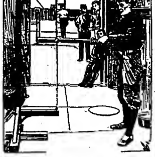
Wagner, who was never known to talk much, told a friend that his business interests were now getting so large that he could not afford to play ball.

BATTING EYES MADE TO ORDER

Scheme of University Coach to Help Candidates for Team.

The University of Pennsylvania baseball team candidates are doing cage work daily. In addition to trying out the batterymen the coach has a scheme to put an edge on batting eyes that is regarded as a wonder by all who have seen it.

The apparatus consists of an upright with horizontal arms at top and bottom, between which, on an elastic cord, is a ball. The ball may be shifted to any desired height, and considerable practice is needed to clout it squarely.



When hit true the ball springs straight ahead, but if struck below or above the center it jumps down or up. The men who have used the device claim it is the best ever for line drives.

Capital on Outlaw Circuit.

Arthur Irwin, now coach of the University of Pennsylvania baseball team, will manage the team that will represent Washington in the outlaw Union league this year. A decision to have the capital on the circuit was reached at a meeting at which it was announced W. F. Hart will be president of the new club, W. J. Lambert vice-president and E. E. Helm secretary-treasurer.

HARVARD'S ATHLETIC RECEIPTS DECREASE

Treasury Is Shy $16,000 in 1906 as Compared to 1905, According to Annual Report.

The annual report of the treasurer of the Harvard University Athletic association for the year 1906-7 shows a considerable decrease, both in gross receipts and expenditures, over the showing of the previous year. As in the past, the financial importance of football was again demonstrated.

The gross receipts for the year were $110,110.56, as against $127,559.40 for the preceding year. The expenditures were $98,470.09, as against $88,733.28 for 1905-6. The decrease, both in receipts and expenditures, may be accounted for by taking into consideration and comparing the two football seasons. In 1906 the Yale game was played in New Haven, meaning $10,000 less than when the game was played in Cambridge in 1905. The whole season of 1906 showed a loss of $16,000 in the receipts, as compared with the season before. This is roughly the amount of the total decrease in the gross receipts of the year 1906-7 from that of the previous year. As the Harvard graduate manager says in his report, "the surplus of the year depends on the surplus of the football receipts over the football expenditures."

There is practically no change in the receipts and expenditures of the other sports. The baseball team gained a little, owing to its expenditures remaining the same while its receipts increased. The crew and track teams were, as usual, not self-supporting and had to rely for financial assistance on the association funds. Of the minor teams, only the hockey and tennis teams paid their own way. The hockey team has always stood well financially, while the fee charged for the use of the college tennis court accounts for the showing of that branch of sport. The freshman football team and crew lost money, while the other freshmen teams paid their expenses by subscriptions. The total loss in the freshman branches of sports was $1,538.09.

In concluding his report the graduate treasurer calls attention to the great need of reclaiming the swamp land on Soldiers' field to meet the increased demands for room, and the necessity of building fireproof baseball bleachers.

FIELDER JONES' REAL NAME

Reporter Thought White Sox Leader Was "Kidding" Him.

Is Fielder Jones' name Fielder Jones?

That's a question that has been asked ever since—or before—the noted leader of the Chicago White Sox broke into fast company.

Evidently it is, for here's what he told the Portland (Ore.) Poet man about it:

"When I left the little Pennsylvania town where I had been playing semi-professional ball to join the Pittsburg club an enterprising reporter came to me and wanted my pedigree. He commenced:

"'What is your full name?'

"'Never got full,' I replied.

"'No kidding. I mean your real name,' said the scribe.

"'Fielder A. Jones.'

"'I know you are a fielder,' said the scribe, 'but what's the handle to the Jones part of your name?'

"'Fielder is my given name,' I replied, commencing to get hot under the collar.

"'Well, I'll have to take it, but where are you from?'

"'Shinglehouse, Pa.'

"'You're too —— fresh for a beginner,' angrily replied the interviewer, and I really believe that he would have toasted me unmercifully if I hadn't been lucky enough to get off good with Pittsburg and batted like a fiend for that season. He really thought I was kidding him, but I was not, for my name is Fielder Alden Jones, and I was born at Shinglehouse, Pa."

That ought to settle the question for some years—but it won't.

Information and Gossip Picked Up Here and There in Washington.

Elkins Wedding Rumor Stirs Capital

WASHINGTON.—The all-engrossing topic of conversation in all sets of Washington society is the rumored engagement of Miss Katherine Elkins, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Stephen B. Elkins, to the royal duke of Abruzzi, who was the social lion for a few days last spring when he came in command of the Italian warships for the opening of the Jamestown exposition. This engagement has been rumored more or less for the last six months, but has been strenuously denied by all the members of Miss Elkins' family. The duke is the first cousin of the king of Italy, and should he marry without the approval of his royal relative, he would have to renounce his title, one of the most honored in all Italy, and all his rights as a member of the royal family. His father, the late duke of Aosta, was for some time king of Spain. He can, however, retain his royal prestige, and even the title by a special act of the Italian parliament, provided the king gives his consent to the match.

If this marriage takes place it will be by all odds the most brilliant international match yet made by a Washington girl. The duke is the most distinguished foreigner to come to the United States a-wooing, and he has won fame by being the explorer to reach the farthest point north. He is deeply interested in all things pertaining to the north pole. He headed his expedition which made this brilliant record, and has been lionized on this account in every country he has visited since then.

Miss Elkins is a typical American girl. She differs from the average society girl or the members of her "set," inasmuch as she positively refused to be presented formally to society at a tea, dance or other function, according to the American custom of launching young women on a social career. She just "came out" by degrees, after a complete preparation, as far as schooling and accomplishments are concerned. She had traveled widely during her school days, and has made trips abroad with her parents, or with her mother, each summer since then. She is one of the most daring riders and skilled whips among the women in Washington. She seldom drives in anything as tame as an automobile, but is usually behind her high-stepping, prize-winning cob or trotter, or on the back of her thoroughbred hunter. She is a familiar figure in all cross-country runs and the horse shows in the eastern part of the country.

Taft Is Depicted in Moving Pictures

NO MATTER what the future may hold in store for Secretary of War Taft, he has achieved fame. A few days ago his portly person was enshrined in hundreds and hundreds of films, which will go to make up a picture show presentation of a review of the cavalry and artillery at Fort Myer. Neither the secretary nor Gen. Bell, who accompanied him, posed. They just ambled up and down between lines of artillery, powder and lenses.

It was an ideal day, and the pictures were very successful. Every time the secretary's horse switched its tail a camera clicked. The exchange of salutes, the spirited swing of the squadron into line, and the long lines of ordnance presented a panorama alone worth the price of admission.

The Taft party was photographed from the moment it left the city to make for the post across the Potomac. In the party were Mrs. Taft and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Taft.

Favorite sons have cigars named after them, and get nice canned eulogies in convention resolutions, but there is nothing to it but fame when it reaches the moving picture stage. These films will be shown, sandwiched in among illustrated songs in all parts of the country. One thing it will prove, and that is the secretary, despite the fact that he is big in body, is an accomplished horseman.

Careless Secretary Causes Much Trouble

"THE best laid plans of mice and men aft gang agley," and so it was with the guest list of a high official who recently planned a dinner in honor of President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Every invited one accepted and covers were laid for a score and ten guests but only 28 arrived. What could be the matter! Minutes seemed like hours while the hostess was torn between two thoughts, would it be worse to keep honor guests waiting while the table was reset, or let them see vacant places around the festal board. The former way was decided upon and all the while the change was being made both host and hostess regretted that political reasons would prevent their wreaking mighty vengeance upon the delinquents. To make a bad matter worse they saw in next morning's paper that their would-be guests had been members of a theater party the night before. What happened next none but the principals know, but others noted that within a week Mr. Blank and Senator So-and-so were not on speaking terms and a few days later, the former came out with an interview stating his preference for some one else as Republican candidate for the presidency. That was the last straw. Explanations were asked for and received to the effect that Mr. B.'s secretary after accepting the dinner invitation, crossed off the wrong date and he and his wife had gone at the last minute, to the play with friends on the evening they should have dined with Senator S. Innocent of intentional wrongdoing, he in turn had been cut by the latter's coldness and turned political tables "just for fun!"

Stephenson Now the Second Oldest Senator

BY the death of Senator William Pinckney Whyte of Maryland, Senator Stephenson of Wisconsin becomes the second oldest member of the senate. When Mr. Stephenson was elected to the senate a year ago there were four senators whose age was greater than his. Senators Pettus and Morgan of Alabama died last fall, and Senator Whyte, who was born August 29, 1824, became the oldest senator. Senators Allison, Stephenson and Cullom were born in 1829, Mr. Allison in March, Mr. Stephenson in June, and Mr. Cullom in November. Mr. Allison is now the oldest senator in point of years as well as in senatorial service.

The late Senator Whyte was a stickler for the proper spelling of his name. Only a few weeks ago he explained to one of his colleagues how it came about that he spelled his name with a "y." He said that his father, who was a prominent merchant in Baltimore, was defrauded of his little fortune by some of his relatives of the name of White. "I took up the quarrel that followed," said the senator, "and became somewhat bitter toward the White family. One day when I was signing my name I struck out the 'i' and inserted 'y.' The change pleased my fancy and I've continued it ever since."

Notwithstanding his advanced age the Maryland senator was more attentive to his duties than many of his younger colleagues. Frequently he was the only member of the senate who was present when the gavel fell and the senate was called to order, and this, notwithstanding that his home was in Baltimore and he made the journey to and from Washington every day. He made a virtue of punctuality, and was rarely behind time, either at his office or elsewhere.

PROMINENT PEOPLE

CONGRESSMAN RESIGNS

Congressman Charles E. Littlefield of Maine, in a letter sent to Gov. Cobb the other day, resigned as representative from the Second Maine district. He states that his resignation is prompted by the desire to resume his law practice, which has been interfered with by his congressional duties. It is understood that he will practice law in New York with his son. The resignation is to be effective September 20.

Congressman Littlefield, who succeeded the late Nelson Dingley in the house, is noted for his independence and disregard of cut and dried programs when they are at variance with his convictions. His advent in congress made the cold shivers run down the backs of the old time managers who had been accustomed to controlling the powers of the house. Several times Mr. Littlefield broke away from the dictum of the party caucus and with characteristic vigorous tactics told the house he would not permit any man or set of men to determine how he should vote.

For these so-called breaches Mr. Littlefield was disciplined by the house steam roller, otherwise the organization, being used to flatten him out, so to speak, but each time he was run over he bobbed up serenely and just as independent as before.

Mr. Littlefield ran against the Republican program in the house when he said he would not consider politics in his consideration of the Brigham Roberts case from Utah. He was defeated, but the fight gave him a reputation.

Mr. Littlefield again took issue with Republican leaders on the Porto Rico question. He took the stand that Porto Rico was domestic territory and that there could be no tariff imposed on commerce between the United States and the island, backing up his views with a vigorous speech.

CHAMPIONS LETTER CARRIERS

Jacob H. Gallinger, United States senator from New Hampshire, is advocating an old-age pension for letter carriers who have reached the age of 70, provided they have served continuously for 40 years. Both of these conditions, the 70 years of life and the 40 years of service, must be present to obtain a pension, and the probability is that the applicants will be few and far between. The senator was one of the most persistent advocates of the mail ship subsidy, and he made his position very emphatic when he pictured the 16 battleships steaming into San Francisco harbor, two American battle ships for every merchant ship the United States has in the foreign trade of that ocean. The senator is a doctor by profession, and is a strong opponent of vivisection.

Senator Gallinger is one of the most striking characters in the senate. The athletic figure, that enthusiastic step, that glow of complexion and that smile ever breaking over a countenance which shows scarce a seam of shrinking tissue, that yet youthful voice which, behind the arras, one might take for the voice of a man of 35, are all significant of the blessings that come to them "whose lives a peaceful tenor keep."

Mr. Gallinger is progressive, and that is why he never will grow old except in years. Age is a question of arteries and habits, and he will give any inquirer a working recipe for keeping both resilient. He is old-fashioned only in being a man of habitual simplicity.

PRESIDENT OF HAITI

Nord Alexis, president of the black republic of Haiti, who has been threatening France with war because she refuses to give up some insurrectos who have taken refuge in her consulate, is an interesting type of the pure-blooded Negro.

His crinkled wool is snow white and his long, bony face seamed and wrinkled. He was born in Cape Haitien, August 2, 1820, his father being Baron Nord Alexis, the right-hand man of Henry Christopher, who afterwards proclaimed himself king of Haiti, but who finally was exiled. The mother of Nord Alexis was Mary Louise, the daughter of Dessalines, the liberator of Haiti from French rule. Nord Alexis was educated in a French Roman Catholic school in Cape Haitien, and at the age of 18 entered the Haitien army with the rank of lieutenant. During the administrations of the 14 presidents who had governed Haiti since the overthrow of President Boyer, Gen. Alexis, with the exception of two short intervals, held the position of commander-in-chief of the army.

Since the little republic threw off French rule it has steadily retrograded until, although it has greater natural resources in proportion to its size than any country in the world, the white population has dwindled down to about 500 persons and the one prosperous industry of the country outside of revolutions is grafting. After a successful uprising the revolutionists grab for custom houses and other fat offices and proceed to rob the country to the limit, knowing that it is merely a matter of a few years before another revolution will oust them. Therefore they make hay while the sun shines.

ENGLAND'S ATTORNEY GENERAL

Sir William S. Robson, England's new attorney-general, holds, next to the lord chancellor, the best paid billet in the administration. He gets a salary of $35,000 which, although his is not a cabinet post, is $10,000 more than any member of the cabinet receives, with the exception of the lord chancellor, who draws $50,000 a year. But lawyers, who have most to do with law making, always see to it that the jobs reserved for members of their profession yield the largest incomes. The lord chancellor is, of course, a lawyer.

Before he got his recent promotion Sir William was the liberal solicitor general, and for that received $30,000 a year. But there is no doubt that he makes a considerable financial sacrifice in taking a salaried job. He is one of the topnotchers of the legal profession in England, and in private practice has long commanded very high fees.

He is one of the most brilliant speakers in the Liberal party. To borrow one of Mary Ann's expressions, he "has a way with him." It is a way that makes a man popular. He quickly gets on good terms with his audience and then drives his points home. In dress he is a good deal of a dandy and is particularly partial to white spats and colored waistcoats. But nobody ventures to poke fun at him because of his sartorial tastes. He is 56 years old, and is an exception to the general rule that, to achieve success in parliament, one must make an early start there.

Easter Lilies Mostly Come from Japan

BULBS U.S.A.

LILIES BULBS

NEW YORK.—How many persons know that New York's Easter floral display owes a good deal to imported goods? The finest azaleas now in the market crossed the ocean from Belgium and Holland late last fall. At the same time came lilac bushes, rhododendrons, bay trees and other plants, the consignment being mainly to florists in this and other American cities.

"I was in a leading Philadelphia florist shop last autumn," said a Fifth avenue florist, "when 40,000 azaleas were delivered to him from the steamer. His yearly import is generally 60,000 azaleas.

"Why, of course, this country can grow all we need, but the greater cost of labor here makes the cost of production come to far more than the cost in Belgium and Holland. Even with freight and duty charges added, I can import plants for less money than I can buy them over here."

Similarly more than one-half of all the lilies used at Easter come from Japan—that is, the bulbs do. Once upon a time Bermuda sent us more of the bulbs used in this market, as well as quantities of flowering lilies. It was found, however, as the demand for Easter flowers grew and the Easter floral display became a feature of New York and other large cities, that the Japan lilies were finer, stronger, more lasting and that there was more profit in them for the retailers. Therefore they began to place large orders with growers in the flowery kingdom, and this year, as for several years past, most of the stock offered by the best-known florists at from 20 to 25 cents a lily will have started life in Japan.

The western states send no plants at all to this market. On the contrary the east, or rather the New Jersey and Long Island growers, fill large orders from western cities for the finer grades of cut flowers the year round.

Social Leaders Interested in "Society"

FRANKLIN LAWRENCE, editor of Society, a weekly publication devoted to the doings of fashionable folks, in which many women widely known in the "Four Hundred" are said to be stockholders, was locked up at police headquarters the other day, charged with obtaining $1,000 by trick and device.

Among those who are reported to have purchased stock in the magazine at $100 a share are Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. Paul Morton, Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay, Mrs. Theodore Shonts and Miss Dollie Lynch of Lakewood.

The plan adopted by Lawrence to bring his publication to the notice of the "Four Hundred" and show the value of the stock, according to the story told, was to send a solicitor to the home of society hostesses before a ball or function of any kind and explain that the paper desired to treat it in a dignified manner and in accordance with the wishes of those interested.

Then, it is said, the question of the persons interested becoming a stockholder was mentioned and a share or two of stock was sold in this manner to those who felt kindly toward the publication.

Mrs. Shonts became a stockholder shortly before the marriage of her daughter to the Duc de Chaulnes. She purchased two shares at $100 each. The Lakewood section of Society contained a very beautiful half-tone portrait of Miss Shonts on its first page.

The arrest of Lawrence was made on the complaint of Harry B. Harris of Brooklyn. Harris was engaged in October last as an advertising solicitor and put up a cash security of $1,000, he says. In return he received 100 shares of Society as security. The par value of the stock was $10,000.

Harris says he solicited advertising until told he was getting too much of the kind that was not wanted. Then he was put to work to increase the circulation of the paper. He worked on commission and says he obtained only $17.50, and was unable to get any more money or to recover his $1,000.

Then he consulted the district attorney, who had the editor arrested on the charge stated and also on the further charge of violating the penal code in connection with running a corporation unlawfully.

This Woman to Raise Vibratory Babies

MRS. FLORENCE FAIRVIEW WIELAND, the vibratory baby-raiser, has incorporated herself for 108 years, under the title of "The Corporation of the Commonwealth."

Mrs. Wieland is the high priestess of the corporation, which consists of her husband and Benjamin Franklin. She has announced her intention of adopting 600 babies, six every year, for the purpose of educating them in the laws of vibration.

Their instruction is to begin at the age of three months and to continue until they are ten years old.

These babies will pass into the hands of the "commonwealth." It is incorporated under the laws of the state and has a tract of eight acres at Red Mill, Rensselaer Heights, N. Y.

Here the members purpose to form a community, "for education in health, safety, success, soundness, sanity, and motherhood, for the training of infants and children, and for research in the laws of vibration."

"What is vibration?" repeated Mrs. Wieland, in reply to a question. "Life, health, sanity and sex can be controlled through the understanding of the laws of vibration. In fact, no life, health or sanity can be real except through vibration.

Mme. Anna Gould's Boys Enjoy Circus

THREE little boys applauding lustily and in their joyous excitement frequently varying exclamations with French expressions of awe and wonderment sat in an arena box at Madison Square garden the other day and saw their first American circus as exemplified by the Barnum & Bailey "Greatest Show on Earth." They were the children of Mme. Anna Gould, formerly the Countess de Castellane, and they expressed as vigorously their approval of the wonders as did their thousands of American cousins who thronged the big building.

They proved, too, their ability to ask as many questions as any American boy on his first visit to the sawdust wonderland. The Abbe Caynac, their tutor, accompanied them, and was engaged in meeting a continuous array of interrogation points. It was, too, his first experience with the circus, and he endeavored to draw his store of information chiefly from the program with its terrible array of adjectives.

When the big show was over little Jay, who is but five years of age, was prepared to pronounce the American clown the greatest invention of the age. Again and again he was on his feet, laughing and clapping his hands when the clown passed, who had increased his altitude to 16 feet with the aid of stilts, and when another painted descendant of Pierrot, astride a bicycle built like a horse, performed desperate balancing feats with a stuffed male figure, provoked a series of "Oh-oh-oh-ohe" that caused the abbe to applaud as heartily as the boys.

George, aged eight years, was especially interested in the acrobats and trapeze performers, while Boniface, who is nine years old, championed most heartily the performance of Wotan, the equine aeronaut.

Language and Nationality.

Since the beginning of history no nation which has not been saturated in all parts with one language has enjoyed a secure and peaceful solidarity; and subject nations and races have sometimes regained independence by preserving their mother tongue. Political divisions between the nations follow differences in language rather than differences in race or religion. One language may do for two nations, as in the case of Belgium and France, Austria and Germany, Great Britain and the United States. But two languages seldom subsist together in harmony inside one political unit. The Magyars of Hungary for years have protested against the use of German as the official language. Poland, politically divided into three parts under Russia, Germany and Austria, is united by the Polish language, and from the Polish point of view, no other act of the German government is so oppressive as the effort to impose the German language on Polish school children. The appeal of Henryk Sienkiewicz, the Polish novelist, in the name of literature, to intellectual persons in all countries for sympathy with the Poles who are being dispossessed of their language strikes deeper than politics, and has subdivided political camps. From these contentions in Europe a hopeful lesson can be drawn and applied to America, remarks the Youth's Companion. We are putting the children of immigrants through our public schools, blending them with the children of earlier immigrants through the great solvent of language. We do not force them as if they were conquered people; they yield willingly to the amalgam; it penetrates even the clotted ghettos and foreign colonies. The measure of Poland's fear of losing its tongue is the measure of our hope that by language, and all that it carries, we shall bring many races into homogeneity.

A vote of thanks is due the Wisconsin professor who says that our old friend the tired feeling which comes in the spring is not an acquired virtue but is the result of heredity. If it has been handed down to us from our forefathers, who acquired it through much patient endeavor, anyone can see that we are not to blame. Still, we think more of our ancestors because of this discovery. Evidently they were human, remarks the Chicago Daily News, and not mere stern, busy automatons, as we have been taught to believe, who never relaxed but were busy chasing work throughout the livelong day and part of both ends of the night. Besides, we can the more readily resign ourselves to the pleasure of being lazy in the spring when we know that we couldn't help it if we tried.

The British mint has been turning out copper coins at the rate of four tons daily in an attempt to cope with the famine in pence in London and the provinces. This stringency always becomes most acute toward the end of each quarter. The explanation is very simple. Nearly all the English gas companies have adopted the penny-in-the-slot system of selling gas. The automatic meters are emptied at the end of each quarter. The popularity of this system of supplying illumination is shown by the fact that during 1907 pennies weighing 1,336 tons were taken from the meters in London belonging to the Gas Light and Coke company. This means an average of 400,000 pennies a day.

The railroad companies are obeying the new laws passed for their regulation. Reports from 99 per cent. of the railroad mileage of the country have been received by the interstate commerce commission, giving the information about their operations called for by the Hepburn law. One or two of the largest companies put the nine hour rule in operation before March 4, the day after which the employment of railroad men more than nine hours a day is forbidden.

Much is said about the large number of American novels published annually, as if they constituted the chief output of the publishing houses, but people who like other classes of books need not feel discouraged. In 1907, for example, the fiction list shows 1,171 titles, but religion and theology came second, with 876 titles. It is not necessary for anyone to read novels for the lack of other literary productions.

PEORIA (ILL.) PLANT SUFFERS TO THE EXTENT OF $230,000.

Four Large Factories in Lynchburg, Va., Are Destroyed by Flames—Incendiarism Is Suspected.

Peoria, Ill.—Fire which started on the fourth floor of the elevator of the Corning Distilling company's plant at two a. m. Friday did $230,000 damage to the building and contents, threatened all the other buildings and 3,000 cattle and proved one of the most spectacular blazes seen in years.

The "mill," or elevator building, is a six-story brick structure 150 feet square, in which thousands of bushels of grain are stored, and at the top of which is the machinery for grinding the corn and other grains for the cookers.

The blaze quickly spread to the other floors, and to the "still" house of the distillery proper adjoining. In this building are huge beer stills and the heat caused an explosion which set the roof of the beer tower, a hundred feet high, on fire. The burning beer on the roof of this building presented the novel spectacle of a huge green torch, the center of which was red from the burning timbers. As the tower burned down the colors changed and the outside of the torch became red and the inside a bright green.

Lynchburg, Va.—One of the most destructive fires in this city in 20 years occurred early Friday when four factories, three of them tobacco plants, and four negro dwellings were consumed, with a total loss of $225,000 and insurance of $175,000. The fire raged during a 20-mile wind and the firemen were powerless to cope with the blaze. The factory of the Norfolk & Western Overall company and three tobacco factories occupied by W. G. Dunnington of Farmville, in which more than a million pounds of tobacco for Austrian and Italian trade were stored, were the business buildings destroyed, the loss on the tobacco factories being $115,000, fully insured. It is believed that the fire was of incendiary origin. Dunnington is a heavy buyer in Kentucky, which gave rise to a report that "night riders" might have been concerned.

WEALTHY FARMER MURDERED.

Two Farm Hands Held for Crime in North Dakota.

Minot, N. D.—Gus Johnson, a wealthy farmer who lived five miles south of Kenmare, has been murdered and R. S. Noah and "Patsy" Coyle are in jail charged with the crime. Recently Johnson employed Noah to work for him and in a few days the latter reported in Kenmare that Johnson had gone to Sweden and had left him and Coyle, who proved to be an ex-convict, to run his farm in his absence. They commenced to sell grain and stock from the farm, and neighbors, becoming suspicious, made a search and found the dead body of Johnson, bearing unmistakable evidences of violence, in the cellar, where it had been pitched through a trap door.

Senate Gets Hill Nomination.

Washington.—President Roosevelt sent to the senate Tuesday the nomination of Dr. David Jayne Hill to be American ambassador at Berlin, Germany. The resignation of Charlemagne Tower, now at the post, has been accepted to take effect June 1. At that time Dr. Hill will assume his new duties. This statement, made at the White House Tuesday, is said to be taken as a happy ending of the Hill incident.

Killed in Peculiar Accident.

Philadelphia.—Henry Shepherd was killed by a trolley car Friday in one of the most peculiar accidents ever reported here. He was picking dandelions along a wall in front of one of the big country estates when a trolley car came along and jumped the track. The car ran into him, pinning him against the wall.

Riley Grannan Is Dead.

MANY MINERS QUIT WORK.

Quarter of a Million of Them Drop Their Picks.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Two hundred and fifty thousand picks dropped from the hands of as many bituminous coal miners of the United States Tuesday evening, not to be used again until a wage settlement has been reached and a scale adopted between the members of the United Mine Workers of America and the coal operators of the various fields.

The situation, however, does not indicate prolonged strike. An open winter and industrial depression have left a large stock of coal on hand and the differences between miners and operators are very slight. It is practically agreed that the present wage scale will be continued, but some politics in connection with the change in the national officers of the miners' organization, and local differences between operators and miners have resulted in temporary suspension from work until a new wage scale is agreed to, either by districts or individual mines.

SEVERAL PERISH IN FLOODS.

Elkhorn, W. Va.—The greatest flood ever recorded in the history of the Tug river and Elkhorn valleys, with the exception of that caused by the cloudburst of seven years ago, when a hundred lives were lost, now prevails. In 36 hours the rainfall registered three inches and the Elkhorn, Tug, Bluestone and other streams in Virginia and West Virginia are out of their banks.

Wednesday night along the Elkhorn many hundreds of families were camping along the mountain sides, their homes being inundated. Three lives were reported lost at North Fork, W. Va., and two at Keystone, W. Va. Bridges are washed away along the Norfolk & Western railroad and traffic has been suspended.

AGRICULTURAL BILL PASSES.

Washington.—Carrying a total of $11,508,806, the agricultural appropriation bill was passed by the house of representatives late Thursday. The Democrats then began their threatened filibuster.

In executive session the senate confirmed the appointments of David Jayne Hill as ambassador to Germany, Spencer F. Eddy as minister of Argentina and Arthur M. Beaupre as minister to the Netherlands.

EVANS' PAIN IS ALL GONE.

Admiral Much Benefited by the Hot Sulphur Baths.

Paso Robles Hot Springs, Cal.—The physicians in attendance on Admiral Evans Friday issued the following bulletin:

"Admiral Evans feels greatly improved. He slept well during the night and all pain has disappeared. P. F. McDonald, M. D., L. E. Philips, M. D."

The rear admiral said that he greatly enjoyed the hot sulphur baths.

Judge McAllister Dead.

San Rafael, Cal. — Judge Ward McAllister, son of the famous society leader of New York, died Tuesday at a local sanitarium from the effects of an operation for appendicitis.

For two years he had been a sufferer from paralysis, and in his weakened condition he was unable to survive long after the operation, which was performed last Saturday.

ADDS FIVE MILLIONS

ANDREW CARNEGIE INCREASES FUND FOR EDUCATORS.

IRONMASTER IS GENEROUS

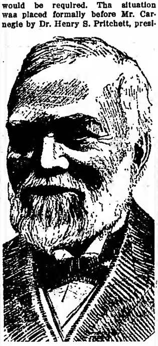
Professors in State Universities to Receive Pensions from Foundation When Legislature and Governor Approve Application.

New York. — Announcement was made Friday night that Andrew Carnegie would add $5,000,000 to the fund of the Carnegie Foundation, or whatever sum might be necessary to include as pension beneficiaries eligible professors of state universities.

No provision was made for this class of educators in the original gift, for the reason, stated by Mr. Carnegie at the time, that the donor thought it possible that such institutions might prefer that their relations should continue exclusively with the state from which their chief support was derived. This view was not taken by the National Association of State Universities, which in the year following the establishment of the foundation petitioned the trustees for admittance to the benefits of the retiring allowance system.

Original Fund Too Small.

It was then found that the earnings of the original fund of $10,000,000 were exhausted through the outlet already planned, and that if the faculties of all state universities were to be benefited, an additional $5,000,000 would be required. The situation was placed formally before Mr. Carnegie by Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, on March 31 last, and on that same day Mr. Carnegie replied that the money would be forthcoming for any state institution whose application received the approval of the legislature and governor of its state. The additional donation will be in five per cent. bonds, providing an added annual income of a quarter of a million dollars, and a total for yearly disbursement of $750,000.



Andrew Carnegie.

Mr. Carnegie's Letter.

Dr. Pritchett Friday night made public Mr. Carnegie's letter promising the further gift and a statement regarding the action of the National Association of State Universities. Under date of March 31, 1908, Mr. Carnegie wrote to Dr. Pritchett:

"I beg now to say that should the governing boards of any state university apply for participation in the fund and the legislature and governor of the state approve such application, it will give me great pleasure to increase the fund to the extent necessary to admit them. I understand from you that if all the state universities should apply and be admitted five millions more of five per cent. bonds would be required, making the fund $15,000,000 in all.

"From the numerous letters I have received from pensioners and their wives and the warm approval of the press and public, I am satisfied that this fund is, and must be for all time, productive of lasting good, not only to the recipients but to the cause of higher education.

"Most grateful am I to be privileged as trustee of this wealth to devote it to such use. Truly yours, Andrew Carnegie."

ALFRED VANDERBILT IS SUED

WIFE BEGINS AN ACTION FOR DIVORCE OR SEPARATION.

Papers Filed Just After the Multimillionaire Sails and Nature of Suit Is Not Revealed.

New York.—Within an hour after he had sailed for Europe Wednesday, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt was made the defendant in a suit filed with the supreme court by his wife, Ellen French Vanderbilt. The nature of the action was not immediately disclosed and counsel for the plaintiff refused to say whether Mrs. Vanderbilt seeks a divorce or legal separation from her husband.

Mrs. Vanderbilt was Ellen French, daughter of the late Francis Ormand French, president of the Manhattan Trust company and director of many railroads. Her mother has been abroad for several years but is returning for the wedding of her grand daughter, Miss Pauline Leroy French, and Samuel Wagstaff, to take place at Newport on May 5. Ellen, or as she was more generally known, Elsie, French was married to Alfred Vanderbilt on January 11, 1901. A year later their only child, William Henry, was born.

Mr. Vanderbilt, as the second son of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt, inherited something like $60,000,000. He has been regarded as the head of the family since the estrangement which followed the marriage of Cornelius, the eldest son, to Miss Grace Wilson.

The domestic affairs of Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt have engaged public attention since March 24, when Mrs. Vanderbilt, accompanied by their son and maids, left Oakland Farm, near Newport, R. I., and went to the home of her brother, Amos Tuck French, at Tuxedo Park, this state. Much of the furnishings at the Newport home have been shipped to Tuxedo Park.

HOOSIERS NAME J. E. WATSON.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The Indiana Republican state convention Thursday adopted a platform, indorsed Vice-President Fairbanks and instructed the 30 state delegates to the national convention at Chicago to vote and work for his nomination for the presidency, and nominated the following ticket:

For governor, James E. Watson, Rushville; for lieutenant governor, Fremont C. Goodwine, Williamsport; for secretary of state, Fred A. Sims, Frankfort; for auditor of state, John C. Billheimer, Washington; for treasurer of state, Oscar Hadley, Plainfield; for attorney general, James Bingham, Muncie; for reporter of supreme court, George W. Self, Corydon; for superintendent of public instruction, Lawrence McTurnan, Anderson; for state statistician, J. L. Peets, Kokomo; for judge supreme court, Fifth district, Quincy A. Myers, Logansport; for judge appellate court, First district, David Myers, Greensburg.

WATSON AND WILLIAMS.

Presidential Ticket Nominated by People's Party Convention.

St. Louis.—For president of the United States—Thomas E. Watson of Georgia.

The above ticket was nominated Friday by the People's party convention, after two stormy sessions, throughout which the Nebraska and Minnesota delegations, working in the interest of William J. Bryan, strove desperately to bring about an adjournment of the convention until after nominations had been made by the Democratic and Republican parties.

Hopelessly outnumbered and without any chance whatever of gaining their object, the Nebraska men fought desperately to the last, and when Jay W. Forest of Albany, N. Y., mounted the platform to place Watson in nomination, they withdrew from the convention, attended by the Minnesota delegation, which consisted, however, of only one man, T. J. Weighan.

Terre Haute, Ind.—Found guilty of charge of arson, Henry F. McDonald, in the circuit courtroom Thursday shot and killed Detective William E. Dwyer, wounded other officers and was himself seriously wounded. The shooting followed the announcement of the verdict of the jury before which McDonald had been tried on a charge of dynamiting stores and a church in Sanford last year.

RAISED FROM A SICK BED.

After Being an Invalid with Kidney Disorders for Many Years.

John Armstrong, Cloverport, Ky., says: "I was an invalid with kidney complaints for many years, and cannot tell what agony I endured from backache. My limbs were swollen twice natural size and my sight was weakening. The kidney secretions were discolored and had a sediment. When I wished to eat my wife had to raise me up in bed. Physicians were unable to help me and I was going down fast when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. After a short time I felt a great improvement and am now as strong and healthy as a man could be. I give Doan's Kidney Pills all the credit for it."

Watered Stock.

Edward R. Emerson, the president of the American Wine Growers' association, came from Washingtonville to New York the other day and lunched in a Broadway cafe with an editor.

Mr. Emerson, naturally, is a connoisseur of wines. The editor deems himself something of a connoisseur, too, and introduced Mr. Emerson with some pride to a Rhine wine, presumably of the famous '95 vintage.

"Well," he said, "how do you like this Rhine wine, Mr. Emerson? Delicious, don't you think?"

"Not bad," said Mr. Emerson, "only I fancy there's a trifle too much Rhine in it."

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

For proof of this statement read the following letters.

Mrs. Barbara Base, of Kingman, Kansas, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"For eight years I suffered from the most severe form of female troubles and was told that an operation was my only hope of recovery. I wrote Mrs. Pinkham for advice, and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has saved my life and made me a well woman."

Mrs. Arthur R. House, of Church Road, Moorestown, N. J., writes:

"I feel it is my duty to let people know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered from female troubles, and last March my physician decided that an operation was necessary. My husband objected, and urged me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and to-day I am well and strong."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, and backache.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Heavy Demand.

Fish Hatchery.—If applications for fish fry continue to come in at the present rate, the state will have to provide more fish hatcheries is the opinion of S. F. Fullerton, superintendent of fisheries of the state. He says that for some time they have been receiving applications at the rate of fifty a day and there will be a demand for much more than the state can supply even if the hatcheries are worked to their limit. The limit for pike fry at present is 300,000,000.

Four crews will start soon for the purpose of gathering spawn. The largest catch is expected at Tower. They have for many years attempted to catch spawn there, but the operations of the lumber companies have interfered and the catch has been very small. But the recent decision of the district court gives the fish commission free use of the river during the spawning season and they will try this year to make the best use of their opportunity.

Another crew will be sent to Fond du Lac on the St. Louis river, another to Gull Lake and a fourth to Pine River.

Reopen Red River Lands.

Washington.—Representative Steenerson has secured a favorable report on his bill to restore to entry and settlement a large tract of ceded Red Lake land which was withdrawn two years ago pending investigation, with a view to the establishment of drainage works thereon. The investigation was made, and it was found that reclamation by drainage would cost more than $1,000,000, which congress was not disposed to provide at this time, even though the appropriation is made reimbursable from the sale of reclaimed land.

There has been a demand from that section for the reopening of this land, some of which can be cultivated without drainage, and the bill was introduced in response to that demand.

It provides for payment in accordance with the terms of the Red Lake treaty, with the addition of 3 cents an acre, to cover the cost of the drainage survey.

The Shiloh Shaft.

St. Paul.—Adjt. Gen. Fred B. Wood has completed arrangements for the trip of Governor Johnson and official staff to Shiloh, Tenn., where the governor will deliver an address at the unveiling of a monument to the Minnesota soldiers who participated in the battle of Shiloh. There will be forty-four and possibly fifty in the party, which will leave St. Paul on April 7 and arrive at Shiloh the morning of April 10, when the ceremonies will be held.

Owing to the lack of railroad facilities, the party will travel 272 miles by boat on the Tennessee river. On the return trip they will spend a day at the Mammoth cave in Kentucky and spend one day in Louisville and one in Chicago.

Penalty Clause Only.

St. Paul.—According to the statement of one of the leading railway lawyers of the city, it is now the general opinion of the railroad attorneys that the decision of the United States supreme court invalidates only the penalty clause of the passenger and commodity laws. Ever since the announcement of the decision that question has been unsettled and upon it hinged whether roads might not get together and raise passenger fares above the 2-cent rate. Since it is believed by legal departments that only the penalty clause is held unconstitutional, it is improbable that there will be any move made even to consider raising passenger fares.

TO COMMAND FLEET

REAL ADMIRAL SPERRY WILL BRING BATTLESHIPS HOME.

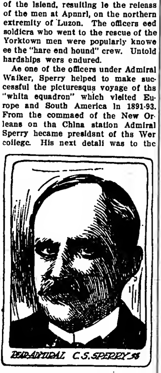
Successor of "Fighting Bob" Graduated from Naval Academy in 1866 and Has Passed Through All Grades with High Honors.

Washington.—Rear Admiral Charles Stillman Sperry, who will be commander-in-chief of the battleship fleet on its trip to Hawaii, Samoa, Australia, Philippines, Suez, Gibraltar and across the Atlantic to the United States. Admiral Sperry was born in Brooklyn in 1847. He entered the Naval academy, Annapolis, in September, 1862, and on graduation was assigned to command the U. S. steamship Sacramento (1866). This was the beginning of his naval career. He has passed through all the grades with high honors, shining in a diplomatic and social way, as well as securing a solid reputation for purely professional efficiency. In 1885 he became a lieutenant-commander, and, eight years later, took charge of the bureau of naval ordnance. He was made full commander in 1894.

During the war with Spain Admiral Sperry was given command of the Yorktown in the Philippines and directed the movements of the landing party on the eastern shore of Luzon, which is now regarded as one of the most thrilling incidents of the campaign against Aguinaldo.

The landing party was captured by Aguinaldo's men. Then began the famous chase of the insurgents and their prisoners throughout the length of the island, resulting in the release of the men at Aparri, on the northern extremity of Luzon. The officers and soldiers who went to the rescue of the Yorktown men were popularly known as the "hare and hound" crew. Untold hardships were endured.

As one of the officers under Admiral Walker, Sperry helped to make successful the picturesque voyage of the "white squadron" which visited Europe and South America in 1891-93. From the command of the New Orleans on the China station Admiral Sperry became president of the War college. His next detail was to the last Hague peace conference, where he went as one of the delegates. Returning from The Hague he was assigned to command the fourth division of the Atlantic fleet, in which capacity he has made the trip around the Horn with Admiral Evans.



REAR ADMIRAL C. S. SPERRY

It has been patent for some time that Admiral Evans was not in good health, as evidenced by the fact that he was compelled to forego all the festivities attending the cruise of the fleet around the coast of South America, and that nearly all the social duties usually devolving upon the commander-in-chief were performed by Rear Admiral Charles H. Thomas, second in command.

Rear Admiral Evans will be retired by operation of law on account of his age August 18 next. As the law prohibits retired officers from exercising command of ships, it was necessary to relieve Admiral Evans from his present command before the fleet leaves San Francisco in July next to complete its cruise around the world. Rear Admiral Sperry, commanding one of the squadrons of the fleet, was selected for that duty. Admiral Sperry does not retire until September, 1909, and is the only rear admiral now with the fleet having more than one year to serve on the active list. Rear Admiral Thomas retires October 1 next, less than two months after Admiral Evans' retirement and Rear Admiral Emory retires in the following December.

The vacancies caused by the retirement of Admirals Evans and Thomas will be filled by the promotion to that rank of Capts. Seaton Schroeder and Richard Wainwright, each of whom now commands a battleship in the fleet. Admiral Emory, who commands one of the squadron in the fleet, will continue in that detail, being second in command to Admiral Sperry. Admiral Emory is to retire in December. Capt. Ingersoll, who is Admiral Evans' chief of staff, will be detached from the fleet before it sails for home.

As reorganized for the transpacific cruise the command of the Atlantic fleet will be as follows: Rear Admiral Sperry, commander-in-chief and of the first division, and Rear Admirals Emory, Schroeder and Wainwright, commanders of the second, third and fourth divisions, respectively.

WAS WASHINGTON'S SECRETARY.

Washington.—One of the many nearly forgotten tombs about the city of Washington is that of Tobias Lear, who was private secretary to George Washington and tutor to his adopted children, Nellie Custis and George Washington Parke Custis. The tomb is in an obscure corner of Congressional cemetery and is inscribed:

> Here Lie the Remains of > Tobias Lear.
> He Was Early Distinguished as the Private Secretary and Familiar Friend of the Illustrious Washington, and After Having Served His Country with Dignity, Zeal and Fidelity in Many Honorable Stations, Died Accountant of the War Department, > 11 October, 1816,
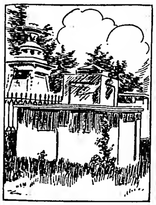
> Aged 54.
> His Desolate Widow and Mourning Son Have Erected This Monument to Mark the Place of His Abode in This City of Silence.

Tobias Lear was born in 1762 in Hunking street, Portsmouth, N. H. He was graduated from Harvard with the degree of A. B. in 1783. He took up the profession of teaching and was brought to the attention of George Washington, who employed him as secretary and as tutor to the Custis children, then living at Mount Vernon. Washington wrote of Lear:



Tomb of Tobias Lear, Washington's Secretary.

> Mr. Lear, or any other who comes into my family in the blended character of preceptor to the children and clerk or private secretary to me, will sit at my table, will live as I live, will mix with the company who resort to the house, and will be treated in every respect with courtesy and proper attention.

Lear's salary was $200 a year and Washington gave him the use of a farm on the Mount Vernon plantation. Lear was with Washington when the great man died, wrote the only authentic account of the last moments of the Father of his Country, and arranged Washington's private papers and audited his accounts. After Washington's death Lear was appointed United States consul to Algiers and remained at that post from 1804 to 1812. In 1805 he was one of the commission which concluded a treaty with the Dey of Algiers under terms of which the United States paid $60,000 for the release of 200 captive Americans. This treaty was bitterly assailed by the war party in this country. In 1812 Mr. Madison appointed Lear to a clerkship in the treasury department and later he became auditor for the war department.

Lear shot himself through the head in the garden of his home near the treasury the morning of October 11, 1816. The cause for the deed was never ascertained.

NEW SOUTH CAROLINA SENATOR.

Two of the Brothers of Frank B. Gary Are Judges.

Columbus, S. C.—Frank B. Gary, senator-elect from South Carolina, comes of a family of judges. One brother, Eugene Gary, is a member of the supreme court of the state; and Ernest Gary, another brother, is a circuit judge. The senator-elect is a lawyer and has acted as a special judge.

Senator-Elect Frank B. Gary.

The new senator is 48 years old and was born in South Carolina. He was graduated from Union college in Schenectady, N. Y. Previous to his election he was a member of the state legislature and was for five years speaker of that body. He was the first man in South Carolina to stand for election on a local option platform.

BOY AND MAD DOG IN DEADLY FIGHT

EARL RICE, AGED TEN, OF ALTON, ILL., BEATS OUT ANIMAL'S BRAINS WITH HAMMER.

WOMEN TERRORIZED BY BRUTE

Hurt in Desperate Struggle, Brave Lad Closes Door on Neck of His Pursuer and Beats in His Skull.

St. Louis.—Earl Rice, ten years old, killed a mad dog in a fierce singlehanded fight at his home in Alton, Ill., the other day. The boy beat out the dog's brains with a hammer after he had closed a door upon its neck and held it as in a vise. The dog had attacked a dozen persons and had been pursued by a crowd of men, armed with clubs, stones and guns, who failed to kill it. The boy was painfully bitten and bruised in the fight.

The dog ran amuck on Ridge street, in the eastern part of Alton. After escaping its several pursuers the animal started up the middle of the street yelping and biting at everyone it encountered. Several women and children had narrow escapes, and one man was knocked down when the dog lunged at him.

A crowd gathered and, armed with clubs and stones, started in pursuit of the dog. Several men shot at the animal, but missed it, and a shower of missiles struck it without stopping its progress. Two men cornered the dog in a doorway and for a moment the crowd in pursuit thought it would be killed. The men beat it over the head with clubs, but before a gun could be procured the animal darted between the men and started again on its rampage.

Earl Rice was playing near his home, No. 710 Ridge street, with several other boys, when the dog started toward the group. The children scattered and the animal singled out Earl to attack. The boy ran toward his home, with the dog only a few feet behind him, and just as he reached his yard the dog pounced upon him.

The dog fastened its teeth in Earl's leg and dragged him to the ground. The boy arose and ran again toward the house. He gained but a few feet when he was knocked down by another attack of the dog, but he again regained his feet and fled. Finally the boy reached the door of his mother's kitchen, which was open, and darted in less than a yard ahead of the dog.

Earl Dealt Blow After Blow.

The dog leaped in just as Earl threw his weight against the door to shut his pursuer out. The animal's head was caught between the door and the jamb, and Earl held it there while it struggled and fought to reach him with its teeth.

Near the door was a hammer lying on a table. Holding the door closed with one hand, Earl was able to seize the hammer. With the dog securely held in the door as in a vise, Earl dealt blow after blow upon the dog's head with the hammer. When the crowd that had pursued the rabid animal reached the Rice home the dog's skull was beaten to a pulp, and Earl was still pluckily holding the door and showering more blows upon the body.

The boy collapsed as he released his hold on the door, and the dog fell limp to the floor. His leg had been terribly lacerated and he was bruised and cut from his falls during his battle with the animal. A physician was summoned and his wounds were cauterized. It is thought he will recover.

Cool with Mangled Hand.

Millville, N. J.—With one of his hands torn in shreds by a buzz saw, James Butterworth walked to the office of Dr. Charles R. Charlesworth. Entering the office he said coolly: "Doc, have you time to cut off one of my hands?" Butterworth is employed at the saw mill of Da Mott Show, and it was there that the accident happened. Drs. Charlesworth and Neal amputated the remnant of the hand at the wrist.

Uses Cow for Suicide.

Trenton, N. J.—Benjamin McGee, 72 years old, of Madison township, Middlesex county, fastened a halter about his neck after tying it to a beam in the barn, and climbed on a cow's back. When she ran he was left hanging and hours after he was found dead.

HIS WHEAT WENT 22 BUSHELS TO THE ACRE.

HE REALIZED $18 PER ACRE FROM IT, WHILE OATS GAVE HIM $17 AN ACRE.

Moose Jaw, Sask., Nov. 18th, 1907.

Writing from Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, Mr. S. K. Rathwall says:

"I have much pleasure in saying that on my farm this year I had 500 acres in wheat, and 120 acres in oats. My wheat averaged about 22 bushels per acre, and I had 200 acres cut before the frost, which I sold at 85 cents per bushel, thus realizing on that wheat $18.00 per acre, not counting cost of twine, seed and labor. With regard to the other 300 acres of wheat, it got touched with frost but is worth 60 cents per bushel. It will net me $13.00 per acre, but I do not intend to sell it at that price, as I can make more money by feeding it to hogs.

"My oats turned out about 50 bushels to the acre, and at 35 cents per bushel will give me $17.00 to the acre, not counting seed, twine and labor.

"On account of the late spring, a percentage of the grain was touched with frost, but on account of good prices, farmers will realize a fair profit on their farms even this year. We are as usual up against a shortage of cars to get our grain removed."

A Good Point.

The critic is often hard put as he stands between the work he is asked to pass judgment upon and its complaisant creator. He cannot always get off so well as did the critic mentioned in the Baltimore American.

"There are some consistent features of nature in this rural landscape," he said, as he scrutinized the picture.

"What are they?" asked the anxious artist.

"The brow of the hill, which, I see, is placed above the mouth of the stream," was the illuminating answer.—Youth's Companion.

Gazetteer Humor.

Many specimens of unconscious humor are received by the editors of that monumental work, the new Imperial Gazetteer of India. A district was said to be "an extensive rolling plain, consisting of alternate ridges of bare stony hills and narrow fertile valleys." An interesting item of natural history was afforded by the remark, "the buffalo differs from the cow in giving a milk which is richer in fat, in voice, and in having no hump."—London Globe.

Restaurant Prize Seat.

A novel method of advertising a table d'hote has been invented by a New York restaurateur. Every Saturday night he selects a certain chair in his restaurant and places its number in a sealed envelope in charge of the cashier. All the guests select their own seats. The person who is lucky enough to occupy the selected chair receives, as a present, a handsome gold watch.

Evidently Strange.

"A gentleman to see you, sir," announced Mr. Strucklt Wright's new butler.

"Ah—tell him I'll be down in a minute. I guess it's my brother, probably. I'm expectin' him. Does he look anything like me?"

"No, sir—not at all. He is very gentlemanly in appearance."

Perils of Fence Mending.

"I understand that member of congress hurried home to mend his fences."

"Yes. But he doesn't appear to have made a neat job of it. His prospects look as if he had gotten into a tangle with a lot of barbed wire."

THEY GROW.

Good Humor and Cheerfulness from Right Food.

Cheerfulness is like sunlight. It dispels the clouds from the mind as sunlight chases away the shadows of night.

Anything that interferes with good health is apt to keep cheerfulness and good humor in the background. A Washington lady found that letting coffee alone made things bright for her. She writes:

"Four years ago I was practically given up by my doctor and was not expected to live long. My nervous system was in a bad condition.

"But I was young and did not want to die so I began to look about for the cause of my chronic trouble. I used to have nervous spells which would exhaust me and after each spell it would take me days before I could sit up in a chair.

"I became convinced my trouble was caused by coffee. I decided to stop it and bought some Postum.

"The first cup, which I made according to directions, had a soothing effect on my nerves and I liked the taste. For a time I nearly lived on Postum and ate little food besides. I am today a healthy woman.

"My family and relatives wonder if I am the same person I was four years ago, when I could do no work on account of nervousness. Now I am doing my own housework, take care of two babies—one twenty, the other two months old. I am so busy that I hardly get time to write a letter, yet I do it all with the cheerfulness and good humor that comes from enjoying good health.

"I tell my friends it is to Postum I owe my life today."

Entered at Second-class matter August 30, 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 8, 1879.

Under the new rouling of the post office department, that postage stamps must be prefxed to all papers sent to delinquent subscribors, It is very handy for a country editor to be post master. Nothing like haveing the tools handy when you get orders to use them.

Thief River Falls is to have three candidates in the field for county attorney this fall. That's the stuff; get out and take your chances with the rest of the people in a "square deal", and not mob any more It's into office; just because they happen to live in Thief River Falls, and the rest of the people in the county will have more respect for your city and candidates.

We would suggest that the would-be funny correspondent, to the Thief River Falls News, from Star township, have his head examined to see if It don't come to a peak on top. Any man liveing up in this locality that is opposed to any proposition to try to get a bridge across Red Lake River, for fear of mukeing the state of Minnesota expense, his brains could be put into a mustard seed and they could still hang out a sign of "room to let."

In response to a request from this section Representative Steenerson has introduced and had repoted favorable for passage a bill to restore to entry and settlement a large tract of ceded Red Lake lund which was withdrawn two years ago pending investigation, with a view to establishment of drainag work thereon. The investigation was made, and it was found that reclaimation by drainag would cost more than $1,000,000, which congres was not disposed to provide at this time, hence the bill to restore the land to entry.

Condor Individuality.

We had the best chance of studying the colors of the condor head. The bill was horn color, and the red skin of the head extended down, covering it about halfway. The legs were tan, but on each knee was a patch of red. On the breast of each bird the skin was blood red and could be seen occasionally when the breast feathers were spread and the birds were preening. Both had light colored wing bars, and the primaries were well worn. The skin on the throat hung loose, and the lower mandible fitted close under the upper. The chin was orange red, and below this on the neck was a strip of greenish yellow merging into the orange about the sides and back of the neck. The top and front of the head were red, but between the eyes was a small patch of black feathers, and these extended down in front of the eye into the orange red of the cheek. The pupil of the eye was black, but the iris was deep and red and conspicuous. The bald and wrinkled pate, the flabby jowls, with the cave-in expression of a toothless old women—these helped to make up the condor individuality.—William L. Finley in Century.

Very Considerate.

Mistress—Bridget, I hope you're not thinking at all of leaving me. I should be very lonesome without you.

Maid—Faith, and it's not lonely ye'll be. Most like I'll go when there's a houseful o' company for luncheon or dinner."—Lippincott's.

The Onion In Cooking.

The greatest of French cooks, being asked to give the secret of his success, answered: "The very foundation of all good cooking is butter and onion! I use them in all my sauces and gravies. They have the effect of making a customer come back for more. Butter without onion will drive the customer away after a few days. Boil the onion till it melts or entirely disappears; then add the butter and call the mixture stock."—Exchange.

A Good Opening.

Ian Maclaren was talking to a group of literary beginners in New York. "Begin your stories well," he said amphatically. "There's nothing like a good beginning. Indeed, it's half the battle." Then, with a smile, this excellent beginner of stories added, "Always bear in mind the case of the young man who, desiring to marry, secured a favorable hearing from his sweetheart's irascible father by opening the interview with the words, 'I know a way, sir, whereby you can save money.'"—Good Health.

It's Results That Count

In cooking it's the results that count. So when a housewife starts to make Bread or Rools or Pies, naturally she wants her cooking to have that rich crisp, pleasing odor. But it must also have that whiteness, lightness and wholesomeness which is so essential to good cooking.

Much of this depends upon the flour—and thousands depend upon,

A Hard Knack.

Railroad claim agents have little faith in their fellow creatures. One said recently: "Every time I settle a claim with one of these hard headed rural residents who wants the railroad to pay twice what he would charge the butcher if he gets a sheep killed, I think of this story, illustrative of the way some people want to hold the railroad responsible for every accident, of whatever kind, that happens. Two Irishmen were driving home from town one night when their buggy ran into a ditch, overturned, and they were both stunned. When a rescuer came along and revived them the first thing one of them said was, 'Where's the train?' 'Why, there's no train around,' he was told. 'Then where's the railroad?' 'The nearest railroad is three miles away,' he learned. 'Well, well,' he commented. 'I knew it hit us pretty hard, but I didn't suppose it knocked us three miles from the track!'"—Argonaut.

The Page Between.

A New Orleans woman, well known for her work for charity, recently accepted an invitation to speak at an anti-tuberculosis meeting. On the platform she found herself seated between a bishop and a rabbi, and the tone of the meeting seemed to be rendered extremely solemn by the combination.

In order to lighten the solemnity, she said, turning to the rabbi, "Do you know, I feel as if I were a leaf between the Old and the New Testaments."

The rabbi turned a sad eyed gaze upon her.

"Yes, madam," he said, "and, if you will recall, that page is usually a blank one."

Some Of His Relatives.

The man liveing up in Star township, who don't want a bridge built across Red Lake River in the eastern part of the county, for fear of making to much expense on the state and county, has some relatives in this part of this country who need watching. He has a twin brother at Thief River Falls that don't want the county seat moved up there, for feur it will cost the tax payers to much to pay the freight on the records to move them. He has un other brother liveing up this way that diden't want the creameuy built, becaus he thought it was cheaper to have his wife make the butter than to hire a butter maker He has a Cousin that don't want the telephone line built because he is affraid the farmers might spend 25 cents to telephon to town, instead of driveing his team to town. He has an other Cousin that diden't want the farmers boat built, to freight up the river, for fear it would burn to much cord wood. He has an other Cousin that did not want the towns organized, for fear he would have to work pole tax and build roads. He had an old uncle liveing donw below that was the worst of the family, as he used to chew his tobacco, then dry it and smoke it, use the ashes for snuff, and the snivel to grease his boots. You can usaly tell one of his realutives by the way he talks, but if you are not sure of your man, just get him to take his hat off and you will see that his head comes to a peak on the top.

In a Nitroglycerin "Hill."

In the "danger area" the severest discipline is maintained. All entrances are carefully guarded by searchers, who rigorously examine every individual that desires to enter, relieving him of any metallic objects that may be carried upon his person, together with matches and other suspicious objects which upon coming into contact with the dangerous chemicals used in this zone might provoke serious trouble. No matter how often an employee engaged within the hill may pass in and out, every time he enters he must submit to this preliminary and essential operation. There are also some 500 girls employed, and these are under the charge of matrons. Hairpins, ordinary pins, shoe buttons, metal pegs within the soles of the shoes, knitting and other needles are all religiously barred. Their hair is tied with braid or ribbon, and, as with the male employees, every time they enter the "danger area" they are similarly searched by the matrons.—Scientific American.

THE WIDOW

By DON MARK LEMON

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The body had lain in the pond for a week and consequently it was a bit past recognition when found, but as it wore the clothes of Carl Johnson, in the pockets of which was that party's pocketbook and knife, and as Carl Johnson had suddenly disappeared about a week before, the coroner held that the body was that of Carl Johnson.

No one, however, lost any sleep from the fact that Johnson had walked into the pond and afterwards failed to walk out. He was notoriously stingy, unkempt and drunken, and so few of the villagers had even taken any interest in the drowned man that his death was scarcely discussed.

But men are not wholly done with, even though they are drowned and food for fishes. There is always or generally some property left behind, and always or generally there is some-one to claim the property.

In the case of Carl Johnson it was a surprise from the word, money. No one in the village had been aware that the drowned man was married; nevertheless he was no sooner buried than there appeared on the scene a certain stunning blonde, who claimed that she was his widow.

It seems that the deceased had met her the summer before while transacting some business in the city and that they had been married after a very brief courtship. The lady had chosen to remain in the metropolis until her husband could wind up his business at Riverside and rejoin her, while as evidence of her marriage to the deceased and as proof of their mutual affection, certain letters had passed between the two, and when the first of these love epistles was read in court the villagers sat up and took notice.

Indeed, the letter was so interesting that more than one farmer left his haying and came seven miles to court, but that rests between those farmers and their wives, and does not necessarily pertain hereto.

There was now subpoenaed from the city a certain tall, slim clergyman, whose hair and manners were as smooth as vaseline and urbanity could make him.

He testified that he had officiated at the marriage of the lady and the deceased Carl Johnson, and that he had known the widow since her baptism, at which ceremony he had also officiated. The farmers' wives and villagers could hardly credit this last statement. The clergyman looked too youthful, but then the stunning blonde was very, very young—and very, very disconsolate.

The case progressed with the courtroom crowded to the doors and a few rustics sitting outside in their teams, discussing what a fool Johnson had made of himself down in the city, and wondering if they could get off from haying and go and do likewise.

Suddenly the people began pouring from the courtroom, not willingly, however, but angrily, and with many a backward look. The court had been cleared that certain of the love letters that had passed between the deceased and his widow might be read only in the hearing of the judge, clients, attorneys, jurors and clerk.

The widow had begged it, blushingly, tearfully; her lawyer had requested it, while the judge had thought it best.

The letters were then read and the case went to the jury, after an eloquent appeal upon the part of the attorney for the widow, in which that lady's tender affection for the deceased was so dramatically drawn that she fell to sobbing on the clergyman's shoulder.

Ten minutes after retiring the jurors filed back into the courtroom and the foreman reported a verdict favorable to the widow as against a distant relative of the deceased, who had contested the widow's claim.

The farmers and villagers received the verdict with an enthusiasm worthy of dollar wheat and the stunning blonde, with all due sweetness and modesty, took possession of the farm and moneys of Carl Johnson, deceased, the clergyman remaining with her as an impeccable chaperon.

Then one day the legally dead Carl Johnson walked into the village and asked the news. When he got it, got it all—his drowning—the widow, the clergyman—the court's decision—he ran his neglected finger nails through his unkempt hair and spat copiously.

"Come along, boys," he said; "I'll introduce you to her. A stunning blonde, you say? Young, plump, big blue eyes and a little foot? Yes, that's her! That's her, all right! She's my wife and—and we're going to settle right down and enjoy ourselves."

Followed by a dozen friends, Johnson entered his farmhouse, where the widow and clergyman were seated at tea, eating honey and biscuits very lovingly together.

At sight of the dead come to life, the widow threw up her hands and fainted, while the impeccable clergyman distinctly said damn. But then he had spilled his tea over his knees and hot tea is certainly hot.

Johnson sought to take the unconscious form of the widow into his arms and cover the rosy mouth with kisses, but he was stayed by the clergyman.

"What have you got to say about it?" demanded the legally dead Johnson. "Didn't you swear in court that you married me and her?"

The clergyman paled and stared past the other through the open door, when suddenly the widow came from her swoon and slapped the amorous Johnson resoundingly.

"Oh, you dreadful, dirty creature!" she cried. "Your mouth is full of tobacco; how dare you attempt to kiss me!"

Johnson scratched his greasy chin. "I call this a nice way to treat your own dead husband come to life."

"My husband! You!" The stunning blonde looked scorn unutterable.

"What! ain't you?' demanded Johnson.

"Ugh!" the lady shivered.

"How about them letters?" leered the other. 'The letters I wrote and them you wrote me! Them beauties they had to clear the court 'fore the judge would let 'em be read! How about them?"

The widow retreated nearer the clergyman, and Johnson turned to his friends. "I guess I won't need you folks any longer," he said. "Tell everybody how me and my wife are as happy as two kittens to be in one another's arms again." Then he turned on the clergyman. "And you pack along, too. Me and my wife want to be alone. Don't we, sweetcakes?"

The lady took the clergyman's arm. "Don't leave me, Cyril, dear. Don't let that horrid creature attempt to kiss me again!" Suddenly her woman's cunning reasserted itself and she cried: "You are an impostor, sir! You are not my Carl!"

His Widow.

"You all know me! Am I Carl Johnson, or ain't I?"

"You look like him," admitted one of his friends. "But you are dead in the law and you will have to get out papers and be brought back to life before you can kiss the lady."

The clergyman stepped forward and spoke with his former urbanity: "Such is precisely the case, sir. This lady is the widow of one Carl Johnson, who is legally held to be dead, and until you prove you are that Carl Johnson you have no claim upon her. I advise you to leave the house at once."

"Leave my own house! I guess not!" growled Johnson.

"Then this gentleman and I will, sir!" The widow swept from the room and returning quickly with her hat and cloak, under which latter articles of apparel there was concealed a small but heavy satchel, she offered her arm to the clergyman, and the pair hurried through the door and down the road.

"Good-by, sweetcakes!" leered Johnson over his gate. "Them letters certainly were the kind I'd have writ you, and you're the prettiest peach that ever fell over my fence and rolled out again."

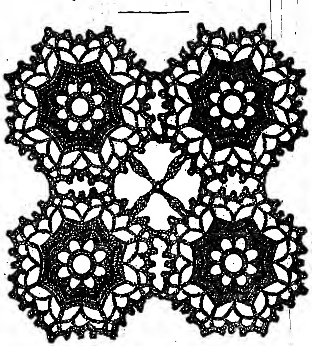
A shrug of the stunning shoulders was the only sign that the lady had heard him, then the pair was lost by a turn of the road. Johnson scratched his greasy chin and leered at his neighbors.

"You heard about them letters! Well, you beat them, and then you beat—her!"

Cocktails for His Tobacco.

Barkeepers, when they become confidential, usually tell good stories, says the New York Tribune, and he is a novice who does not carry bar secrets under his jacket and who does not know stories about the men who come in "to see what time it is." "Now, there," said a white-aproned total abstainer member of the profession pointing to a tin box on the glass shelf, "is one of my regular customers—this tin box." In answer to the look of inquiry he said: "It belongs to a man who never takes a drink, but who smokes a lot of cigarettes, which he rolls himself. Every little while he gets a box full of some particular kind of tobacco and comes here and orders a cocktail of his own invention. He empties the drink into the box, watches the tobacco absorb it; then hands me the box, which I keep till he returns in the evening and takes it home. No cherry goes with the cocktail, and although I've never known the tobacco to curl up and find fault because the drink was too dry or too sweet, I mix it as carefully as I do those for our crank customers."

CROCHET DESIGN



This design may be worked out to any size; four joined as shown form a very pretty doily.

Commence with 12 chain and join into a ring; 24 double crochets into the ring just made, 7 chain, a double crochet into third double crochet of previous row, 7 chain, double crochet in next third, and repeat (8 loops,) 8 double crochets under each of the chain loops.

Pass over the first stitch of the first loop, *, a double crochet in each of the next three, 3 double crochets in the fourth, one in each of the three following; pass the remaining stitch and the first one in the next loop, and repeat from * all round.

A double crochet in each stitch of the previous row, with three into the middle one at the top of each point.

Same as last row. *, 7 chain, 1 treble in the top stitch of nearest point, 7 chain, a double crochet in middle of double crochets between the points, repeat from *. To avoid breaking off, work a single crochet into each of the first 4 chain stitches of last row, 5 chain, 1 treble on treble, *, 3 chain, another treble in same place as last, 5 chain, double crochet in middle of next loop, 5 chain, double crochet in middle of next loop 5 chain, 1 treble on treble, and repeat from * all round.

Three double crochets under the nearest loop, 5 chain, 3 more double crochets under same loop, repeat from * under each loop all round the star and fasten off. The other stars are worked in the same manner, and the illustration will show where they are joined together.

For the Center Connection.—Work one chain cotton three times over hook, draw through one of the center picots—as shown—5 on hook, work off 2 at a time in the usual manner twice, leave rest on hook, cotton twice over, draw through same place as before, again work off 2 at a time twice, cotton twice over, draw through same picot and work off all the stitches, 1 chain, and repeat into each of the other stars, join the last stitch to the first chain in center and fasten off.

CARE IN CHOOSING COLORS.

In This Lies Half the Secret of Good Dressing.

A woman may be a beauty or otherwise, according to her sense of color. If she knows how to select the right shade for her special type she has discovered half the secret of good dressing.

A colorless blond should avoid purple, dark green or black, but can wear safely white, navy blue, pale blue, pink, grey, amethyst and, possibly, green with a tinge of yellow in it.

The sallow woman should forswear purples, browns, black or anything with a touch of tan or yellow, but will generally look well in dead white, bright, strong blues and most shades of red or pink.

The black-haired, red-cheeked woman should be judicious in her use of her favorite reds and deep yellow, as they have a tendency to give her an ordinary, even, coarse look. She will usually be at her best in white and looks well in the champagne and light tan tones.

The red-haired woman should choose milk white, a dull black and light and dark greens. Browns and tans, contrary to the usual belief, impair the purity of her complexion.

Warm, light grey is usually becoming to the red-haired woman, especially if she has brown eyes, while very pale lemon is exquisite with ruddy looks.

Few of our red-haired women recognize the possibilities of this last color, but it is well understood by the famous Parisian dressmakers, who use gold and yellow to enhance the beauty of many of their red-haired models.

New Gloves.

The dress gloves in long lengths are very near the styles of those worn during the winter, but the stitching at the back shows crows' feet and the gloves close at the wrist with two large pearl buttons. The apricot and champagne colors are very stylish just now and may be worn with a costume of an entirely different color. Lavender gloves are no longer fashionable and the yellow ones are seen only with carriage costumes. Street gloves are the shade of the street costume.

Needing Iron.

Very often that tired feeling, lost zest in life, a disinclination to move or exert oneself, waking unrefreshed, night sweats and utter weakness are caused by nothing but too little iron in the blood. Before you decide that you are going into a decline or typhoid has you in its first grip, ask your doctor if he does not think you need iron. Even if you do not go to a doctor try taking for a week or two some reliable tonic that has iron or hypophosphites in it.

Soft Illumination.

A desk light, one of the incandescent electric bulbs in its green shield, turned upward upon a white ceiling makes the softest of illuminations for a room, pleasantly diffused, without shadows, but strong enough, provided there is no reading to be done.

KEEP THE CHIN WELL UP.

Physical Instructor Says This Is Sure Cure for Round Shoulders.

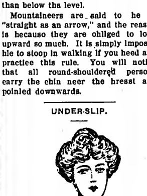
One physical culture instructor in Boston, who is having great success in teaching round-shouldered girls to stand and walk erect, says the whole secret is in the way the head is held.

"Throw up your chin," is her rule. This throws the head upward and backward and the shoulders will naturally settle backward and in their true position.

Those who stoop in walking generally look downward. The proper way is to look straight ahead upon the same level with your eyes, or, if you are inclined to stoop, until that tendency is overcome, look rather above than below the level.

Mountaineers are said to be as "straight as an arrow," and the reason is because they are obliged to look upward so much. It is simply impossible to stoop in walking if you heed and practice this rule. You will notice that all round-shouldered persons carry the chin near the breast and pointed downwards.

UNDER-SLIP.



This under-slip is intended for wearing with pinafore-bodices, and suggests a way of making up odd lengths of ribbon and lace insertion that may have been bought at the sales. It consists of a deep yoke coming down under the arms, and puffed sleeves terminating just above elbow. The yoke is joined into a band of batiste stitched at each edge, which may be fixed to the under-bodice by small safety pins. The bands to which the puffed sleeves are gathered are finished by frills of lace. The quantity of insertion and ribbon will be regulated by the width of it.

White Hair.

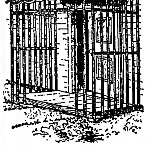
Sometimes the hair alone is responsible for white hair having a yellowish appearance. Only castile soap should be used in shampooing; all trace of soap must be carefully rinsed out and a bit of pure indigo may be put into the final rinsing water.

INEXPENSIVE VERANDA.

Will Provide Shade and Beauty for the Summer.

A vine-covered veranda would be such a comfort if only it were possible to build it now so as to have it well covered with vines before the long summer evenings come. In many cases the expense seems greater than the owner of the plain little farmhouse feels able to stand. This was my own case a few years ago, as my home was an old-fashioned farmhouse built in the style of 100 years ago, and strongly resembling an immense dry goods box about 50 feet long, two stories high and perfectly plain, destitute even of paint.

After thinking it over, says a writer in Farm and Home, I decided the case was by no means hopeless, so I set to work in this fashion. First, I sent a man to the woods to get a load of straight poles about 1½ inches in diameter and from 8 to 12 feet long. I next procured a number of nice smooth boards for the flooring of my veranda, making it about 6 feet wide and 10 feet long and strengthening it with the necessary timbers. I securely nailed the poles about 8 inches apart around the flooring to form an inclosure, leaving an opening in front about 5 feet wide, as shown in the cut.



Framework for Vine-Clad Porch.

The poles in front were 7 feet from the floor to the roof and 12 feet at the house. About midway of their height the poles were strengthened by a row of poles nailed horizontally and another row was placed at the top. To make all secure against rain, the slanting roof poles were next carefully covered with overlapping rows of bark. All this required but small outlay of cash and even less of work, yet when my work was so far completed, I considered it ready for the vines and contemplated the result with much satisfaction.

Being in haste for immediate results, I planted some roots of the hardy native woodbine, which will soon cover any space with its rapid growth. It is an easy matter to sow seed of the morning glory, hardy annual gourd, or any one of several hardy climbers and the result will soon be a mess of shade and lovely blossoms besides, all of which makes the summer evenings pass far more pleasantly.

SEEDLINGS.

How many jars of fruit are left?

Of course your hotbed is under way

Plow deep before planting, shallow after.

Make a new gate or two before spring work opens.

In the pig pen see that there are no places in which pigs can get fast.

Many who have tried it say that "dryfarming" is indeed "dry" farming!

Know what you want the hired men to do and when necessary jump in and show them how to do it.

Alsike clover is a lighter growing, finer plant than the medium red. It is short-lived, but valuable on heavy soil.

Start One.

Cow testing associations cost little and save much. All there is to it is for several farmers of the neighborhood to get together and agree to take samples and test their cows three or four times a year, and to have the work done by an experiment station or local creamery tester. The cost is not over six dollars per farmer, and often means the difference between a paying business and one that is losing money every day.

Hustling for Success.

With all the inventions, good and bad, which have been thrust upon us, no one has yet invented a way of achieving success without hustling for it. The work of the farmer has been made easier, but the fact remains that if he is going to make a success he must, to use a street phrase, "get up and dust."

Mixed Milk.

One Holstein breeder in New York has in connection with his herd of pure-bred black and white cattle a smaller herd of pure-bred Jerseys. He mixes the milk of the two in order to maintain a high butter fat test in the certified product that is bringing wealth and reputation to his establishment.

SADLY MISTAKEN.

Hubby (disgustedly)—The doctor is a fool.

Wifey—What's the matter, dear?

Hubby—He said I need exercise. Think of it! Exercise! Exercise for a man who has looked after his own furnace all winter, and is now contemplating the opening of the lawn mower season!

THE TROLLEY RABBIT

AN EPISODE IN WOODS AND WATER EXPLOITS

By
Ernest McGaffey
Author of Poems of Gun and Rod, Etc.

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

There's more than a dozen ways of shooting rabbits, but the boys generally wait until there's snow on the ground. Of course a man runs across rabbits when he's quail shooting, hunting for ruffed grouse and prairie chickens, but the real time to shoot them is along about from November until say the middle of December. Then they are foraging around among the corn shocks and fattening up on different stuff, and the fat just lays in wads all up and down their backs, and their kidneys are simply smothered in tallow. Fact! You take a corn-fed rabbit in the middle of November, and he's as fat as a seal, and tender as chicken.

But that isn't what I started to tell about. The Nimrod Gun and Rod club was composed of about as crafty a bunch of jokers as ever sat up nights trying to "put it over" some unsuspecting devotes of the rod and gun. It was about an even bet that they would rather fool some fellow into doing something ridiculous than to make the record "bag" for ducks along the lakes. "Big Jack" Mullanphy was willing at any time to spend

WHY DON'T YOU FIRE?

$50 for something that could take in a veteran "sport."

And so this particular winter "Jack" had fixed up the slickest scheme you ever heard of. The club's headquarters were at a farmhouse about a quarter of a mile from the lake, and we used to go out there as soon as there was a good snow on the ground and take some beagles along and shake the country up for rabbits.

"Big Jack," who was a clever mechanic, and an electrician besides, went out there and built a little trolley track in the orchard that ran up and down hill and around among the trees, and that worked as slick as one of these little tracks that they use to send cash back and forth on in the big stores. Well, sir, he next shot a rabbit and got it mounted all stretched out, and then he fixes the rabbit on the track and gets the wires and pulleys arranged so that he could keep the rabbit on a steady swing around this track, up and down, in and out, by sitting under the kitchen and working the dingus from down there.

Well, say, now! Didn't that tame some of the real "wise" boys? I guess yes! Every Saturday night when we'd go out to the lake we'd take some hunter along, and after the boys would get to playing "cinch" in the sitting-room, some fellow would come in sort of excited and say: "Where's my gun?" and commence to fumble around the gun rack. The fellows who were in the deal would say: "What do you want with your gun?"

By a little smooth work we could generally get the new arrival to dig out into the night with the fell intent of destroying the rabbit; and if he was a real hunter, even he would usually take a couple of shots at the trolley rabbit before he would "catch on" to the joke. But if he was a green hand he would stand there and bang away for a dozen shots. The boys always went along and fed shells to him and encouraged him to shoot, and after he had finally "tumbled" to the hoax, it was worth a supper next week in town.

One time we got word from "Jack" that he had a fresh victim in tow who would be on hand the next Saturday night at the depot, and for us all to be sure to come down and meet Wilbur. This Wilbur was simply sagging in his side-pockets with money, and it was figured that he would do the handsome thing by the boys when we gave him an interview with our rabbit.

All the way out we sat in the "smoker," and this Wilbur won about a dollar and 80 cents playing "cinch" with three of us. He was green enough hunting, but he seemed to know how to play "cinch" all right. We talked a lot about the rabbit shooting around the lake, but we didn't tip off our game by any remarks about rabbits in the orchard. Then "Big Jack says: "We'll make up a purse of five dollars for the fellow that gets the first rabbit," and everyone agreed to it and chipped in 50 cents apiece.

When we got to the station Old Man Carmody met us, and when we asked him about rabbits the old man says: "Slathers of 'em. I see 'em playin' 'round the yard on moonlight nights, and they're gnawin' at the old cabbages left in the garden an' chasin' each other in the orchard. You'll have fine sport to-morrow; there hasn't been a gun fired at 'em yet."

Well, of course this was a grand "steer" for Wilbur, and gave him an idea that there were rabbits by the million in the country, and he wanted to get his gun out of the case and stick in a couple of shells in case we saw any rabbits on the way over. But Old Man Carmody put a stopper on that by declaring that the team wouldn't stand for shooting from the wagon, and so we coaxed Wilbur to keep his artillery under cover until later.

We arrived at the house and Wilbur was introduced all around and we had an elegant supper waiting for us. We showed our prospective member the gun-racks, the mounted ducks, jack-snipe, woodcock, ruffed grouse, prairie chickens and other specimens in the front room, which was our "show room," and then we got together in the sitting-room for another session of "cinch." Well, sir, this here Wilbur was a lucky devil at "cinch." Seems as if he got the cards, and he knew how to play 'em. He kept winning steady, and by and by after he was about three dollars ahead "Buck" Swearingen went out doors and after paddling around in the light snow that lay on the ground, he comes in kind of sly and says: "Where'd I put my gun?"

This Wilbur fellow he'd just won a game, and "Big Jack" was shuffling the cards, and "Jack" speaks up and says: "What's up; is that old owl out there, 'Buck?'"

"No," says "Buck," "but I saw a rabbit running around in the orchard, and I thought I'd run in and nail him. I win the five if I get him, don't I?"

"Oh, no!" says "Big Jack;" "that's for a fair start in the morning, every fellow in the timber and the dogs loose. Go ahead and get him, though. Hold on, though," says "Jack," as a thought seemed to strike him, "what's the matter with our new member taking first crack at him?"

"All right," says "Buck," "we'll both go." So "Buck" and this Wilbur boy they snakes their breech-loaders out of the cases and out they put for the rabbit. "Big Jack" ducks out of the side door and in under the kitchen and away goes the rabbit.

"There he goes," whispers "Buck," as the rabbit sails away as slick as a cash basket, and goes down the hill. "Give it to him, soak him."

So this Wilbur fellow ups with his gun and aims for the rabbit, and then he drops his gun and takes a peek, and then he raises his gun, and still he don't shoot.

"Shoot, shoot," says "Buck;" "he'll get clear away if you don't hurry. What ye waitin' for?" says "Buck."

"I'm waitin' for some one to turn the power off," says this here Wilbur fellow. "I ain't shootin' any mechanical rabbits unless I get a crack at 'em settin'."

And "Big Jack" paid for that supper.

ADVICE SARCASTIC.

How You Can Avoid Being a Book Farmer.

Every now and then we find a farmer who has a horror of book farmers and would not for any consideration be considered by his neighbors as such. We wish to help this fellow and, therefore, make a few suggestions.

First, we advise him not to keep any books for his farm operations. Simply go along from year to year, taking what you get without knowing what it costs you, avoiding all accurate knowledge of what it has cost you to produce a ton of hay, a bushel of wheat or oats, a pound of pork or beef or butter. Such information as this is dangerous to the man who is fearful of being a book farmer.

Don't take any agricultural papers. They, too, are dangerous, for they might set you to thinking. They might contaminate your mind with the results of experiment stations or the experience of farmers. If you read any agricultural paper at all, read one that somebody has sent you for nothing in order to get your trade or your patronage or for some other reason, honorable or dishonorable. This will not do you much harm, but better not take any at all.

By all means keep away from all agricultural institutes. Avoid particularly any lectures that have the least tinge of science. It is true that science is only the application of common sense to farm operations, and that it only teaches how to obey the laws of nature; but science smacks of book farming and, therefore, everything that has the remotest connection with science should be avoided. Keep away from farmers' institutes.

To further avoid any possible danger of becoming a book farmer try to find fault with the operations of your neighbors. If your neighbor across the fence has 80 bushels of corn this year while you have only 40, try to explain it in some way that will not be a reflection on your own practice. You might say that his land was better to begin with, that he was lucky, or that he happened to plant just in the right "sign." You can easily explain his success without giving any credit whatever to what is known as book farming. You can also explain why he raises large litters of pigs, or has large yields of milk, or gets better weight and better prices for his steers. Cultivate the disposition to find fault and criticise in every way possible.

If these directions, says Wallace's Farmer, are followed, we will guarantee that the man who follows them will not be regarded as a book farmer.

WELL PLANNED FARM.

Seeing in the Farmer recently plans for well arranged farms and deeming this a matter of sufficient importance for the consideration of our fellow farmers, and our mutual assistance along this line, I submit the following diagram of a farm of 160 acres in 11 divisions, two or ten, one of 20 and three of 40 acres each, writes a correspondent of the Indiana Farmer.

The farm has a road on two sides and fronts the east. The ten acres on which the buildings are located consist of six divisions.

No. 1 dwelling and door yard, 2 orchard, 3 family garden, 4 front barn lot, 5 truck garden, 6 barn lot, with ample room for feed troughs and straw stacks, allowing no stock loose in front lot, 7 open wood, pasture, used for night pasture during the summer for the work horses, also handy for the milch cow, 8 permanent pastures, with some timber affording shade in summer and a wind break in winter. Nos. 9, 10 and 11 are 40 acre fields for cultivation, and will admit of the three years' rotation plan. Some of the good features of this plan are these. The larger fields avoid the great expense of much fence building, and this is quite an item at this time. Again from No. 8 stock can be turned to any field on the farm, doing away with the need of a lane, or driving stock over cultivated fields, getting from one to another, which are very objectionable features.

Some one may object to this plan on account of lack of permanent pasture. This can be easily managed, by removing the fence between 8 and 10, back west to the middle of 10, then you have 40 acres and if still more is wanted take this fence away and use it in making three equal divisions out of 9 and 11; this gives 60 acres of permanent pasture, of handy access to the barn and field also. This is a true diagram of a farm made out of a heavily timbered forest. It required 30 years to bring it to its present state of completion.

I would add two or three pounds of white clover seed per acre for permanent mowings, as it makes a thick, rich bottom, writes W. A. Ford of the Massachusetts Agricultural college.

PRESCRIPTION PURIFIES BLOOD

Neutralizes Poisonous Acids and Stops Rheumatic Pains and Catarrh

The following prescription is very simple, but is the most effective obtainable for neutralizing acid poisons in the blood and relieving rheumatism and all its kindred ailments; it will also quickly restore the system to a healthy condition. Any one can prepare this simple mixture. The ingredients can be obtained at any well stocked drug store:

"One ounce Compound Syrup of Sarsaparilla; one ounce Toris Root Compound; half pint high grade whiskey. Mix and use a tablespoonful before each meal and at bed time. The bottle must be well shaken each time." Toris Root Compound is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Chicago.

The good effect of this treatment is said to become apparent after the first few doses and that it is a remarkable system builder and renovator.

HOW TO APPLY PAINT.

Greatest care should be taken when painting buildings or implements which are exposed to the weather, to have the paint applied properly. No excellence of material can make up for carelessness of application, any more than care in applying it can make poor paint wear well.

The surface to be painted should be dry and scraped and sandpapered hard and smooth. Pure white lead should be mixed with pure linseed oil, fresh for the job, and should be well brushed out, not flowed on thick. When painting is done in this manner with National Lead Company's pure white lead (trade marked with "The Dutch Boy Painter") there is every chance that the job will be satisfactory. White lead is capable of absolute test for purity. National Lead Company, Woodbridge Building, New York, will send a testing outfit free to any one interested.

SKIN TROUBLES CURED.

First Had Itching Rash—Threatened Later With Blood-Poison in Leg—Relied on Cuticura Remedies.

"About twelve or fifteen years ago I had a breaking-out, and it itched, and stung so badly that I could not have any peace because of it. Three doctors did not help me. Then I used some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent and began to get better right away. They cured me and I have not been bothered with the itching since, to amount to anything. About two years ago I had la grippe and pneumonia which left me with a pain in my side. Treatment ran it into my leg, which then swelled and began to break out. The doctor was afraid it would turn to blood-poison. I used his medicine but it did no good, then I used the Cuticura Remedies three times and cured the breaking-out on my leg. J. F. Hennen, Milan, Mo., May 13, 1907."

IN A JAPANESE THEATER

By
MARSHALL P. WILDER

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

The theater has always been a favorite form of recreation among the Japanese, and especially beloved of the Japanese woman, for it is her only amusement, and the only public place where she may accompany her husband.

The theater of old Japan, with its strutting legendary heroes, its ancient costumes, and actors who carried their own lanterns in order to light the expressions of their faces, is practically a thing of the past. While many of the old customs still survive, modern inventions and appliances have been grafted upon them to the effect of producing some startling contrasts. The Japs, eager to grasp European ideas and fashions, have made use of some, but left many as they have been for generations.

We may go at any hour, so suppose we start at five. On our way, we are sure to see every characteristic of street life. The Japanese, in their eagerness to adopt European ways and customs, have swallowed such a large meal they are not able to digest it; and no better illustration of this can be found than their pretentious and truly wonderful street signs. As a specimen of English as she is Japped, the following, culled from a choice, and I might say, startling, collection, is respectfully submitted. The spelling and punctuation are especially worth noting:

On a baker's cart:

BY CAKE & A PIECE OF. BREAD.

Over a ladies' tailor shop:

DRAPER, MILLENER & LADIES OUTFATTER.

The ribbons, the laces, the veils, the feelings. (frillings?)

Over a furniture shop:

CHAIR. COCHON. (couch?) & MATTLES (Mantels?)

On a dairy window:

PEST MILK. (rather alarming, but probably means BEST).

On a druggist's:

BEST PERFUMING WATER ANTI-FLEA.

Over a laundry:

We most cleanly and carefully wash our customers with cheap prices as under.
Ladies eight shillings per hundred.
Gentlemen seven shillings.

A dentist's sign:

NOTIES.

Our tooth is a very important organ for human life and countenance as you know; therefore when it is attack by disease or injury, artificial tooth is also very useful.

Japanese substitute for coffee:

JAPAN INSTED OF COFFEE.

More men is got dropsy of the legs who us (use?) this coffee, which is contain nourish.

Photographer's studio:

PHOTOGRAPHER EXECUTED.

Over a barber shop:

HEAD CUTTER.

Over a tailor's:

THE EUROPEAN MONKEY JACKET MADE FOR THE JAPANESE.

I reserve the gems of the collection for the last:

FULISH. RUTTR. CRIAM. MILK.
(Fresh Butter, Cream, Milk.)

Over an egg shop:

EXTRACT OF FOWL.

• • •

Our rickshaws stop, and our men light their paper lanterns. It seems absurd to have a paper lantern for practical use, but the little candles of greenish gray wax burn steadily, and give a clear light. We meet many people carrying paper lanterns, so we see that what has always been to us merely a thing for decoration only, is in this toy-box of a country an article for practical use.

Keeps Drinking from a Bottle.

Having reached the theater, quite an imposing building of stone, we enter the lobby.

(A man and a woman are on the stage, she crying, and he trying to comfort her.) Our guide explains to us that she has been about to commit suicide because of the financial ruin of her husband.

The part of the woman is played by Takata, one of the greatest impersonators of women in Japan. There are no actresses, all the parts being assumed by men. This particular actor is so conscientious, that, in order to retain the atmosphere of his impersonations, while at home he dresses, talks, acts, and generally comports himself as a woman would.

Danjiro, the most famous impersonator of women in Japan, is reported to have made up so perfectly as a girl of 17, when he was 65 years old, that when he went to his own house and asked to see Danjiro, his wife did not know him, and in a fit of jealous anger, berated him for a shameless girl, coming there to see her husband.

Her husband approaches, and the old man runs off, across the "Flowery Way," begging her not to let his charity be known.

The husband is suspicious, and asks her why she was talking with that man. Her promise given, she cannot answer, and after a fiery scene, he spurns her, and the curtain is drawn, to the solemn banging of a drum, and the high pitched mournful song of some one in the distance.

Actors Who Carried Their Own Lanterns.

• • •

Danjiro owns the finest curtain in Japan, presented to him by the Geisha of Tokio, who each gave a hundred yen. It is of silk, embroidered as only Japanese know how, and to see, well worth the price of admission.

The entire lower floor of the theater is divided into little boxes, about four feet square, by partitions not more than four or five inches high. About five yen are paid for these boxes, and they hold four people, who kneel on matting rugs.

The best seats are the boxes along the sides of the balcony, which also hold four people, and cost six yen. As a yen is worth 50 cents of American money, it may be seen that the prices of Japanese theaters, by comparison with those of Europe or America, are very reasonable.

• • •

At this juncture our ears are assailed by the most heart-rending sounds that chill the blood in our veins. It is the European orchestra! The smiling guide tells us: "European orchestra very nice—Japanese people like very much!"

"Oi did," said Paddy. "Here ye've been for two hours tryin' to pull it apart, an' Oi did it in wan minut!"

A sharp noise, made by striking two pieces of hard wood together announces that the next act is about to begin. The intervals between acts are usually about ten minutes.

As the curtain is drawn aside, the pieces of wood tap together faster and faster, until the stage is disclosed.

This time it is a house, the front open, chrysanthemums growing about the door. At intervals the shrill note of an insect is heard.

His father-in-law is pleading with him to grant a divorce to his daughter, as his constant intoxication and ill-treatment of her are hard to bear. The drunkard refuses, and the scene between the men is a powerful one, a knowledge of the language being unnecessary in order to appreciate their really great acting.

The revolving stage, used in all Japanese theaters, is seen in this act, as the entire stage turns, bringing into view a different scene, the old man's house.

The play proceeds through several acts, to a European or American, in rather a disjointed manner, and without much sequence, but with no lack of fine acting.

Just before the last act, the ushers bring in the sandals and clogs that have been checked, so there will be no confusion and delay when the theater is out.

But three days are allowed for rehearsal, and in that time they must be letter perfect, for a Japanese audience is a critical one.

Approbation is announced by clapping the hands, but audible comments are frequent.

When we go out, our rickshawmen, wrapped in their rugs, hurry from the gallery where they have been enjoying the play. The orchestra and the electric lights are not the only innovations in this theater. The idea of a play of modern Japanese life is entirely new, and we were fortunate in seeing the first performance of one of the few modern plays ever enacted in Japan.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

SOME PENNY-WISE AND POUND-FOOLISH METHODS.

WANTING TOO MUCH PROFIT

With price cutting, short weight packages, trading stamps, advertising fakirs, box-car merchants, mail-order houses, dead beats and numerous other burdens to carry and contend with, the life of the storekeeper is far from a happy one. He rises in the morning with the tune of the lark, works hard all the day long, and goes to bed at night not knowing whether the price of oil will be raised on him the next day or not. Then there is the home paper that the merchant sometimes reads, and it makes him tired to learn that he has been for years acting the chump by not advertising in its pages in the right way. There is a lot of retailers who kick and howl about people sending to mail-order houses for goods and never once think that they, the merchants, are to blame for the matter.

The other day the writer met a farmer. He was an interesting kind of chap, pretty well up in the ways of the wicked world, the methods of the box-car merchants and the manners of the local storekeepers. He said that he had been buying goods from a few of the mail-order houses for the past few years. He commenced patronizing them in this way: He wanted to buy a small rifle for his son at Christmas time. He went to his local hardware dealer, found that the rifle would cost him $2.50. His son had seen the same thing advertised by a mail-order house for $1.10. He told his father that he could buy it for that. The storekeeper wouldn't come down a cent on his price; in fact, told the man to send away and get it. He did so. The rifle cost him, laid down, $1.35, or $1.15 less than he could have bought it at home. This is a poor argument in favor of the home store. The dealer could have sold the rifle as low as the mail-order concern could lay it down in his town, but he wouldn't. The result was one more man became a buyer on the mail-order house plan.

This same man told me that he went to his local drug store to buy a rubber fountain syringe. He paid the druggist $1.75 for one. A few months later he wanted another one of the same kind. He found it was advertised in the big book for 60 cents. He sent for it, cost him 72 cents laid down to him by the rural mail carrier. Another case where the druggist was not up to snuff and wanted to make a profit out of all proportions to what legitimately should be made. This farmer felt that he was being overcharged for these little things and could see no reason why he should not save a little money by sending away from home for what he wanted. This same farmer knows that he should buy goods just as low from his home storekeeper as he gets them from the mail-order house. He also knows that in many lines he can buy goods cheaper. The only trouble is that some merchants carry a small line of merchandise on which they think they should make 200 per cent. profit or more. There is little call for this class, and when a sale is made they want too large profits. Their customers don't like this treatment. They feel it is not the right kind of a deal, and are sore over it. It doesn't pay the merchant to mark his special goods so high, for it is just on this class of goods that the catalogue houses make low prices to attract attention and make the people think they are selling goods cheap.

D. M. CARR.

Old Fogy Ways.

"The way my father did and my grandfather did, is good enough for me; I don't take much stock in those new fangled ideas." How many in the retail trade apparently take this view of things? What percentage of business men are making progress by following in the footsteps of by-gone generations? It is not a wise and good idea to use tallow dips and pine knots in an electric light age? What would an intelligent man think of the western farmer who would undertake to reap his wheat field with a sickle? But still many are in the same boat when they try to do business as their fathers and their grandfathers did. There are certain principles that one may follow; can be honest, give square measure, be sociable, favor friends, and all those little things, but to do business in the old way means failure unless one is located in a backwoods place where there is no competition. The up-to-date merchant is the man who gets there, and it is a difficult matter to find the place today where advanced methods are not necessary.

Utopian Idea.

Communism is an Utopian idea, based upon platonic principles which neither recognize natural laws as applied to business nor the rewards merited by superiority of intelligence or extraordinary achievements. It means that the plodder, the indolent and the incompetents shall partake of the benefits of the labors of the more worthy, enjoy that earned by efforts of the workers and forever be a burden upon their communities. Two thousand years of experience has proved the errors of its alleged philosophy and its unsoundness in the practical affairs of life.

PURCHASED EXPERIENCE.

One peculiar phase of human nature is shown by how some people will jump in and buy goods without seeing what they are getting. Not long ago a man out in a western state, who had made a few thousand by farming, decided to build a new house in his home town. He was a tight-fisted, pinch-the-penny kind of fellow, and decided that he would buy all he could in the way of fixings from the mail-order houses. He had the local plumber do the lead-piping and a lot of work that the mail-order people couldn't do, then ordered his bath-tub and toilet fixings from a mail order concern. He priced the tubs in the local house, then decided that he could save two or three dollars. He got his tub and his stand from abroad. Both came without fixtures. There was a lot of trouble over freight, and when the tub was put in place it was found that nothing in the town could be had to fit it. Faucets, valves, etc., were ordered from the house that supplied the tub. When they came it was found they were the wrong size. They were sent back, and another lot sent. Then even the local plumber had to work two or three days extra to get things in shape. When the job was completed, it was found that the cost was some $15 more than the home men offered to do all the work and supply the equipment. This is only one illustration of how money can be saved by ordering from a house at a distance.

Some who order from the retail mail-order houses get a taste of the real thing. A young man in a Nebraska town sent 65 cents to one of the concerns for a buggy whip. It was represented as cheap at twice the price. In a week or so he got it by express, charges only 75 cents. It was done up in a package that the company didn't charge for, but when examined, the young man found that the same whip could be had of his home storekeeper for 50 cents. There was 5 cents money order and postage; 75 cents expressage and 65 cents for the whip, making a total of $1.45, not counting the trouble of ordering—all this for a whip that could be had for one-third the amount at home.

STUDY OF HUMAN NATURE.

How many business men appreciate how valuable a knowledge of human nature really is to them? There are few things, even the capital employed in business, more valuable than the faculty of understanding the people with whom one must deal day after day.

The successful man in every walk of life is the man who intuitively knows how to deal with those whom he comes in contact. It is the knowledge of human nature and the ability to read human character that makes the politician a success, that gives the public man in every walk of life the most useful power in his possession. If the average business man paid a little more attention to physiognomy and its kindred studies he would be more successful. The idiosyncrasies of mankind are as various as the shells of the ocean. Each individual cannot be understood, but he can be placed in his class, and a fair estimate of him made by the man who can read the face and understand natural actions.

One of the first studies of the business man should be his customers. He should know a little of the character of each. He should be able to tell the well-meaning, honest one from the dead beat, and know how best to handle each one. There is a difference between the actions of the man who is always looking for some merchant who will trust him and who never pays his bills, and the honest man. There is also a difference between the dishonest ones, and the honest one who is a never-to-well, and always in the "hole." Day after day the daily papers tell of the smooth forgers who pass worthless checks, the "country jay" who has a check cashed or buys goods on some one else's credit. How much could such work be prevented if the average business man only could read character as he should? The wise man will lose no opportunity to study human nature and profit thereby. It is a capital as useful to him as the money he has invested in his business.

Only a Square Deal.

How much of the money which is sent away to the catalogue houses ever returns to the community from which it is sent? How much of the money spent with the home merchants goes to build up other places? Who helps pay the taxes, build roads and bridges, erect churches and schoolhouses, fosters and encourages public improvements, buys farm produce, carries names of the needy on the debit side of the books the year around, and is willing and eager at all times to assist them by credit or money, if they may need it? Is it the catalogue house or the local merchant? The local merchant? Then why not give him the opportunity to figure on that "cash order" perhaps you are about to buy. He can fill it, freight included, as cheaply, and in some instances much less, than the catalogue fellows will charge. Stand up for home trade. Dollars sent away for goods never return, but help build up the large cities and big catalogue houses which are not only trying to squeeze the life out of the country towns, but are selling goods not one cent cheaper than local dealers from whom the people expect credit whenever they need it.

EDDIE PLANK A FARMER; STAR SOUTHPAW THRIFTY

Has Money Invested in Paying Farm Near Philadelphia—Threatens to Quit Game.

For a time it looked as if Connie Mack would be shy both of his star southpaws this year. The sale of Waddell to St. Louis eliminated one of the left-handers, and it looked as if Eddie Plank would join the retired squad. Not until two hours before the departure of the Athletics for the south did Mack and his great southpaw agree on terms. Mack knows Plank, and when he saw that he was in earnest he gave him the advance demanded.

Eddie Plank is a thrifty chap, and has invested all the money made in baseball in paying enterprises. He can get out of the game any time he wants to and make a nice salary. Plank has several times threatened to give up baseball, and Mack knows that Plank isn't a fellow who makes threats and fails to make good.

During the winter months Plank is a regular farmer. He owns a big farm at a place called Seven Stars, just outside of Philadelphia, and puts in the cold months making it a payer. It is understood that the county commissioners intend to change the name of the place to Eight Stars, because Eddie has become so famous.

Throughout the winter he handles the big milk route, having a fine line of customers, who never complain about the short measure or the amount of water used in enlarging the supply. Eddie says he's in great shape, as he arises at three in the morning in order to get around to all his customers before the call to breakfast.

Plank intended coaching Gettysburg college, where he first won fame as a pitcher, but now that Mack has come across with the coin demanded his alma mater must look for another instructor in baseball.

While the Athletics would have gotten along without Plank, the addition of the clever southpaw to Mack's pitching staff makes the club look much better.

MAJOR LEAGUE NOTES

Pitcher Fred Glade, the former Brownie, has reported to Clarke Griffith at Atlanta.

Umpire Ed Johnstone is said to have signed a four-year contract with President Pulliam at increased pay.

The Giants are to have a new mascot this year, "Chuck" Connors having presented the club with a big bulldog.

Joe Kelley is somewhat worried over the non-appearance of Bowerman, the ex-Giant backstop. From latest reports no one around Augusta had heard anything from the missing catcher.

COLOR LINE IS DRAWN IN ORGANIZED BASEBALL

Negroes Allowed to Break Into All Sports with White Man Except in National Game.

The color line is practically a myth in all branches of sport except professional baseball. Several times stars of the diamond have attempted to break into the minor and big leagues, but their identity has been discovered in each instance.

Muggsy McGraw once tried to get a tryout for a colored player by the name of Grant. He tied some Indian name onto the gentleman of color, but the player never got a chance to show in Baltimore. Barney Joy, the pitcher secured by Boston from the Pacific Coast league, was said to be a colored man, but such is not the case as he was born in the Hawaiian islands.

Rube Foster, who plays with the Leland Giants, is considered as great a pitcher as Rube Waddell. He is a southpaw with a Waddell physique and assortment of curves, and would be a star in fast company if it wasn't for the shade of his complexion. Foster is of such a dusky hue that no manager has ever tried to ring him in.

Two of Harvard's best athletes have been colored fellows. Matthews, one of the greatest shortstops in the history of the college, and Lewis, the best center Harvard ever had, were colored.

Maj. Taylor for many years ruled supreme as one of the greatest bicycle riders in the country. All the white riders worked against him, but Taylor managed to win many a first place. Perhaps the greatest runner in the history of the University of Pennsylvania is Taylor, a colored boy, who is working hard to get an education. He holds the Penn record for a quarter of a mile, 49 1-5 seconds.

Joe Gans is conceded by all critics to be one of the greatest lightweights in the history of the ring. Battling Nelson is really the only white opponent who ever made him extend himself. John Johnson holds a prominent position among the heavyweight fighters and is shortly to meet Tommy Burns.

Thus it will be seen that the colored men is able to break into all sports and be on an equal footing with the white man except in organized baseball.

COBB SIGNS WITH DETROIT

Ex-Mayor Codd Brings Together Player and Owner.

After everybody had abandoned hope Ty Cobb signed a contract with the Detroit Baseball club at Detroit the other day. The document calls for only one year of service and its terms were not made public.

Earlier in the day the player and President Navin had a fruitless two-hour talk, after which they parted. Cobb received a check for his expenses in coming to Detroit and packed his grip with the intention of going east to sign with Arthur Irwin for the Washington club of the "outlaw" league. He missed his train.

Cobb went back to the hotel for dinner, and there ex-Mayor George P. Codd met him. Codd is a close friend of Cobb and also of President Navin, and made an appeal for one more conference. Navin was found and the ex-mayor said many earnest words to the club owner and dissatisfied player.

The result was that Cobb withdrew the demand for a three-year contract, on which he had insisted as if it were a matter of life and death, and Navin made some concession which is a secret between player and employer. It is supposed to have been a substantial boost in salary, with a promise of more next year if the player performs as brilliantly in 1908 as he did in 1907.

The Detroit club will have a spring training home for the next five years. The half-mile race track that flourished at Hot Springs, Ark., years ago was leased by Manager Jennings. Other clubs, it is said, are dickering for permanent spring practicing places. Jennings has been hunting for a favorable spot for several months.

Danny Shay Becomes Outlaw.

Danny Shay, formerly of the Giants, who was sold by Manager McGraw to the Oakland Pacific Coast league team, became an outlaw the other day when he signed with the Stockton team of the California State league.

Washington Whisperings

Interesting Bits of News Gathered at the National Capital.

Popular Misconception of the Cloakroom

WASHINGTON.—Every now and then there's a paragraph in a local paper, or perhaps in a dispatch sent out from here, that has to do with things political, mention of "cloakroom gossip" at the capitol. To tell the truth, it is doubtful whether half a dozen people, outside of those who live in Washington or who have been here in a more or less intimate capacity at one time or another, know what the capitol cloakrooms are like. In fact, from a remark innocently dropped by a friend of mine from Egypt, Ill., once upon a time—and who may be taken as fairly representative at least of several million ordinarily intelligent folks—I'm quite sure they haven't an idea.

"I never could understand," said this simple-minded person, apropos of a comment of mine on some cloakroom brilliancy, "how it was this great government couldn't provide something better than cloakrooms for senators and representatives to use when they are not working, but have to be there just the same."

I have no doubt that this modern Egyptian had pictured in his mind's eye a cloakroom all cluttered up with assorted garments in even the best of weather, and made uninhabitable by soggy, mud-spattered goloshes and dank, smelly raincoats on wet days—as the only place to which patriotic but pestered statesmen might resort when fogged or in need of a smoke.

The reality is so different, as most of us who live here are well aware, for the Republican and Democratic cloakrooms of the house, for instance, are furnished with such attention to solid comfort—not to speak of luxury—as to make the lounging room of the ordinary club look like a parlor in Thrums by comparison. There's a scrumptiously thick carpet, a perfect flock of astonishingly comfortable chairs and half a dozen leather-covered davenports of remarkably form-fitting qualities.

It is in the cloak-room that the legislative back unbends and the brow unwrinkles. Atlas, having a temporary respite, unstraps his world burden, dumps it in the nearest corner, slaps brother Atlas on the back and borrows a cigar. Relieved from a pose that is oftentimes physical as well as mental, Atlas becomes human.

Adulteration of Seeds to Be Stopped

UNITED STATES THE DUMPING GROUND
ADULTERATED SEEDS

THERE will be no more mixing of cheap, inferior or old seeds in the packages which will be sold by dealers after Representative Mann's bill becomes a law. The measure is to prevent the misbranding and adulteration of seeds, and it has been favorably acted upon by the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce. The prospects for the passage of the bill are good.

Some interesting statements are made in the report on the bill, which has been presented to the house. It asserts that "the frightful extent to which the adulteration of seeds has grown in our country is a menace to the interests of the farmer, gardener, horticulturist and honest seedsman. The United States has become the dumping ground for the poor seed of the world, which can be and is used by unscrupulous dealers for adulteration purposes. Seed that is held over until the germ is dead and the vital force is entirely gone, is mixed with fresh seed of the same kind. The mixed article is sold as fresh seed. In buying seed it is usually impossible for the purchaser to tell the true character or quality of the seed. It is impossible for the ordinary purchaser to see any difference in appearance between turnip seed worth 40 cents a pound, cabbage seed worth $2 a pound, and cauliflower seed worth $40 a pound."

The bill prepared by Mr. Mann is severe upon those who misbrand or adulterate seeds. A fine of $200 is provided for the first offense, $300 for the second offense, and imprisonment for one year, or both.

Truants Worry of "Uncle Joe" Cannon

SPEAKER CANNON and other leaders in the house are concerned over the growing practice of representatives in being away from the chamber during the consideration of important business. It always has been difficult to keep the members present during the daily sessions, but absenteeism has become a positive evil this year.

This is due to the fact that the house now owns a large office building, put up at a cost of several millions of dollars and containing fine quarters for every member. In the seclusion of the office building a member who is not burdened with any responsibility other than to cast his vote when a signal for him to do so is given spends his time sending out seeds and writing to the folks back home.

If present plans are carried out another excuse for members who are not disposed to attend the daily proceedings will be provided. What Representative Tawney of Minnesota calls a "plot" to retard business in the house is in process of being hatched.

When the office building was completed members made complaint that they were so far removed from the chamber they had no way of finding out what was going on except by means of a telephone. This was unsatisfactory. It was then suggested that a ticker, such as is used in transmitting stock quotations, be installed, but the scheme was discarded. Then the house officials discovered a device that it is believed will fill the bill. If put into use this device will communicate over the wires to rooms in the office building every sound and syllable uttered on the house floor.

Women Involved in the Hill Imbroglio

ALTHOUGH the Hill affair is apparently settled it is still the paramount subject of gossip in diplomatic society circles. Two theories are advanced to explain the opposition to Dr. Hill as American ambassador to Berlin, and both have to do with women and high society.

In some quarters wise ones profess to have seen in the entire affair the desire of Mrs. Charlemagne Tower to continue in the German capital, where she conducted a most successful campaign. She is an especial favorite of the emperor, and is welcomed in court circles. For this reason, it was pointed out, a clever woman would find it an easy matter to have a hint dropped that a continuation of Ambassador Tower's term would please every one concerned. The trouble consisted in the hint's being dropped in the wrong quarter.

Another supposition that seems tenable is that hinted at by a former Washington society woman, now a resident of Paris. She intimated that social, not political, enemies were responsible for the supposed turndown. She is thoroughly conversant with the secret diplomatic history of Europe, and asserted emphatically that the whole imbroglio was social.

According to this authority, there has been strong feeling in the diplomatic set against Mrs. Hill ever since she became the wife of the then assistant secretary of state. Washington social enemies made then, she declared, are striving now to accomplish her husband's downfall, although every one, even her enemies, is fond of him. The Towers, she continued evidently allowed themselves to be influenced by the Washington gossip and what they heard in the other embassies in Berlin.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

MAY STIR UP CIVIL WAR

Augustus Everett Willson, governor of Kentucky, will engender the enmity of thousands in his state if he puts into execution his threat to veto the McChord bill forbidding any trust to carry on operations within the state, or to employ agents therein. If this bill becomes law the tobacco trust will be placed at the mercy of the tobacco growers, for it will have to buy its tobacco through middlemen, and its immense factories in Kentucky will have to be closed down. The governor is said to have a feeling of sympathy for the trust whose legal representative he has been in the past. Should he veto the bill it is declared that it will result in civil war, the planters declaring that the first law of nature, the law of self-preservation, is to be obeyed rather than the man-made law of the land.

The tobacco trust has apparently very little hope of the governor killing the bill, for it has made an offer to purchase 15,000 hogsheads of tobacco from the association at 12 cents a pound—the very same tobacco which before the formation of the organization was selling for four cents. The farmers refused the offer and stated their terms, which were that the price should be 15 cents, and that the buyers should take the crop of 1905 first, then the crop of 1906 and then they would be allowed to buy the crop of 1907. The trust is said to have refused this offer, and there may be a recrudescence of night riding any moment. The militia is in full sympathy with the farmers and will not interfere with them if it can be avoided or evaded. Meanwhile the governor's position is a critical one.

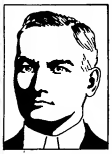
MINERS' CHIEF RETIRES

After ten years of leadership of the United Mine Workers of America, John Mitchell has retired from the head of the great labor organization and has been succeeded by Vice-President Thomas L. Lewis of Ohio.

Mr. Mitchell will devote his time to regaining his health, which has given way under the strain of office. He has been called to Washington by President Roosevelt, who wants to send him to Panama as an investigator of conditions, but it is understood that he does not favor accepting the position. It is said that in future he will devote his attention to a labor paper which he will establish in Indianapolis. The object of the paper will be the securing of industrial peace between the miners and operators of the country.

Mr. Mitchell's work for the miners has been detailed at length many times. When he became the head of the organization about ten years ago there were only 43,000 members in the organization; to-day there are 350,000; wages have been advanced almost 100 per cent.; living conditions in the mining camps have improved several hundred per cent.; the company store has been driven out of the mining settlements and men are now paid in money, not brass checks redeemable only in trade at the "pluck-me" store run by the employer. Children of tender age have been taken out of the mines and put into school, and in most states in which the organization is now established boys under 14 or 16 years of age can not enter the mines. The miners have received favorable standing before the people of the country because of their advocacy of peace in preference to strike, and their adopted policy of keeping inviolable contracts when made with the operators.

SOUTH CAROLINA SENATOR

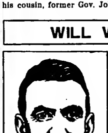


Frank B. Gary, who has been elected United States senator from South Carolina to fill an unexpired term, claims among his ancestors, Robert Bruce, king of Scotland; John Knox, founder of the Presbyterian church; John Witherspoon and other Scotch worthies. He is a nephew of the late Gen. Mark Gary, a picturesque character of the secession and reconstruction periods, who was a major-general of cavalry in Wade Hampton's legion, a brilliant soldier, a reckless leader and a hard fighter. He was famous for his profanity and his ungovernable temper. There was no fiercer fire-eater in all the south, and he was mixed up in a dozen duels.

After the overthrow of the Republican government in South Carolina and the establishment of what is known as the Hampton oligarchy, Gen. Gary quarreled with his former commander because he did not receive the political recognition that he thought he was entitled to, and, although the family belonged to the old slave-holding aristocracy, Gen. Gary and all his relatives joined the Tillman and the "wool hats" in the overthrow of Hampton. Under Gen. Hampton's "oligarchy" none but the aristocracy of the state and those who had distinguished themselves in the confederate army were recognized by appointments to office. The ordinary farmers were ignored, although they were in a very large majority. Tillman organized them through the Farmers' alliance; he aroused them to a sense of their rights, and he swept Hampton, Butler and all the rest of the aristocrats out of power. Since then the Gary family have enjoyed unusual political prosperity.

Frank Gary has pledged himself not to be a candidate for election next year, but it is expected that he will do what he can to secure the election of his cousin, former Gov. John Gary Evans.

WILL WELCOME FLEET



Alfred Deakin, premier of the commonwealth of Australia, was probably quite sincere in his delight when his invitation for the American fleet to visit Australian ports was accepted, for Mr. Deakin is a warm admirer of the United States and its people. He has been in America several times studying the irrigation question in the western states. Australia has a problem that is exactly similar, the interior of the continent being absolutely waterless for the greater part of the year. With a good system of irrigation Deakin hopes to make the interior as habitable as the seacoast.

Premier Deakin is a warm sympathizer with the United States and Canada in their attitude towards the Asiatic. From its geographical position off the coast of Asia, and its remoteness from any people of cognate race, the Asiatic problem is a very serious one to Australia. The northern part of the island continent would be an ideal country for Chinese and Japanese, but the Australian government will not allow them to land, preferring to retain the northern part of the island in a state of nature rather than allow it to get into the hands of any but a white race.

Premier Deakin is also an admirer of the American system of government, and in the confederation of Australia he followed the American rather than the Canadian ideal. Thus the colony is a commonwealth rather than a dominion, and is composed of states instead of provinces.

Talk of New York

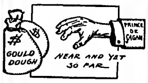
Anna Defies Family; To Wed De Sagan



NEW YORK.—Mme. Gould has not only broken with her family because of their opposition to her acceptance of Prince de Sagan's suit, but she defies it to penalize her under the terms of her father's will by cutting off half of her inheritance if she marry the titled cousin of her former husband.

In all probability the prince and the former Countess de Castellane will be married in France in May or June.

It developed that Mme. Gould has had the upper hand all along in the war in her family. At the time she divorced Boni de Castellane she submitted her father's will to her own attorney, Edmund Kelly, and other eminent counsel, and asked them if the provision would apply in the event of her marrying a second time. Mme. Gould was advised that while the will undoubtedly applied when she married Count Boni it would have no force or effect in a second or subsequent union, and, further, that the courts would never sustain it.

Armed with this legal advice, which she kept to herself, Mme. Gould came to this country to try to make an amicable arrangement with her brother George and her sister Helen concerning the prince. But neither George nor Helen nor the executors of Jay Gould's will, Edwin and Howard Gould, would listen for a moment to Mme. Gould's appeals.

George Gould would not hear of meeting De Sagan. Then Anna declared that she would do as she pleased, and if the executors attempted to meddle with her inheritance or her sons' they would have to fight every step they took in the courts.

Naturally, when Mme. Gould played this card, which she had concealed so successfully, the occasion was not pleasant, and the upshot was that Mme. Gould moved bag and baggage from Miss Helen Gould's home.

Senorita Cause of Vanderbilt Divorce

A DARK-EYED senorita, whose Spanish extraction gave her a beauty and charm that has set many masculine hearts afire, is said to be one of the principal causes of the divorce action brought by Mrs. Alfred Vanderbilt against her husband. The alleged purchase of a $11,000 automobile with the Vanderbilt money for this same senorita some time ago is the basis of this little bit of gossip.

Mrs. Vanderbilt's friends say that the separation has been considered for a long time. When one of his stable managers, Harry Brenchley, eloped to Europe a short time ago with Mrs. Alfred S. Dieterich, Mr. Vanderbilt's name was openly mentioned in connection with the beautiful senorita. This young woman was reported to have ordered, in Mr. Vanderbilt's name, an $11,000 automobile. After much negotiation the automobile firm began pressing the young woman for payment, and threatened to go to Mr. Vanderbilt. The morning after this the woman came to the automobile company's office and presented 11 $1,000 bills. It is alleged she got the money from Mr. Vanderbilt.

This incident, in connection with the stories that became public following the return to this country of Miss Florence Schenck, who had driven several of Mr. Vanderbilt's entries in the London international horse show, is said to have decided Mrs. Vanderbilt to seek a separation. Action, however, was deferred until after the marriage of Miss Gladys Vanderbilt to Count Szechenyi.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, who has moved all her effects from her Newport home with a view to living apart from her husband, is with his mother, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, at Fifty-seventh street and Fifth avenue. Mrs. Vanderbilt, Sr., has always shown a great fondness for her daughter-in-law. Alfred Vanderbilt is now in Europe, having sailed a few days ago.

New Yorkers Have Private Theaters

IN New York several persons in society have theaters in their own homes or in buildings which adjoin. The performances which are occasionally given in them are seldom noted in the newspapers.

They are as distinctly private as would be a musical recital given by the hostess herself. And this despite the fact that professionals are frequently engaged to furnish the entertainment.

One of the most elaborate of these private playhouses is that belonging to Mrs. Abram S. Hewitt. The building was a stable before it was decided to turn it into a theater. The interior was torn out and the ceilings and walls were redecorated after the manner of a regular playhouse. A stage large enough for all practical purposes was installed and equipped with a large number of sets of scenery painted by the well-known scenic artists.

When performances are given in the Hewitt theater the performers have the use of dressing rooms connected with the stage. These rooms are similar to those provided at regular theaters, except that special care has been taken to exclude all draughts.

There are no regular theater seats in the Hewitt theater, but instead exquisite chairs of Louis XV. pattern, done in white and gold, furnish the room. In the center of the auditorium is a fountain of white marble, in which the water gently trickles over a mass of lilies. Above is a promenade balcony.

New Mrs. Astor to Reign in Society

SIGNS are multiplying that Mrs. John Jacob Astor will succeed her venerable mother-in-law as the recognized leader of society, and it is certain that under her reign the social world will become more and more democratic without losing any of the dignity it may possess. The present season, now almost at an end, has seen Mrs. Astor grow in power, and by reason of her example there has been a striking change in the attitude of the average society woman toward the public favorites of the regular stage.

Only a year ago stage folk were admitted to Fifth avenue drawing-rooms simply as entertainers. They were made to feel they came merely as employes. It was insisted that they should arrive only in time for their specialties, or "turns," and they were dismissed in quick order after their individual effort but now young Mrs. Astor has changed all that.

It is the fashionable thing at present to have these players at entertainments mingle with the guests, and still more in the last few weeks many of the young women most prominent in society have lent their presence to receptions held by several popular women "stars." As a natural outcome of the mixing of stage and society, too, we have had one young "star" of opera entertaining Mrs. Astor, Mrs. Clarence Mackay and a score of other society leaders, in addition to the duchess of Sutherland. And it was in keeping with the new order of affairs that the hostess herself should go upon a tiny stage, built for the occasion, and sing for her guests and then dance the tarantula for them. It seems that New York society is fast becoming altogether human, and it may not be unreasonable to look for it as a next move to open its doors to the giddy queens of the vaudeville stage.

The Mountain Feuds.

The feuds and assassinations which for ten years have made Breathitt county, Kentucky, the most infamous spot in the United States have lately attracted new attention because of the tragic death of the man to whom, more than to anyone else, the reign of terror was due. It would be hard to find, even in a Greek play, a more dramatic ending to a career of abhorrent crime. The man who had become both a political and a financial king of his mountain realm; who had debauched the civil life of his state as well as that of his county, and who had no one knows how many assassinations to his discredit, was finally shot down in cold blood, in his own store, by the son whom he had allowed to grow up in untaught, unrestrained drunken viciousness. Nothing stranger exists in the civilization of the United States than the feuds of which that which has just ended is typical. The actors are of the purest American blood, the most unmixed lineage, of any people in the country. They are forceful, proud and independent, and possessed of more than ordinary natural ability; but they have lived in isolation, cut off from the learning of the schools and almost everything else which spells progress. Constant intermarriages have intensified natural traits and raised the sense of family solidarity to a height that has rarely existed elsewhere except among the Scottish clans in the days of the border warfare. It has been the family or the friend against the world, with the Colt or the Winchester as the court of last resort. The end of these feuds, remarks the Youth's Companion, is undoubtedly in sight, if it has not already been reached. Even before this latest murder, public indignation, like a tide, had been rising slowly and irresistibly in Kentucky. It had already sent to the penitentiary for life two of the most notorious of the assassins, and had driven others from the state. The parricidal bullet may have been only anticipatory.

Mr. Valerian Gribayedoff, who died recently in Paris, was called "the father of newspaper illustration." The practice of illustrating news articles was, of course, common to many weekly papers long before Mr. Gribayedoff reached New York in the early '80s; but it was he who first saw and mastered the difficulty of making illustrations for the dailies, and his work gave an enormous impetus to what may be called the graphic reporting of news. Through no fault of the distinguished Russian artist, his innovation also gave impetus, if not origin, to a new kind of "faking"—the "illustration" drawn from telegraphic reports," which, as the New York Nation remarks, might as well be drawn from the imagination. Many of the so-called newspaper "artists" of the day might profitably study the faithful work and the admirable skill which Mr. Gribayedoff put into his drawings.

The anti-vivisection agitation is spreading. It is a practice so particularly liable to abuse that the lay public, inspired by the progressive humanity of the age, demands more than mere denials of cruelty and indifference to suffering to convince them that it is exercised under all possible humane restraints. An international mass-meeting is to be held in Paris to demand the necessary legislation in the case. In this country the crusade has been vigorously taken up, and the interests of science itself requires that it should be completely and convincingly cleared of the charge of unnecessary brutality in experiments on living animals.

At the end of December, 1907, the state of New South Wales, Australia, had a population of 1,571,300, being an increase of 40,330 for the year, the largest since 1885, the last year of the previous extensive assisted immigration scheme. The excess of immigration over emigration was 14,500, which is the largest for 16 years, and 5,500 more than in 1906.

A French scientist protests against the common idea that a microbe is necessarily a thing of evil, and says that while there are many bad microbes, the vast majority of them are good and useful. The same may be said about men. Perhaps, in the general scheme of things, man is but a microbe himself.

ONE THIRD OF CHELSEA IN ASHES

FIRE IN A BOSTON SUBURB RENDERS OVER 10,000 PEOPLE HOMELESS.

Boston, Mass., April 13.—An apparently insignificant fire which started among rags on a dump in the city of Chelsea yesterday was fanned by a northwest gale into a conflagration, which obliterated nearly one-third of the city.

Five hundred dwelling houses and public buildings were destroyed, fifteen hundred families were driven from their habitations and 10,000 people made homeless almost without warning.

Three lives are known to have been lost, and late last night it was reported that two other persons had perished, one a woman, having shot herself in a frenzy over her inability to save her property. From fifty to one hundred were injured.

Accurate estimate of the loss is impossible. The city solicitor estimates it at nearly $10,000,000. The insurance is estimated at $5,000,000.

The fire, which was the worst Greater Boston has known in many years, raged before a forty-five-mile gale for more than twelve hours, defying the utmost efforts of the combined fire departments of Chelsea and several nearby cities and a large detachments of Boston firemen and apparatus.

The fire area, which was in the form of an eclipse, a mile and a half long and half mile wide at its broadest part, extended diagonally across the city from a point near the boundary between Everett and Chelsea to the waters of Chelsea creek,

All the banks, more than three-quarters of the churches, half of the business blocks and nearly all the schoolhouses were wiped out. One hospital and a day nursery were destroyed. In the turmoil many of the sick and infirm found difficulty in obtaining assistance and several of them had narrow escapes.

It was useless for the firemen to attempt to check the onrushing flames before the gale, and their main efforts were to prevent a spread of the fire on either side.

TWO DROWNED AT FORD.

Mother and Son Attempt to Cross Swollen River and Meet Death.

Lisbon, N. D., April 11.—Mrs. Ole Benson and her son Oscar were drowned in the Shoyenne river about ten miles southeast of this city at the Pindall ford. They had been in town and returning home in their buggy attempted to cross the swollen river. Both lost their lives and the team also perished. Coroner Patterson found the bodies and reported the accident.

Winnipeg, April 11.—Charles Hamilton and Andrew Walker, settlers, were drowned when crossing Knee Hill creek on rotten ice, at Carbon, in Calgarg.

HUGE ROCK FALLS ON TRAIN

One Man Is Pinioned Under Engine and Scalded to Death.

Winnipeg, April 1?.—A huge rock, loosened by the thaw of the last few days, fell on a locomotive of a Canadian Pacific railroad express near Kenora, Ont., 100 miles east of this city. Four coaches were derailed. No passengers were hurt, but George Love of Kenora was pinned under the engine and scalded to death. The train was coming from Montreal to this city. The wrecked cars contained immigrants' baggage.

Farmer Fights Posse.

Highmore, S. D., April 11.—Milton Melzer, a farmer of this county, held a sheriff's posse at bay from early in the evening until noon the following day. Shots were fired and Melzer warned that his life might pay the forfeit of his folly, but he persisted in holding out against the law until an attorney advised him to surrender. In the end he was bound over in bonds of $1,000.

Suicide.

New Ulm, Minn., April 11.—The second suicide within a week was discovered in this city yesterday afternoon. Martin Remiger killed himself with a razor by cutting his throat from ear to ear. He was about sixty years old, a bachelor, and had been an inmate of the home for the aged at St. Alexander hospital for the last four years.

FIERCE RIOT IN PENSACOLA

IMPORTATION OF STRIKE BREAKERS CAUSES BATTLE.

Street Car Men from St. Louis Are Attacked and Fifteen of Them Are Beaten.

Pensacola, Fla.—The bringing of a carload of strike breakers from St. Louis Friday afternoon by the Pensacola Electric company was the signal for rioting and disorder which resulted in the injury of 15 of the imported men.

No sooner had the strike breakers arrived and started for the car sheds than a fight occurred between them and the sympathizers of the union men and from the corner of Palefox and Wright streets, where the first battle occurred, there was a continual riot in which bricks, bottles and shells were hurled at the strike breakers, and in turn the latter fired shots and used heavy sticks and bricks. For over an hour the riot continued, the strike breakers gradually getting nearer to the car barns, but before they reached there 15 had been wounded.

When near the car barns, so fierce was the onslaught on the body of imported men, that they separated and fled, 30 running into a negro's house, while the remainder reached the car barn and barricaded the doors. The 30 men in the house barricaded the doors and it took the police over an hour to disperse the mob and remove the men to places of safety.

All night there were great crowds on the streets.

The mayor has issued a proclamation closing all saloons and the board of public safety has ordered the marshal to swear in a sufficient number of deputies to quell the disturbance.

Seventy strike breakers were marched to the city jail, where they were kept in safety all night.

Benjamin Commons, vice-president of the International Association of Street Railway Employes, made an address, urging the strikers to disperse and go to their homes quietly.

BAD FLOODS IN SOUTHWEST.

One Man Killed and Traffic Impeded In Missouri.

Joplin, Mo.—One man killed, railroad traffic impeded, cave-ins on the electric and St. Louis & San Francisco lines near Joplin and mines in the Badger-Peacock district inundated, are some of the features of the flood that is sweeping southwest Missouri. Levi Sevier, a miner, was drowned in the Iroquois mine.

Near Monett, the overflow from Spring river washed out the St. Louis & San Francisco tracks and trains are delayed. The tracks of the Missouri Pacific are washed out near Granby. Portions of Carthage are inundated. The big dam of the Spring River Water company at Varck, Kan., is holding its own against the great volume of water that is pressing against it.

CANADIAN OFFICIAL ARRESTED.

American Immigrant Officer Takes Son of Mayor Prisoner.

Winnipeg, Man.—Herbert Wright, a Canadian customs officer at Emerson, Man., was arrested at Noyes, Minn., Wednesday at the point of a revolver by a United States immigrant officer, on a charge of having smuggled into the United States May French, who had been denied admission to the United States two weeks ago.

Wright is a son of Mayor Wright of Emerson. He was taken to Crookston, Minn., for trial. There is much bitter feeling between the officials of the two governments at Emerson and Noyes.

Mother and Children Drown.

Huntington, W. Va.—Mrs. William Adkins and her two young children were drowned Friday when their residence slipped into Guyandotte river. The house was located on the river bank which had been largely undermined during the recent floods.

Mail Robbery at Janesville.

Janesville, Wis.—Two mail sacks with eastern states mail were stolen from a depot platform here Thursday night. The sacks were found ripped open and part of the contents gone.

OFFERED MONEY FOR MURDER.

Richmond, Mo.—In the trial here Friday of Thomas McGonnigle and Mrs. Jane Burnett, accused of the murder of Mrs. Margaret McGonnigle, Thomas Bailey, 21 years old, son of a farmer, said that in 1907 Thomas McGonnigle offered him $150 if he would kill Mrs. McGonnigle. Bailey said he refused to do so, and that McGonnigle then threatened to kill him if he revealed what he had said.

Mrs. Fannie Davis testified that Tom McGonnigle and his sister, Mrs. Burnett, had offered her $50 to kill Mrs. McGonnigle. Thomas, she testified, had fixed a bottle of wine with poison in it to give to Mrs. McGonnigle, but witness had destroyed the wine. Then they wanted her to shoot Mrs. McGonnigle, she testified, and leave the revolver and a hat at the house to give the impression that a man had killed her. At another time they gave her some poisoned cake to give to her. Mrs. Jane Burnett, the witness said, had told her that she would kill Mrs. McGonnigle.

DETROIT JURY IS SCORED.

Judge Angered by Acquittal of Self-Confessed Murderer.

Detroit, Mich.—"This is one of the vilest miscarriages of justice that has ever been heard of in this community," said Judge Phelan in the recorder's court Thursday afternoon, when a jury found 18-year-old Percy Bowin of Woodville, Ont., not guilty of the brutal murder on January 7 of 63-year-old Mrs. Cornelia Welch, proprietress of a disreputable place on Congress street east which Bowin had frequented.

Bowin had admitted his guilt and made a detailed confession of how he killed the old woman and stole and pawned her diamonds. This confession, signed by Bowin, was placed in evidence. Then Bowin took the stand and repudiated it absolutely, saying that Capt. McDonnell induced him to make it by talking of the strong case against him and promising to help him to a pardon later. This the captain and other officers denied absolutely. The police offered a great deal of evidence to confirm the statements in Bowin's confession.

STRANGE CAREER IS ENDED.

Dr. J. S. Cabanne of St. Louis Dies in an Asylum.

St. Louis.—After a career ranging from respect and affluence to poverty and disgrace, Dr. James Shepard Cabanne, 69 years old, founder of the fashionable residence district known as Cabanne place, died Tuesday at St. Vincent's asylum.

For 25 years Dr. Cabanne lived a dual life in St. Louis, maintaining one home in Cabanne place, where he was known as a wealthy and successful physician, and in another in North St. Louis, where he was known as "Mr. Norris."

Mrs. Cabanne divorced her husband in 1904. Soon afterward he lost his money through unfortunate speculation. Last May, as an act of reparation, he wedded Delia Doherty, a former domestic in his household and the mother of four of his children, who with these children lived in the "Norris" home in North St. Louis.

Electric Car Kills Five.

Chicago. — Four women were instantly killed and one man fatally injured when a west-bound Aurora, Elgin and Chicago electric car struck a carriage two miles west of Maywood, a suburb, Wednesday afternoon. The man, who was driver of the carriage, died four hours later in the Maywood Union hospital without recovering consciousness.

Dies, Leaving 201 Descendants.

Victim of Husband's Rage Dies.

Pueblo, Col.—Mrs. Sherman T. Camback, a society woman who was shot by her husband in a jealous rage on the night of January 30, after which he instantly killed himself, died here Thursday night.

TO SUPPRESS "REDS"

SPECIAL MESSAGE ON ANARCHISTS FROM PRESIDENT.

ADDITIONAL LAWS NEEDED

Senate Passes Employers' Liability Bill Without Change — House Makes Progress Despite Democratic Filibuster.

Washington.—Suppression of anarchy as the greatest question before the nation was called to the attention of congress by President Roosevelt in a special message. The executive submits what has been done under existing statutes, but says there should be further legislation.

The anarchist is declared the enemy of all mankind and no paper, published here or abroad, propagating anarchism should be permitted to circulate in the mails, the president declares.

This message, containing only about 100 words, is one of the shortest Mr. Roosevelt has transmitted to congress. With the message he transmitted a report reviewing the legal phases of the question by Attorney General Bonaparte.

Message of the President.

The message of the president follows:

"To the Senate and House of Representatives: I herewith submit a letter from the department of justice, which explains itself. Under this opinion, I hold that existing statutes give the president the power to prohibit the postmaster general from being used as an instrument in the commission of crime; that is, to prohibit the use of the mails for the advocacy of murder, arson and treason.

"I shall act upon such construction. Unquestionably, however, there should be further legislation by congress in this matter. When compared with the suppression of anarchy, every other question sinks into insignificance. The anarchist is the enemy of humanity, the enemy of all mankind, and his is a deeper degree of criminality than any other. No immigrant is allowed to come to our shores if he is an anarchist; and no paper published here or abroad should be permitted circulation in this country, if it propagates anarchistic opinions.

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

Senate Passes Liability Bill.

The employers' liability bill, recently passed by the house, was passed by the senate Thursday without amendment, so that it is ready to go to the president for his approval.

The scope of the bill is limited to common carriers by railroad. The senate adjourned at 5:50 o'clock until Monday.

House Busy, Despite Filibuster.

Three times in the house the Democrats caught the Republicans "napping" and forced them to produce a quorum. On one other occasion a vote by tellers disclosed the absence of a quorum but Speaker Cannon peremptorily applied the Reed rule and declared a quorum to be present. In doing so he had a brief but lively clash with Mr. Williams.

Notwithstanding repeated roll calls, progress was made in the transaction of public business. Both the army and the fortifications appropriation bills were sent to conference; the senate bill to increase the efficiency of the revenue cutter service was, with Democratic help, passed, and the bill to promote the safe transportation in interstate commerce of explosives was considered. It will be finally disposed of Friday.

The Democrats prevented the adoption of the conference report on the Indian appropriation bill and caused it to be sent back to conference.

EVANS YIELDS TO DOCTORS.

Will Not Undertake to Rejoin Fleet at San Diego.

Paso Robles, Cal.—Rear Admiral Evans will not rejoin the battleship fleet at San Diego or participate in any of the functions and celebrations in the ports of southern California.

That has practically been determined upon. The rear admiral was told Wednesday morning by Dr. P. F. McDonald, surgeon on the Connecticut, that it would be very inadvisable for him to undertake to rejoin the fleet at San Diego. Admiral Evans stated that he would submit to the judgment of his physician, although it will be a bitter disappointment to him.

Calls for Paper Trust Facts.

Washington.—Wednesday's session of the house will go down as one of the stormiest in its history. The sum total of the day's proceedings was the adoption of several additional rules to further check the Democratic filibuster and the passing of the two resolutions introduced by Speaker Cannon calling on the department of justice and the department of commerce and labor for certain information regarding the so-called paper trust. The naval appropriation bill was reported to the house.

Money Troubles Lead to Death.

New York.—Charles A. Murphey, a prominent lawyer and real estate dealer, committed suicide in a room in the Astor house some time Thursday night by shooting through the head. His suicide is attributed to financial troubles.

Cut in Freight Rates Ordered.

Sioux Falls, S. D.—The state board of railroad commissioners Friday ordered reductions in freight rates in western South Dakota ranging from ten to 43 per cent.

This woman says she was saved from an operation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lena V. Henry, of Norristown, Ga., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I suffered untold misery from female troubles. My doctor said an operation was the only chance I had, and I dreaded it almost as much as death.

"One day I read how other women had been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I decided to try it. Before I had taken the first bottle I was better, and now I am entirely cured.

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

The Power of Love.

Love as many persons and as many creatures as you possibly can. Love is the only power by which you can make yourself rich in a moral world. —Blackie.

Lest He Forget.

Church—What's that piece of cord tied around your finger for?

Gotham—My wife put it there to remind me to mail a letter.

Church—And did you mail it?

Gotham—No; she forgot to give it to me!—The Congregationalist.

A Counter Stroke.

"Why do you wear those 'rats,' I think you call them, in your hair?" inquired the Chinaman, who had an inquisitive turn of mind.

"Tush, Mr. John," replied his customer. "I always thought it was Chinese etiquette not to talk about the things they like best."

An End Missing.

An Irishman who served on board a man-of-war was selected by one of the officers to haul in a towline of considerable length that was towing over the taffrail. After pulling in 40 or 50 fathoms, which had put his patience severely to proof, as well as every muscle of his arms, he muttered to himself:

"Surely it's as long as to-day and tomorrow. It's a good week's work for any five in the ship. Bad luck to the leg or the arm it'll leave at last. What, more of it yet? Och, murder! The say's mighty deep, to be sure!"

After continuing in a similar strain and conceiving there was little probability of the completion of his labor, he suddenly stopped short, and, addressing the officer of the watch, exclaimed: "Bad manners to me, sir, if I don't think somebody's cut off the other end of it!"—The Pathfinder.

LOST $300.

Buying Medicine When Right Food Was Needed.

Money spent for "tonics" and "bracers" to relieve indigestion, while the poor old stomach is loaded with pastry and pork, is worse than losing a pocketbook containing the money.

A Mich. young lady lost money on drugs but is thankful she found a way to get back her health by proper food. She writes:

"I had been a victim of nervous dyspepsia for six years and spent three hundred dollars for treatment in the attempt to get well. None of it did me any good.

"Finally I tried Grape-Nuts food, and the results were such that, if it cost a dollar a package, I would not be without it. My trouble had been caused by eating rich food such as pastry and pork.

"The most wonderful thing that ever happened to me, I am sure, was the change in my condition after I began to eat Grape-Nuts. I began to improve at once and the first week gained four pounds.

"I feel that I cannot express myself in terms that are worthy of the benefit Grape-Nuts has brought to me, and you are perfectly free to publish this letter if it will send some poor sufferer relief, such as has come to me."

I've Been Thinking

By Charles Battell Loomis

IF you do not care to wreck your bark on the breakers of divorce, see to it that Love stands at the tiller when you go aboard.

"Love suffereth long and is kind." A very pleasant fellow to have at the helm, you must admit.

When you go down to the pier at which the little boat is moored, you and she, be sure to it that Love, the dear little fellow, is standing somewhere near, and then do you call him up and say, "I entrust my bark to your keeping. We want to sail as long as the boat lasts and we want you to guide us among pleasant places. If storms come up we do not wish to evade them, only see to it that we weather all gales; and whatever you do, see to it that we do not strike on the rock of divorce."

"I have acted as helmsman to many a couple, but never yet have I struck on a rock of divorce. Now, over there is a well dressed sailor named Gold. His boat is bigger than this and is furnished better, but if I do say it, he cannot mind helm as well as I, for many and many a couple has he spilled out on either side of the rock of divorce. Are you ready, sir? Shall I cast off?"

"Cast off, my hearty," say you. "We are in for a long and perhaps an adventurous voyage, but with you and with her on board I'll be bound it will be a happy one."

All of which is a pretty little allegory and I made it up out of my own little head.

And it's true, every word of it.

* * *

THE other day I had been going on at a pretty rapid rate, denouncing the ill-gotten money of the American "robber heroes," saying that I would rather die poor but honest than be as rich as—I can't think of his name, but he is respected by the unthinking everywhere.

Suddenly a man who is known from end to end of the world came up to me—yes, to me, and asked me how I was getting along.

Why, I almost gasped for breath. He is worth millions, and I wondered how he could have heard of me, who owes the dollar and a quarter that I call my own.

Now, if ever anybody made his money sinfully he did. He stands high up among the Standard Oil men and I yield to no one in contempt for his methods, although I will admit that his manners are perfect and he certainly seems to know people outside of his world.

He congratulated me on a story of mine that he had read. It was one satirizing plutocrats, but he had missed the satire and had taken it as a compliment.

Said he: "I wish to help people in all the arts. I wish to seek our artists and give them rolls of money. I want to find struggling musicians and help them to an education. And I particularly want to give you a house and lot and some shares of railroad stock that will yield you an income of $10,000 a year."

Well, you may imagine I did not know what to do. However the man may have come by his money, he was certainly moved by kindly feelings in wishing to share with me.

I hesitated and hemmed and hawed and thought of my family and of the good uses to which I might put the money.

And then I remembered that my ancestors were Puritans, and that not one of them in all the nine generations ever told a lie or did anything wrong in any way whatsoever, and I took a long breath and said: "Thy money perish with thee, I'll have none of it." And then I woke up.

Lim Jucklin on Politics

By Opie Read

The forum of old Lim Jucklin's wisdom was the horse-block in front of the cross-roads store. In the rural south age means wisdom. Merely to have seen the seasons come and go is knowledge, and when age talks not only youth but middle age must be content to listen. Cultivation is mere book-learning, hearsay, the rumor of an unsubstantial truth, as if the book were not the experience of man's mind. The well-read and traveled, if not yet out from under the contempt of "immature years," must sit respectful-dumb while an old man who may never have crossed the line of his county consents to give an hour's homily upon the affairs of the world. But with age there sometimes comes a mellow and a sweet ripening of that half philosophical humor which musty books bound in the hide of some ancient fatted calf delightfully tell us is almost wholly an Anglo-Saxon heritage.

But old Lim had been out of his county. He had traveled into the north, the land where every man was for himself. In Chicago he had bought a pair of "gold-rimmed" spectacles which some clergyman must have lost, and in a modest little transaction he had permitted a Michigan fruit farmer to pluck off a patch of his well-seasoned skin. And while these transactions were reckoned among his accomplishments, they turned somewhat pale when compared with the fact that he could come nearer guessing the weight of a hog or the height of a mule than any man in North Carolina. It is on record that he was a believer in the Book from "kiver to kiver," and in his neighborhood it is known that once he walloped one of the Harvey boys for tittering at a baptising. He furnished the oak slab that had been fashioned into the mourner's bench at Siloam meeting house. His wife gave to the circuit rider more pairs of wool socks than any other woman in the community. And the old man himself had been known not indeed to shout during a camp meeting, but afterward to call hogs with more fervor than was his accustomed habit. Yet, notwithstanding these unmistakable tokens of a pious life, he gave to game roosters a devotion that smacked of fanaticism. Through the wind-bowl of a winter's night—through the icy thicket he would shoulder his way, mile after mile, to be present at a contest. He lamented the fate of the defeated, but gloried over the victor. But he never wagered a penny. That would have been irreligious. With others the fighting of chickens was a sport. With him it was an emotion. So, with his moral establishment well known and with his wisdom unquestioned, whenever of a Saturday afternoon he took his seat on the old horse-block, there was always an audience waiting, not out of respect for his years, but looking for amusement.

"They have about settled the coming election," said he, as he parted the tails of his brown jeans coat and sat down. "Don't believe I ever saw an election comin' that wa'n't already settled. And it would look like there wan't any use of havin' but one side; but, yet, somehow the other side always does putty well when the votes are counted. The man that understands arithmetic is bad in politics. He likes to figger, and a man that does usually figgers too much. It's an old sayin' that figgers don't lie, and that may be true, but sometimes they are found in the wrong place.

"Both of the great political parties are wise, for they always nominate the right man. And what a fine president he would have made if he had only been elected. And the minute the other candidate is elected he ceases to be a politician and becomes a statesman. But death has made more statesmen than office ever did. In this life a great reward is offered to rascality, and that's the reason there are so many politicians. Enough votes would make any man great, but not enough will turn the wisest man into a fly-up-the-creek. When a man that is looking for an office begins to tell me that he's a sincere American I believe him. I believe he wants the place, and in this way the lives of some men illustrate an eternal truth. They eternally want something. Running for office is a hard habit to break, but when a man has been beaten a time or two for president he cools down might'ly. Some of our smartest men have been defeated for president, and among them was Henry Clay, but he oughtn't to have expected the office when old Andy Jackson and the Lord were against him. And it is naturally to be supposed that the Lord still has a good deal of influence durin' election time, but it is a question whether or not He always uses it.

"Ever since I can recollect the country has been goin' to ruin. It seems that the constitution was born ruined and has been imposed upon ever since. But it is a mighty hard thing to tear to pieces. But if the right man isn't elected this time not only the constitution but the whole country will have to go on crutches. Old Uncle John Mose is the oldest man in the county and he says that the world is a failure, and if this is true America must go along in with the general no accountness of it all. But I noticed that last year my bottom field raised more corn to the acre than for several years past, and as long as this continues to be the case I ain't in a fitten frame of mind to believe in all the bad news I hear. No matter how much good news you get, bad news is sure to follow. Some time ago old man Joyner threatened that if his candidate wa'n't elected president he would pick up and move out of the neighborhood. His man wa'n't elected and he moved over across the creek, and four years afterward, when his man was again beaten, he moved back. So, I have noticed that about all there is to the average man's political disappointments is that in his revenge he thinks he has done something notable when he hasn't.

"About the worst lickin' I ever got was shortly after I had cast my first vote. There were two men running hot for constable. I half-way promised to vote for one of them, a fellow named Henk. The election was held by word of mouth, and when the time came I couldn't remember Henk's name and voted for Jones because it was easier. And that is about as much intelligence as some people show in their voting now. They vote the way that looks the easiest. What did Henk do? I met him at a sawmill and he took a piece of scantling to me, an' by the time I made up my mind what to do he had me whipped. A man ought always have his mind fully made up as to what he will do when the worst comes. I managed to tell him that I didn't fully promise to vote for him, that I had only half made up my mind, and he 'lowed, 'Yes, and that is the reason I only half kill you now.'

"If you see a fight coming it is better to make up your mind to run than not to be firmly settled on some particular mode of action. The bravest men may appear like a coward if he's unsettled in his mind, and while he is still unsettled the other fellow may overpower him. It is mind that fights. As long as a rooster's mind is steady his head is steady, but the minute he begins to look around he discovers a chance to run. If he had fully made up his mind not to run he wouldn't have found the opportunity. Some one thought to be wise said that a good run was better than a bad stand, but it is not true. As long as you think it is good to run you'll keep on runnin'. And when you run once it is an easy matter to make up your mind that to stand is bad. Whenever a man is branded as a coward all the other cowards want to take a whack at him. Therefore it is better to be whipped every day in the week than to run once, for with the comin' of the next week the situation is mighty apt to undergo a change. Bad stands stood get better all the time. But when a man has once been whipped he is never the same afterward. It is better to have a broken head than a broken spirit. Without spirit the strongest man is but a worm.

"Success may after a while enable the candidate to tell the truth, but it seems that when a man breaks into politics he breaks in as a liar. It may be almost unconscious on his part, but it ain't long till he's sayin' things that he don't believe. And what appears to grieve him is the fact that other people don't either. If your son-in-law is hesitating between politics and the penitentiary, remember that if he goes to the penitentiary you won't have to take care of him. Many an honest man has had a chance to become a politician and didn't. A politician's smile may be bright, and so is a sunbeam when it falls on a puddle where the hogs have been wallerin'."

Thousands of Acres Saved.

Washington—The supreme court of the District of Columbia has decided a case in favor of the secretary of the interior, the effect of which will be to turn over to the State of Minnesota several thousand acres of land, the timber alone on which is said to be valued at considerably in excess of $1,000,000. The case was brought by Gus A. Beaulieu, who, acting on behalf of the Chippewa tribe of Indians, sought to restrain the secretary from turning the lands over to the state. The Indians claim the lands should be sold and the proceeds divided among them. Secretary Garfield decided that the lands should be given to the state under an act of congress giving to it lands that were swamp in character.

The lands are located on the ceded Chippewa Indian reservation in Minnesota. On behalf of Secretary Garfield a demurrer was filed which set forth that the State of Minnesota was an essential party in the case, in fact a co-defendant, and that under the eleventh amendment to the Constitution a state cannot be sued by one of its citizens, and Beaulieu's petition for an injunction should be dismissed.

Powder Magazine Explodes.

Minneapolis — Exploding with a crash that was felt for miles around, the powder magazine at the University of Minnesota went off with a deafening report, completely wrecking the place, throwing debris high into the air, breaking many windows and sending a stream of flame heavenward. No one was killed or seriously injured.

Immediately following the explosion a tongue of flame shot up to a height of about 100 feet and the roof of the cave wherein the explosive was kept, and which consisted of boiler iron, was thrown some 300 feet into the air and came down in a crumpled mass.

The cause of the explosion is not known, though some boys started a grass fire earlier in the afternoon and that may have been the origin of the trouble.

Only a hole in the ground marks where the magazine was. All the windows in the assay building of the mining department were blown in and the chemistry and law buildings suffered similarly. There was no one in the neighborhood at the time.

Timber Cut.

St. Paul—There is a falling off of nearly 50 per cent in the timber cut in Minnesota during the present season as compared with recent preceding years, according to figures and estimates prepared by Forestry Commissioner C. C. Andrews. He says:

"The aggregate output of various kinds of timber and wood from the Minnesota forests this past winter, in round numbers, was: Pine, 800,000,000 feet; mixed timber, including ash, balsam, basswood, birch, cedar, poplar, pine, spruce and tamarac, 79,000,000 feet; number of poles, 213,028; ties, 3,565,750; posts, 1,754,500; cords of pulpwood, 151,800; cords of wood, 75,580; number of feet of mining timber, 500,000; number logging camps, 529; number of men employed, 19,575; average wages, $26 a month and board. These returns are probably 25 per cent below the actual output.

Shortage.

St. Paul—Public Examiner Anton Schaefer filed with Gov. Johnson the report covering the period of the incumbency of Fenton G. Warner as state oil inspector, which, he says, shows a shortage of $12,010. The report covers what is known as the Minneapolis division by the Standard Oil company, including Ramsey, Hennepin and twenty-nine other counties.

The report is made by W. C. Heilbron, one of the deputy examiners, and covers about thirty pages, including a mass of figures.

Firebug Again Burns Mill.

Grand Rapids—Neumann Brothers' sawmill on Prairie Lake, four miles north of this city, was partially destroyed by fire; the fire being evidently of incendiary origin. The loss is estimated at $3,000. This is the second fire of the same nature in this mill, the other occurring one year ago under similar circumstances, but much heavier loss.

NEWS NOTES.

Minneapolis—After having been discarded for several days at the Hennepin county morgue as worthless, the coat worn by Carl Hult, who committed suicide at the St. James hotel, was found to contain $500.

Minnesota Lake—Mela Meloy, over 80 years old, an early resident of Faribault and Blue Earth counties, was found lying dead beside the road between Minnesota Lake and Wells by a rural mail carrier.

Crookston—By an almost unanimous vote here the $20,000 in bonds for the erection of a school building to take the place of the Franklin school, recently destroyed by fire, were carried.

Northome—The dead body of an unidentified man was found lying face down in the snow near the Minnesota & International railroad track, one-half mile south of here.

Faribault—An organization of the automobilists was formed at a meeting in the Commercial club rooms of this city.

The New Cathedral.

Archbishop John Ireland of St. Paul will be the principal speaker at the impressive ceremonies connected with the laying of the cornerstone of the $700,000 pro-cathedral now being erected in Minneapolis at Hennepin and Sixteenth avenues. A monster demonstration is planned and when the event takes place May 31, it is expected it will be witnessed by from 75,000 to 90,000 persons.

Preparations are being made by the committee on arrangements of which L. S. Donaldson is chairman, to entertain fully 75,000 visitors from outside the twin cities on that day. The Catholic clergy and prominent men of the state to the number 1,000 will be on the platform, overlooking the cornerstone. Catholics from all parts of the state are coming, and special train service is being arranged to accommodate those living at a distance. Mathias Baldwin is to be marshall of the day and a mammouth parade of 45,000 or more is planned. Each parish in line of march will follow a designating banner.

NEWS NOTES.

Rochester—Winerooms are no longer tolerated in Rochester saloons.

Alexandria—Seeding conditions and the crop-growing outlook this spring are exceedingly promising.

St. Paul—S. S. Nelson of Kanawha, Iowa, was found dead in bed at Kendell hotel, with gas turned on.

Red Wing—Russell, the three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rinearson, was probably fatally burned.

Crookston—Twenty teachers turned in their resignations this week to the city school board and all were accepted.

St. Paul—Julia Jenseck, a seven-year-old girl, 33 James street, was bitten in the instep by a dog, near the high bridge.

Noyes—Emma Goldman crossed the international boundary without interference by immigration authorities, after some delay.

Duluth—Railroads at Superior have agreed to build a great trestle to provide a means of entrance into Duluth by way of the interstate bridge.

Minneapolis—Four horses were cremated in a barn fire in the rear of 2020 Nineteenth avenue south. The firemen made heroic efforts to save the animals.

St. Cloud—The Commander mill at Royalton was destroyed by fire. It was a 500-barrel mill, owned by Gregory, Bliss & Co., of Minneapolis. It is estimated that the loss is $30,000.

Lake Crystal—A young son of Hans Andersen, while handling a target rifle, accidentally shot a son of J. D. Roberts in the neck. The bullet, fortunately, only inflicted a flesh wound.

Eagle Lake—Near here, Miss Carman Pickle, while driving to Mankato, was severely injured in a runaway. She was thrown from the buggy and struck a tree, and sustained a fracture of the skull and a very bad scalp wound.

Winona—Edward Gordon appeared before Judge Snow and entered a plea of guilty to the stealing of a $60 fur coat from a local manufacturer and he was sentenced to one year and two months in the state prison at Stillwater.

East Grand Forks—The voters of this city, through the efforts of the city council and the Commercial club, have authorized the issuance of $50,000 bonds for the purpose of securing a waterworks system for fire and domestic purposes.

Crookston—Jarvis C. Mott, a Chicago engineer and promoter of electric railways, about whose life some fears were seriously entertained since the heavy snow storm of April 1, was located at a homesteader's cabin, about 15 miles east of Malung, in Roseau county.

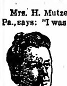
"Buster Brown," one of the best known of the many musical comedies that are now bidding for favor, will be seen at the Bijou, Minneapolis, for the week of April 19th. Master Reed, who takes the part of the mischievous little fellow, is said to be thoroughly imbued with the artist's spirit of Buster, and will be supported by a company of forty players.

Owatonna—This city was visited by a $5,000 fire which completely destroyed a house belonging to Mrs. Sam Farmer and occupied by R. E. Wood. The blaze started from a defective chimney and was not discovered until it had made great headway. The property was only partly insured.

Mankato—Vicious horses were the cause of two accidents near here. Peter Roberts of Cambria, a farmer, was kicked in the face and his nose was broken and two teeth were damaged.

Washington—Senator Clapp has secured the passage of a bill granting to the diocese of Duluth lands now occupied by it for church purposes on Indian reservations in Minnesota.

Hibbing—Stripping work at the mines in this district will be resumed with full forces within the present week.



SPRING KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Vividly Described by One Who Has Suffered from It.

Mrs. H. Mutzebaugh, of Duncannon, Pa., says: "I was sick and miserable all last Spring and as I did not know what was the matter I kept going down and down until I was a physical wreck. I had smothering spells, flashes of heat over the kidneys and pain in passing the kidney secretions, which contained sediment. My husband urged me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and at last I did so. They did me much good, and I used in all eight boxes which restored me to perfect health."

ONE LESSON WHOLLY WASTED.

Little Surprise Planned by Billiger McSwat Not a Success.

"Lobelia," asked Mr. McSwat, who was rummaging in one of the closets, "have you done anything with that old coat of mine that used to hang on the last hook in here?"

"Yes," answered Mrs. McSwat. "I gave it to the Volunteers."

"You did, did you? Well, you'll be sorry to learn, perhaps, that there was a five-dollar bill in it which I was going to give you if I found that coat undisturbed at the beginning of March."

"O, I think not, Billiger. I searched it thoroughly before I gave it away."

"You're a pretty smart woman, Lobelia, but it didn't occur to you to look inside the lining."

"O, yes, it did, and I found the five-dollar bill. I spent it for the rubber plant in the front parlor that you have admired so much and wondered how I managed to buy out of my allowance. You're a pretty smart man, Billiger, but there are times when you don't look the part."

There being no further business before the house, Mr. McSwat adjourned without form.

MADE HIS MEANING CLEAR.

Professor's Son Translated Father's Speech into the Vernacular.

A college professor, in company with his son, was enjoying a walk in the country, when he met an old farmer. It had been a very wet season, and the professor, thinking to start the conversation in a way that would prove interesting to the farmer, remarked:

"There has been a rather abnormal precipitation of late."

The farmer seemed somewhat embarrassed, and the professor's son, who used a different vernacular, though he was a student in the college to which his father was attached, attempted to straighten out the matter. Drawing the farmer to one side, he said in a superior way:

"The governor means that we've been having a devil of a lot of rain."—Harper's Weekly.

GIRL WAS DELIRIOUS

With Fearful Eczema—Pain, Heat, and Tingling Were Excruciating—Cuticura Acted Like Magic.

"An eruption broke out on my daughter's chest. I took her to a doctor, and he pronounced it to be eczema of a very bad form. He treated her, but the disease spread to her back, and then the whole of her head was affected, and all her hair had to be cut off. The pain she suffered was excruciating, and with that and the heat and tingling her life was almost unbearable. Occasionally she was delirious and she did not have a proper hour's sleep for many nights. The second doctor we tried afforded her just as little relief as the first. Then I purchased Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills, and before the Ointment was three-quarters finished every trace of the disease was gone. It really seemed like magic. Mrs. T. W. Hyde, Brentwood, Essex, England, Mar. 8, 1907."

Recommended His Wife.

Irvin Cobb, humorist of New York, was recommended to a lecture management. The latter sought an introduction through a friend, Mr. McVeigh.

"Come here, Irvin, I want you to meet a friend of mine," said McVeigh. After a few minutes' conversation, the lecture man broached the subject of lecturing as follows:

"I was just wondering, Mr. Cobb, what you would think of a proposition to do some lecture work next season?"

Cobb looked at his questioner for just a moment in blank amazement. Evidently such a thought had never entered his head before. Then reaching out his hand confidentially, he said:

"I've got it. My wife will do it. She is the best one I know."—Lyceum and Talent.

Good Conventions,

The Republican County convention held at St.Hilaire last week and the District Convention held at Crookston Wednesday last, were the kind that means victory for the party. E. E. Corliss, of Fergus Falls, and John Hedberg, of Roseau, were elected delegates to the National convention at Chicag, and a resolution passed instucting for Taft. Now all we want is a good harmonious State Convention, with state platform written by republicans, without any help from other parties, and the people will elect the ticket nominated next November.

The Shooting of the Gilsey Boy

By J. B. BARRETT

(Copyright.)

Euphemia, I decided, liked young Cottingfirst, the admiral's barrister son, better than the curate. She certainly had done so at one time, but Cottingfirst lost ground by his shooting of the Gilsey boy; which was unjust, for, though it is not customary, when you are invited to a house to shoot, to go round bagging casual village boys, in this case he was not to blame

He had been staying at the Pennington's, five miles off, for a week's shooting, and thither on one or two occasions I had gone over and made one of the guns. I suggested that when his week was up, if he was not too proud after the gorgeous Pennington coverts, he should come over to me for a day or two at wood-pigeons. And, of course, he came, though I did not imagine that either I or the wood-pigeons were the attraction.

One afternoon we agreed to have a match for the large stake of half a crown. The ladies came with us, and, Lucy sitting with Cottingfirst and Euphemia by me, well screened from the sight of the birds, we had great sport. Suddenly, following immediately on a shot of Cottingfirst's, there came a scream—and another—and then a series of the most bloodcurdling shrieks that I have ever heard.

I saw Cottingfirst plunge into the wood at a point some 40 yards this side of where he had been sitting, while Lucy stood on the field side of the ditch looking up into the trees, whence we could now tell that the screams were proceeding; and when we joined her, there in the topmost branches of an oak was a boy!

He was in his shirt-sleeves, hanging below a branch by his hands and feet, like the pictures of the giant sloth, screaming continuously. Cottingfirst, under the tree, shouted at him alternately to come down or to say how badly he was hurt. But how in the world such an inappropriate thing as a boy had got up there we could not imagine.

It appeared subsequently that he had been trespassing in the woods when we arrived, and, hearing us shooting, had climbed into the tree to get a better view of the sport without himself being seen, as he must have been if he had come out through the hedge into the ditch on our side.

We soon had him out on the grass in the open, and examination showed that he had been reasonably well peppered. The boy was undoubtedly hurt, but he was not, as he supposed, killed.

"Why," said Euphemia, as soon as she saw him, "it is the little Gilsey boy."

I did not know that Mrs. Gilsey, who did our washing, had a boy; but Euphemia is the friend of every child in the village. And I was glad it was the Gilsey boy. Not that I wished him any harm, or had anything but admiration for his mother; but there was less likelihood of unpleasantness with her than might have been the case with a stranger.

With some difficulty we led him to his home, sending other boys whom we met on the way back to gather up our birds. Mrs. Gilsey is, I am sure, not a stern mother, but she took an eminently reasonable view of the case. At all events it was a view which commended itself to me.

"And serve 'im right!" was her first remark, after she had heard our story. "P'raps he'll keep away from them woods now. I've told 'im time an' again the keeper'd shoot him, an' properly, too; an' I'm glad someone's done it—not, you understand," she added, apologetically, "as I think you done it a-purpose, but I'm glad it's done."

"I don't think," said Cottingfirst, "that he's really seriously hurt—"

"Him!" interpolated Mrs. Gilsey, with some contempt. "Nothing won't hurt him! I've tried to often enough, an' hain't never done it yet. Do 'im good, I say."

"Not seriously hurt," Cottingfirst continued, "but I'll send the doctor round at once to find out. Meanwhile, of course, I want to make what amends I can for my clumsiness. I want you to feel, Mrs. Gilsey, that I've done what is right; but it is hard to say what the right is. The more he is hurt the more I feel I ought to do, and—" and he tapered off as not knowing how to proceed. Then an idea occurred to me.

"Why not pay him so much a shot?" I suggested. There was a look of inquiry on the faces about me, so I explained. "Give him a shilling for every shot that has gone into him, and sixpence for every mark. The more he is hurt the more you will pay. That seems to make the punishment fit the crime. It ought to work out to something like a sovereign I should think."

The boy no longer sniffed. On the contrary he was all agog with expectation.

"I was thinking of a sovereign to start with," said Cottingfirst.

"Try my plan," I urged.

"It is perfectly satisfactory to me," said Cottingfirst.

"Well," said Mrs. Gilsey. "It's a deal more than the whole boy's worth, let alone the little bit of 'im as you've shot. But if you gentlemen think it's right, why, I'm sure we're satisfied."

"All right," I said. "We'll call that settled. Do you understand, my boy? The doctor will come up and look at you. Meanwhile this gentleman will pay you a shilling for every shot which has gone into you, and sixpence for every mark besides. You can bring the shot around to me in the morn—"

But I had no time to finish. This conversation had been going on at the door of the Gilsey cottage, and a ring of the boys and women of the village had collected round us as we talked. As soon as the thing was settled the boy broke away at a run.

"Billee!" he screamed. "Arreo! Dick! Come an' see 'ow many we can find. A shillin' for every shot, an' sixpence for every mark. Come on, Bill!" And, followed by a trail of other boys, he fled chattering up the road. He was a perambulating gold mine.

That evening the doctor dropped in on his way home and told us that no harm was done. "Hasn't scratched him any more than he often scratches himself in birds'-nesting, I'll be bound," he said. And he estimated the total number of wounds at about 20, with less than a dozen shot. But the surgeons under the village lamp had extracted them all before the doctor arrived.

"From D-D-Different Parts, Please Sir," Said the Gilsey Boy.

"You will get off under a sovereign," I said; but Cottingfirst thought it would be cheap at a sovereign anyhow. The next morning it looked as if it would be.

We were still at breakfast when the Gilsey boy presented himself, and—as we could see from the dining-room window—some half a dozen others were hanging about awaiting results.

The Gilsey boy was sniffing when he came in, to convey to us that he was still in almost intolerable pain, and he was hardly able to speak as he held out the handful of shot for our inspection.

"How many are there?" asked Cottingfirst.

"For-or-or-orty-one," said the boy.

"Forty-one!" I ejaculated. And then I looked at the shot. I took them, and shook them over in the palm of my hand.

"Where do you get your cartridges, Cottingfirst?" I asked. "You really ought to speak to them about their loading." For there was every size of shot, from No. 4 to No. 8.

"Where did you get all these?" I asked.

"From d-d-different parts, please sir," said the Gilsey boy. "Out o' my face an' arm mostly."

"Even that?" I asked, holding up a rusty, battered thing which was at least BB, which I had not noticed at first.

"Yes, p-p-please, sir," said the Gilsey boy. "There's more'n a h-h-hundred marks on me."

"I can well believe it. Let's see some of them."

He took off his coat and rolled up his sleeve. The other boys had made a thorough job of it.

"I said that we knew shot-marks," I murmured, "but I begin to doubt it."

Cottingfirst and I tried to persuade him to tell us how it was done, but he persisted that nothing hadn't been done, and we had to let it go at that. We learned some time later that the other boys had hammered nails into him until they broke the skin. At the time we gave him a sovereign and called it square.

Whenever I go out with my gun now, I am afraid I shall find the neighboring trees and hedges full of boys.

As for the match, we had to call that off. We recovered 28 birds, of which I declare I got 13, and Cottingfirst is sure he killed 16, but I tell him he counts the Gilsey boy as one.

CONVENIENT MILKING STOOL.

Another Type Which Combines Comfort and Utility.

Take a board, a, 20 inches long and ten inches wide and to this nail two boards, b b, 10x6 inches to serve as legs, so the ends are about four inches below the board, a. Nail on the seat end the board, c, which forms the front. Nail on a board, e, 3x10 inches under d, to serve as a handle.

Round off the corners of e, explains Farm and Home, and nail on around the edge a strip of barrel hoop so that it projects about one-half inch above to hold the pail from sliding off. Under a nail a triangular board to serve as a third leg.

WATERING COWS.

Care in the Quality of Water Provided Is Important.

The best arrangements for the watering of dairy cows I consider to be individual basins between the cows in the winter time and running water in the summer time. In the winter, says the writer in Farmers' Review, I water my cows out of doors, but that is because I do as I have to do and not as I want to do. Most of the farmers about here water their cows out of doors.

Where water is supplied at all in the barns, the force that drives the water comes from tanks of windmills or from hydraulic rams. The troughs of cement seen in some barns, and which run in front of all the cows, I believe to be all right, but I prefer the individual basins.

Most of the cows about here get their water at the temperature it happens to be when it comes from the well, but in the winter time it would pay to warm it. I am satisfied that a cow that is given water with the chill taken off will drink more of it and will consequently give more milk than she otherwise would.

DAIRY NOTES.

The growing stock is carrying your pocketbook.

It's intelligence, not luck, that counts in the dairy.

The cow with the small udder and the big appetite seldom pays.

The more we know about the cow, the more probable will be our success in handling her.

Linseed meal and bran are two important elements in the ration. They are expensive but they pay.

The manure pile on the dairy farm may not represent half the profits, but it is too valuable to be ignored.

Beans for Green Manure.

We know of one farmer that planted beans too early, and the late frost caught them, killing the whole crop. He planted again, but this time so thick that the pods did not form till an early fall frost caught them, and so the whole crop was lost. But the growth of the beans had been a very rank one, and the weeds had been kept from growing. The mass of rank herbage was plowed under and the land left to be planted the next year. The plowed-under beans proved to be great enrichers of the soil, for they added to it a very large quantity of nitrogen, in addition to the humus. This in its decay created acids which set loose more plant food in the soil. So the bean crop was not a total loss, after all.

Cooling the Milk.

A speaker at a Wisconsin institute said: The main thing is to cool the milk quickly to a temperature of 50 degrees or less, and it would pay the dairyman to provide ice for this purpose. In the absence of ice an abundance of well water will enable the patron to quickly cool the milk to a temperature of 50 degrees or below. If the cans are placed in cold water and the milk is stirred until cooled to the temperature of the water, which is usually about 50 degrees, well and good; but the average milker, after performing a long day's work in the field and then another half day's work, called for variety's sake chores, will not stand over the milk long enough to accomplish this.

The Dairy House.

A good large well, or dairy house is very necessary to the equipment of a first-class dairy, but its use should be confined to the uses of the dairy. Its conversion into a sort of a store room or receptacle for vegetables, tools, worn out harnesses, etc., does not tend to produce a fine flavored milk or stimulate the dairy appetite of the occasional visitor.

Kerosene Emulsion.

One-half pound soap, one gallon water, two gallons kerosene. Dissolve the soap in water over fire. Remove from fire and add kerosene. Stir violently. Use one part of emulsion to 15 parts water.

Burn the Rubbish.

Old rubbish is more valuable in the form of ashes to the gardener than any other way. Wood ashes make excellent garden fertilizer if applied properly

MILKING CHARACTERISTICS.

How They Can Be Successfully Fixed by Breeding.

It is believed that if two animals of dissimilar characters are bred together the offspring will assume the qualities principally of the individual that has a dominant character, but the fixed characteristics of either animal are more or less disturbed and in succeeding generations almost any gradation and blending of the cross can be expected. As a matter of fact, when two animals of good milking strain are bred together we generally get an offspring that is quite superior in milk production to either of the ancestors. However, this cannot be absolutely relied upon but is the best way to increase the capacity for milk production. To perpetuate the character in succeeding generations this cross may be bred to a male who has a dominant character for milk production inherited from his ancestors. If no such strain of animals is available it is wise to breed this offspring back to its sire in order to fix this character. For instance, a bull and a cow are mated, both from different strains. The dam and the sire's dam have the character to produce 20 pounds of milk per day well established, but these strains for many generations back are not related to each other. The offspring from this cross may only have a capacity of 15 pounds. However, it is more likely to have the capacity to produce 30 pounds. To fix this character in succeeding generations it would be wise to breed this offspring back to its sire, which has but 20 pounds capacity, while there is a possibility of slightly reducing the capacity of the offspring, yet it fixes the character and makes it more permanent for future generations. But if you desire to run the risk of a still greater increase in milk production it would be well to breed this cow with a capacity of 30 pounds of milk per day to a sire of another strain which has an average capacity of 30 pounds per day. The closer a strain is related the more permanent and the more reliable will be the fixing of that character for all future generations at 30 pounds capacity.—Prof. Oscar Erf.

DAIRY COWS.

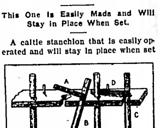
Are You Observing State Law and Keeping Them in a Sanitary Way?

There are hundreds of creamery patrons to-day who are violating the pure food laws of the state in which they live to a more or less degree and do not realize it. They are ignorant of the provisions of the law on the subject of dairying and carelessly violate these statutes. The laws have been published time and again for their benefit, but it is a deplorable fact that in some localities a good farm or dairy paper is a seldom visitor. They will not take the paper and would not read them if the papers were given to them. What such men need, declares the Northwestern Agriculturist, is a vigorous application of the law. It has been said that the most certain way to reach a man's heart is by way of his stomach; it might also be said that the most certain way to reach most men's mind is by the way of their pocketbook. They will not give thought to this question of properly caring for their cows and the milk, until they can be made to understand that it will cost them money if they neglect to do so.

CATTLE STANCHION.

This One Is Easily Made and Will Stay in Place When Set.

A cattle stanchion that is easily operated and will stay in place when set is made as shown in the illustration, says Popular Mechanics. The post, B, is placed in position by turning the small lever, A, so the square or thin part of the post, B, will enter the notch. The small lever, A, is then turned as shown in the second position, C, and the pin, D, inserted.



Easily Operated.

Name the Farm.

Name the stock farm is the advice given by an exchange and we think it is good advice. Nothing looks better in print or sounds better when mentioned than "John Smith, proprietor of the Maplewood farm." Have your printer print your letter heads with the name of your farm thereon. Some few back numbers may laugh at you, but remember that this is the twentieth century and people who laugh are always back numbers.

The Kind That Pays.

You have many times seen the man with a pen full of scrub hogs, a crib of musty corn and a filthy wallow filled with stagnant water, wondering why hog raising does not pay. He is always the first man to arrive at the conclusion that farming does not pay. Farming, especially hog raising pays, but it must be worked at in the right way—strict attention must be paid to every detail.

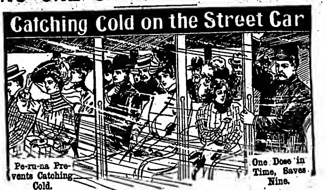
NO ONE CAN ALWAYS AVOID

Catching Cold on the Street Car



Pe-ru-na Prevents Catching Cold.
One Dose in Time, Saves Nine.

Many people persist in riding on the street cars, insufficiently protected by clothing.

The rapid moving of the car cools the body unduly. When they board the car perhaps they are slightly perspiring. When the body is in this condition it is easily chilled. This is especially true when a person is sitting.

Beginning a street car ride in the middle of the day and ending it in the evening almost invariably requires extra wraps, but people do not observe these precautions, hence they catch cold.

Colds are very frequent in the Spring on this account, and as the Summer advances, they do not decrease. During the Spring months, no one should think of riding on the car without being provided with a wrap.

A cold caught in the Spring is liable to last through the entire Summer. Great caution should be observed at this season against exposure to cold. During the first few pleasant days of Spring, the liability of catching cold is great.

No wonder so many people acquire muscular rheumatism and catarrhal diseases during this season.

However, in spite of the greatest precautions, colds will be caught.

At the appearance of the first symptom, Peruna should be taken according to directions on the bottle, and continued until every symptom disappears.

Do not put it off. Do not waste time by taking other remedies. Begin at once to take Peruna and continue taking it until you are positive that the cold has entirely disappeared. This may save you a long and perhaps serious illness later on.

Bad Effects From Cold.

Mr. M. J. Dentsch, Secretary Building Material Trades Council, 151 Washington St., Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I have found your medicine to be unusually efficacious in getting rid of bad effects from cold, and more especially in driving away all symptoms of catarrh, with which I am frequently troubled.

"The relief Peruna gives in catarrhal troubles alone is well worth the price per bottle. I have used the remedy for several years now."

Spells of Coughing.

Mrs. C. E. Long, writes from Atwood, Colorado, as follows:

"When I wrote you for advice my little three-year-old girl had a cough that had been troubling her for four months. She took cold easily, and would wheeze and have spells of coughing that would sometimes last for a half hour.

"Now we can never thank you enough for the change you have made in our little one's health. Before she began taking your Peruna she suffered everything in the way of cough, colds and croup, but now she has taken not quite a bottle of Peruna, and is well and strong as she has ever been in her life."

Pe-ru-na for Colds.

Mr. James Morrison, 68 East 10th St., Paterson, N. J., writes:

"I have given Peruna a fair trial, and I find it to be just what you claim it to be. I cannot praise it too highly. I have used two bottles in my family for colds, and everything imaginable. I can safely say that your medicine is the best I have ever used."

Couldn't Spare O'Connell.

Daniel O'Connell had got a man off at one time for highway robbery and at another for burglary; but on the third occasion, for stealing a coasting brig, the task of hoodwinking the jury seemed too great for even his powers of cajolery. However, he made out that the crime was committed on the high seas and obtained an acquittal. The prisoner lifted up his hands and eyes to heaven and exclaimed: "May the Lord long spare you, Mr. O'Connell—to me!"

No Visible Signals.

"Yessum," said Sandy Pikes, as he devoured the wedge of pumpkin pie, "I sternly object to the nefarious practice of clipping off de tails of dogs."

"Ah, I am glad you are so tender-hearted, my poor man," sympathized the good housewife.

"Well, it ain't exactly dat, mum, but when a dog hasn't any tail I can't tell by de wags if he is in a good humor or not and it makes me skeery about approaching de house."

A Gentle Request.

"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Torkins, "I wish you wouldn't pay so much attention to the personal popularity of horses this year."

"What do you mean?"

Real Calamity.

"And are you out of work, my good man?" inquired the kind lady whom he met.

An Easter Prayer

☆ ☆ ☆

Now may He who from the dead
Brought the Shepherd of the sheep,
Jesus Christ, our King and Head,
All our souls in safety keep.

☆ ☆ ☆

May He teach us to fulfill
What is pleasing in His sight;
Perfect us in all His will,
And preserve us day and night!

☆ ☆ ☆

To that dear Redeemer's praise,
Who the covenant sealed with blood,
Let our hearts and voices raise
Loud thanksgivings to our God.

HER EASTER

A Sermon Delivered Out of Doors by Mother Nature

EASTER in the foothill country, among the low-lying valleys, with the white-capped, blue vastness of the mountains in the background, and all the endless variety of sunshine and shadow! Divine, indeed, with the divinity of spring. The very smallest and sweetest of the early wild flowers bloomed in the sheltered places, and the quail nesting on the hillside, called melodiously across the valleys. Meadow larks rippled their melody of tune under foot, and the long absent lizards sunned themselves luxuriously on the rocks.

It was as though, after the mighty throes of travail Mother Nature hushed upon her breast, with the brooding of tender motherhood, the blessed Child, as yet too young for its full uncovering.

It was a day to revive old loves and longings, and to arouse the fires of old passions—to let slip from you discontent and all uncharitableness. And over all the quiet of the morning the bells pealed their "Christ is risen," and the tremor of their echoes thrilled you to your finger tips.

Mrs. Chester dressed herself slowly and with much deliberation, that Easter morning. The gauzy spring gown lay, in all its dainty fluffiness of laces and ruffles and tucks, upon her bed. Beside it lay the dainty hat and gloves and the creamy parasol which was to cast just the right tinge of white over the piquant face of the pretty little woman who was to carry it. A tiny, tiny lace handkerchief lay over a bit of a purse, wherein was the gleam of gold; and a great bunch of mammoth violets filled the room with their fragrance.

She was as a bride who arrayed herself for the coming of her bridegroom—and of this she thought, but a quick frown gathered on her brow, a worried little frown which lingered until the final settling of the dainty hat upon the fluffy dark hair finally drove it away.

The bells again rang out their "Christ is risen" as she stepped from the door. She paused a moment, then, turning, walked rapidly around the house, beyond the pepper trees, across the rose garden to where, in a stately row, the great white Easter lilies lifted their heads to drink in the beauty of the morning. A little terrace led up to them, and upon this she stepped daintily, one hand grasping the little niceties of her toilet—the white gloves the bit of lace, the pocketbook wherein were the pieces of gold to be dropped, with a musical jingle, from tiny fingers into the contribution basket; the dainty skirts and the furled parasol. With the other hand she broke off the long-stemmed lilies, raised them caressingly to her cheek, whiffed their fragrance, and stepped back. Her foot slipped and turned on the forgotten terrace, there was a little cry, as she fell, with all the snowiness of her garments about her, and the violets and the Easter lilies upon her breast.

She lay quietly a moment, dazed and sickened by the suddenness and pain of the fall. She tried to move, but warning pains shot up in the foot doubled under her. Then she called and waited, and called again; but nobody answered. Again she waited, then she became drowsy and a faintness stole upon her. The bells rang out: "I am the resurrection and the life" over and over again. Then all was still. Faint sounds began to force themselves upon her dull ears—the drip, drip, drip of the hydrant into a stone basin, the rippling note or two of a meadow lark, the fainter song of a mocker, as he gave the gossip of the bird world from the topmost tip of a eucalyptus tree; and always the hum of the bees, so persistent that drowsiness came with it. Also she saw the low, spreading house, with its pillared verandas, rose-embowered, a beautiful home, hers and—his. His. Her slow mind stopped again. Hers and his for all time—"till death do us part"—"for better, for worse"—"in sickness or health . . . . to love . . . and honor . . . and cherish." Yes, to cherish. So they had promised—they two, standing alone together, in all the solemnity of the marriage rites. But somehow the sweetness had gone out of it all; the love; or was it the comradeship? And who to blame? Not he. No, not he. Herself? She shook her head uncertainly. Mostly it was "duties," she said. Oh, yes, all of one's duties to society—church duties; club duties; social duties; and she shivered. Here they all were, in pointed caps, with little silver spurs on their feet, with which, when she lagged, they prodded her, with these and pointed tongues of uncharitableness. Presently behind them all she saw the figure of her husband, his eyes upon her lovingly; but ever and again they turned sorrowfully upon the group about her, and as often as he would approach her, she was pushed back; he could not reach her for the barrier of Duties which stood between them.

The woman wept, she tried to brush them all aside, for to her terror her husband seemed to recede and recede and she was unable to reach him. In an agony of remorse and grief she stretched out her arms. Then from among the Easter lilies came a fairy shape—a tiny child. A moment it nestled on her breast, then it advanced and as it advanced, the Shapes drew away, grew fainter, and were gone; and the tiny thing, leading the man by one brown finger, brought him to her. Was it only Cupid, the little god of love, or was it the spirit of the little child which some day might come to dwell with them? The woman held out her arms and clasped them both and held them to her.

When Mrs. Chester roused herself from her swoon, or dream, or whatever it was which held her bound, it was to find her heart throbbing with a new hope and joy and longing; and she wondered whether or not she had dreamed, or had been the privileged listener to an Easter sermon preached out of doors by Nature, Nature who was now in her most blessed mood.

Through the open windows of her home came a low cheery whistle. She pressed the Easter lilies to her lips in a passion of joy. In some way she felt that she owed them something—a deliverance from something, and in the depths of her religious soul she cried: "This is the resurrection and the life," even as the bells had said it—while her face was baptized with tears.

It was so that her husband found her, on that most blessed Easter day, when the sun stood high over the valleys, and spring brooded over the foothill country.—Edna Heald McCoy, in Los Angeles Herald.

Something New to Wear.

The idea of having a new frock and hat for Easter Sunday is not altogether flippant. On the contrary, it is of religious origin, an old English rite requiring that every person should wear three new articles on that day and a superstition which declares it unlucky not to do so

NEW ARRIVALS IN CANADA NEARLY 300,000 IN 1907.

ABOUT SIXTY THOUSAND FROM THE UNITED STATES.

Now that it is known that in the year just closed nearly sixty thousand from the United States declared their intention of making their homes in Canada, it might not be out of place to search for some reasons that would bring this about. These people are but following the example of the fifty-five or sixty thousand who did the same thing the year previous, and an almost equal number who the year before that but followed the example of the thousands of the year preceding. An excellent climate, certain and positive crops of grain of all kinds, good markets for their produce, land—and good land, too—at low prices, easy terms of payment, (not forgetting the 160 acres of land given free by the Government, particulars of which the Canadian Government Agent whose name appears elsewhere will tell you about) and then the splendid social conditions. The situation is pretty well sized up by a writer in one of the magazines. Quoting from this article, we find this: "Those of us who made good in the States," interjected another settler as if to continue the story of his neighbor, "have had it easy from the start; a little money is a mighty good thing on coming into a new country. But those who make an entry, or even buy lands at low rates, are able to square things in two or three seasons' crops. There are hardships in building shanties, and then with increasing prosperity getting things into shape for better homes. But affairs go much as in the States. We have the largest liberty in the world; there is more home rule in the Provinces than in the several states of the Republic. Taxes are light and with only a few million people west of Winnipeg we don't get in each other's way. One's friends over the line probably thought we would not live through the winter; and while it is cold, real cold, it is free from the moisture experienced in the east. Schools are good as encouraged by the Government; the enterprising American promoter and Yankee drummer see to it that we take notice of the latest improvements and best agricultural machinery. Altogether we are as near to affairs as we would be on our own farms in the States. Winnipeg bears the same relation to us as Chicago did at home; and Edmonton with the surrounding region advances as Omaha did in the days when we were as young as the boys yonder. We get together much as they did in the granges over the border; the government has established experimental schools of agriculture, and progress in every line is stimulated. This is a great region for grazing," we hear the Calgary citizen continuing, "and then with building elevators of wheat at one dollar a bushel, many of us find time to go over to the live stock exhibition in Chicago or visit old friends during the course of the winter. Every man is taken for what he is worth or for what he can raise; and in this good air and on this fertile soil we intend to show our old friends that we are made of the right stuff—that we are chips of the old block who built up the American West."

Hope.

Walter Damrosch tells of a matron in Chicago who, in company with her young nephew, was attending a musical entertainment.

The selections were apparently entirely unfamiliar to the youth; but when the "Wedding March" of Mendelssohn was begun he began to evince more interest.

"That sounds familiar," he said. "I'm not strong on these classical pieces, but that's a good one. What is it?"

"That," gravely explained the matron, "is the 'Maiden's Prayer.'"—Harper's Weekly.

MACHINE-GROUND PAINT.

Occasionally one hears the "hand-mixed" paint of the painter slightingly spoken of as "unscientific" and "not thoroughly mixed." The facts are all on the side of the painter and his hand-prepared paint.

It is the most "scientific" paint there is, because it is made on the spot to suit the particular purpose for which it is to be used. It is as scientific as a good doctor's prescription. If the painter did not mix it thus it would be as unscientific as a patent medicine. Moreover, the paint which a good painter turns out is made of genuine white lead and pure linseed oil. If he does not mix it himself he is not sure what is in it, and consequently his client cannot be sure.

As for not being thoroughly mixed by machinery, that is simply a misstatement. White Lead as made by National Lead Company is thoroughly incorporated with 7 or 8 per cent. of pure Linseed oil in the factory, making a paste. This paste need only be thinned with additional linseed oil to make it ready for the brush.

The thorough incorporation of pigment and oil has already been accomplished before the painter gets it.

To know how to tell pure white lead is a great advantage to both painter and house-owner. National Lead Company will send a tester free to anyone interested. Address the company at Woodbridge Building, New York, N. Y.

When Mr. B. went to call upon some friends the other afternoon, he was on his way out of town and so had his traveling bag with him. This he placed in a corner, and when he rose to leave he overlooked it. His hostess happened to notice it before he had reached the door, and called to her little daughter:

The little one gave her mother one swift glance of surprise, but flew dutifully to obey orders.

"Oh, Mr. B.," they heard her say, "mother says you have forgotten to take your grip with you." Then she added, quickly, in a tone of polite apology: "You see, most all of us have had it this winter, and we'd rather not have any more!"

"I don't know, madam," was the reply. "I never saw any of it."

FIRE FIGHTING, POLICE AND PRISONS IN PAPAN

The Funny Things One Sees in Smiling Round the World

By

MARSHALL P. WILDER

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

One evening while going through a street in a Japanese town, Yokohama, I heard a clanking sound at regular intervals, and found it was made by a man who as he walked along was striking a sort of sword on the ground. At the concussion two plates of bronze or brass were driven together, making a metallic clang. I was told that he was a watchman, paid by contributions of a few sen a month from the households along the way. As he goes about, clanging his sword, it is a comfortable assurance to these people that all is well.

This watchman is for fire chiefly, as the houses of the Japanese town are mostly all of wood, and a fire once started means widespread destruction before it can be got under control.

On a little cart are also carried two folding screens of asbestos, about five feet high, with which the men protect themselves when facing the fire. To anyone familiar with the American fire departments the whole outfit seems like a toy.

* * * * * *

The police department will much better bear comparison with those of other countries than the fire department.

I was told that about 125 police belong to each station house. Their names are written on little blocks of wood, in red on one side, and black on the other. The men are on duty in the station house for two hours, and outside for two hours, and the little blocks are turned as they come in or go out, the red or black showing the superintendent at a glance just where the men are.

We were shown the cells, which were about ten feet square, fairly light, very airy, and immaculately clean. There were but five prisoners at the station house, all detained for petty offenses—rickshaw men overcharging, and similar arraignments. Their names were on little wooden tags hung outside the door. These were turned inside, however, and upon no consideration to be looked at except by the proper authority. The side that is clear has only the date of incarceration, and length of sentence printed on it.

The guard opened a couple of occupied cells, showing the prisoners, one man alone in one cell, while three together were in the other. They looked very comfortable, kneeling on straw mats, which are also their beds.

* * * * * *

While on our tour of inspection the most frightful cries came at intervals from one part of the main building. As they continued I began to be assailed by a nervous apprehension that I might be called upon to witness some horrible torture, for I felt sure that nothing short of that could call forth such unearthly yells.

When I was conducted into a large room, where about 20 men in very abbreviated white linen suits were squatting about the edge, the shouts were explained. Here was the school for the famous jiu-jitsu, which is acknowledged to be the most effective and deadly form of wrestling.

We were given seats on the edge of a platform, and two muscular Japs sprang onto the mats in the middle of the room. First they bowed, by squatting down, leaning their left hand on the floor, and bowing their heads. Then standing erect, first one, and then the other gave vent to one of the blood-curdling cries I had heard. This is the challenge, intended to intimidate the antagonist. Suddenly they clinched each other and straining and struggling each strove to dislodge the other's feet from the floor.

A Japanese Policeman.

All at once one of the men made a quick move, which it would be impossible for me to explain, and his antagonist was hurled backwards over his shoulder, landing on the mats with a terrific thud.

This performance was gone through with a number of times with infinite variety in tactics and methods of bringing about the fall, the most marvelous skill and training being displayed.

In addition to the male wrestlers of Japan there is one band—and one only—of women wrestlers—Amazons of enormous strength, who travel about giving exhibitions. Their physical beauty and development are wonderful, and they create the greatest enthusiasm and admiration wherever they appear.

Every man on the Japanese police force is required to become proficient in the jiu-jitsu. Every day there is practice, with the best teachers, from eight a. m. until noon. About 20 at a time take part in this practice, wrestling with the masters or each other, so that each man's turn in the school comes about once a week.

Fencing is also a part of their education, not for practical use, but merely to make them quick and supple. They practice with long bamboo swords, wearing wadded hoods and gloves.

After the regular modern jiu-jutzu, two young men gave an exhibition for my edification of the ancient form of the art. It was not so easy nor so finished as the modern method, and was performed with such ardor that arms and elbows were cut rather badly on the sharp edges of the mats. The principal feature of their entertainment was the fiendish shouts with which they inaugurated each clutch.

With all this splendid training in quickness, adroitness and the wonderful muscular power it develops a criminal has no chance at all with a Japanese policeman. One of my party remarked that he should like to see the Broadway squad try to do the things we were looking at.

Sitting Comfortably on a Straw Mat.

I am very much afraid a member of that august body would be like a man of straw in the hands of one of Japan's quick, cat-like policemen.

* * * * * *

At the Sugamo prison in Tokio I found many features that to an American were unusual.

The corridors of cells were arranged like the spokes of a wheel, one warden sitting on a platform that was the hub. Labor is saved in this way, for one man can watch five corridors of 28 cells each, making in all 140. There are two of these wheels built in the inner court of the prison, so that 280 cells are watched by two men, who sit on revolving stools and, by turning, can look in at a glance the five corridors intrusted to their vigilance.

A head warden sits between the two wheels and maintains a general supervision, so that practically the entire number of prisoners are watched by but three men.

There is another inclosure where there are cells for punishment. The most severe form is the dark cell, where prisoners are punished for insubordination. They cannot be confined in this cell for more than 11 days at a time.

The cell for the next less severe punishment has a little light; so, in gradation, there are several cells for varying degrees of punishment.

The prisoners all work in different shops at basket-weaving, making mats, iron utensils and all sorts of things for which there is a ready market. They work from 6:30 a. m. until 11, when they have their midday meal. This is principally rice, and quickly eaten. Until 12 they rest (sitting comfortably on straw mats).

Advantage is taken of this time for one of the four resident chaplains to give the prisoners a talk. The day I visited the prison it was during this midday rest, and the men in two large work-rooms were sitting quietly listening to a Buddhist priest. Standing before a small altar, that looked like a reading desk, he was placed in a passageway between the two rooms, thus enabling the men in both rooms to hear him. He was talking earnestly, probably pointing out the error of their ways and exhorting them to lead better lives in the future.

Every man is credited with a certain amount of wages for the work he does, and the money given to him when he is discharged, so that he does not leave the prison penniless.

Every method seemed most humane and the prisoners treated with kindness in every way. The same consideration in regard to revealing their identity is practiced here, as in the police stations. Outside of each man's cell is a wooden sign with his name, age, crime and the length of his sentence printed on it. But a little extra tag comes down and hides his name.

After my inspection I came away with the idea that to be sent to prison in Japan was not the worst thing by any means that could befall a man.

BY DUBIOUS MEANS

BUYERS OF GOODS FORCED TO PAY EXORBITANT PRICES.

SOME COMMON GRAFTS

Alleged Wholesale Houses Growing Rich Through Trade Secured by Agents Who Work in the Rural Districts.

It is the desire to get bargains, to buy something at prices so low as will "save dealers' profits," that costs many residents of rural communities vast amounts of money. It is the seductive argument held out by certain classes of houses that seek to do business through the mails, that the local dealers are charging too much for their goods, and that it is fair for the consumers to save their dealers' profits themselves, that causes many to gain experience that is costly.

For many years past traveling agents have been numerous in agricultural sections soliciting orders for goods among the farmers. This class of agents is known as box-car men. They enter a neighborhood, and aim to sell sufficient goods so that a car load can be shipped to the nearest station and distributed. The ways of these agents are much like the "heathen Chinee"—"ways that are dark and tricks that are vain." But nevertheless, they reap rich rewards, or they would quit the business.

It should be known to every intelligent person that all classes of goods have a real value. These values are based upon conditions. The law of supply and demand has not all to do with fixing prices. To concisely sum up the factors of cost of a manufactured article there are three principal elements, viz.: The cost of the raw material, the expense of manufacture and the expense of distribution. From the producer of the raw material to the consumer, all interested in the transactions are entitled to equitable compensation. The farmer, the grower of oats sells his oats to the mill operator. The oats is manufactured into oat meal, or breakfast food. The wholesale and retail dealers are employed to distribute it. The wholesale dealer is nothing more than a warehouseman, and his compensation is for storage, and for costs of handling, and the guaranteeing to the manufacturer the cost of the goods sold. He receives only a small margin of profit. It may be said that the retailer fills a place as to the consumer as does the wholesaler to the retailer. Now it is impractical for the manufacturer to maintain stores of his own in hundreds and thousands of towns. If he could find a more economical way of distribution than the wholesaler and the retailer he would do so. But if they are cut out a more costly system of distribution must be inaugurated.

Now as to the traveling sell-direct-to-the-consumer agent. He does his business chiefly with the people who give little study to commercial matters. He represents himself as agent for a large wholesale house. He talks continually of how the consumer by buying from him can save the profits that the retailer would make. But the fact is that the expense is not eliminated. The average traveler who sells goods to the farmers receives a commission of from 25 to 40 per cent., or about 15 to 20 per cent. more than the retailer's average on such goods as he sells.

But this is not all. These men are downright dishonest as a general rule. They are a development of the proverbial lightning rod agent. They practice the same principles, only shift the kind of goods sold. In fact the majority of them represent alleged houses that exist only in name. In one western city are located a number of men who are doing business under a half dozen different names. They even haven't a warehouse. When orders are sent to them by their agents, they go to some wholesale grocer and buy the goods. Not alone this, but after they purchase what they need they adulterate the same. They buy dried fruits in bulk, the cheapest kind, and repack them in boxes supposed to weigh 25 pounds each, but in reality only weighing from 20 to 22 pounds, cases included. The spices that are bought are adulterated with ground nut shells, starch, and other material that make up weight. The coffees are of the very cheapest and the teas the same. It is seldom that the articles sent to the purchaser are the same as the samples shown. It must be remembered that the agent is under heavy expense, four to six dollars a day for team and hotel bills, and then he receives 25 per cent. commission on what he sells. To this must be added the profits for the house, which is about another 25 per cent. All this must be made and the buyer of the goods is the one who must make good.

Lately in the western states the box-car men have adopted dubious methods of getting trade. Knowing how anxious the farmers are to secure the highest prices for products, they have been traveling around through the country pretending to be buyers of produce. They contract with the farmer for butter, eggs, poultry, etc., promising about 25 to 30 per cent. above the market price. They claim they are shipping to Arizona, New Mexico, or somewhere else, where higher prices are received. Incidentally they say that their house runs a number of large stores, and also sells to the farmers, saving them the average profits of the dealer. This is sufficient. The farmer falls into the trap, gives a good large order for supplies, and a few weeks later he finds a cheap lot of goods awaiting him C. O. D. at the local depot. He waits in vain for the crates, the egg cases, etc., promised to be sent so he can pack his eggs. If he fails to take the goods the legal end of the company comes into play, and rather than have trouble, the gullible farmer pays dearly for his supplies.

He remembers the deal. He is determined to not be again caught in a similar trap. A few months later another agent appears. He promises to sell a farm wagon, something else, perhaps, that the farmer needs, at a price so low that the farmer feels friendly. He relates how he was done up by the former agent. Then the traveler turns loose his vials of wrath. He accuses the concern represented by the first agent as a robbing outfit, and one that should be put out of business. He gets an order, but the farmer does not understand that the goods come from the same concern that the other agent represented. That only a different name was used, and the farmer is on their regular list of "suckers." The only safe way for the consumer to do is to patronize home concerns. His home merchants are interested in being fair and square. They know that they must deal honestly or they will lose customers. Their percentage of profit is far less than that made by the box-car concern. Then, again, the principle of sending money from the neighborhood where it is earned is all wrong. It is against the interests of the consumers of every class and kind. A lively home town always affords the best market. There is a saving in freight rates and commissions to middlemen.

FOR SPRING AND SUMMER TRADE

Right Kind of Advertising Brings in the Customers and Builds Up Business.

Merchants who get out and present their lines in the right way are going to capture the trade. Questions that the retailers should ask themselves, are: What am I doing in the way of advertising? Have I the right kind of space in my home paper? Have I the proper style of copy? Have I spoken to the printer about getting up the advertisement tastefully and with a border, etc., and in the right kind of type?

Spring goods should be in show windows now, and much of all that is ready for the buyers.

If the merchant uses a page or a half page in the local paper, he should have the printer lift the form and run off a thousand or more handbills that can be circulated about the country. No use in doing this unless it is the right kind of advertising. No use in just saying: "Spring goods of all kinds at Brown's." Such won't bring business. Give prices, and tell how low the prices are and how good the goods are. The advertisement should be so divided as to give a space to different kinds of goods, and some good illustrations, and some prices that will talk, so when the prospective buyers come they will not be disappointed. Merchants should see that clerks don't lie, don't misrepresent, and that they treat every caller courteously. See that deliveries of goods are promptly made, and that in each package there goes out a circular telling of other bargains. Now should be the merchants' harvest time. Everybody who has money expects to spend a goodly share of it. Don't neglect advertising right. Tell your patrons that you can secure for them any kind of goods that they want if you should happen not to have what is inquired for in stock. Your jobber will take special pains to put up a small order for you if you tell him that there is need for it, and will try to assist you all he can. Now is your harvest time and make the best of it.

HOW LOSSES OCCUR.

Investors Fail to Study Financial Matters Closely and Act Unwisely.

The great masses of people do not give sufficient study to financial matters. The farmer who is employed from early morning till late at night has no time to study into things outside of those that directly relate to his occupation. The same with the average laborer. When either have a little surplus money to invest they are easy victims of the schemers who make great promises, plausible arguments, and with a juggling of figures show how little money can be made to earn great interest. It is always safe to seek investment of surplus money in local investments. You are certain that if you use good judgment you cannot lose. When you place your money into the hands of schemers in some distant place and of whom you know little, there is a chance that you will be the loser and that chance is strong against you.

Cleanliness About Stores.

Close observers note that the most successful grocery stores are the ones which are kept in the cleanest and neatest order. There is a large class of people, and they are not the richest ones, either, who would rather have good, clean groceries, things they know are pure and kept right, and pay a good price for them, than have inferior, carelessly kept goods at a cheap price. Attractiveness about the grocery is a most important thing. It means a saving all around. In the southern country where the summer weather continues for the greater part of the year too great care cannot be exercised in the looking after stocks. A little neglect will cause losses that will prove serious. Some classes of goods if not protected from insects will be soon ruined. The grocer who would have his windows attractive will do well to avoid having stale things displayed. He should strive to make an impression that his stocks are clean and well-kept.

STAR BATSMAN BACK IN FOLD

TYRUS R. COBB

"Ty" Cobb, the star player of the Detroit team of the American League last year, signed a contract with President Navin of the Tigers, and will play with the Detroit team this year and next. The terms of Cobb's contract stipulate, it is said, that he is to receive $4,000 salary and a bonus of $800 provided he bats over .300 and fields over .900.

BASEBALL RECORDS MADE DURING SEASON OF 1907

Donlin Made Six Hits in One Game at Chicago—Two Pitchers Had 22 Strikeouts Each.

During the baseball season of 1907, Lawrence and Welch of the Brooklyn Athletic club and Miller and Rice of the East End All Stars were at bat the most in one game—11.

Donlin when playing with the Logan Squares in Chicago, made the most hits in a game—6.

Smith of Fond du Lac, also in the Wisconsin State league, received the most assists—12.

Shugart of the Marquettes of Chicago, made the most errors—5.

Ganley of Washington and Becker of the Chicago Turn Gemeinde made the most runs—5.

Byrne of St. Louis, Hofman of Chicago and Mason of Cincinnati made the most sacrifice hits—3.

Lajoie of Cleveland, during the training trip, had the most two-baggers made in a game—4.

A player named Beckers had three three-baggers.

Krebs of Green Bay of the Wisconsin State league, Donlin of the Logan Squares, McLane of Wilmington of the Tri-State league, Hopke of Indianapolis, Wagner of Boston, Nordyke of St. Paul, Barton of Trenton and Huelsman of Kansas City each made two home runs in a game.

Hartman of Altoona and Tinker of the Cubs made four stolen bases.

The Henry L. Pierce school and Bennett school played the longest game—5 hours 50 minutes.

Goodwin of Milwaukee made two balks in a game.

The largest attendance of 1907 was 30,000 in the St. Louis spring series.

The past balls were but two made in a game and too many to mention held that record.

MAJOR LEAGUE GOSSIP

Socks Seybold will be able to be about in two weeks, say his physicians.

Mike Donlin of the Giants will be placed second in the New York team's batting order.

Monograms, instead of spelled-out names, will identify nearly every big league team this season.

Ban Johnson says that the New York Highlanders have the fastest combination in the American league.

Now that Honus has issued his final note of decision Pittsburg becomes a place merely where the choo-choos hesitate.

"Johnny McGraw," says Harry Howell, "is the smartest guy in the game. He knows more new and old stuff than any baseball man I ever bumped into."

The prediction of President Pulliam that there is to be a close race in the National league has not shaken the confidence of the Cubs.

Malarkey, the Giants' pitching recruit, is said to have a drop ball that is a puzzler. He used it in practice the other day, and it made a hit with McGraw.

Ossie Schreck, who was the particular friend of "Rube" Waddell, but who fell out with the eccentric one, is the latest to take a wallop at his former friend. He says the other Athletic pitchers will do better work with Waddell in St. Louis. Ossie opined that "Rube" is a handicap to any club of which he is a member.

LAJOIE NOW SUPREME AS GREATEST BALL PLAYER

Napoleon Lajoie will rule for a year at least as the world's greatest exponent of baseball. The title has been in dispute for some time, as many critics believed Hans Wagner the best ever. Comparison will be impossible this year if Wagner continues to make good his retirement stunt.

In the American league all of the fans consider Lajoie the greatest natural ball player of the bunch, while the National league supporters can't see anything to the title but Hans Wagner. Such a feeling no doubt is caused by the fact that the National leaguers see Wagner often and Lajoie only every now and then. In the cities where two major league teams are located opinion is divided among the critics as to the greatness of the two stars.

During his 11 years on the diamond Wagner has never fallen below the .300 mark in batting, while Lajoie has been out of the charmed circle only once. Last year he fell one point shy, hitting .299 for the season.

It is almost impossible to make a comparison of their fielding. Larry is grace personified, while Wagner is as awkward as a rube on his first visit to the city. Larry gets the men at first with ease, while Wagner throws them out with an effort, but it matters little after all how they are retired just so they are.

There is but little doubt that Lajoie would be a greater ball player if he didn't have the troubles of manager and captain to fall on his shoulders. There is a lot of woe connected with both jobs, and Larry has to share the double woe of being responsible for the loss of every game as well as looking after the second sack in faultless style. Wagner has never had the troubles of the manager and captain, Fred Clarke shouldering the duties on the Pittsburg team.

Wagner was surely the big card on the National league circuit. The Pirates will miss his services on the field and feel the effects in the box office. On the road Wagner always attracted a lot of people to the game who perhaps won't go, now that he is no longer a member of the Pirates.

JONES PRAISES PATTEN

Charley Says Case Is Best Left-Hander in the Business.

"Case Patten is the greatest left-handed pitcher in the business to-day," said Charley Jones, whom McAleer got from Washington in exchange for Ollie Pickering.

"I played behind him long enough to know, too. Often after we had trounced these hard-hitting teams I have heard the remark: 'That fellow's got nothing, and I don't see how he gets away with it.'

"Patten has the greatest asset of a good pitcher, brains. He has outguessed more batsmen than any other man in the business, and whenever he loses a game you can put it down that it was because of poor fielding behind him—you never see an opposing team hammering him hard.

"Patten relies on two balls, 'a spitter' and a 'screw' ball. His wet one is a tough proposition, but his screw ball is the limit. It floats up to a batter like a drunken sailor going after more booze, and, like the sailor, is all in when it gets to the plate.

"The ball wobbles up big as a mountain, and the batter steps back with an expression of 'Here is where I kill it.' But I have never seen any one able yet to get it out of the infield.

"In a pinch Patten uses that 'screw' exclusively, no matter how many men are on bases nor how many outs. And it seldom fails him. The red-headed southpaw mixes in an occasional hook, just to let the batter know that he has them."

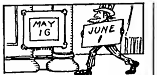
Round the Capital

Information and Gossip Picked Up Here and There in Washington.

Congress Likely to Linger Until June 1



WASHINGTON.—In spite of the fact that the speaker a few weeks ago selected May 16 as the probable closing day of this session, Republican leaders in the senate and house express the fear that adjournment cannot be reached before June 1. It is possible that "Uncle Joe" will bring to bear the pressure he knows so well how to use and clear the docket by the time of the original schedule. However the outlook for an early ending is not now promising.

The status of the annual appropriation bills is discouraging. Of the 14 big money bills, five remain to be reported to the house, while the others are in the various stages of the journey through the house and senate and conference.

The urgent deficiency bill, which was reported January 22, is the only one that has become a law, having been approved February 15. The Indian appropriation bill, which was reported January 27 in the house committee on Indian affairs, passed the house February 12 and passed the senate February 28 and was sent to conference March 4. The pensions appropriation bill was reported February 4 and passed the house March 17. It is now in the senate. The executive and judicial appropriation bill was reported February 11, passed the house February 17 and the senate March 21, and is now in conference.

The army bill passed the house February 29 and the postoffice bill March 13. The agricultural appropriation bill was approved by the house April 1, while the fortifications measure passed that body March 21. The District of Columbia appropriation bill was reported the other day, but will not be taken up for a couple of weeks. The diplomatic and consular bill, general deficiency, military academy, naval and sundry civil appropriation bills are in various stages of preparation previous to being reported.

Uncle Sam to Aid in Hunting Wolves

NEGOTIATIONS are being conducted by the Michigan and federal authorities for a scientific campaign of wolf killing in the upper peninsula.

It is quite probable that within a month Vernon R. Bailey, the wolf expert in the biological survey, will go into the upper peninsula and will inaugurate the campaign. With Mr. Bailey and the officials of the biological survey, Game Warden Pierce has been in correspondence. The plan which has been considered contemplates co-operation between state and national authorities. Mr. Bailey will spend about a month on the ground, and during that time he will instruct agents of the state in the best method of catching wolf pups in dens and of trapping the old ones.

Mr. Pierce is the first of the state game wardens to seriously take up a thorough and scientific project for ridding the upper peninsula of the pests which will kill almost as many deer as, perhaps more than, all the hunters. The plans which have been formulated call for systematic work extending over approximately two years. The expectation is that the state will employ two or three men, who will become, under Mr. Bailey's instructions, expert in wolf killing. During three months of the spring they will hunt the young in dens, and during the summer they will trap the older wolves. They will be kept busy about six months of the year.

Mr. Bailey says that a very rough estimate of the number of timber wolves in the upper peninsula is 200.

The success that has followed scientific wolf killing in other parts of the country is indicated by reports from the forest reserves. The biological survey has worked with the forest service in an effort to clear the national forests of timber wolves and coyotes, and reports received by the survey indicate that between 1,400 and 1,500 timber wolves were killed last year in and near the forests, and about 19,000 coyotes.

Glorious Triumph for Tennessee Warrior

SENTIMENT triumphed over commercialism in the house of representatives the other afternoon, and it was one glorious triumph for John Wesley Gaines, the battle-scarred legislative warrior from Tennessee.

The agricultural appropriation bill was under consideration, and Representative Burleson, of Texas, in an effort to save a few southern trees, offered an amendment providing for the removal of mistletoe from all trees in the southland on the ground that it is a parasite deadly to tree life.

Instantly there was an uproar on the floor, but Gaines emerged with a volume of "Pickwick Papers," out of which he proceeded to read the touching chapter on the wedding party at Mr. Wardle's home, where the mistletoe permitted many an innocent liberty that might have provoked a firearms display or at least a rough-and-tumble fight under other circumstances.

Just at this juncture a message was received from the president, and Representative Longworth, of Cincinnati, was called upon to take the chair, the house previously having been in committee of the whole.

After the message was read and Mr. Longworth left the chair, Gaines called upon him to arise and testify to his experience under the mistletoe. "Nick" scarcely blushed as he made his way back to his seat, although the suggestion created laughter. Burleson's measure was defeated by a vote of 38 to 43.

Why Congressmen Criticised Pinchot

MEMBERS of congress have been finding fault with Gifford Pinchot because he has been making the people of the country familiar with the work of the forest-saving service. The members who have criticised Mr. Pinchot are the members who are opposed to the bills which have for their object the saving of the forests on the eastern mountains.

The forest service simply has sent out publications showing the necessity for the saving of the forests, but the result has been that members who don't want to save the forests have received letters by the hundreds from their constituents telling them that they must vote for forest reserves.

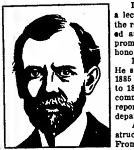
Some time ago it was hard for the departments of government to get knowledge before the public of the work that they are doing. The trouble was that the men who prepared the reports did not know anything about the popular side of the questions discussed, and as a result the newspapers to whom the reports were sent did not use them to any great extend.

Now in several departments of the government there are trained men whose business it is to take the government reports, and while preserving scrupulously every fact contained therein to present the prepared matter so that the newspapers will use it and the people will read it. The forest service and geological survey have a press service of this kind.

The reason that congressmen are hearing from their constituents is not because the congressmen are criticised, because no line of criticism does or could appear in the matter sent out. It is a case simply of interesting the people and of inducing them through their interest to write letters in support of measures before congress.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

WINS LAETARE MEDAL



Dr. James Charles Monaghan, well known as a lecturer in Catholic circles, has been chosen as the recipient for 1908 of the Laetare medal, awarded annually by Notre Dame university to some prominent Roman Catholic layman as a mark of honor.

Dr. Monaghan was born in Boston in 1857. He acted as consul to Mannheim, Germany, from 1885 to 1889, and as consul to Chemnitz from 1893 to 1897. In 1899 he was delegate to the world's commercial congress and in 1903 editor of the reports of the bureau of foreign commerce in the department of commerce and labor.

As an educator Dr. Monaghan has been instructor at both Wisconsin and Notre Dame. From September to December, 1907, he was dean of the course of history and economics at the latter institution, having to abandon the position to the disappointment of both students and faculty in order to fill engagements on the lecture platform. Dr. Monaghan was graduated from Brown university, and upon his return to the United States in 1890 took up the study of law and newspaper work. At present he is engaged on a lecture tour throughout the United States.

The history of the Laetare medal dates back to 1883, when it was conferred upon John Gilmary Shea. The medal is of gold and the bar from which the disk is suspended is lettered "Laetare medal," the face of the disk bearing the inscription in Latin, "Truth is mighty and shall prevail." The reverse side bears the name of the university and the recipient. The medal takes its name from the Sunday upon which its recipient is announced—Laetare Sunday. The particular Sunday was chosen because on that day for the last six centuries the popes have conferred a golden rose upon one who has performed marked service to religion and humanity.

BRITAIN'S NEW PREMIER

The Right Honorable H. H. Asquith, the new British premier, appointed to succeed Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, who resigned on account of ill health, was born in Yorkshire of a nonconformist family. His father died when the future premier was only six years old, and the boy's life was guided by his mother, a strict Puritan. His first schooling was received at the Moravian school at Fulneck, where the home influences were reinforced by the religious atmosphere of the Moravian community. Leaving Fulneck, young Asquith went to the City of London school, where he was a brilliant pupil. Then he went up to Oxford and won the Balliol scholarship.

At Balliol he fell under the influence of Jowett. The late master of Balliol had many distinguished pupils, but none among all of those who looked up to him with reverence and affection were more absolutely under his influence than Henry Asquith.

It was only six years after his entrance into political life when Mr. Asquith was selected as a cabinet officer, he becoming home secretary in 1892. He retained this position until 1895, when the fall of Lord Rosebery's government brought about his resignation.

With the rise of Campbell-Bannerman to the leadership of the liberals, Asquith became chief lieutenant. He did not seek this advancement, and, in fact, was called cold-blooded by some of his followers because he did not attempt to push himself over the head of "C.-B." Later Asquith was made chancellor of the exchequer, which office he had administered well.

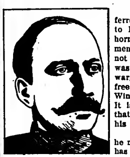
MISSED SENATORIAL TOGA

Congressman Asbury Francis Lever of Lexington, S. C., who was mentioned as a possible successor to the late Senator Latimer, but failed to land, is now serving his fourth term in the lower house. He is so prominent in working for the Appalachian forest reserve and in other matters that he is no longer mistaken for one of the floor messengers. In his first term his boyish and unaffected look and his small, wiry figure made many of his colleagues take him for a page. He was asked by them to "take these papers to the desk." He took the treatment with great humor and the embarrassment was all with the others when they found they had asked a fellow member of congress to wait on them.

Mr. Lever is descended from the South Carolina Germans of early days, a sterling population which inhabited the central counties of the state. The ancestral name was Lieber. The given names and surnames of the South Carolina delegation show plainly how the state has large German and Irish-American elements and also plenty of Methodists in faith. For both the late senator and Mr. Lever bear the name of Bishop Asbury.

Like very few who ever reach congressional honors, Mr. Lever was nominated and elected before he had reached the age of 25. He taught school until Congressman J. William Stokes, the Farmers' Alliance worker, selected him as his private secretary. He entered into sympathy with the farmers' ideals in legislation, and in 1900 he was elected a member of the legislature, though still serving Mr. Stokes as secretary. When his chief died the private secretary naturally succeeded him. He was re-elected over six opponents and has been twice re-elected since.

VICTIM OF KAISER'S TONGUE



Lord Esher, to whom Kaiser Wilhelm referred so contemptuously in his private letter to Lord Tweedmouth, the letter that raised a hornet nest about the ears of the British government, is a person of considerable ability. He is not by any means a politician; far from it; he was pressed to enter the cabinet as secretary of war, but refused in order that he might be left free to effect a thorough sanitary reform of Windsor castle, of which he was deputy governor. It is to this the kaiser referred when he said that Esher should stick to drain pipes and keep his hands off the navy.

If Lord Esher had had political ambitions he might have been prime minister to-day, for he has considerable tact and great family influence in addition to his peculiar abilities. But he is absolutely without political aspirations, as he is without a party, for neither side is quite sure of him.

If he were to accept a portfolio he would have to identify himself actively with the party in power, and this is probably the reason why he refuses. He prefers to be able to retire when he chooses to his charming house in Windsor forest, as he did when Gladstone passed his Irish home rule bill in the commons. To show his displeasure Esher gave up what little connection he had with politics and spent the next few years surrounded by his books, his flowers and his family, breeding a few race horses and entertaining friends.

Musings of the Metropolis

News of New York Town Outlined in Brief Form.

"Amen Corner" Is Now But a Memory

NEW YORK.—The Fifth Avenue hotel, one of the famous hostelries of the city, has at last ended its existence of half a century. The end came the other night when many of the old timers once more sat upon the plush-covered seat in the Amen corner and once more breathed an acquiescent "amen" to the words of the "easy boss" whose political plans, there promulgated, gave the spot world renown.

With the passing of the Fifth Avenue the day of the American plan hotel in this city is over. Not that this is the reason for the demolition of the hotel, but because the owners of the plot adjoining Madison square realized that the building was not returning the percentage of interest on the valuation of the land that it should. The land is assessed at $4,500,000, but already a loan of much more than that has been negotiated on it. A modern sky-scraper office building will soon replace the hotel.

For more than 50 years the Fifth Avenue has been one of the most notable hotels of the United States. No other single hotel in the world has ever entertained so many distinguished people. Presidents of the United States, emperors, princes, foreign ambassadors, untitled men and women of renown—the list would fill a volume. Rosters of its later patrons include all names of prominence up to the date of Roosevelt's election. He is the only president since Lincoln who has not made his home there.

Forced to Hurdle Train of Duchess

THE appearance of the duchess of Marlborough at the Playground association's dinner to Mrs. Humphry Ward the other day was a great treat to the women guests at the Waldorf-Astoria, as well as to those who saw and heard her in the banquet hall. The women deserted Peacock Alley and crowded the neighborhood of the Astor Gallery and the Grand Ball Room the minute announcement was made that a real live duchess was in the house.

When her grace left the informal reception and led the procession toward the ballroom, leaning on the arm of Richard Watson Gilder, a halt was made at the entrance while Mr. Gilder presented a friend. The duchess stood facing the two screens opposite the entrance, and directly between the walls, and no one came very near her.

Her magnificent princess gown of blue embroidered satin had a train that swept the floor for nearly ten feet behind her, and this lay spread out, completely blocking the entrance to the banquet hall. There was no way to pass except to step on this magnificent creation or to jump it. No one stepped on it, and the series of high jumps taken by some of the crowding women from downstairs made a sight almost worth the price of a banquet ticket.

Some of the women who took the hurdle were of a build which does not admit of long steps and their efforts to clear the wide train were painful to witness. One expected to hear a sound like r-r-r-p-p, but if anything gave way the wearer made no sign. A few of the men, trying to look as if they were unconscious of the barrier, stretched their legs and took the step with a clear forty-two-inch stride from tiptoe to tiptoe.

The struggles of the waiters to cross were painstaking and deliberate. Finally the duchess turned and, taking in the situation, she quietly drew her train to her side with a quick, graceful motion, and went on talking with Mr. Gilder. A long sigh of relief went up from the more nervous persons behind her who had been watching the hazardous proceedings.

What Cornelius Vanderbilt Didn't Know

THE developments in the Alfred G. Vanderbilt family troubles during the past week would indicate that old Cornelius Vanderbilt, while he was a man of vast affairs and great business acumen, did not know his own sons. Ten years ago young Cornelius Vanderbilt married Miss Grace Wilson. He did not approve of the choice. He prophesied disaster and scandal, and he denounced young Cornelius as an ingrate who had blighted his own career.

The elder Vanderbilt then turned to Alfred as the head of the house to succeed him, and made him the heir to his vast fortune. Meanwhile Cornelius Vanderbilt and his wife, Grace Wilson Vanderbilt, have gone their way, winning admiration, respect and friendship here and in Europe. They are friends of royalty abroad. They entertained Prince Henry of Prussia when he was in New York. They have taken the lead in society. They have a family of fine children. They are typically American.

But these social successes have not interfered with Cornelius' career. He would have made his own way in the world without any money, or any great family name. He has been a worker, in spite of his millions, for the wrong his father did him was in part righted by his brother, who gave him $6,000,000. He is a skilled mechanic. He is a first-class engineer. He is an inventor, and his achievements have been notable.

It is safe to say, looking back with the perspective that ten years gives, that Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt would not have stood out against his father's wishes to marry the girl of his choice. That act in itself was manly, and perhaps had old Cornelius sunk his personal prejudice and viewed the whole thing without passion he might have given his oldest boy credit for courage and independence. But prejudice is blinding, and he chose the other son.

Much Music in Wall Street These Days

COME MY LOVE AND WALTZ WITH ME THAT MERRY WIDOW WALTZ

THERE is music in the air of Wall street these spring days. Wall street, with its harmonious ticker song, is one of the last places in the world where an outsider would expect to find the romantic element of music, and yet a stroll through the money district during the market hours is contrarily convincing.

Starting at the foot of Wall street proper, one finds a heterogeneous group of mendicant musicians. There is a haggard, tousled, old woman, on whose bones is hung faded calico, playing a violin outside the coffee brokers' offices. There is a one-legged man, along about 50 years old, playing a harmonica for stray pennies. There is a young girl—deaf, dumb and blind—playing weird tunes on a dilapidated accordion.

Walking down the street to the old custom house, now being demolished with a jarring clash of apparatus, the ear becomes somewhat soothed in South William street by a well-built hurdygurdy operated by an Italian and his tambourine-bearing daughter. This Italian is usually to be found at the corner of Exchange place and William street, and his repertory of tunes runs a gamut from "No Wedding Bells for Me" to the famous "Wedding March."

Arriving at the Cotton Exchange and going up into the gallery, one may hear the Exchange quartet singing a few "swipes."

All over the financial district venders of the scores of current popular Broadway musical successes are encountered. Songs are frequently advertised by having them sung from sign-littered wagons that traverse the district. "Zoboes," in the hands of newsboys and messengers, are echoing at every corner of New street. Music boxes that start their revolutions at the touch of a nickel are to be found in numerous entrances.

An Appreciation of Affection.

Most men appreciata affection, and are disappointed whan thsy fail to find it demonstrated in thsir wives. They appreciate it in equal dagree with the wife who likes to be assured that her husband's svery thought ia for her happiness. A man is not only called upon to sacrifice many of his bachelor enjoyments when he becomes engaged, but when he is married he has still othsr trifles to forego, says ths New York Weekly. It is for the pleasure and joy of having a wife and home of his own that he is more than proud of his partnership. Everything works so smoothly that he is happy, very happy; and still thera comes to him e special thrill of sweetness when his wife puts hsr arm oround his neck and whispers in his ear that she loves him—loves him very much. No girl could await ths adoration of her lover with greater joy then a men does the tenderness showered upon him by a loving wife. But just es some men grow lax in their attentions to their young wives, so do too meny young wives forget to keep ever burning ths furnace of their loves upon the domestic rearth.

The progress of the enormous new system of weter works of New York city has made necessary the creation of a large new aqueduct police force, for the potrol and protection of ths watershed. The chief of tha force is a populer college graduate and society men. The nows of his appointmant hrought applications to take tha civil service exeminations from 300 collegs men, who aro attractsd hy what they regard as a vacation in the bsautiful scenery of the Catskills, with $100 a month os gratuity. Ths physical examiner of the civil service commission pronounced the candidatss the finest body of mce, physically, he had sver examined, and the young men coma away from the mental tests grinning, and declaring that they were "easy." The aqueduct force ought to be able to rob the city police of its title of "the finest."

The Pathes of Fate.

The imperial glory that once was Spein's long since passed from hsr, and it is reported that pathetic and tragic admission of the fsct is to he made in Medrid hy dismantling the Pantheon of ths Spanish colonies and dispersion of its valuahle collections among the libraries and museums of the city, says the Boston Herald. Tha site is needed for other purposes; the fact politicel which the building symbolized no longer exists; and the sooner present and future generations oro rid of a reminder of past national waste and maladministration, the better. Thus the argument runs. Greece, Rome, Carthage, Spain ond Holland, each heve had their day of empire on the sea. Will London ever witness such a scene os Madrid is to see? And Berlin after London?

Defective designing was the cause of the collepse of the cantilever hridge across the St. Lawrence river et Quebec several months ago, according to the report of the royal commission appointed to make an investigation. The designer used the standerd formulas in computing the strains, but in the opinion of the commission he should have modified them, as the bridge was larger than any thet hed hitberto been attempted on the cantilever principle. It is easy to sey this now, for all engineers know more about the subject than before the falling hridge demonstrated that the old formulsa were incorrect. But it is important to future hridge-builders, as wsll ss to ths public, that an adequate explenotion of the Quehec accident has been found.

The English advocates of woman's suffrage hnve mede thsir demands a reel politicol issue. A resolution in their fevor was recently adopted hy the convention of English Liberals. Their bill was read a first time in the house, practically without opposition, though it will go no further. Press dispatches tell of a really worried London police, assert that the cabinet ministers nsvsr know what will happen to thsm next, and aver that Mr. Asquith never leaves homs asve in the company of two detectives. Even he has capitulatsd to the extent of receiving a deputation of ths National Union of Womsn's Suffrage Societies and admitted that their casa was presented "with unusual precision and persuasiveness."

It is the same old story. North, south, east and west the farmers are short of help. If the msn looking for work would add to thair applications "No objection to going in the country" they would prohahly have choice of any nmmber of jobs.

The fact that Naw York has a parrot that swears in six languages is being rather widely advertised. It is certainly queer how very fond Naw York can be of its various forms of wickedness.

MISSING CROOK ROBS BANK

ESCAPED CONVICT LOOTS SANK AT CHAUTAUQUA, KAN.

Bandits Secura $3,000 and Depart for Osaga Hills with Possa in Pursuit—One is Recognized.

Coffeyville, Kan. — Two men entered the Citizens' henk at Chautauqua, 25 miles west of Coffeyvills, Friday, end after forcing Cashier C. C. Welterhouse and Del Easley, a business man, to enter the vault, locked them in, secured all the currency in sight, amounting to about $3,000, and escaped into the Osege hills across tho line in Oklahoma. Four posses started in pursuit and as ths roads were muddy it wss believed the robbers would he captured. The rohbers secured hut half an hour's start.

The robbery wos one of tho most daring ever executed in this part of Kansas, the scene of many daring hold-ups on the part of tho Delton, Starr and other gangs of outlaws who from time to timo havo made their rendezvous in the mountainous country of near-by Oklahome.

Casbier Walternouse hod scarcely opened the hank at Cheutauqua in the morning and ploced his currency on the counter reody for the day's husiness when the two rohhers entered. The only othsr person in the plsce wss Del Easley. Ths rohhers, both of them well dressed, mede their wey leisurely to the cashier's window. One of them was a men well known about town, and when he commanded Walterhouse and Easley to throw up their hands, the letter two took the matter in the light of a joke. The serious intentions of tho rohhers wers realized a moment loter, however, when they both drew revolvers, and, pointing them at their victims, ordered them to get into the vault. Without further ado Walterhouse and Easley complied. The robbers quickly slammed the door shut, and then leisurely went about their business of Cashior Walterhonse stated positively that one of the rohbers was Willism Tenent, aged 23 yeors, formerly of Chautauqua, and who recently escaped from jail at Nowata, Okla., where he was heing held on a charge of horse steeling. Tenant some time ago borrowed a small sum of money from the bank, and Mr. Walterhouse said that when Tenant entered the bank Friday he supposed he had come to renew the note or to take it up.

CLAPP IS MADE CROW CHIEF.

Minnesota Senator Honored hy Montana Indians.

He was given a great surprise Thursday hy Chief Plenty Coos and his fellow-tribesmen, who have heen witnesses before the Indian committee for ths past three weeks. The chief marched into ths committee room at the head of the hand and through an interpreter phlegmatically informed the senator that the treatment that hed heen accorded the Indiens was highly appreciated, and that an appropriate gift was due the white chief of the committee. Chief Plenty Coos then took from one of his followers a huge war bonnet, which had been the chief's insignia of rank and worn hy him whenever he went into hattle. He said that he wos now a men of peace and that the bonnet was of less value to him on the reservation then it would be to the senator in congress, and therefore he wanted the senator to take it.

Senetor Clepp was "completely flabbergasted," according to his own description of his emotions. He took ths war honnet and thanked ths chief.

The decoration would create a sensation in the senate chamber if ths senator should decide to wear it there. It is made of eagle feathers, a hand of which goes entirely around the head and droops almost to the feet.

FUN FOR FLEET CREWS.

San Diego, Cal. — After two deys of pageantry on sea and land there was a restful lull in San Diego's celebration in honor of the American of the officers, including Reer Admiral Thomas, were entertained at a picnic soms 30 miles in the country. Boat races on the bey during the morning, a baseball game in the afternoon, free lemonade and fruit, horseback rides, trolley excursions and sight-seeing tours occupied the attention of ths 2,000 sailors who ceme ashore on liberty.

All of ths 15 vessels of the fleet et anchorage off Coronado were thrown open to visitors from ten a. m. to five p. m., and the excursion launches running out to sea had all they could do to handle the interested throngs. At night there were fireworks.

Attacks Grain Dealsrs.

Lincoln, Nsb. — Complaint was filed with Attorney General Thompson Tuesday against the Nebraska Grain Dealers' association, alleging that it is a trust and as such is trying to drive independent dealers out of business. The complainant is G. F. Godown, secretary of the Beaver Valley Grain company, at Danhury, who asserts the members of the association, in an effort to deprivs him of business, are paying several cents mors for grain at Danhury than the market prices and mnch more than they pay at thsir elevators in othsr towns where they have no competition.

ROUT KURD RIDERS

COSSACKS WIN PITCHED BATTLE, THOUGH OUTNUMSERED.

DESTROY THREE VILLAGES

Robher Trihes in Persian Tsrritory Severely Punished—French Repulse Fierce Attack of Sarhers.

Tiflis. — The Russian troops which recently invaded Persian territory in the vicinity of Lenkoran for ths purpose of punishing Kurdish raidsrs of the Russien garrison at the Frontier post, Belesuvar, April 13, acted with a promptitude calculated to overawe the tribes of the first class near Belesuvar.

The fight which ensued assumed the proportions of a pitched hattle. The Russians were greatly outnumhered, hut they pressed the hattle with great vigor and ronted the Persians, inflicting a loss of 34 men killed and 50 wounded. The remainder of the tribesmen broke and fled. The Russians lost one officer and seven soldiers woonded.

Cossacks Destroy Villages.

The cannonade set fire to the village of Belesuvar, the destruction of which wos completed hy the Cossacks after a ruthless house to house search for the Russian arms stolen during the raid of April 13.

Pressing their advantage, ths Russians hombarded the neighhoring villages of Kodzhaheklu end Zariah end razed both.

The non-combatants suffered great losses.

Homs of Robber Tribes.

Ths theater of war is in the mountain range of Karadagh, which wedges in the Russien boundary, and is the traditional kingdom of rohher trihss which boast thousands of fightere ermed with modern implements of wsr and organized with a semblance of military discipline. Tho robbers hod cut the telegreph lines in order to hamper the mobilization of an expedition which Persia is assembling egainst them at Tebriz.

The Russien expeditionary force now on Persian soil oggregatee 400 Cossacks, a squodron of sharpshooters and a hettery of mechine guns. It was intended to send a much larger force there, but a phenomenel flood of the Arss river hinders the concentration of reinforcements from Baku and other points north.

Franch Repulss Berhers.

Colomh Bechar, Algeria.—A French column posted on Taizaza hill, which commands the plain of Tamet, was attacked fiercely at daylight by a number of Berbers, who, with nomad Arahs, have heen concentrating for some weeks post on the western frontier of Algeria.

Although surprised, the French force rallied end fought desperately, not only heating off their adversaries, but pursuing them for a distance of six miles.

So hot was the pursuit that the Arabs, in their headlong flight, ahandoned their dead end wounded.

Several green flegs of the prophot aleo fell into the hands of the French.

This French victory wss costly. Twenty-eight men, including an officer, were killed and 100 men, including ten officers, were wounded.

The Berber losses were much heavier, no lees than 125 dead hodies heing found hy the French troops.

The French pursuit wes stopped by darkness.

ALDRICH BILL TABLED.

House Committee Votes to Lay Aside Currency Measurs.

Washington.—The house committee on banking and currency Friday voted unanimously to table the Aldrich financial hill. It also was decided to give a hearing to Representative Vreeland of New York, who recently introduced a financial hill which is looked upon as a suhstitute for the Aldrich measure.

The discussion in committee was brief. The only point dehated was as to whether or not the committee should make a formal report giving its reasons to the house for its unfavorable action, and the conclusion finally was reached that no reasons should be given. Consequently ths committee's report will be a msrs statement of the action of the committee.

Pat McCarren Unsested.

New York.—State Senator Patrick H. McCarren, leader of the Kings County Democracy, was nnseated Wednesday night as a delegate to the party's state convention in Carnegie hall to select representatives to the Denver national convsntion.

The convention then selected delegates-at-large and adopted a platform which declared the delegation should be unhampered by instructions.

State Police for Chester.

Chester, Pa.—Following early morning scenes of wild disorder during which two men were slightly injnred hy hnllets and others were heaten by crowds, a reqnest was sent to Gov. Stuart Thursday asking him to send two companies of the state police to this city at once to preserve order. The governor granted the reqnest.

San Antonio, Tex.—Mrs. Marcella Rice, widow of the famous circus clown, died here Thursday.

FLOOD LOSS IS MILLIONS

TOWN OF CRAIG DESTROYED BY THE HAUSER LAKE DISASTER.

Broken Dam Certainly Will Be Rebuilt—City of Great Falls Not in Danger.

Helena, Mont. — With the little town of Craig wiped entirely off the map, thousands of head of cattle and livestock drowned and scores of valuable ranches greatly damaged, the loss from the flood caused by the hreaking of the great 70-foot dam at Hauser lake, it is conservatively estimated, will reach several million dollars.

In view, however, of the contract hetween the Helena Power Transmission company, owners of the dam and the Wisconsin Bridge and Iron company of Milwaukee, the letter company, it is said, will he liable for all demage resulting from the flood.

After making a careful examination of the dam site Wednesday, since the water receded, A. H. Gerry, Jr., general manager, is of the opinion that the wrecked structure can he rebuilt at a cost of probably less than $250,000. That the dam will be rebuilt at once and the construction of the third dam at Wolf creek which was approved by Secretary of Wer Taft will not he deleyed, is essured hy a telegram received in Helena from former Gov. Samuel T. Hauser, president of the Helena Power Transmission company, who is now in New York.

The indications are thet the water has receded sufficiently to prevent any greet damage at Great Falls. Every precaution has been taken to protect the Boston end Montana smelter, which is situated on the river hanks at Great Falls, and it is now believed that the plant will not suffer from the flood waters.

Butte, Mont. — Great Northern Agent Stewart of Wolf creek reports to ths local office thet the track from Wolf creek east as far as he can see is flooded to a depth of three feet end thet for three miles or more it is completely washed out. It is figured conservatively that for at least 20 days no trains can go over the line.

Drainage Schema Knocked Out.

Madison, Wis.—The supreme court Friday handed down a decision which in effect makes impossible the forming of a drainage system out of 35,000 acres of land known as the Horicon Marsh.

THE LIVING ROOM.

It Should at All Times Be a "Livable" Room.

What to do with the living room is a problem that confronts every housekeeper. The living room should be in fact as well as in name a living room—a livable room. It is the room in which the most of our time at home is spent, the hours we have for leisure, the time we have for play, the place where we entertain our friends and it is absolutely essential that the walls and furnishings of the living room should he harmonious in color, suitable in texture, and durable in material.

The rich, soft, solid colored walls are the ideal walls for the living rooms. They make a better back ground for pictures, throw the furniture out in hetter relief, are less discordent with rugs and carpeting, and indicate a higher degree of taste and culture than do the colored monstrosities which we paste on when we apply wall paper.

Who ever saw roses climbing up a plastered wall growing out of a hardwood floor? Yet, that is what we suggest to the imagination when we paste paper covered with roses on our walls. They are neither artistic nor true. Roses are all very beautiful, but they were never made to climb up interior walls and they do not grow from hardwood flooring. The set figures of wall paper are also tiresome and equally disagreeable and repellant.

The alabastined wall is the only correct form of a tinted or solid colored wall. Fortunately it is the only clean wey, and more fortunately it is the only permanent wey; the only way that does not involve the endless labor in the future.

In lighting the walls some thought must be given the color. Light colors reflect 85% of the light thrown upon them. Dark colors reflect but 15%. Lighting bills can he saved hy choosing a color which will reflect the largest degree of light. In north rooms use warm colors or colors which reflect light. In south and west rooms sometimes the light can be modified hy the use of darker colors. Dark greens absorb the light; light yellows reflect it; browns modify it, and so on, through the scale of colors. The color scheme of a room not only is dependent upon the color of the carpetings hut it is also dependent upon the light of the room.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

More Shortages.

Duluth—A further alleged shortage of $1,975.05 in the accounts of F. G. Warner, formerly state oil inspector, was reported by Public Examiner Anton Schaefer. The report is based on an examination made by W. C. Heilbron, assistant corporation examiner for the department, and covers what is known as the Duluth district, including the counties of Aitkin, Beltrami, Carlton, Itasca, Lake Pine and St. Louis.

The report made a few days ago charging an alleged shortage of $12,010 covered only the Minneapolis district, which includes Hennepin, Ramsey and twenty-nine other counties. In this second report Mr. Heilbron states that there still remain for examination the records of the other three districts, Mankato, La Crosse, Wis., and Fargo, N. D., the designation of these districts being that adopted by the Standard Oil Company. It is from these offices that the inspection in the counties included in the districts are made.

A Bad Man.

Eden Prairie—Frank Miller, a storekeeper, paraded with a shotgun and for a time he had the whole town subdued. Miller is now locked up in the county jail, but it took an automobile and three deputy sheriffs to capture him.

Residents telephoned the sheriff's office that Miller was brandishing a double-barreled shotgun on the streets. Later more residents telephoned that he was firing the gun. Finally on official request for aid came to the office, and a posse headed by Frank Johnson, deputy in charge of the insane, started for Eden Prairie in an automobile.

When they arrived, Miller had the field to himself, but he submitted to arrest without objection. Residents of Eden Prairie say that Miller is insane, but Frank Johnson, who has handled enough insane patients to know, says that Miller simply dallied too long with the cup that cheers.

State Borrows $400,000.

St. Paul—The last legislature authorized a bond issue to provide funds for enlarging the university campus and for the erection of certain buildings.

Fifty thousand dollars of the bonds have been taken by the state of Minnesota permanent school fund, and the remaining $400,000, bearing 4½ per cent interest, have been sold to the Minnesota Loan & Trust company.

The deposits, surplus and bank clearings of Minneapolis are everywhere favorably commented upon, and this important sale of securities to a local trust company is additional evidence that Minneapolis is making good as a banking and financial center.

A large amount of the bonds have already been resold to investors here and in St. Paul and to banks and individuals in other Minnesota cities.

Cost of Kiss Cut to $4,750.

Since the first trial of the case Mr. Kitz has settled with a good many people and now declares that be is nil in financially, but he has been reputed to be wealthy. The case has excited a great deal of interest in this section.

She was a tenant of Jacob Kitz of Hibbing and declared that he stole a kiss from her by force one day when he came for the rent. Mr. Kitz set up a defense that he was being blackmailed, but two juries have found that Mrs. Bergman was kissed against her will and fixed the damages.

Death of D. R. Noyes.

St. Paul—Daniel R. Noyes, head of the wholesale drug firm of Noyes Bros. & Cutler, died at his home, 366 Summit avenue, St. Paul, after a brief illness. He was taken ill last Thursday and it was at first thought that there was no grave danger, but a sinking spell followed, from which he failed to rally. Deceased has been prominently identified with the business interests of St. Paul for nearly a half century and was well known all over the Northwest.

Warren—Two sons of John Khune, aged 7 and 13, were arrested and bound over to the district court on the charge of attempting to wreck the Great Northern passenger train on the Greenbush extension.

Hibbing—The body of an unidentified man was found frozen in the ice four miles west of Headquarters camps near this city. Coroner Butchart held an investigation, but nothing can be learned as to the man's identity.

Moorhead—Charles Erdell, the liquor dealer, has completed a three-months' term in the Ransom county jail for selling firewater in that county. While taking the rest cure Mr. Erdell tried his hand at writing poetry some of which appears in the Lisbon Free Press.

Duluth—John O'Neill of Duluth, a brakeman in the employ of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad, was killed at Saginaw Station, thirty-five miles from here. He attempted to board a freight train in motion and fell under the wheels. O'Neill was thirty-five years old and had a family residing here.

Minneapolis—Awakened by a noise in her room, Minnie Nelson, 3603 Longfellow avenue, opened her eyes to look directly into the muzzle of a revolver held by a man whose face was covered by a handkerchief. She was too frightened to scream, for the man threatened serious consequences in case she made an outcry.

St. Paul—Under the influence of an acute attack of melancholia, R. S. Miller, fifty-four years old, an inmate of the Mounds sanatorium, Dayton's Bluff, threw himself beneath the wheels of a Rondo and Morla car on Earl street just below the "Y." Both his feet were so badly crushed that it was necessary to amputate them.

Hibbing—Frank Kesolo, a Finlander, aged 26, was fined $25 and costs in municipal court for assaulting Linton Pickard, the 10-year-old son of Rev. J. F. Pickard, pastor of the Methodist church here. Kesolo interfered in a squabble among a group of children where Linton Pickard was only an onlooker. He slapped the boy, knocked him down and kicked him.

The evolution of the Swedish-American type of drama is shown in the latest addition to the list of Swedish plays, "Tillie Olson," which is underlined for presentation at the Bijou Opera House, Minneapolis, the week of April 26th. The play should prove especially interesting to Minnesota people, as its earlier scenes are laid in the northern part of this state and the later ones in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis—Lucius Arnold Fryn of the University of Minnesota was selected at the meeting of all the college presidents of the state in President Northrop's office, to be the Cecil Rhodes scholar at Oxford, England, for the next three years. He will take the place of Harry Mitchell, Minnesota, 1905, whose term expired this spring.

Crookston—By Aug. 1, 1908, the state of Minnesota and its counties will be excavating twice as much earth as the United States government on the Panama canal. At that date there will be fifty dredges in active operation on projects within the state, each averaging a capacity of 35,000 yards of dirt a month, and over, meaning an average monthly excavation of approximately 2,000,000 yards, or twice that of the Panama canal.

W. B. Parsons of Winona, who was an active candidate for delegate-at-large up to the time the Republican state convention met at the Auditorium, was the hero of the hour.

When the time for naming delegates-at-large was reached, Mr. Parsons rose and moved the selection of the four "slate" candidates, Kellogg, Heffelfinger, Hawkins and Putnam, by acclamation.

The motion was carried by a unanimous rising vote, and Secretary Delzell cast the ballot of the convention for the "big four."

The "country" was conceded the alternates-at-large and the two presidential electors at large. James A. Larson nominated F. E. Bentley, and Alvah Eastman placed C. M. Sprague in nomination. W. B. Parsons was placed in nomination but declined, and so did A. J. Rockne. When the four from the country were named, W. I. Nolan seconded their nomination for Hennepin and D. F. Reese for Ramsey. The four alternates, and the eleven presidential electors were chosen from the floor without contest.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, by the Republicans of Minnesota in state convention assembled:

We heartily commend the splendid administration of President Roosevelt, and especially his efforts for the establishment of a sound financial system, the enforcement of the laws and proper regulation of corporations; for free competition in business; for the protection of property rights; for the stability of government, and for the maintenance of the highest standard of business integrity and civic duty.

The people of Minnesota are especially interested in the development of the great waterways of the country, which are the natural avenues for cheap transportation, especially for agricultural products. We therefore earnestly recommend the improvement of the Mississippi river, the further betterment of the harbors on Lake Superior, and the extension and development of the canals, to the end that these great natural highways may be adequate for the commerce of the nation.

We reaffirm the principle of protection of American labor and industries, but we believe the time has come when there should be a revision of the tariff schedules, by a Republican congress.

Hon. William H. Taft is the choice of a large majority of the Republicans of Minnesota and of the United States for the Republican nominee for president; be is a man of great learning and ability, wide experience as a statesman and best qualified to carry on the work inaugurated by President Roosevelt. We therefore instruct our delegates in the national convention to use all honorable means to secure his nomination for president of the United States, and to vote for him as such nominee until elected by the convention.

Not Likely to Get Road.

Marshalltown, Iowa, April 17.—A little more than eighteen months ago Hamilton Browne of Chicago, a promoter and builder of interurbans, started to promote an electric line which would run out of this city to connect with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad at Malbourne. A special election was held and a tax aid, totaling $85,000 was voted for the road, under the provision that the tax should be payable only under the condition that the road be in operation by July 1, 1908.

ONLY DAUGHTER OF TAFT.

Miss Helen Now a Sophomore in Bryn Mawr College.

Washington.—Miss Helen Taft, only daughter of the secretary of war and Mrs. Taft, now is a sophomore in Bryn Mawr college. Before entering the Philadelphia institution of learning she attended, with Miss Ethel Roosevelt, the school which is connected with the Episcopal cathedral situated way out on the Tenleytown road.

The daughters of the president and secretary have been close friends and playmates since early childhood. Two years ago they were confirmed in the same class at the historic St. John's church on Lafayette square, by the late Bishop Satterlee. Since Miss Taft's departure for Bryn Mawr Miss Ethel has left the cathedral school and is receiving instruction from an English governess.

If William Howard Taft should become president of the United States his daughter would make her bow to society during her father's second year in the White House, for it is the present intention of the young women to continue her studies at college till her four years are completed, which means that she still has two full years after the present term expires.

White House debutantes are welcomed by Washington society, for many brilliant functions are given often for the younger set. Miss Taft is said by those who know her to be unaffected and as democratic and genial as her father. She has never accompanied her father and mother on their long trips to distant lands, but has spent her time preparing for college, which she entered at an age rather below that of most girls.

It may be that Miss Taft, like the former Miss Root, now Mrs. Ulysses S. Grant III., being studious and domestically inclined, will shun as much as she possibly can the gayer life of the capital city after the novelty of being a White House debutante has worn off. This, of course, in the event of her father's nomination and election next fall.

NEW SENATOR IS APPOINTED.

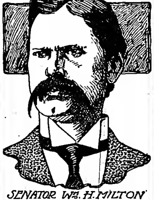
Tallahassee, Fla.—Gov. Broward has appointed Hall Milton of Marianne to



SENATOR WM. H. MILTON

Mr. Milton is a grandson of former Gov. John Milton of Florida and is 42 years old. He is a successful banker and business man. The appointment is for the unexpired term of the late Senator Mallory, which had been filled by the appointment of Senator Bryan three months ago.

When His Troubles Begin.

The purser on a transatlantic liner is an exceedingly busy man when his steamer comes abeam of quarantine. His troubles begin some five hours before the steamer arrives off Sandy Hook and continue until every passenger has left the pier. The purser is besieged by passengers who wish to exchange foreign money for American; he has to tell them when the steamer is expected to dock, when to set their watches ahead and reply to hundreds of other trivial questions. The pursers on the French line are nothing if not courteous, but sometimes their patience is sorely tried, and to avoid any apparent discourtesy in the tribulations of arriving at port they prepare a statement for the press containing memoranda of the "notable passengers, special incidents, ships spoken, amount of specie and weather conditions." The statement is manifold and handed to the reporters with a pleasant smile and the news gatherers do the rest.

ROCK OYSTER REEF

SUCCULENT BIVALVES FOUND ONLY ON OREGON COAST.

Newport, Ore.—Rock oyster digging is having the attention of a large number of Newport (Ore.) citizens, and the native Indian dwellers, and consequently rock oyster soup and rock oyster fritters will take the first place at the table as a delicacy which will ever be in the memory of those fortunate enough to have had their palates tickled with the fat and juicy bivalves that inhabit this particular spot on the coast of Oregon.

The home of the rock oyster is in the soap stone rock, called reefs, being imbedded from four to seven inches with a hole to the surface. As the oyster grows in size the cavity is gradually made larger by the twisting of its shell in a semi-circular shape, the neck extending to the surface of the reef, thus obtaining its necessary nourishment.

The rock oyster reefs are only accessible on the ebb tide for a short interval, otherwise they would soon become extinct. During the winter months the reefs are exposed for about two hours in the 24 for a period of from five to seven days. About the full of the moon the opportunity for digging is best as the remainder of the month the reefs are covered by water.

During the months of July and August the reefs are exposed about six hours in 24. It is during this season of the year the rock oysters are sought to a large extent, selling readily at 25 cents a gallon in the shell to local consumers and 50 cents a gallon in Portland.

The coast Indians never fail to be on hand at this time to have their annual feast of rock oysters, which are, in their estimation, far superior to the turkey cherished so highly by their paleface brethren. During the long summer days the Indian women are to be seen daily trudging to and from the beach with baskets of their own manufacture strapped on their backs filled with the bivalves. They sell a part but never fail to retain the amount necessary for their daily consumption, and later in the season, when the supply becomes less than the demand, it is impossible to buy them at any price, showing the appreciation of the rock oyster as a food delicacy by the Indian.

Digging Rock Oysters on Oregon Coast.

The legend of the discovery of the rock oyster by the tribe of Yaquina Indians located on Yaquina bay, say that a bad Indian was cast out by the tribe. He roamed the hills of the coast range for days in the hopes of securing some large game that he might come back to the tribe and beg forgiveness. Day after day no game could he find, making his way back to the coast, exhausted from hunger, he lay down to sleep where the tide was low. Awaking from the rise of water, he by chance discovered the neck of a rock oyster sticking above the reef, which he used to satisfy his hunger. He returned to his tribe with a few of the bivalves, and obtaining forgiveness, he became a good Indian.

Proves Earth Is Round.

When the earth comes between the sun and the moon it always casts a round shadow. A place chosen for an experiment to prove the roundness of the earth "was near Bedford, England, where there is a straight six-mile stretch of water. At both ends and in the middle of this stretch of water posts were erected, each of the same definite height above the water level. Upon looking with a telescope along the tops of these three posts it was clearly seen that the center one overtopped the others by about six feet, thus marking the curvature of the earth's surface." This experiment has been repeated, and with every latest appliance brought to bear to affect absolute accuracy. The statement as to how a ship at sea shows the tops of her masts first, and then gradually parts below that, but above the water, is a familiar one, and satisfies most minds.

Falling Off in Spruce Gum.

There is a considerable shortage in the spruce gum crop in Maine this year, and first-class gum is now worth $1.75 a pound, laid down in Bangor by the pickers. The retailer gets 15 cents an ounce, and the price is rising. Woodsmen say the decrease in the supply is due to extensive lumbering operations for the pulp mills.

I could get no relief until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. They cured me five years ago, and this is twice I have publicly said so. The cure was thorough."

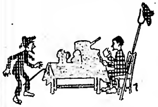
TOOK TIME.



A Scotsman, having hired himself to a farmer, had a cheese set before him that he might help himself. After some time, the master said to him:

"Sandy, you take a long time to breakfast."

"In truth, master," said Sandy; "a cheese o' this size is na sae soon eaten as you may think."

CURE AT CITY MISSION.

"A young woman came to our city mission in a most awful condition physically. Our doctor examined her and told us that she had scabies (the itch), incipient paresis, rheumatism, etc., brought on from exposure. Her poor body was a mass of sores from scratching and she was not able to retain solid food. We worked hard over her for seven weeks but we could see little improvement. One day I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, and we bathed our patient well and gave her a full dose of the Resolvent. She slept better that night and the next day I got a box of Cuticura Ointment. In five weeks this young woman was able to look for a position, and she is now strong and well. Laura Jane Bates, 85 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y., Mar. 11, 1907."

Might Be Sure of That.

Bobby is the son of a minister and has had the experience of "moving" four times in the space of his eight years' life. Some time ago an elderly minister was visiting Bobby's father and the course of the conversation turned to Heaven and Bobby was asked concerning the abode of the blest. "Yes," said the youngster, with a sigh of deep weariness, "I know. It's the last place we're going to move to."

It now looks like Taft would be nominated on the first ballot.

Attorney General Young has rouled that the office of town clerk and assessor can not leagly be held by the same man, at the same time. That's proper, as one town office had ought to be enough for any ordinary man

Harry Ives, of St. Hilaire, has filed for the Republican nomination for representative from this district. Red Lake County had ought to have the representative this year and editor Ives seems to be the first one to discover the fact.

Just at this time of year there is not much doing in pollticts, but as the ground hog is now out of his den we may expect to see the fellow who at the earnest request of his friends, has finaly consented to become a candidate for office.

Tomorrow is the date that the County Commissioners are called to meet to act on the county seat removel petition, but they are all busy with springs work, so Aubel and Shaw are the only two that are likely to have time to attend. To bad, but it can't be helped.

J. Adam Bede the Duluth congressman was compelled to drop everything at Washington last week and haster home. to look after his political fences. We do things different up here in the Ninth. We keep the old man in congress looking after important matters that are pending, and the "kids' watch the home fenses to see that they are kept in good repair.

We understand that IT is to be a candidate for re-election to the office that he now holds, and was elected to by deceiveing the people upon the issue in the campaign. But we are of the opinion that with all the pushing that his large army of special deputies can do, and with Jones to pay the freight, that the people will ditch him before he reaches the station.

Our 1915 Election.

Grant county Oklahoma, will vote on the proposition to remove the county seat from Pond Creek to Medford, on May 27th, this year. We were down there on a visit to a brother ten years ago next month, and at that time Medford had just gotten up the first petition for removel, and thought they would have the county seat moved in three months Figuring on the same length of time for "courting" the proposition to move the county seat from Red Lake to Thief River Falls had ought to be put to a vote early in January 1015.

Since the Oklahoma fight was started some of the older ones have died, and yonnger men tak on their plces and continued the fight, and that will undonbtly be the way it will be done in this county, but some of the next generations will undoubtly smile, when they read in the ancient history, that the campaign of 1906, was made on the issue of county seat removel.

Mark's Lung Balsam with tar, is sold by all dealers, Price 25 cent, 50 cents and $1.00.

Artificial Flies.

Dame Juliana Berners, prioress of the nunnery of Sopwell, near St. Albans, England, was the author of the first book on angling in the English language, printed in 1496. She gives a list of twelve flies, and now, after a lapse of more than four centuries, artificial flies, constructed after her formulas, would prove as successful as any of the up to date creations.

"Ah, but I don't know you well enough, Mr. Peters," said the young lady, blushing, as she withdrew behind her fan.—London Telegraph.

Pity the Groom.

Pity the groom on his wedding day;
On one the sun ne'er shone,
Of whom the guests had a word to say—
They have eyes for the bride alone.
Pity the groom on the day he's wed,
And a bachelor adds, with laughter,
"He needs it on that day, as you've said
But pity him ever after."

Poor Cream, Or Butter,

The Plummer creamery is getting lots of free advertising in The Pioneer, as haveing rotten cream produceing patrons. Funny they never had any of this trouble last year, when they had our present Highlanding butter maker Mr Lowerson, makeing their butter,

We are of the opinion that their trouble is same like the farmers pump that he could not make work, so he got an expart to examine it, and he found that the SUCKER was on the wrong end.

It might improve the quality of the Plummer cream, if the editor of The Pioneer would drive out every morning and wipe off the udder's of the cows with a damp cloth before milking time. However the safest way for users of creamery butter would be to buy the Highlanding, or Clear water creamery butter. then you are sure to get butter from clean farmers, that is maufaetured by first class, clean creamery butter makers.

Could We Live on Mars?

The physical conditions on Mars are in many ways intermediate between those found upon the earth and the moon, and it seems plausible that the life existing upon it should similarly be of a higher type than that found on the moon and of a lower type than that found at present on the surface of the earth. Even if the physical conditions, as we understand them, were equally favorable with those on the earth, civilization would by no means be a necessary consequence. Had it not been settled by Europeans the United States would still be a wilderness. How much less should we hasten to accord civilization to a planet of which we know little, except that if we were transported there ourselves we should instantly die.—Professor W. H. Pickering in Harper's Magazine.

Wise Insects.

In his experiments to determine whether it is the color or the odor of flowers that attracts bees and other insects M. Plateau, the Belgian zoologist, bethought him of trying a mirror He selected a flower of striking color and strong odor and placed it before an excellent glass in which the reflection was perfect. All the insects went straight to the real flower, and not a single one approached the reflection in the mirror.—Youth's Companion.

Joining the Great.

An Oxford undergraduate was reciting a memorized oration in one of the classes in public speaking. After the first two sentences his memory failed, and a look of blank despair came over his face. He began as follows:

The Tailor and the College Humorist.

Perennial victims of the humorous paper at Yale are the familiar campus characters, Jim Donnelly, the policeman; Pop Warner, the "teeming expressman," so called because he delivers his goods in an automobile, and Rosenberg Sons, the suit pressers, about whom, in a Pegasian flight of distress at the time of the junior prom., the Record uttered these winged words:

> Oh, Rosenberg, dear Rosenberg,
>   Thy sons we'll ne'er forget.
> That suit of clothes,
> God only knows,
>   I'm waiting for them yet.
>
> I'll miss that train. I'll go insane
>   And rip and tear and cuss.
> Just out of reach
> There goes that peach
>   I've missed my chance to fuss.

With this same suit presser as hero, the story is told on a popular professor that in leading chapel one morning he stopped short, leaned over and whispered excitedly to the choir, "What's the name of that song, 'Press On, Christian Soldier, Press On?'" "Rosenberg!" came from a dozen men at once. "We'll sing three stanzas of Rosenberg!" said the leader, with ecclesiastical assurance.—E. R. Embree in Bohemian

THE PAINTING SEASON.

Good results in painting at the least cost depend largely upon the material chosen. Paint is a simple compound and the ingredients can be easily tested. The solid part or pigment should be White Lead. The liquid part should be Linseed Oil. Those best informed on painting always buy these ingredients separately and have their painter mix them fresh for each job. Before the mixing the test is made.

Place a pea-sized bit of White Lead on a piece of charcoal or piece of wood. Blow the flame against it and see what it will do. If it is pure White Lead, little drops of bright, pure metallic lead will appear, and with patience the White Lead can be completely reduced to one globule of metallic lead. This is because pure White Lead is made from metallic lead.

You may test dozens of other so-called White Leads and not be able to reduce one of them to lead. If they will not change wholly to lead but leave a residue, it is clear that some adulterant is present.

If you should have your painting done with such materials, no matter how cheap they might seem, it would be costly in the end.

National Lead Company, Woodbridge Building, New York City, are sending on request a blowpipe free to any one about to have painting done, so that the White Lead may be tested. With it will be sent a handsomely printed booklet having as its frontispiece the "Dutch Boy Painter," reproduced from the original painting. This little painter has become noted as the guaranty of pure White Lead.

Losing a Tenant.

A landlord in the Highlands of Scotland had a "crofter" tenant, who paid him ten shillings a year as rent for the little farm. At the end of the second year the tenant came to the landlord and said that he was not able to pay more than five shillings a year, as crops had been poor. The landlord agreed to this.

At the end of the third year the tenant appeared before the landlord again and complained that things were going so poorly with him that he was not able to pay any rent. The landlord agreed to let him remain rent free. At the end of the fourth year the tenant once more appeared before the landlord, and said:

"Colonel, if you don't build me a barn I'll have to move."

The Farmer's Retort.

"The 'Fool Killer,'" bantered the man in goggles. "I call it that because it kills all the fools who happen to cross in front of it.

"That so, mister? Wall, is there any chance of it blowing up and killing the fool inside?"

A Boy on Clergymen.

Bishop Potter, at an ecclesiastical dinner in New York, read a Cooperstown schoolboy's essay on "Clergymen." The essay, which created much amusement, was as follows:

'There are 3 kinds of clergymen bishups, recters and curates. The bishups tell the recters to work and the curats have to do it, a curate is a thin married man, but when he is a recter he gets fuller and can preach longer cermons and becums a good man."

Explicit.

"This is an age of steel," said the after-dinner speaker.

"Permit me to suggest," interrupted the chairman, courteously, "that for the benefit of the reporters present you spell that last word."

COFFEE EYES.

It Acts Slowly But Frequently Produces Blindness.

The curious effect of slow daily poisoning and the gradual building in of disease as a result, is shown in numbers of cases where the eyes are affected by coffee.

A case in point will illustrate:

A lady in Oswego, Mont., experienced a slow but sure disease settling upon her eyes in the form of increasing weakness and shooting pains with wavy, dancing lines of light, so vivid that nothing else could be seen for minutes at a time.

She says:

"This gradual failure of sight alarmed me and I naturally began a very earnest quest for the cause. About this time I was told that coffee poisoning sometimes took that form, and while I didn't believe that coffee was the cause of my trouble, I concluded to quit it and see.

"I took up Postum Food Coffee in spite of the jokes of Husband whose experience with one cup at a neighbor's was unsatisfactory. Well, I made Postum strictly according to directions, boiling it a little longer, because of our high altitude. The result was charming. I have now used Postum in place of coffee for about 3 months and my eyes are well, never paining me or showing any weakness. I know to a certainty that the cause of the trouble was coffee and the cure was in quitting it and building up the nervous system on Postum, for that was absolutely the only change I made in diet and I took no medicine.

"My nursing baby has been kept in a perfectly healthy state since I have used Postum.

"Mr. ———, a friend, discarded coffee and took on Postum to see if he could be rid of his dyspepsia and frequent headaches. The change produced a most remarkable improvement quickly."

"There's a Reason." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The Rubbish

One of us begs with a palsied hand; one of us deals in gems and gold,
One of us thinks this life a game; one of us toils for wages low.
But in the end it is all the same; into the dustman's bin we go.

But in the end it is all the same; into the dustman's bin we go.

His Rival Traits

By Harry Lilly

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Chester Jones, "Dumps," his intimates called him, was the victim of a temperamental peculiarity in which two opposite qualities were evenly balanced. Jones' mental condition was that of a kingdom ruled by warring rivals, neither of whom was strong enough to gain a final victory over the other.

Light-heartedness of so volatile a quality that it led him into many foolish excesses, was his inheritance from his father, "Tripper" Jones, who, on his deathbed could not refrain from passing a joke at his approaching end. Morbidness, black and soul-withering, was the prenatal gift of his mother—one of the groaners—who always sighed at night because another day of her life had passed away, and, in the morning, lamented because of the trials that the coming day might bring.

Doubtless there are less commonplace ways than this of explaining Jones' infirmity. An astrologer would have discovered that two planets influenced his birth; one, a bright sun-kissed thing diffusing light through space; the other black, desolate, lifeless, cursed of God.

At school he was a ready pupil and a merry playmate except when the dark planet cast its shadow; then he was a blockhead and a dunce. These moods earned for him his nickname of "Dumps."

His teacher's answer to one who had inquired concerning his progress was: "He is a bright pupil when he wills to be, but when the black dog mounts his back, and that occurs very often, he is a dunce and we can do nothing with him."

Sulkiness was the diagnosis of his case and a liberal application of the rod was prescribed. This humiliation but increased his morbid humors. He developed a habit of sitting alone, brooding over his wrongs. His playmates deserted him. His teachers were his enemies, he felt. He left school far less advanced in his studies than it was reasonable to expect, bearing the reproof of his tutors, and the ill will of his fellows. On the last day of his attendance at school his morbidness vanished and he kept the school in a continual uproar; spit balls were fired surreptitiously, chewing gum was placed on the seats, and, when the teacher's back was turned, gross caricatures were drawn on the blackboard. His pranks on that day are cherished in the memories of some miscreants yet.

His religious instincts were for the beautiful and elaborate in ritual; in attendance at the services of his church he was constant, and drank in deep draughts of consolation; high aspirations came, good resolutions for the future were formed. At such times he would have suffered, if necessary, martyrdom for his faith. Then, suddenly, a morbid mood would come and black rayless doubt would reign in his bosom. He would mistrust the church. Religion would be a myth. He would doubt God. Life would be a horrid nightmare with specters who preyed on each other. He, the wretched toy of chance, hung by a thread over the abyss where nothing was but extinction. The contemplation of which almost bereft him of his reason.

Long Walks by the River Were the Forerunners of a Betrothal.

Lucia Holmes was a merry, light-hearted girl, and as amiable as she was light-hearted. Jones met her at a sociable where they vied with each other in an exchange of wit and repartee. The influence of the bright star was on Jones, and his flow of spirits almost exceeded good taste. A succession of events ensued where they were the life of the scene. The acquaintance formed thus blossomed and budded, then ripened into love. Long walks under the trees, rapturous evenings on the starlit river, were the forerunners of a betrothal.

Miss Holmes was David to his Saul and exercised his moody devil. In her society the lithesome trait of his character was in the ascendency; but when he left her presence he was doubly scourged for the measure of bliss he had enjoyed.

A stray thought, a chance look or word would plunge him into a mental hell, where he struggled for his life with the devils that tormented him. Each rival influence seemed to be striving to control his being; on the one was the possibility of happiness such as few mortals are allowed to enjoy; on the other horror, tragedy.

It was the evening before the wedding. In a few moments spent with his betrothed a vista of perfect bliss seemed to open. The bright star shone full on his soul. The spirit of his father was upon him and he reveled in his heritage. Lucia looked at him wonderingly, light-hearted as he had ever been in her presence, she had never before seen him in such a state of exaltation. His mood was contagious, and giving themselves up to the happiness of the moment they sat, hand in hand, like children and dreamed aloud of the happy future, and built castles in the land of wonderful mystery.

He took her in his arms at parting and pressed passionate kisses on her lips. She shivered in his embrace and but for his supporting arms would have fallen. It seemed to her as if a clammy thing held her fast, and the kisses he pressed on her lips were like the touch of a corpse. The premonition was gone in a moment; in his ecstatic state he did not notice it. He left her, his head erect, shoulders thrown back, a spring in his step, a song on his lips.

He passed out into the night and its shadows seemed to fall upon his soul—the dark planet claimed its victim. He entered upon the bridge. A chill air swept up from the river. The song on his lips died in an involuntary chatter. The desolate star was again ascendent and his spirit fell under its influence like mercury at the touch of cold. He sat on the parapet and looked out over the river with the myriad stars, the vestiges of fleecy clouds, the serene moon mirrored on its bosom. Then his gaze came back to the immediate scene at the foot of the bridge. The river, under the shadow cast by the bridge, was a thing of gloom and mystery, unfathomable to the eye, reflecting no light, the type of doubt, despair and the mental night that had again taken possession of his soul.

As he sat meditating, the damp atmosphere caused neuralgic pains to shoot through his head. Gloomy phantoms of despair took hold of his mind. He was no longer the light-hearted prospective bridegroom, but a thing of the gloom that was calling so insistently; the victim of a fearful force that was mastering his will. A power stronger than gravity was drawing him to the depths. He leaned farther and farther over the parapet, then, with a mighty effort, drew himself back. The blackness of night was in his soul. He leaned forward again; the attraction of the fearful thing was irresistible.

He uttered a weak despairing cry as he felt his will giving way. The parapet seemed to slip from beneath him. A heavy plunge was followed by the moaning of the waters under the arches of the bridge, then all was silent. A circular ripple emerged from the gloom and spread far out into the moonlight.

A heavy stone had become loosened by Jones' weight and had fallen into the water. Only by a frantic effort did he preserve himself from being carried with it.

Jones tremblingly made his way across the bridge. He took the center of the wagon road; he could not trust himself on the footpath with its view of the couchant river beneath. His knees smote together and his teeth chattered as he thought of the slight accident by which he had gained mastery over his morbid trait and had been saved from the sin of self-destruction.

The premonition received by Lucia had not been verified.

The bright star had prevailed.

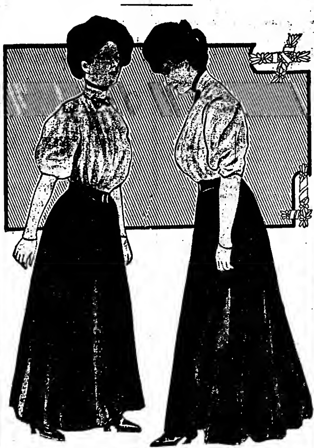
PROPER POISES



Refined, Healthful Manner of Walking.

Bad Position for Walking.

It is not always a lack of strength of the leg muscles, nor is it a lack of time that makes women shrink from long walks. In most cases the trouble can be traced to a lack of knowledge of body carriage.

In some cases it is ill-fitting shoes. Get a shoe to fit your foot. Don't fit your foot to the shoe!

In selecting footwear for street, secure that which will enable you to walk with comfort—no sloping heels, nor thin soles. Neither must they be too large.

The following exercises and suggestions will aid in attaining a proper body poise for walking as well as strengthening the leg muscles.

In Illustration No. 1 we have the proper poise of the body for rapid walking for health exercise. The head should be held well erect, but the chin should not project. The neck should remain free from tension.

To walk correctly the most important point to observe is the elevation of the chest. It is not necessary to pay especial attention to throwing the shoulders back—many carry this to extreme—simply lift your chest and leave your shoulders alone; they will take care of themselves. In lifting the chest to the utmost the lungs acquire their full capacity.

In regard to the capacity of the lungs, a few suggestions concerning the manner of breathing would be timely. The breath should never be taken with a gasp, but should be full and deep; in so doing the movements of the muscles can be felt just below the stomach, which demonstrates that when starting out for a walk the clothing should be loose, allowing free play of the abdominal and waist muscles.

Many people use the upper part of the lungs only, which is the cause of many ills.

In walking, the arms should swing easily from the shoulders, hanging lifeless at the sides, and not bending at the elbow (see Illustration No. 1); and, above all, not held tightly, with elbows pressed against the sides or thrust back of the body.

Illustration No. 2 shows the position many slow walkers assume, especially if deeply engrossed in thought. This is a wrong position at any time, for when the head is held forward so constantly it is almost impossible to straighten it, and a stoop-shouldered appearance is the result, the breathing is interfered with, and may result in other complications.

One should remember that when walking for exercise, all concentration of thought and care should be thrown aside and the head held erect to enjoy the beauty of nature, for variety of thought is as necessary as variety of motion.

DESIGNS IN PLACE CARDS.

Decorative Effects for Luncheon and Dinner Parties.

Decorative place cards for luncheons and dinners have never been offered in greater variety. Standing cards outnumber cards designed to lie flat upon the tablecloth. A new French device in metal comes for holding the cards erect.

Among the most popular of the standing cards are those representing young women and men cut out in paper doll fashion and tinted in water color. A Gibson girl holding a long flower box in her arms is one of the new cards.

Watteau and colonial figures, predominate. Dancing figures and young girls dressed as flowers make a favorite theme. For a dinner to be followed by bridge there come kings and queens sketched from playing cards.

Walking Dress in Brown and Checked Linen.

FINE TUCKED MALINE NET.

Material is Largely Taking Place of Lace and Chiffon.

For yokes, collars and cuffs fine tucked maline net is now used to no small extent, and even threatens to temporarily take the place of silk lace and chiffon in yokes and separate guimpes. This net is, of course, unusually fine and cheap, so that it is delightfully cool to wear, besides from an economical standpoint being a great advantage in that it can be replaced whenever soiled at far less expense than when a costly lace yoke must be replenished. A lining of chiffon and mousseline de soie is necessary in this thin net yoke and collar in order to keep the soft net from pulling out of shape and tearing.

There is really an astonishingly small amount of lace employed on many of the waists and gowns that are now made up for morning and afternoon wear, although, of course, lace trimming is required in almost any evening model for dinner, ball or theater. A deep cape of lace, falling from the shoulder well down over the net sleeve, is often used on a gown that has no other lace trimming of any kind, and for this purpose a fairly heavy point de venise is most popular. Indeed, the lace that is altogether the most fashionable at the moment is this point de venise, even the long popular baby Irish being forced to waive its claims to first place.

A New Mascot.

A new mascot ring has just been introduced. It is a bar of gold in which is set the tooth of a wolf or that of a badger, which, when highly polished, looks like a piece of ivory or white coral. It is a very old superstition that connects the wearing of an animal's tooth with immunity from bad luck, and the newly revived talisman will take its place among the various other mascots already worn with a historical reputation in its favor.

Trimmings.

Soutache braid as a trimming is coming back to the greatest popularity, while gold braid, so much used last fall, is still being used on the newest dresses. Ordinary lace, such as valenciennes, or mechlin, is now run with gold or silver threads or adorned with fancy stitches.

Lim Jucklin on The Country Editor's Dinner

By Opie Read

Col. Shang W. Mowlott, the editor of the country paper, while out for a day among his subscribers, halted at the house of old Limuel Jucklin. He had time to stop only a few moments, he said; a delinquent tax list demanded his attention at home.

And after sitting a long time it seemed as if he were about to go. He took up his hat and had made a motion to put it on his head when his attention was seized upon by the rattle of dishes in the dining-room, just across the broad passageway in the north section of the old log house.

But as the hours wore hungrily along he saw no signs of dinner. In no seeming fear of danger the chickens walked about the yard. And from the window, where a perfumed breeze murmured music amid the tendrils of a trumpet vine, the editor looked across a corner of the garden into a lot where in the sunshine sucking pigs, just big enough, if roasted, to hold crab apples in their mouths, were tumbling over one another.

Not with an extra effort of memory was it that the newspaper man recalled the fact that his pre-daylight breakfast had consisted mainly of sodden cakes and extreme hurry. It was fresh in his mind as he heard the "pot rack, pot rack" of a guinea hen. But with the air of vital concern he talked on the condition of the country and of foreign probabilities. He didn't load down his speculative mind with what had taken place. That would have been a matter of mere industry.

The sun lost its balance and slipped over into the afternoon, the waving vine at the window sifted a softer light, and still there was no call from pot or pan. So, at last, the editor arose and was about to put his hat on his head when there came from the dining-room the rattle of dishes. Then he hesitated, turned about as if he had just thought of a wise thing to say, and sat down.

"I reckon a cat must have run over the table," said old Lim, and Shang W. Mowlett's heart beat low in despair.

"Sorry, colonel, you didn't come a little earlier. Reckon you seen some of them pigs out there. Had one of their brothers roasted to a fall of the year brown, and—" The editor grabbed out his handkerchief and wiped his mouth. Old Lim continued: "And I had some early rose potatoes as pink-eyed as one of these—these Albumins—is that what you call 'em?"

"Albinos,' drawled the editor.

"Yes, that's it; seen one in the side show when the cirkis come to Purdy. And I had some of the best corn bread I reckon you ever saw—made out of this pearl corn. Hard! Why, you could have a grain of it set and wear it for a breastpin. Along with it all, too, was a yaller pitcher full of buttermilk brought from the spring-house, and—"

"Wait a minit and let me tell you about it. Set down," and the old man shoved the editor back into his chair. "And I do reckon I had some of the best sparrer grass that ever growd outen the ground, and these little brownish redishes that look like a rusty-coat apple. Haungry! Why, colonel, I never was haungryer in my life. And Susan, my wife, she kept of a sayin', 'Do have another help to the pig,' and—well, I eat enough to last me for a week. I reckon you are that way, too. Folks must bring you thousands of things—these here women that write; don't care much for suthin' to eat themselves and fetch it to you. You may not make as much money as a county jedge, but I take it you live off'n the fat of the land. So you think that if this here prime preacher resigns—"

"Ah, hah. And you think if he resigns and the emperor ketches cold and sneezes before breakfast there's likely to be rain in northwest township, range east. Looks that way to me, too; and I reckon I'll have to make my priparations accordin'. But, speakin' of breakfast there ain't nothin' nicer, to my notion, than a piece of roasted pig, with the brown crust on it, briled on the coals. Oh, I hear of folks that for breakfast eat hot milk and doll stuffin', but that don't touch the spot where I live. Now a right nice yeller-leg chicken, a leetle more than half grown, snatched off'n the face of the earth and fried before he knows what's the matter with him—he's some, I want to tell you. Made up your mind yit as to who is to be the next president? But I reckon you've been so busy you hain't paid much attention to it. This here social life, too, keeps you on the trot a good deal, I reckon. And dinners, too; you have to go to them; and they eat dinners now in the night, I'm told. I like 'em best when the sun gits jest about as high as it kin, but the time don't make so much difference as what they have to eat. Sorry my wife ain't at home. She could skeer up a bite for you. She got my dinner as quick as she could and hurried over to one of the neighbors, where the old maid school teacher ain't expected to live till sundown. Nearly all the women folks in the neighborhood are flockin' over there, and I reckon they'll have a good time. The old maid was engaged to be married and that makes her death all the more interestin'. Don't ricollect when old Dorb Servier died, do you? I set up with him the night afterward, and along about 12 o'clock old Aunt Judy, that worked there, skeered us up about as good a snack as I ever eat. Some seem to forgit that folks get hungry, but old Aunt Judy wan't one o' that kind. She had a way of fryin' hominy in ham gravy that would make a saint pop his mouth like a bull whip. I eat and eat—well, I jest eat till I forgot all about old Dorb in the next room. He was mighty fond of cards, and Bill Atcherson 'lowed that he was a lyin' there a waitin' for the last trump. Now, Bill, he's monst'us fond of good things to eat. Tuther day he brought me about as fine a mess of young squirrels as I ever set down to. Fried 'em in the lard out of a mast-fed hog. And that reminds me. Is there anything sweeter than a chinkapin ham? Jest take and b'il it in cider about four days old and—I tell you, then you've got suthin' to smack your mouth over."

The editor got out of his chair. "Mr. Jucklin, I've stayed too long already, and must go."

"Don't you do it. My work's putty well up and I've got nothin' to do but to sit here and talk. And as for you—you don't need to look at a watch nor the sun when it's slantin' toward the west. They say that time was made for slaves, and if you ever was a slave you were set free long ago. Sit down—just a minit. I'll give you a piece of news you can print in your paper."

And forcing the editor to sit down, he continued: "I reckon you heard of what happened over at old Groggin's. Well, Groggin's daughter, Tilly, as likely a girl as you'd meet in a day's travel, of a Sunday when folks are goin' to church, took up a notion that she was in love with a long, lank feller that come down the river on a raft and stopped at Moseley's place. Now whuther or not the logs belonged to him don't enter into the story. At any rate, he sold 'em and the first thing he done was to give a dinner in the woods, and the most urgent invite was sent to Tilly Groggin. He had seen her somewhere, no matter where, and so, along with a number of others, she went. And it was a barbecue, mind you. They roasted sheep whole and—wait a minit—and ducks, too; and he had about two barrel of shell oysters that were brought in right fresh, and they roasted them on the hot coals, and—"

"But what happened? I'm in a hurry."

"Happened? You jest wait a minit. By the time dinner was ready everybody was haungry, and the long, lank feller, he takes up a knife about as long as a scythe and begins to carve a mutton, and the brown juice began to run out and—"

"Turn me loose," exclaimed the hongry man. "I've got to go, I tell you."

"Why, howdy do, Col. Mowlett. When Limuel seen you a comin' he told me not to have dinner till he said so, and I don't know what he meant by it unless it was one of his own sort of jokes, but as you must be hungry by this time you'll please walk out."

The colonel looked at Lim and the old man shouted, and the old lady said: "Limuel, you ought to be ashamed of yourself."

I've Been Thinking

By Charles Battell Loomis

HAVE you ever heard about that business man who in advertising his particular brand of breakfast fodder increased the circulation of the paper in which he advertised a hundred-fold?

Well, it was this way. His name was Wise, and he had unlimited money to spend. He had formerly owned a sawmill and he naturally had a large quantity of sawdust on hand. It struck him that if he could buy a low-priced molasses, and could make an amalgam of molasses and sawdust and advertise it as the only nutritious food, good alike for brain, brawn, cuticle, and hair, he could make a fortune in a month or two.

So he called in an advertising man, and put him on a princely salary at once, and said:

"Go ahead. Advertise Sord Ust in any way you like, as long as you get the people's attention."

Now, the advertising man was a genius and he said to himself: "If I advertise this thing a little in every paper people will only think a little of it, but if I bend all my energies on one paper, and that a very important one, and advertise it there uniquely for a month or so, the very oddity of the thing will attract attention."

So he went to the office of the Daily Howler and said:

And the business manager told him it couldn't be done.

So the advertising man showed him what a large check he could write, and then the business manager said it was possible, and the next day Mr. Man had every page in the Daily Howler. There was not a murder, not a bit of editorial speculation, not a thing of any sort in the paper, except the name and the date and the subscription price.

And of course there was no advertisement. And that piqued curiosity.

Well, this thing happened next day and the next, and then on the editorial page was printed in very small letters,

TRY SORD UST.

Now you may well believe that subscribers began to rush in, for here was a paper that could be introduced into the most bigoted home in the land. There were no tiresome politics in it; no dreadful murders; nothing but Sord Ust.

Every one said it was the cleanest paper that had ever been issued, and more and more people subscribed to it. It got to be quite a fad. To be sure, the subscribers did not know what was going on in the world except by hearsay, but they had that much time for other things, and they were, consequently, far happier, and, reading about no murders or steamship trusts or presidential possibilities, they finally came to the conclusion that the millennium was at hand.

But, of course, the thing that made the most impression on them was this Sord Ust. They began to inquire for it in the stores and they found that no one kept it. No one had ever heard of it. It was impossible to buy a box of it anywhere because the clever advertising man had given orders to his employer to refuse to sell it for at least six months.

People did not even know whether it was a new kind of soap, or a breakfast food, or the latest thing in stove polish.

What was the result? Why, people were mad to get it. They would have it. The very idea that in a free country they were not allowed to buy anything they wanted! Was this Maine with a prohibitive law on something the people really wanted?

And all this time the editor of the Daily Howler kept on increasing his edition, and all the time Mr. Wise went on buying sawdust and cheap molasses until he had a whole county in northern New York heaped high with it and five large mills hard at work compressing it into cakes.

And at last, seemingly on account of the pressure of public opinion, but really because the advertising man said it was high time, Mr. Wise put an advertisement on the first page of the Daily Howler to the effect that Sord Ust was a breakfast food, and that all you need do to it was to pour a little hot milk on it; and if your grocer wouldn't get it for you change your grocer at once!

Was it a success?

Well, I guess.

Why, they had one long freight train stretched from the mills to New York, moving all the time on a special track and as fast as a car was unloaded at the Manhattan end a car was filled at the other end.

Motive power? Electricity, of course.

And the man became a millionaire ten times over before the year was up and before the Sord Ust had kicked up any racket in the insides of the populace.

And now the advertising man began to advertise in all the papers, and the Daily Howler came before its millions of subscribers with murders and editorials once more, and they, after their long fast, were only too glad to learn that the world was not as good as they had suspected, and the Daily Howler was a bigger success than ever.

But the editor had got the tip, and he didn't use Sord Ust on his home menu. And he's alive yet.

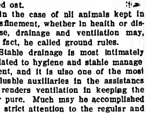
HORSE DRAINAGE STABLE.

An Arrangement Which Will Prove Very Satisfactory.

In its relation to hygiene, the subject of stable drainage is among the most important, and this, too, apart from ventilation, a subject of equal importance; for, without proper ventilation, no system of drainage will avail much. The average architect of barns and stables too often leaves the above factors out of his plans and calculations; hence, it is absolutely necessary that the breeder should understand the principles of drainage and ventilation, in order that he may be able to give advice, and also to correct errors when found. For want of this knowledge, the proper hygienic effects cannot be produced; neither can sanitary measures be fully carried out.

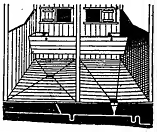


Sectional View of Stall and Cistern.

In the case of all animals kept in confinement, whether in health or disease, drainage and ventilation may, in fact, be called ground rules.

Stable drainage is most intimately related to hygiene and stable management, and it is also one of the most valuable auxiliaries in the assistance it renders ventilation in keeping the air pure. Much may be accomplished by strict attention to the regular and thorough cleaning of stables.

It is only half performed when manure is dumped outside and allowed to accumulate, heat, rot and poison the air with its fumes. It is still worse if the liquid matter of the stable is allowed to soak the floors, drip through and saturate the earth below, and become putrescent, thus giving rise to the most deadly germs.



Stable Drainage into a Cistern.

In drainage, the first necessity naturally is that the stalls must be arranged with reference to whether the animal be male or female. In the case of males, the lowest part of the stall must be between the fore and hind feet. In the case of female animals, it must be just at the rear.

For horses, says the Prairie Farmer, the floor of the stall may be cut across midway from the point where the fore and hind feet rest, with a shallow groove, say four inches wide, and descending from the sides to the center, when it ends in a grating fine enough to prevent the escape of the bedding, etc.

Here it falls into a pipe running under each stall and connecting with each, having inclination sufficient to carry away the moisture quickly and emptying on the open ground, as far away as possible from the stable; nevertheless, it is worse than folly to adopt a system of underground stable drainage unless there is an abundance of water for flushing the pipes. In the country this is difficult to obtain; hence, sewage drainage is not practiced except in cities having public water works. The illustrations will show the idea we wish to convey. One of these represents stalls arranged for gelding and for mare, as to position for gathering the liquid.

Neglect often arises from the idea generally entertained that stable emanations are not inimical to human beings. It is, however, a serious annoyance, as must be all disagreeable odors, and, then, it is very injurious to carriages, affecting the varnish, as well as impregnating the cushions with a subtle odor, and eventually rotting them.

When stable drains can be attached to a regular sewerage system, or be run into a properly ventilated wasting cesspool, there is little or no trouble about vapors and odors; but where the liquid has to drain into a closed cesspool, considerable thought and ingenuity are required.

It need hardly be told that stables ought not to be drained into the same cesspool as the horse sewerage. If there is only liquid matter to be dealt with only one cesspool is necessary and this one, to be complete, should be made with a movable pump and an air-shaft ventilation.

Much in the Feed.

The use of silage, roots, etc., will assist in making the cream come quickly. Of course, with the cream separator there is practically no difference in the time required to separate the cream.

THE CALL OF THE SOIL.

A staff contributor of a southern newspaper has taken up the question of the return to the farm of many who had forsaken it for the glitter of the city. He says: "It is a well known fact that the history of this Government shows that those men who have been most successful in life and who have left their impress upon its people and its institutions as statesmen, soldiers, financiers—have as a rule been those whose youth was spent on the farm, and it is to such as these that there comes with overmastering power THE CALL OF THE SOIL. More especially does it come with redoubled persuasiveness, greater power and sweeter pleading to the man of affairs when the clouds of financial unrest begin to darken the sky; when the cry of panic causes people to lose their wits and act like stampeded cattle; when with reason or without reason there arises before him the specter of ruin, grinning in his face and waving its gaunt arms in threatening gesticulation.

The pitiable state into which some men were brought by the recent financial flurry, which happily is now passed, suggests these reflections. Some were ruined and a very few became insane because of their losses. Two or three took their own lives.

It is when such times come that the statesman, the great financier, and the man of affairs becomes tired of the struggle. He lays down his pen, turns from his desk and listens to the CALL OF THE SOIL.

There are hundreds of cases throughout the United States of those who have money in the banks and are looking for investment in lands. No investment is better or safer. Take, for instance, the lands in Western Canada that can be bought at from $10 to $15 per acre which yield a revenue equal to and often greater than their original cost. Those lands make a certain investment. During the past two months large investments in these lands have been made, some intending to use the lands for farming purposes of their own. Others to resell to farmer friends. The agents of the Government of Canada located at different points throughout the United States have in their possession particulars of districts in which there are free homestead grants of 160 acres each accessible to railways, markets, schools, churches, &c. These are valuable lands. These agents will be pleased to give information to any desirous of securing, and will tell all about the railway rates, &c.

During the last year the exports of this country have grown greatest in the items of cars, carriages and automobiles.

PUBLIC INSPECTION INVITED
FROM 8 A.M. 4 P.M.
SATURDAYS EXCEPTED
LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO.

THE COME AND SEE SIGN

This sign is permanently attached to the front of the main building of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass.

What Does This Sign Mean?

It means that public inspection of the Laboratory and methods of doing business is honestly desired. It means that there is nothing about the business which is not "open and above-board."

It means that a permanent invitation is extended to anyone to come and verify any and all statements made in the advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Is it a purely vegetable compound made from roots and herbs—without drugs?

Come and See.

Do the women of America continually use as much of it as we are told?

Come and See.

Was there ever such a person as Lydia E. Pinkham, and is there any Mrs. Pinkham now to whom sick woman are asked to write?

Come and See.

Is the vast private correspondence with sick women conducted by women only, and are the letters kept strictly confidential?

Come and See.

Have they really got letters from over one million, one hundred thousand women correspondents?

Come and See.

Have they proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured thousands of these women?

Come and See.

This advertisement is only for doubters. The great army of women who know from their own personal experience that no medicine in the world equals Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for female ills will still go on using and being benefited by it; but the poor doubting, suffering woman must, for her own sake, be taught confidence, for she also might just as well regain her health.

ODDITIES IN SHANGHAI

By

MARSHALL P. WILDER

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

When I first arrived in Shanghai it was something of a shock to hear our honorable consul general say to the boy when sending upstairs for a friend to come down to my room, "Boy, go topside, look-see can ketchee Mr. M. Sposis have got, tellee come downside," to which the boy answered as seriously, "Can do," and disappeared.

A story is told in Shanghai of a Russian diplomat who fell in love with a charming German lady. Unfortunately neither could speak the other's language and were at a standstill as to how they were going to conduct the love-making. They could both talk pigeon English, however, and fell back on that. When anyone in China makes a contract they say "Can putee in book," so the Russian, looking unutterable love at his fair lady, cooed softly, "My likee you—sposee you likee my, can putee in book?" To which she shyly answered, "Can do," and they were married.

I found that in point of advancement in the drama the Chinese could not be compared with the Japanese.

The stage is merely a raised platform with a row of gas lights across the front, each little jet blinking forlornly at the top of a piece of pipe that sticks bravely up for four or five inches. Another row of lights is over the stage, and at the back two curtained doorways complete the entire stage arrangements.

The play begins at seven, and shortly after that time the tables on the ground floor are fully occupied by Chinese sipping the tea that is an inevitable part of every entertainment, social call or business meeting.

One dollar, Mexican, pays the entrance fee, entitles one to a place at one of the tables, a program and tea all the evening. Extra refreshments, such as fruit, nuts, sweets and the ubiquitous melon seed, are charged at the rate of 20 cents a bowl.

The attendants who keep renewing the tea cups do so by adding hot water, never more tea, but the pinch of tea leaves in the bottom of each cup seem to possess wonderful powers of endurance.

In the balcony, that contains the best seats, for which extra charge is made, people sit by the railing, which is broadened out into a sort of table. On this they lean, and place their tea and refreshments.

The waiters walk about on a narrow platform outside of the balcony rail, dispensing the hot water and eatables, occasionally passing around napkins scalding hot with steam, that are considered very refreshing for wiping the hands and face.

Chinamen and their wives attend the theater together, the only public place where a man is seen with his wife. She is always spoken of by him as "my little stay-at-home," when he doesn't politely refer to her as "my dull thorn" or "my stupid one."

He Prances in Curvetting Handsomely.

I saw one Chinese lady, richly dressed and thickly painted, sitting demurely beside her imposing looking husband. She was smoking a beautiful gold water pipe that my Chinese friend assured me cost no less than $300 in gold, or nearly $600 Mexican.

A strange distinction is made by serving with special cups women who are notorious. The attendants are supposed to know them all, and when they come in attended by their Chinese gallants, instead of receiving their tea in the flowered cups that everyone else has, they are served in cups of plain green china.

The play is well under way when we enter, and painted and gorgeously robed actors are shrieking (apparently out of the top of their heads) in falsetto voices.

The progress of the play is highly amusing to a foreigner, for, there being no curtain, the action is never interrupted even though the stage hands are on the stage quite as much as the actors. This seems at first rather a useless performance, but after awhile one realizes that if an actor didn't give some idea of who he was, and what he intended to do, it would be difficult to pick him out and follow his performance amid the confusion and bustle of stage hands arranging or removing properties and make-believe scenic effects.

Though there is no scenery there are crude attempts at properties. For instance, a piece of muslin laid down to represent a river; a curtain hung from two bamboo poles held by coolies is a temple gate; draped chairs and tables are rocks and mountains, and a boat is made of two chairs with a bit of cloth stretched between.

When an actor is supposed to enter on horseback he prances in, curvetting handsomely. The whole performance is singularly reminiscent of childish days, when "let's pretend" turned everything to exciting realities.

When the actor has informed the audience what he is going to do he retires, and then makes his proper entrance, going through all the details as he has promised them. As he climbs over the mountains, or gets out of his boat, the stage hands quickly remove them, or, should he enter the temple gate, it immediately walks off, for its usefulness is over, and it must give way to the next scenic representation, which will be arranged as the need for it arises.

Tells Just What He is Going to Do.

When an actor dies or is slain in combat he has a most impressive death scene, wriggling all over the stage, to the great delight of the audience, who do not seem to perceive any incongruity when he gets up, after he is thoroughly dead, even to the last little shiver, and calmly walks off.

There are no actresses, men assuming every part. When they make up for women they wear wigs and put blocks of wood under their feet to counterfeit the proper walk of ladies swaying along on their "Golden Lilies," as the Chinese admiringly style the dreadful little hoof-like feet a Chinese woman spends years of torture in obtaining.

There are numerous traveling theatrical companies in China, and these generally pitch their tents in the temple courts, thus affording the people opportunity to kill two birds with one stone and combine amusement with religion.

If one can endure a Chinese theater until the end of the performance, the deafening orchestra, and the falsetto voices, he will find that two ushers come to the front of the stage and announce that the play is finished. Chinese plays never end in any culminating climax, indicating to the people that all is ended, so this announcement is really necessary.

The plays generally abound in preposterous heroes and characters, though occasionally a scene of home life will be represented, giving a foreigner an insight into customs, absolutely unattainable in any other way.

But with their faces painted out of all human semblance, their exaggerated and unnatural voices, walk and manner, together with a constant jumble of properties and stage hands, with their feeble make-believes, combine in producing a most amusing and absurd ensemble.

We were not altogether sorry that we had endured unto the end, though the boredom was beyond anything I can remember. We kept our seats, mentally classing ourselves with the caller who, with a winning smile, said to the little girl who occupied the study while her father, an eminent literary man, was at dinner:

"I suppose, my dear, that you assist your papa by entertaining the bores?"

"Yes, sir," replied the little girl, gravely, "please be seated."

Here they use weapons of a pattern as ancient as the first Crusaders, spears with triple points and battle axes on long poles. A row of soldiers armed with these antique curios stand behind a row squatting on their heels and armed with rifles of the vintage of the American civil war. In front of these a third row of men lie flat like sharpshooters, also armed with the same venerable firearms.

When the word of command is given they "make ready" and "take aim," but at the word "fire!" not a trigger is pulled, each man says "boom!" with that sublime indifference to the ridiculous and childlike faith in make-believe that distinguishes the theaters.

When an officer was asked why such a performance was allowed he said it kept the men busy and under discipline and didn't waste powder.

To see a whole company of men go through this absurd performance again and again as soberly and conscientiously as if really shooting is the most excruciatingly funny thing to be seen in China, compared to which the theater is a poor second.

MAKING A WINNING

SELF-CONFIDENCE IMPORTANT FACTOR TO SUCCESS.

DANGER IN DIFFIDENCE

One Cannot Ignore Responsibility and Gain Prominence in Any Vocation Chosen—Talent and Energy Essential.

In the struggle to succeed many fall by the wayside. The goal of success is not for the one who cares not to assume responsibility. Neither is it to be attained by him who is ill equipped and recklessly plunges into duties that he cannot perform.

Diffidence in self is a barrier to many. A lack of confidence has been the stumbling stone that has caused brilliancy often to conceal its luster in obscurity. How many do we find filling subordinate positions in the great commercial world who have all the knowledge essential for a higher place, and perhaps are playing second fiddle to one who is inferior as to training, but whose aggressiveness and self confidence have been factors in forcing barriers aside, and allowed him to step into positions of honor and affluence?

He who would forge to the front must first know that he is mentally equipped for the position he seeks. It is not years that ripen experience. It is not age that counts in the struggle. It is brains well cultivated, and energy. It is confidence, and the power to control. Few would achieve greatness if they shirked responsibility. The young man starting out in the world should learn that if there is an opportunity offered him to advance he should grasp it. He should not be timid. Often older heads are passed over. He must not think that youthfulness is a bar to the performance of duty or to assuming positions that riper years may perhaps have been associated with. Others may smile and deride, but remember it is ability that counts, and tenacity and perseverance that wins. Authority makes easy the work.

Among those of the present who have achieved mightily and who occupy prominent places in the commercial world, and in the arts, are young men of talent and energy. The inclination of these later days is to seek the young and the energetic to fill places of responsibility. No longer is age considered the chief requirement for high places. At the heads of the corporations will be found men of no advanced years. In the great banking institutions young men will be found to be the most active forces. In the army no longer is age considered worthy of high office, but rather merit. So it is with every profession or vocation.

Accompanying other essentials should be stability of character. Too often it is found that of the ones who go to the front, while all qualities necessary for the work are in evidence, weakness of character, the inclination to soar socially and to seek recreation in ways that are vain and unworthy, causes a downfall. Our penitentiaries are filled with penitents, with men whose careers were full of promise and brightness, and who had responsibility placed upon them, but had been unfaithful to their trusts. Then it is not all in ability, in self-confidence and energy to accomplish, but it is honesty and integrity and a keen sense of right, and right doing, that assures greatest success. Without these qualities no one can expect to attain greatness. Even some of the greatest men, the ones who have been honored by positions high in governmental affairs, have had their weaknesses displayed before the world after years of prominence, and are passing declining years robbed of the honor that a higher sense of morality and justice assures.

Don't shirk responsibility; don't ignore the attainment of the knowledge essential to success, and do not forget that there is always more satisfaction in knowing that we have abided by honor and all its precepts than that we gain great fame in wealth.

BUSINESS EXPERTS.

Every Merchant Should Be One if He Intends to Meet with Success.

During recent years a number of self-styled business experts have come into existence. They are apparently the outgrowth of the advertising school. They are business-builders, men with ideas, and ready to dispense services at so much per dispense. One of the reasons why this class of experts exists is the lack of proper business education on part of merchants. Were the average retailer the well-informed man that he should be there would be little field for the business specialist. It behoves the business man these days to be in the front rank of the well-informed or he is likely to be in the front rank of bankrupts. There is hardly a middleground. One may be a plodder for a while, but it sooner or later becomes evident that the retailer or the jobber or the man in any branch of business who does not keep up to advanced methods is supplanted by some one more enterprising. It is only necessary to study the failure reports of any of the large commercial agencies and the cause of disaster can easily be discovered. It is the knowledge of these truths which encourages the business experts. But strange as it may seem, these men who are specialists and know all about how to run affairs of someone else quite often lack the ability to properly and successfully conduct business for themselves.

OUR COUNTRY PRESS.

It Is Making Progress and Is Important to Wide-Awake Advertiser.

Close estimates show that advertising in country papers has increased fully 20 per cent. the past five years. This shows that the merchants are realizing how important it is to advertise, and also shows that there is merit in the right kind of use of printers' ink, or there would be a decrease instead of a continual increase. There can be no doubt that the inroads of the mail order houses into trade in different parts of the country have aroused merchants to the necessity of more extensive advertising.

One of the things that has no doubt stimulated advertising is the practice of many manufacturers supplying dealers with electrotypes and ready prepared advertising. There can be no doubt the trade papers have been important mediums in the matter of influencing merchants to do more and better advertising. It matters not how the change has been wrought, but it is a fact that advertising patronage of the country newspaper publishers has been increased about 20 per cent. in five years. This means that the merchants are getting their eyes open, and are on the right path for the protection of their interests.

Now is the time to start at work on spring and summer advertising. There will be a heavy trade the coming seasons. The people have abundance of ready cash and they are anxious to spend some of it for things that they want. The live merchant is going to get his share of it.

He is going to get just a little more if he sets out right and does a little judicious advertising. When we say little we mean that he must use liberal space and fill it with the right kind of ideas, of attention attractors. Start in early. Take time in studying out just what you want. You should have ideas that are worth trying out, some opinions in regard to goods that you carry and want to shove. When you have carefully weighed the matter, take your printer into your confidence and tell him that he must do his best to get the ideas in the right kind of shape. Too often good advertisements fall flat because the printer has no knowledge or lacks the means of setting up an attractive advertisement. It will pay the liberal advertiser to adopt the methods the great concerns in the cities follow. Have a certain style of type to use exclusively in your advertising. If the printer is too poor to get it for you, it might be a good investment for you to secure it yourself and for your sole use. It will be different from the others, and the people will notice it. It will be a kind of advertising trade mark for you.

OUT FOR THE CASH.

Organizations Which Prey Upon the Business People as Well as Others.

Now and then comes the news of the formation of some new-fangled organization. Many of them are designed to do away with established systems of business. Most of them are schemes devised by insincere persons who think that they can make some easy money through the work. Plans proposed are of the most impractical and visionary kind. Not long since what was known as the "South Dakota" plan was undertaken, and it involved a complete revolution of established business methods. It was proposed to have the backing of Standard Oil interests to the extent of $20,000,000, and with this great amount establish supply houses in large cities, issue immense catalogues with the names of merchants who would use them, and supply all these merchants with the goods listed. It was a brilliant scheme. Should such a plan become operative and successful, it would be the building up of a mammoth monopoly to fight the retailers of the land or compel them to become merely agents of the concern. There is only one way to fight the trade-away-from-home evil, and that is by educating the people to the fact that the system is wrong, is unjust and contrary to economic laws; that the farmer and the laborer who patronize other than home enterprises is working against his own interests. This is a tedious process. It is an expensive thing to do, and the only way it can be done is by the liberal use of printer's ink, by utilizing the home papers that are so deeply interested in the building up of the home town and community as the merchants, the bankers and as the farmers should be.

Our Common Protector.

Did you ever think that the government is a great obliterator of prize schemes, premium games, adulterated foods, etc.? It surely is, and the time is not far off when it will take a hand in the methods of selling goods, and let it be hoped cut out such schemes as coupons and the premiums in general. Fraud one way is just as bad as fraud some other way. The lottery principle involves the plan of making a great majority contribute toward the payment of sums to a mighty small minority. The average premium scheme works with more certainty. It means that all the users of goods with which premiums are given must contribute towards paying for prizes which only about 30 or 40 per cent. of the users of the goods receive. There are two ways of heading off the premium deal: One is to educate the merchants and the consumers to the truth that the premium racket is a plan that works against their interests, and the other is to have the government prohibit the plan. The former is a hard proposition to handle, and perhaps the latter is equally so, but it is more certain and would be more effective.

GRAND OLD MAN OF BASEBALL

Charles A. Comiskey, president and owner of the Chicago American League team, better known as the "White Sox."

YOUNGSTERS TAKE CHANCES IN RETURNING CONTRACTS

With all the hold-out talk going the rounds when the training season is on each spring it is rather interesting to note the attitude of some of the younger men who are just breaking into baseball. A lot of youngsters return their unsigned contracts, believing that they will show so good in spring training that the anxious magnates will hasten to hand them a larger stipend.

This is about the queerest line of reasoning to be found among the many queer things in baseball. If the youngster fails to make good he will be "farmed" to some minor league club and will have to arrive at his own terms. If he signed with the major league club at once he would be assured of at least something like $300 per month, figuring his yearly stipend on a five-months' basis.

The major league clubs which tender contracts to men who were drafted usually offer them about $1,800 for the season. The youngsters are taken south if they look good enough, and after seeing them labor for a month or six weeks the managers decide who shall be retained and who shall be relegated to the minors.

Providing the youngster does not show he is passed out to some class A organization and that club must give him the salary called for in his original contract with the major league club. If he fails to sign and is turned over to the minors he must hook up at whatever terms the team to which he goes offers. Thus it behooves the youngster to get in out of the wet early.

The average young man coming in from the minor leagues has some peculiar notions of his own worth. Most of them think that they showed so much in the minors that they should get fat salaries in the big leagues at the start. Needless to say, this idea is not shared by the big league owners.

When a major league club goes out to secure players in the autumn by draft it has to dig down for a $500 draft price. That money is a gamble pure and simple. Maybe the club will get return for it in securing a promising youngster and maybe the minor league phenom will fall flat in faster company. Then, there is always a chance that the youth will sign up at a good salary and have to be farmed. If no class A club wants him he must go to Class B and sometimes to Class C. Having agreed to give him so much money for a certain season, the major league club must see that he gets it. If it is impossible to place him at $300 per month, then the club must make up the difference. That is likely to cost some coin.

Then there is another class of aspiring athletes who consider their first chance in the major league is a step upward in their profession, a means of breaking into something good. Such fellows usually are willing to accept a reasonable salary the first season knowing that if they make good the magnates will come across with more money the second season.

Summers Sure to Be a Tiger.

Pitcher Johnny Summers' great slow ball has made a distinct hit with Hughey Jennings. It is practically certain that the Indianapolis recruit will stay with the team. He is as promising a youngster as has been picked up by Detroit in recent years. Jennings hopes to use him regularly.

WINTER TRAINING LEAGUE IN FLORIDA IS PLANNED

Scheme to Give Youngsters Thorough Tryout While State Would Have Good League.

While the Cincinnati Reds were training at Jacksonville recently the active mind of Frank Bancroft devised a plan for early spring training which is worth of consideration. They want a winter league in Florida and a six-club organization could easily be formed to include St. Augustine, Ormond, Seabreeze, Orlando, Palm Beach and Miami. The only trouble would be to get players of class enough to put up first-class ball, because large salaries cannot be paid in the small towns which would compose the circuit. Banny has a scheme which will obviate this difficulty. This is his idea, as expressed by himself: "The American league clubs are closely affiliated with the Southern league teams for purposes of spring practice. The National league would be wise to seize upon Florida for a training camp. Now every club takes a large number of youngsters south each year to try them out, and a large majority of the recruits fail to make good. My idea is for all the National league teams to send their purchased and drafted players to Florida in January. There would be enough of them to form six clubs and fill up the East Coast league, which is about to be organized. The youngsters would play for two months in the delightful climate, and by the time the National league clubs were ready to go south with their veteran players each manager could have secured a line on the merits of his young players. Those who would not do could be turned back to the minor leagues at once, while the few who showed major league ability could join their respective clubs and take their lessons in team work. I would suggest that each club pay its recruits a nominal salary of, say, $25 a month while they are playing in the winter league, and that the Florida towns pay all the players' necessary expenses. This plan would give Florida good baseball all winter, would enable the young players to report in perfect condition after a pleasant winter and would save the major league managers from a great deal of tiresome work in trying out their recruits."

Defeat for "Russian Lion."

Fully 10,000 persons witnessed at Chicago the other night the decisive defeat of George Hackenschmidt, the "Russian Lion," when after more than two hours of "heavy" finessing Hack quit and surrendered his title of world champion mat artist to Frank Gotch of Iowa, formerly champion of America. Unable throughout the long route to make use of his much-vaunted strength, the beginning of the end appeared following a mix-up, in which the Iowan seized him from behind, picked him up bodily and threw the mighty lion to the mat—and then the toe-hold. Hack worked hard to regain his feet, but Gotch twisted his toe, at the same time pumping his stomach, and the lion was tamed without a fall. Gotch was then awarded the match and the world's championship.

Radtke to Ride in Russia.

M. Lazareff, one of the most prominent representatives of the Russian turf, who last year won the Russian Derby, has engaged Herman Radtke, American jockey, to ride his horses in St. Petersburg. M. Lazareff also maintains a stable at Moscow, where another American, Wingfield, is the principal jockey.

Information and Gossip Picked Up Here and There in Washington.

Cultured Indian Guests of Senator

WASHINGTON.—Senator Warren of Wyoming excited the wonderment of his colleagues the other day by taking with him to lunch in the senate restaurant a party of Indians belonging to the tribe of the Arapahoes and the Shoshones. The red men were in Washington transacting business with the interior department and paying their respects to the great white father at the executive mansion, as well as to his prospective successor across the way in the war department.

P[illegible] that the Indians are taking on the ways of civilization was to be seen at Warren's lunch function. Instead of calling for jerked beef and bear meat the feathered and blanketed warriors partook of sn[illegible]ls and pie. What is more, they ate pie with forks, which is more than can [illegible] said for every white person that appears at the senate refectory. And they used napkins as they should be used and didn't mistake them for handkerchiefs or for bibs. They partook of consomme and mock turtle, and even showed a familiarity with the use of the soup spoon that is unknown to many of their white brethren.

Great was the astonishment of persons who observed them to see that they seemed to be on terms of good acquaintance with the menu card of the pale face. Little Wolf, the aged chief of the Arapahoes, who is said to be well toward a hundred years old, and whose countenance is withered and wizened, wasn't a bit abashed and went through his part of the performance with as much ease and grace as if he had been a debutante fresh from finishing school at pink tea.

Some of those that saw what happened wondered if the Arapahoes and Shoshones all are as polished as the party with Senator Warren. Just think of one of Fenimore Cooper's Indians eating pie and salad, calling for consomme and using a napkin and a fork! It was divulged, however, that most of those in Senator Warren's party had been Carlisle students, and had not spent all their lives in the tepee and on the plains.

Pages Ca[illegible] Sneezing Fit in House

THE business of the house was moving along with impressive dignity the other day when Representative "Cy" Sulloway, rising to address the speaker, began to assume that statesmanlike attitude which generally provokes whispers of admiration in the visitors' gallery.

But on this occasion he did not attain the pose. Just as he reached the left foot forward movement, the inner points of his eyebrows went up like those of a Gibson girl, the corners of his mouth were drawn down in the style affected by heathen images, and after a moment of painful hesitation, he let go a mighty sneeze.

A ripple of laughter swept over the house, and even Speaker Cannon, as the embarrassed Mr. Sulloway sat down, smiled the superior smile of one indulgent of human weaknesses.

Another member rose, but no one paid any particular attention to him, for the eyes of the house were fixed on Representative Murdock, who, in evident distress of mind, had pranced out into the aisle, where, after a moment devoted to cutting kittenish capers, he drew his features into a Buddhalike grimance, leaned over as though looking for something on the floor, spread out his arms like the protecting wings of a mother hen and also sneezed.

This time the speaker did not unbend. He cast a frosty glance at the unfortunate representative, brought down his gavel with a smart tap that focused all eyes on himself and sat with compressed lips.

Then, as the house watched, came the change. The speaker's features relaxed like the breaking up of harbor ice, his nether lip protruded as though he were about to break into a fit of peevish tears, the hand holding the gavel went high in air and with tightly closed eyes he sat in this remarkable condition while one could count ten. Then, as the gavel smote the desk for emphasis, Speaker Cannon sneezed, too.

From all parts of the house followed more sneezes, first an irregular fire, but finally volleys. The sergeant-at-arms began a gumshoe expedition. Behind a door he found two grinning pages industriously puffing sneeze powder through a crack into the room occupied by the lawmakers. The fate of the evildoers has not yet been determined.

"Milk Tops" Buy White House Roses

THE departure of Quentin Roosevelt on his southern trip solved the mystery of the Force school. Throughout the winter one of the boys in the class of children about Quentin's age has been lavishing hothouse blossoms on his teacher.

Repeated inquiries brought out only the fact that the flowers had been given to the youthful donor. Quentin left the city and simultaneously the daily floral gift failed to make its appearance. Now it transpires that the flowers came from the White House conservatory.

Quentin and the boy had made a bargain. The president's son was to furnish a stipulated number of blossoms each day in return for a lot of "milk tops" which is schoolboy vernacular for the disks of pasteboard which milk dealers use in the tops of milk bottles.

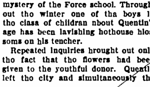
Quentin's friendship with the head gardener at the White House made the acquiring of a small bouquet each day no difficult matter, so the bargain was struck and everybody was happy.

Younger Men Rapidly Filling Senate



THE proportion of young men in the senate is growing rapidly. The number of old-timers is dwindling steadily. Recent months have removed two of the oldest of the old-timers, Senators Morgan and Whyte. While Senator Pettus was of advanced age, he was not old in point of senate service, so that he can hardly be considered in this connection.

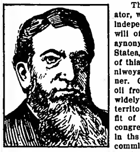
But seven senators have served for three terms, or a period equivalent to three terms. They are Senators Allison; Hale, of Maine; Frye, of Maine; Aldrich, of Rhode Island; Cullom, of Illinois; Teller, of Colorado, and Daniel, of Virginia. Senator Allison entered the senate March 4, 1873, and is now in his thirty-sixth year of senate service. Senator Hale began March 4, 1881; Senator Frye, March 15, 1881; Senator Aldrich, October 5, 1881; Senator Cullom, March 4, 1883; Senator Teller, March 4, 1885, and Senator Daniel, March 4, 1887.

Senator Allison is past 79, Senator Hale is nearly 72, Senator Frye will be 77 in September, Senator Aldrich is 66, Senator Cullom will be 79 next December, Senator Teller will be 78 in May and Senator Daniel will be 66 next September. Both in years and length of service, Senator Allison is the dean of the senate. Senator Cullom, of Illinois, however, is less than a year younger than he, and Senator Teller is younger by only 14 months.

Within a year Senator Teller will end his term, and will quit the senate, and this will still further deplete the ranks of the old-timers, while the question whether Senator Allison is to return is still unsettled, and will not be determined until the Iowa primaries in June.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

SWORN ENEMY OF OIL TRUST



Thomas W. Phillips, the millionaire oil operator, whose home is in Newcastle, Pa., is the one independent producer who never bowed to the will of the Standard Oil octopus. His name is synonymous with the oil industry of the United States, and always he has been the implacable foe of this gigantic trust, fighting it in the open, and always in a quiet, unostentatious and telling manner. Obtaining wealth through the flow of golden oil from the depths of mother earth, he became widely and popularly known over a vast area of territory and was forced into politics to the benefit of the whole country. After his election to congress his greatest achievement was aiding in the passing of the law creating an industrial commission to which was due the establishment of the department of labor and commerce, and the granting of so drastic powers to the bureau of corporations that it was enabled to expose the iniquitous system of rebates which are now being prosecuted in the courts.

Phillips chuckled later when Judge Landis took advantage of the rebate law and soaked the $29,000,000 fine on the giant octopus. He knew the Standard was receiving its solar plexus blow, for on this pet scheme it relied principally in forcing the independents to the wall.

Phillips knew no fear; neither did he know defeat. He followed the Standard Oil to various parts of the country, bought leases and producing territory before the trust representatives were fairly on the ground. He educated the farmers, especially in certain parts of Pennsylvania, to the Standard's methods of doing business, making it a hardship for the trust to get a foothold in some of the best producing pools in the state.

When oil was discovered he and his three brothers gave up farming and went to drilling wells. Twice they were ruined by the trust, but they won in the end and became wealthy.

COTTON SPECULATOR QUITS

Theodore H. Price, the veteran speculator in cotton, may be influenced only by a desire for the welfare of his child when he resolved to give up the market for a couple of years at least, and it may be merely a coincidence that his cotton commitments, amounting to thousands of bales of the May cotton, will net him a considerable loss and that he would be glad to liquidate them in any case. It is commented upon as significant in the street that Mr. Price is selling his horses and carriages, and is disposing of his country home at Tuxedo, surrounded by 12,000 acres of land. There would [illegible] no necessity for disposing of these at a sacrifice, the gossips say, if he was merely going to pass two years on the coast of Maine.

If Mr. Price has deserted the market on account of his heavy losses, it will be the first time he has shown himself so devoid of nerve. When, as head of the firm of Price, McCormick & Co., he was carrying on a heavy cotton corner he discovered that he was being betrayed by his partners who had lost courage and had quietly stepped from under, leaving him in the lurch. The firm failed for $13,000,000. Price, instead of creeping into a corner and blowing his brains out, shook off his partners, returned to the market and within a year had paid off all the debts of the house and made three millions besides.

TAWNEY ONCE AN ACTOR

Congressman James A. Tawney of Minnesota, chairman of the house committee on appropriations, is said to have a sense of humor about the size of a box of safety matches. He was regretting that he had not stuck to one of the two trades in which he had been successful and made money—blacksmithing and the stage—instead of going into politics, when some of his colleagues asked him for a spiel. He said:

"I was just trying to think which one of that fellow Sha—Shak—Shakespeare's characters that said—let me see, what was it he said?" and Mr. Tawney wrinkled his brow fearfully.

"Oh, yes," he resumed, "I remember; it was in MacLear and—"

"In what?" yelled a listener.

"No, no," said Mr. Tawney, entirely undisturbed, "I don't mean MacLear; I was thinking of King Hambeth."

There was a loud shrieking silence for a moment, and then a member lifted his countenance out of a leather-covered sofa cushion long enough to inquire: "Don't you mean Hamlet, Jim?"

"Certainly," remarked Mr. Tawney, with considerable asperity, "that's what I meant. Anyhow, I remember that whenever I recited those famous lines from 'Hamlet' I fairly brought down the house. I remember them yet. They go:

> "'Laugh and the world laughs with you;
> Weep, and you weep alone—' and so forth.

"I tell you," resumed Mr. Tawney, "there's a whole lot of philosophy in that man Shak—"

And then they fell on him, and up to date his knowledge of Shakespeare has cost him five dinners.

LONG CHAMPION OF BRYAN

George Fred Williams of Dedham, Mass., is one of the most persistent Bryan workers in the whole country. He was with Bryan in 1896 and led the forlorn hope in Massachusetts, a state that is naturally hostile to free silver. That he would fail was what might have been expected, but Mr. Williams did not take his defeat very much to heart. As a matter of fact, he knows defeat and fears it not, and he can take it as philosophically as the peerless one himself. Three times he ran for governor of Massachusetts, and three times he was defeated, but he is still undaunted.

Undeterred by his former defeats, Mr. Williams has been trying to get the Democratic state committee to indorse Bryan this year, and he even succeeded so far as to get a resolution to that effect "presented." It was voted down by a majority of 24 to 4.

Mr. Williams' whole life has not been a failure, even from a political point of view, for he was in public life from 1889 to 1893, one term in the state legislature and one in congress. He was spoken of as the Bryanite candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination four years ago, but the movement never amounted to anything.

Mr. Williams is a lawyer, a scholar and a gentleman. After his graduation from Dartmouth he went to Germany and studied at the universities of Heidelberg and Berlin, and on his return was admitted to the bar. He has won an enviable place in his profession and has edited several law works. He is now 56 years of age.

What Is Going On in New York City Told in Interesting Manner

10,000 Men to Aid in Big Moving Job

NEW YORK.—Sightseers in lower Manhattan who have become accustomed to seeing "the biggest" skyscraper going up every little while, will now witness the biggest job of moving ever undertaken in New York or any other city.

It is the transfer of a small city of tenants to the new Hudson Terminal buildings of the McAdoo Hudson river tunnel system, and is to be done on so large a scale that special arrangements have been made with the police department to take charge of the street traffic in that locality, while the work is going on.

Enough men to make ten regiments of infantry—between 9,000 and 10,000—will be engaged, and 4,000 horses will be used to haul the 2,000 vans for moving.

For the larger corporations, such as the United States Steel Corporation, to move in, certain days have been set apart and no other concern will be allowed to approach the building during that time.

Instead of allowing each new tenant to do his own moving the company has taken entire charge of the moving, so that the only labor for the tenant is the signing of the lease.

The capacity of the Hudson Terminal buildings is about three times that of the largest office building in New York. The buildings will house more than 10,000 tenants and have about 27 acres of floor space.

There are 52 elevators in the building, and a force of men has been drilled in handling these expressly for the moving.

One of the most remarkable buildings in the lower part of New York will be the new assay office building, for the construction of which the treasury department in Washington will receive bids May 12. It will stand near the corner of Nassau and Wall streets, will be constructed of re-enforced concrete, and will cost about $400,000.

The structure's most striking feature will be its chimney, which is to overtop by many feet any building in the vicinity, and any building in New York, except the Singer building.

From the sidewalk the stack will tower 400 feet, this height being considered necessary to carry the poisonous fumes of the furnaces above any offices in the neighborhood.

Work of Public Service Commission

ON the first of April the public service commission had been in existence just nine months and it recently issued a review of its work.

In addition to perfecting the plans for the Fourth avenue (Brooklyn), subway and laying out the route of the new Broadway-Lexington avenue route in this borough, it has modified the plans for the Manhattan end of the Brooklyn subway loop, which is to connect the Brooklyn, Williamsburg and Manhattan bridges by a four-track subway so that trains coming from Brooklyn may pass through this loop and back over another bridge without switching on the Manhattan side. The contracts for this work were let by the old rapid transit commission, but by the changes made by the public service commission, the subway will be enlarged and many heavy grades avoided.

Early in its consideration of the problem the commission decided that the dimensions of the present subway should be enlarged so as to admit the operation of ordinary railroad coaches through these tunnels and accordingly in the bridge loop, as well as in the Fourth avenue plans, calculations have been based upon this idea. All future subways therefore will have at least one foot more clearance between roof and ties than the present subway.

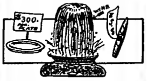
It is also pointed out by the commission that as a result of its work more express trains are operated at the present time than ever before, and that in some cases the increased service amounts as high as 60 per cent. over the number of trains and cars which were run before the commission began issuing orders.

Heinze Is Going Back to the Mines

FRITZ Augustus Heinze, shrewd and dogged as he is, has given up for the present his attempt to beat New York at its own game. He soon is going away from here where his fortune slipped away from him in a few months as a result of his spreading out from copper mining, which he understands, to banking and manipulation of the stock market. He is going back west, the scene of his former spectacular successes, to begin all over again at almost the same place as when he went there an obscure mining engineer 15 years ago on his graduation from Columbia. He expects to make arrangements satisfactory to his creditors to be able to start out with a clean slate. To stay away until he can bring back another fortune to renew his fight with the benefit of the experience gained in the loss of his first fortune is said to be his purpose.

He intends to give closer attention to the Ohio Copper Company, near Salt Lake City, in which he is interested. In addition to that corporation he is interested in properties in several different states. Whether he intends to make Butte his headquarters he declined to say. It was there he won his great triumph in February, 1906, over the Amalgamated Copper Company and the Standard Oil crowd.

Fortune Is Paid for Wonderful Feast



DINNERS at $300 a plate, though they are not common occurrences even in New York, may become so soon if the fad for giving feasts beyond the dreams of Lucullus himself continues. Dinners at $1,000 a plate may be expected, although at present $300 is the high record, as this was the cost of a dinner recently given by a young millionaire to 15 of his friends. The bill, including tips, was an even $5,000.

Since one of New York's most famous caterers has gone on record as saying that as regards food alone no person can consume more than ten dollars' worth, even in the most expensive cafe, the manner of spending $300 a plate arouses curiosity. Only a small fraction of this sum, of course, was expended for food, although a special chef was engaged for the preparation of each of the 22 courses. The remainder went for the decorations and wines, all of the latter being imported for the occasion.

The table was in the form of a large hollow square, inside of which was a large burnished copper tank filled with water. In it swam aquatic birds, ranging from swans to ducklings, while below were rare fish. The edges of this miniature lake were banked with roses and in the center a fountain spurted wine, which, falling into a special receptacle, was carried by an ingenious arrangement of pipes to the place of each guest. The particular kind of wine changed with each course but all through the dinner it literally ran like water.

The coffee served after dinner cost $22 a pound, and the cigars cost five dollars apiece.

Strangely enough, the young millionaire who gave the dinner is known as a shrewd and conservative business man who may always be found at his office by 8:30 in the morning.

Pie and Diamonds Forever.

The charge that the present acute depression in the diamond industry, both in its mining and retail phases, is due to the sudden cessation of the American demand is too well founded, it may be feared, to be disputed. America is the great market for South African diamonds. Our national appetite for diamonds has hitherto been something like an anaconda's taste for rabbits. Whether this is an indication of a high degree of national culture, associated with great wealth, remarks the Springfield Republican, it remains for our European critics to say. It is certainly true that the panic in America caused the bottom to fall directly out of the diamond market and to bring about that acute crisis which is now agitating the diamond trade in London directors' meetings, Amsterdam cutters' shops and South African mines. Viscount St. Aldwyn's hopeful remarks to his fellow-shareholders of the Bank of Africa seem to have been based entirely upon the assumption that, with business recovery in the United States, "the natural appetite of American women for diamonds" will again "triumph," and then the diamond market will be as good as ever. That seems reasonable, no doubt. Pie for the American man, diamonds for the American woman! We will have them or die.

A Fleet Without a Base.

When the "bottle fleet" starts across the Pacific and reaches the Hawaiian Islands it ought to find Pearl Harbor a fortified navy yard for repairs. Not a ship can be repaired there. At Pago Pago and Guam there should be fortified coal depots, but these are wanting, after more than ten years' control and known need. In the Philippines there is not a dry dock which can take in the larger battleships and no repair shops adequate to the fleet. Neither the floating dry dock there nor the repair shops are protected by fortifications. From the time the fleet leaves San Francisco until it enters New York, if the battleships are docked it will be under another flag. If they are repaired it will be in the friendly navy yards of other powers. What would be thought of a railroad, asks the Philadelphia Press, which provided no repair shops for its locomotives when the time was certain to come when other repair shops would be closed to it? Yet this is sure to come in war to our fleet. It can cross the Pacific in peace. In war it will cross the Pacific aware that it can neither dock nor repair.

If there is anything on which Germany is reliable authority it is education. The fatherland is so devoted to promoting the intelligence of the people that illiterates in Germany are exceedingly rare. There is special force, therefore, in the announcement from Berlin that the advisability of following the example of the United States in the matter of thoroughness of technical and manual scholastic training is under consideration. This was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Pabst, director of the Leipsic teachers' seminary, and the dispatch, noting that the auditors were enthusiastic, added: "The lecturer showed moving pictures of school scenes in the United States, where, he said, the technical training of the youth attained such perfection as to be almost inconceivable." That is a tribute the significance of which no one can question. When a distinguished German teacher lauds the superiority of American educational methods the compliment is of the superlative order.

China is making progress, even if slowly in some respects. The government recently regained control of a railroad enterprise for which a concession had been granted to foreign capitalists, and will carry out the undertaking with home talent and Chinese cash. This may prove less expeditious than would be the original plan, but it shows that at last the Chinese are waking up to the value of such means of transportation. And now a petition has been put in for the government to construct a line from Peking to a point where connection will be made with the Trans-Siberian railway, which will permit direct passage from the Chinese capital to Moscow, Russia. Or, asks the Troy (N. Y.) Times, is this part of a clever Russian scheme to get access by rail to a Chinese port without going through Manchuria, where there has been some unpleasant experience?

DUC DE CHAULNES IS DEAD

HUSBAND OF THEODORA SHONTS SUCCUMBS TO HEART DISEASE.

Tragic End of Love Romance—French Nobleman Passes Away in Arms of His Wife.

Paris.—In the presence of his bride of less than three months, Emmanuel Theodore Bernard Marie d'Albert de Luynes d'Ailly, ninth duke of Chaulnes and of Picquigny, and marquis of Dangenu, died suddenly from heart failure at 11 o'clock Thursday night in his apartments in the Hotel Langham, in the Rue Boccador. The physicians summoned to attend the duke in his sudden seizure officially gave the cause of death as embolism of the heart.

The duke for years had suffered from a weak heart and for some time had been subject to fainting spells. Several times after his arrival here he consulted Dr. Henri Iscovesco in an effort to obtain relief from his ailment.

The duchess was holding the duke in her arms when he expired. She was overcome by grief and could not be persuaded by some of her American friends, who visited the apartment, to leave the bedside of her dead husband and kept vigil there throughout the night.

The duke and duchess, who was Miss Theodora Shonts, youngest daughter of Theodore P. Shonts of New York, were married in New York February 16 of this year. The wedding was a brilliant social function and the end of the brief honeymoon was sudden and tragic. Since the arrival of the couple here a month ago they had lived comparatively quietly at the Hotel Langham, taking an occasional automobile ride in the afternoon and in the evening dining with intimate friends or going to the theater.

FOUR MINERS DIE; 100 ESCAPE.

Explosion in Shaft at Ellsworth, Pa., Almost a Catastrophe.

Pittsburg, Pa. — Four men were killed, three seriously injured and 100 others had a narrow escape from death Thursday when an explosion occurred in mine No. 1 of the Ellsworth Collieries Company at Ellsworth, Pa., Washington county. The dead are foreigners. Their bodies were mangled and badly burned. It is supposed the accident resulted from an accumulation of gas in a new entry becoming ignited in some manner at present unknown.

Deputy Mine Inspector J. W. Louthitt arrived at Ellsworth late Thursday afternoon, where he is making a complete investigation. Unusual presence of mind is said to be responsible for about 100 miners escaping from the mine. Although the concussion threw them to the ground, all retained their composure and after great difficulty reached the surface.

Crime of a Jealous Man.

Belvidere, Ill.—Maddened by the knowledge that another man was paying attention to his sweetheart, Mouris Bengston Thursday morning shot Miss Sigrid Appleholm, probably mortally wounding her. Rushing from the house into the highway, he then put a bullet through his heart.

Oldest Man in Canada Dies.

Winnipeg, Man.—John McNabb, the oldest man in Canada, died on the shores of Lake Manitoba. He was born in western Canada in 1800 and would have been 108 years old in August. He had been in the employ of the Hudson Bay company from boyhood.

Miners to Vote on Strike.

Springfield, Ill.—The coal miners and operators of Illinois have reached the parting of the ways, so far as the joint scale committee is concerned, in the settlement of the wage scale, and it is now up to the rank and file of the united workers of the state to determine by referendum whether a strike shall be ordered to compel the Illinois Coal Operators' association to pay the wages of shot firers employed in the mines. This action was determined upon by the miners Friday afternoon.

EX-BRITISH PREMIER DEAD.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman Passes Away at London Home.

London.—Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, former British premier, died Wednesday at his official residence, 10 Downing street. The end was peaceful.

The death of Sir Henry after a lingering illness of more than two months did not come as a surprise. Although the doctors' bulletins had not declared his condition critical, that fact was perfectly understood and the public had been expecting the announcement of his death at any hour during the past fortnight.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman was born September 7, 1836. He was the youngest son of the late Sir James Campbell of Strecathro, Forfarshire, some time lord provost of Glasgow. He assumed the additional name under the will of his maternal uncle, the late Henry Bannerman of Hunton Court, Kent, who bequeathed to him a large estate.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman.

For nearly 40 years he sat for the same seat—the Stirling burghs—and his record of office goes back to 1871, when he was financial secretary to the war office, which post he held a second time from 1880 to 1882.

Sir Henry became premier in 1905, and the election of that year gave him the largest majority ever given a British premier.

During his term as premier, as, indeed, throughout his entire life, Sir Henry showed a dogged determination that won him many adherents and countless admirers.

MINNESOTA LAWYER SUSPENDED

Capt. Hart Disciplined for Criticising the Supreme Court.

St. Paul, Minn.—A special supreme court appointed by Gov. Johnson, consisting of five district judges of the state, Friday rendered a decision suspending Capt. Francis B. Hart, a Minneapolis attorney, from practicing as an attorney and counsellor-at-law in any of the courts of Minnesota for a period of six months. The charges against Hart, upon which petition for his disbarment was based, arose from his letters to Gov. Johnson and Chief Justice Start of the supreme court in December last, passing severe criticism upon the supreme body regarding three cases decided by that body in which he was counsel for the defeated parties.

Dynamite Shatters Town.

Eagle River, Wis.—Six hundred pounds of dynamite in a burning warehouse, 400 feet from the business section of this city, exploded Friday. Six business buildings were wrecked. Fronts of other buildings were blown in and all of the structures are partly demolished. No one was killed in the explosion. The damage is estimated at $15,000.

England Keeps Famous Flag.

London.—The flag of the American frigate Chesapeake, which was taken by H. M. Shannon June 1, 1813, and which recently was sold at auction in this city, has been presented to the Royal United Service museum by William Waldorf Astor. This is the first intimation that Mr. Astor was the purchaser of the flag, though it was announced at the auction that the agent who secured the trophy was acting on behalf of an American. Mr. Astor also gave the museum the famous bugle of Balaclava.

WIND WORKS HAVOC

TORNADO IN LOUISIANA, ALABAMA AND MISSISSIPPI.

ABOUT 225 ARE KILLED

Atlanta, Ga.—A wind of cyclonic proportions swept over portions of Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama late Friday, leaving a trail of dead and injured. The number of killed is estimated at about 225 and the number of injured at over 800, with many portions of the afflicted districts to hear from.

Many of the dead are negroes. Perhaps a dozen white persons were caught in falling buildings and either fatally injured or so seriously disabled as to require medical attention.

The loss of life was chiefly in the quarters of colored persons, where the wind destroyed their cabins, burying the occupants in the debris, or in the farming sections of the country, where trees were uprooted, telegraph and telephone poles torn up and general destruction was wrought.

Many Small Towns Wrecked.

In Louisiana it is estimated that a score of small towns were destroyed or partially wrecked. They include Amite City, Arcadia and Independence. Belle Grove, Melton, Lorman, Pine Ridge, Quitman Landing, Fairchilds Creek, Purvis and Lumberton, Miss., are reported seriously damaged by the storm.

In Alabama, Dora was the chief sufferer. This town is also known as Bergen. Four or more persons were killed, among them the wife and daughter of Section Master Moore. Fifty persons at the lowest estimate were injured. Those most seriously hurt were carried to hospitals in Birmingham, Ala. One woman, a Mrs. McCully, died on the train. Two other members of this family were seriously injured.

At Bergen cars were blown from the railroad tracks and considerable other property destroyed.

Alabama Town Suffers.

Reports also say that the storm struck Albertville, Ala., late in the afternoon and destroyed nearly the entire northern portion of the town. A cotton mill was blown down, the storm ranging northward, doing much destruction to life and property. An unconfirmed report from this section gives the death list as from 30 to 35 with scores of persons injured. A train was sent from Birmingham, carrying physicians and a squad of state militiamen to the district. Aid is also pouring in from all other directions.

From Meridien, Miss., comes a report that Mrs. John Minnece and her child were killed outright and John Minnece was seriously injured, while a number of other persons were hurt, and there was considerable destruction of property.

Richland and Lamourie, La., were struck by the storm and nearly a fifth of their population injured.

Winchester, Miss., Wiped Out.

Winchester, Miss., a small town, is reported wiped out, though only two persons are known to have been killed.

Natchez, Miss., reports 60 are known to be dead in the northern Louisiana storm. Hundreds of plantation cabins are reported destroyed in this section.

Three Places Destroyed.

Hattiesburg, Miss. — The towns of McCallum, Purvis and McLaurin, Miss., were practically wiped out by a storm which swept over this section Friday and it is believed that 100 persons have been killed in this section. Over 150 injured have been brought to the hospitals here for treatment and others are being brought in every hour. Every business house in Purvis and a majority of the residences were destroyed. Many families are destitute and it is estimated that $15,000 will be needed for the immediate relief of the sufferers.

Hospital Burns; Patients Saved.

Big Rapids, Mich.—Fire Tuesday afternoon destroyed Marcy hospital here, a $75,000 establishment erected 28 years ago. All of the patients and the 40 Sisters of Mercy who were in the building escaped without injury.

There were, fortunately, when the fire broke out, but 25 or 30 patients in the institution, an unusually small number. Starting apparently from a defective chimney, the fire was first discovered near the roof. It spread rapidly, but there was time enough to remove carefully all of the patients. The structure was entirely destroyed except a small addition.

Naples.—Three hundred American tourists landed here Wednesday from the White Star steamer Cretic and visited the new and imposing crater of Solfatara, near Pozzuoli, which recently has become active.

British Defeat Mohmands.

Simla.—In consequence of an attempt made by the Mohmand tribesmen to cut his lines of communication, Sir James Willcocks, the commander of the British force sent out from Peshawur against the raiding natives, attacked the enemy Friday morning with two columns, comprising all his available troops. After a sharp fight the British troops dislodged the tribesmen from their positions. The British casualties are given at 60; the losses of the Mohmands are not known.

LIQUOR LAW IS HELD VALID

ILLINOIS STATUTE UPHELD BY THE SUPREME COURT.

Local Option Measure Passed by the Legislature Last Year Is Declared Constitutional.

Springfield, Ill.—The supreme court Thursday handed down an opinion in the John McBride appeal case, holding that the local option law which was passed by the legislature last year is constitutional in every respect. The court is unanimous in its decision. Every point on which the law was attacked is gone into by the court, and no section of it but what is pronounced valid by the supreme court. The supreme court holds that the title is not defective; that the law does not interfere with interstate commerce; that it does not confiscate property, because the saloon keeper invests in furniture and fixings knowing that he is liable to have his license revoked at any time under the old law, even, and that the new law does not create any new offenses.

The higher court also holds that the United States stamp is prima facie evidence that the man is engaged in the sale of liquor; that in case of elections without notice, for which it provides, such elections, if held, would be invalid, but that this does not invalidate the act itself. The supreme court holds that the legislature may create districts like a county or township, and that if the voters in the district shall decide that intoxicating liquors shall not be sold in the district then a village or city in this district created cannot permit the sale of liquor. The sale of liquor for medicinal purposes by druggists is never regarded as the saloon business says the supreme court.

Regarding the returning of the saloon licenses creating a debt, the supreme court holds that when a man gets a saloon license and cannot use it, the municipality issuing the license is morally bound, though not before the passage of the law, legally bound, to pay it back to him.

One of the principal objections was that the law permits the legislature to delegate legislative powers to the people by permitting people in localities to adopt the law. The supreme court says that from the beginning to the end the supreme court of this state has held that to be legal.

YOUNG ROOSEVELT IN BALLOON.

Washington.—Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., with Capt. Fitzhugh Lee, the president's military aide, and Capt. Chandler of the signal corps, in charge of the experiments with army balloons, made an ascension Wednesday from this city. Shortly after the start an accident was narrowly averted by the throwing out of ballast, after which the balloon went up and began the journey in a northerly direction.

The Associated Press at 10:10 o'clock Wednesday night received the following dispatch from Capt. Chandler at Wilmington, Del.:

"Signal corps balloon landed safely four miles north of Delaware City, Del., 5:15 p. m. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., and Capt. Lee passengers. Chandler, pilot."

GEN. LINEVITCH IS DEAD.

Noted Russian Commander Succumbs to Pneumonia.

St. Petersburg.—Lieut. Gen. Linevitch, aide-de-camp to Emperor Nicholas and commander of the First Manchurian army, died from pneumonia Thursday evening. He had been ill for a little over a week, and on several occasions serious symptoms of heart failure had manifested themselves. On Tuesday he had a serious attack of heart failure, from which, however, he recovered satisfactorily, but Wednesday it was found necessary to perform an operation, after which the patient gradually became weaker.

ALTON IS DEFEATED AGAIN.

Supreme Court for Sixth Time Decides School Case.

Springfield, Ill.—For the sixth time the supreme court in the celebrated Alton school case has reversed the findings of the Madison county circuit court and remanded the case with instructions to return a verdict finding that the mayor and city council and board of education of the city of Alton are unlawfully keeping the two children of Scott Bibbs, a colored man, from attending the white school in that city nearest the Bibbs home.

This case has been in the courts for ten years and former Gov. and United States Senator John M. Palmer of this city was one of the original attorneys for Bibbs.

THE GREAT MAN'S OCCUPATION.

Nothing Very Serious in His Mind Just at That Moment.

The multi-millionaire was being shaved. As he lay back in his chair, looking upward, his grave face gave the impression that he was in deep study.

"No," said another, "he is thinking about bear raids in Wall street."

"Bet he is pondering over the rebate system," echoed a third.

"I'll ask him."

Walking over to the chair, he said politely:

"Beg your pardon, sir, but to settle an argument, would you kindly tell us what mighty question you are studying over?"

The multi-millionaire turned his lathered face around and smiled. "I was just studying two flies doing handsprings on the ceiling," he chuckled, and the trio of guessers looked so sheepish they failed to hear "Next" when it was called to them.

How I Cured Sweeny and Fistula.

"I want to tell you how I saved one of our horses that had a fistula. We had the horse doctor out and he said it was so bad that he did not think he could cure it, and did not come again. Then we tried Sloan's Liniment and it cured it up nicely.

"One day last spring I was plowing for a neighbor who had a horse with sweeny, and I told him about Sloan's Liniment and he had me get a bottle for him, and it cured his horse all right, and he goes off now like a colt.

"We had a horse that had sweeny awfully bad and we thought it was never going to be any good, but we used Sloan's Liniment and it cured it up nicely. I told another neighbor about it and he said it was the best Liniment he ever used.

"We are using Sloan's Sure Colic Cure and we think it is all right."

Easy Victory for Pat.

An Englishman, an Irishman and a Scotchman were one day arguing as to which of the three countries possessed the fastest trains.

Said the Englishman, "Well, I've been in one of our trains and the telegraph poles have been like a hedge."

"I've seen the milestones appear like tombstones," said the Scot.

"Be jabers," said Pat, "I was one day in a train in my country and we passed a field of carrots, a field of turnips, a field of parsley, one of onions and then a pond of water, and we were going so fast that I thought it was broth!"

Perversion of Type.

The Sunday school teacher was entertaining her class with what she had fondly planned to be a "social evening." To her disappointment she found that all spontaneity had been left at home with the boys' everyday clothes, and conversation dragged hopelessly until her bull terrier came into the room. He sniffed about from one shy hand of welcome to another, when suddenly a boyish voice, gruff with embarrassment, burst forth: "I had a bull pup like that oncet, but he growed up into a bloodhound."

No Occasion for It.

"My dear," said the old man to his only daughter on the morning of her wedding day, "I don't see how I am going to get along without you."

"Now, don't let that worry you, papa," replied the fair maid, as she adjusted her bridal veil. "George confessed to me last night that he hadn't enough money even to buy a second-hand stove, so instead of losing me it looks as if we were going to stay right with you."

A Gentle Hint.

"Life at best is but a gloomy prison," said the moralizing bachelor.

"So much the worse for men who deliberately choose solitary confinement," remarked the girl who had her trap set.—Bohemian.

BUILT RIGHT.

The number of persons whose ailments were such that no other food could be retained at all, is large and reports are on the increase.

"For 12 years I suffered from dyspepsia, finding no food that did not distress me," writes a Wis. lady. "I was reduced from 145 to 90 lbs., gradually growing weaker until I could leave my bed only a short while at a time, and became unable to speak aloud.

"Three years ago I was attracted by an article on Grape-Nuts and decided to try it.

"My stomach was so weak I could not take cream, but I used Grape-Nuts with milk and lime water. It helped me from the first, building up my system in a manner most astonishing to the friends who had thought my recovery impossible.

"Soon I was able to take Grape-Nuts and cream for breakfast, and lunch at night, with an egg and Grape-Nuts for dinner.

"I am now able to eat fruit, meat and nearly all vegetables for dinner, but fondly continue Grape-Nuts for breakfast and supper.

"At the time of beginning Grape-Nuts I could scarcely speak a sentence without changing words around or 'talking crooked' in some way, but my brain and nerves have become so strengthened that I no longer have that trouble." "There's a Reason." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

"Minnesota."

Mendota.—There probably is not one man in twenty good, patriotic residents of the state who can tell why Minnesota was named Minnesota and what the name really means.

"Minnesota is a Sioux Indian word, meaning 'muddy water,' 'cloudy water' or 'skytinted water.' Hennepin and La Salle saw the Minnesota river in 1680 and La Honton, Le Sueur and Carver later."

Mendota is rich in historical interest. This is the oldest town in the state, having been started in 1830. The name is an Indian word meaning in one language 'the junction of two trails' and in the Sioux tongue 'the mouth of a river.' As the Dakota Indians, a tribe of the Sioux, frequented these ports, it is believed that their meaning of the word should apply, as just above Mendota the Minnesota river enters the Mississippi. As early as 1835 Gen. H. H. Sibley had an Indian trading post here, and in 1837 erected a stone dwelling house that still stands and is in good preservation. Near by is Fort Snelling. This fort was built by Col. Josiah Snelling in 1820-23, and was named Fort Anthony, from the falls of that name. In 1824 the name was formally changed by the United States secretary of war, and was named for Col. Snelling, who erected the post.

An Easter Bonnet.

Washington.—The "Black Eagle of Minnesota" has been presented with an eagle war bonnet with authority to wear it either on or off the reservation, and so he is now a "heap big Indian" chief of the Crows. The tall and swarthy Senator Moses E. Clapp of Minnesota, chairman of the Indian committee of the senate, has often been described by his friends as "The Black Eagle of Minnesota." Whether the senator likes the appelation or not, it is evident that he is not wholly pleased with the presentation to him of a war bonnet by the Crow Indians as a manifestation of the kindly feeling toward him. He was given a great surprise by Chief Plenty Coos and his fellow tribesmen, who have been witnesses before the Indian committee for the last three weeks, when the chief marched into the committee room at the head of the band and through an interpreter phlegmatically informed the senator that the treatment that had been accorded the Indians was highly appreciated and that an appropriate gift was due the white chief of the committee.

A Brave Woman.

Plummer.—This section is ringing with praise of Mrs. A. R. Harris, wife of a Soo section foreman, who rescued her 4-year-old son from drowning in an unused well near the Harris home.

The mother was startled by her little son Clarence, who rushed in crying that Roy, aged 4, had fallen in the tank. She hurried out and looked in the railroad ditches and water barrels, and Clarence followed and pointed out the old well. She could not see the child, as he had sunk from sight.

The mother got into the well and down to the water level, a distance of about twelve feet. Just then the boy rose to the surface and she caught him by the hair. How she got out of the well with the unconscious form of her little son, she is unable to tell, and that they were not both drowned seems a miracle.

She carried the boy into the house and by rolling and artificial respiration treatment removed the water out of his lungs and stomach and he soon regained consciousness.

Improving Dairies.

St. Paul.—In order to insure better sanitary conditions in the dairies of the state and to reduce, if not stop, the importation of cattle which have not been inspected, the state live stock sanitary board will make provisions for a more strict enforcement of the laws relating to tuberculosis among cattle and attempt to secure the co-operation of cattle breeders.

These subjects were taken up at the quarterly meeting of the board, held in the old capitol. A strict enforcement of sanitary regulations in dairies was shown by statistics to work a reduction in percentage of tuberculosis among cattle. The board decided to have one of the field veterinarians inspect the dairies throughout the state and to take such steps as may be necessary to enforce strict compliance with the regulations.

NEWS NOTES.

Young America.—The livery barn with twelve horses and one cow and all the buggies, sleighs and robes, belonging to Albert Trick and O. P. May, were destroyed by fire.

Crookston.—E. A. Dunham, who is said to have passed forged checks on Crookston business men and to have been operating through northwestern Canada and to have left there after having forged $500 paper, was located by the police at St. Vincent.

Ada. — Articles of incorporation have been filed with the register of deed of the Security State bank of Borup with a capital of $10,000.

St. Peter.—A new site has been selected for the hospital for the criminal insane, which is to be made a part of the St. Peter state hospital.

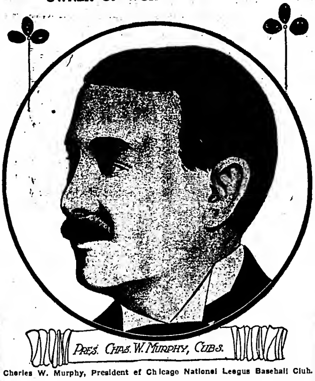
OWNER OF WORLD'S CHAMPIONS



PRES. CHAS. W. MURPHY, CUBS.

Charles W. Murphy, President of Chicago National League Baseball Club.

The Race for the Pennant

I DO not desire to pose as a prophet, but at the same time I think I can safely go on record and say to the patrons of the National league that in 1908, for the first time in a number of years, we will have a championship race of more than ordinary interest. My reason for making this statement is because, while the Chicago team, our champions, have not gone back, still the remaining seven clubs of the National league have gone forward, and are in much better condition to give an account of themselves this year than they were last year.

The trade between the New York and Boston clubs has, in my judgment, strengthened both clubs, and the work of these two teams in the south has borne out this opinion. Mathewson, the star pitcher of the New York club, gives every indication of returning to his form of 1905, and if he does this he will prove a tower of additional strength to the New York club. This same club has been particulorly fortunate in picking up some very promising material.

Manager Murray showed his class last year when he brought the Philadelphia club in third. Now, with one year's experience and better knowledge of his men, the Philadelphia club should be a contender.

The Pittsburg club has made some very good selections in acquiring new material, but, of course, the position of this club in the race of 1908 will depend largely upon Wagner's playing or laying off. As a general proposition I do not believe that any one individual should be reckoned in the makeup of a team, but Wagner occupies a unique position in baseball. He is undoubtedly the greatest ball player the National league has ever produced, and it is my judgment that he is the greatest exponent of the game to-day. But that is simply my opinion; others may differ. There can be no question, however, that he is a tower of strength to the team with which he plays.

The Cincinnati club, led by one of its own players, gives promise of better things than has been the portion of that club in the past. I look to see the Boston club, under Manager Joe Kelly, retrieve a great many of its last year's laurels. Since the advent of Manager Donovan in Brooklyn this club has steadily improved.

There is no better developer of young material than Manager McCloskey at St. Louis. The progress of building up a club there has been slow because he has had to construct an entirely new team, but he has undoubtedly gotten together a fast aggregation of young players, and the showing this team has already made in the south and in the anti-season games for the championship of St. Louis is one to give encouragement to its supporters.

On the whole, I look forward to a most interesting race, and one that I hope will not be marred by any unsportsmanlike methods.

Harry C. Pulliam

President National League.

I LOOK for a grand race in the American league this year. At least, six of the clubs appear to be evenly balanced and should fight it out to the very last. For that matter, all eight seem to be stronger than before, and it would not surprise me in the least to see them all close together at the end of the year. The public has taken more interest in the training season than in the past. I have followed the teams in the south this spring and in point of attendance the games have drawn two or three times as many spectators as formerly. The American league has always striven to present clean, high-class ball, and the same policy will be followed. Rowdy methods on the field will not be countenanced.

One thing that is sure to make the season of more than ordinary importance is the fact that a large number of new players will make their debut in the American league. Especially is this true at Boston. John I. Taylor has striven to build up a team of strength and ability out of new men.

Detroit, our pennant-holders, will have practically the same team with which they made such a splendid showing last season under the able management of Mr. Jennings. What the team accomplishes this year will depend largely on the staying qualities of its pitching staff. A first-class man has been added in Summers.

Chicago, with a better infield than ever, will doubtless keep the high place it has occupied for so long. If the pitchers hold to their standard it will be a hard team to defeat. I expect to see the White Sox among the top notchers.

Lajoie will again go after the highest honors with his Cleveland team, which, from what I have been able to judge during its spring trip, appears to be at least as strong as last year. If injuries do not follow Cleveland too persistently I look to see the team in the first flight.

New York has been much improved, and probably has the speediest team in baseball to-day. Trades have been made that have strengthened the pitching department, and rounded the team out in other particulars. Griffith and his men will be a big pennant factor.

At Philadelphia, Connie Mack has practically his 1907 team, and in addition has gathered in some likely youngsters.

The Athletics will be in the running.

At St. Louis Manager McAleer has striven hard to put a winning squad on the diamond. He has a fine collection of pitchers, and the rest of the team has been improved. At Washington Joe Cantillon will have many new faces on his team. The Nationals are determined to get out of the second division this season if possible.

We are confident of a glorious struggle in the American league this summer.

B. B. Johnson

President American League.

BORAX IN THE DAIRY

A Matter of Profitable Interest to the Farmer and Dairyman

The problem of keeping sweet all the utensils used in connection with milk and cream selling, and butter making, has been a serious one with the farmer.

He has come to realize fully that the slightest taint or hint of staleness left in a can, tin or churn may ruin a whole output; that the taint which is left is in the form of bacteria which grow and multiply in milk or butter, producing disastrous results.

The farmer has learned that hot water won't rinse away the greasy residue in dairy utensils.

He has learned that soap leaves a residue of its own which is, if anything, worse than the milk or cream residue, and it is little wonder that that there has been a constant clamor for a dairy cleanser and sweetener that will meet modern requirements.

A few of the largest creamery establishments have called experts into consultation on this problem and have with this scientific aid hit upon a product of nature which exactly fills the bill—borax.

Scientists have long known borax as a cleanser, a sweetener and an antiseptic destroyer of bacteria and germ growths. Destroys all that is harmful and promotes and preserves freshness, sweetness and purity, relieving the dairyman and dairy housewife of drudgery and of needless work and worry.

Its cheapness and value should give it first place in the necessities of every dairy.

The cow's udder is kept in a clean, healthy and smooth condition by washing it with borax and water, a tablespoonful of borax to two quarts of water.

This prevents roughness and soreness or cracking teats, which make milking time a dread to the cow and a worry to the milker.

TO MOTHERS.—A dainty book in colors, called "Jingle Book," sent free to any Mother sending name and address of her baby, and tops from one pound carton of "20 Mule Team" Package Borax, with 4c in stamps.

Charley Hitchcock, the Crookston Auctineer is to get into the race for sheriff of Polk County. There are so many candidates for this office in Polk that a few votes is liable to land a candidate in the office, and Charles had ought to hustle a few votes.

Johnson is now about out of the race for the Democratic nomination for president John found out there was other people in the U.S outside of Minnesota. Of course Minnesota republicans would rather have Bryne for their opponent than Johnson, but Nebraska republicans would rather have Johnson. We have no doubt of the ability of Taft to defeat either of them next November, but Johnson could not get as many votes througout the United States as Bryan, and there is no one better aware of this fact than the leaders of the Democratic party.

Congress has just passed a law granting a pension of $12.00 a month to all widows of soldiers of the Civial and other wars, without the necisity of their furnishing any proof of dependency which was required under the former law Under this law the Commissioner of Pensions hold that it is not necessary for a widow now receiving $8.00 a month to apply for the Increase allowed, but the same will be paid by the United States Pension Agent at the next quaterly paymen upon reciept of the voucher properly executed which is now in possession of the pensioner. Widows need only apply that have not heretofore received a pension because they were in receipt of an income in excess of $250.00 per anum. This is a mesure that will receive the hearty approval of the entire country. Tally 1 for the 60th, congress —Crookston Daily Journal.

Kipling at Work.

"I have lounged in Rudyard Kipling's den at Brattleboro, Vt., before he deserted America for England and saw him at his work. He sat at his table in a revolving chair. I had a book in my hand and said nothing unless I was spoken to, for I was enjoying a great privilege that was granted to no one else but his wife. He would write for a moment, perhaps for ten or fifteen minutes at a time. If he was writing verses he would hum very softly to himself an air which probably kept the rhythm in his mind When writing prose, he was silent, but often he would lay down his pen whirl round in his chair and chat for awhile. It might be something relating to the subject he was treating or bear no relation to it. Suddenly he would wheel back again, and his pen would fairly fly over the paper. He can easily concentrate his thought and as easily descend from cloud land to the commonplace of the day, though in his mind and on his lips nothing is ever commonplace. Some of his poems he has written when speeding in a Pullman car at the rate of sixty miles an hour."—Pacific Monthly.

Birds Shot With Water.

Shooting a humming bird with the smallest bird shot made is out of the question, for the tiniest seeds of lead would destroy his coat. The only way in which the bird can be captured for commercial purposes is to shoot him with a drop of water from a blowgun or a fine jet from a small syringe Skillfully directed, the water stuns him. He falls into a silken net and before he recovers consciousness is suspended over a cyanide jar. This must be done quickly, for if he comes to his senses before the cyanide whiffs out his life he is sure to ruin his plumage in his struggles to escape. Humming birds vary in size from specimens perhaps half as large as a sparrow to those scarcely bigger than a bee. The quickest eye cannot follow them in full flight. It is only when, though still flying furiously, they are practically motionless over flowers that the best marksman can bring them to earth.—New York Press.

Summer Excursion

It has been decided by the Board of Directors of The Red Lake River Transportation Co. to run an excursion trip up to Red Lake about June 1st. The steamer will start from Krata and it is expected that it will take about a week to make the round trip The farmers will combine business with pleasure, and will find out what the opprotunities are for buying lumber of the local mills to ship down the river for building purposes. They expect to make a saveing in the price of lumber that they need fur building, and at the same time create business for their boat. The ladies will be envited to join the excursion, as they are all unxious to see big Red Lake, that furnishes the large amount of water that flows down the Red Lake River.

The farmers are also quite anxious to make a trip of observation to the upper Red Lake River to see why it is, that the river goes down so suddely sometimes, without any apparent reason, and if there is any way to remedy it. Some are of the opinion that it is caused by logs being jamed into the river from the lake, so as to stop the water, from getting into the river.

The date of the excursion has not been set but will be early in June, and all are invited to go, until we get the boat and barges loaded.

Work is being rushed on the Kratka creamer, and they expect to be ready for business by June 1st,. Fred Haug brought up their machinery on the Dan Patch yesterday.

E.B. Lanager, of Plummer has just got in a car load of fenceing. Those that are going to build any fence this spring should call on him, and get his low prices on barb wire fenceing.

The outside work on the Highlanding Creamer is compleated, and machinery is being placed in position this week, and they will be ready to start the churs by May 15th,.

The Highlanding Creamery Association have put in a first class feed mill, which will run on certain week days to grind feed, and it will run, as its power will not depend on the "whims" of a gasoline engine.

Thoro will be a grand ball at the Kratka hall on Saturday evening May 16th. The music will be furnished by the Kolstie string band, with two violins, one Clarionet, and a bass viol. All are invited to attend.

Mr, Engelstad is clearing, and fixing up for his new residence across the river from Snobe m. He expects his first boat load of lumber to arrive Monday. His family arrived last week, and are stoping in the residance of Mr Eve, until they get their new house built. Tally one, for the first settler of the second crop.

The Radney store has been closed for the present by creditors of the firm. We have not learnd what furthur is to be done in the matter, but understand it will not be re opened. This will not be much loss to the homesteaders, as there is more stores than money in the country.

Tenderness of the Hanging Judge.

Mr. Justice Hawkins' tenderness for women prisoners was well known. He admitted it, and he had a great dislike of sentencing these poor creatures to death who had been recommended to mercy and would probably be reprieved. On one such occasion the sheriff asked if he was not going to put on the black cap.

"No," he answered. "I am not. I do not intend the poor creature to be hanged, and I am not going to frighten her to death."

Addressing her by name, he said: "Don't pay any attention to what I am going to read. No harm will be done to you. I am sure you did not know in your great trouble and sorrow what you were doing, and I will take care to represent your case so that nothing will harm you in the way of punishment."

He then mumbled over the words of the sentence of death so that the poor creature did not hear them.—London Graphic.

Faild To Land A Drink,

Two strangers walked into one of the thirst quenching parlors in Thief River Falls last week, and it was observed by the "hang ons", that one of them had one empty sleeve and the other hand in his pocket. Then one of the thirstys lined up to the bar and adressing the stranger said "I see you have lost an arm." The stranger turned around looking him squarely in the face answerd, "Lost my arm well I wonder where I lost it, as I never noticed it before." Then he paid for his two cigars and walked out

"Oh bother!" she said. "Who can be calling?"

"Say you're out," said the deceiver.

"Then say you're engaged," he urged.

A BOX OF BONBONS

By Constance Smedley and Pearl Humphrey

(Copyright.)

The box of bonbons stood on the table, and Nelly smiled importantly at it. It was a frivolous affair of white enameled wicker with a spray of pink and silver roses tied with blue ribbon to the lid; and inside were symphonies and concertos in chocolate, ranged in four large layers. Mrs. Martin, looking from Nelly to the box, as she came in, detected something in her niece's face other than a youthful taste for sweets.

"What a beautiful basket of chocolates," she said, her tone conveying a willingness to receive information.

"Yes," responded Nelly, demurely. "Sir Francis sent them to me. We were joking last night about the weather, because I wanted it to be fine for the party this afternoon, and he bet me a box of chocolates to a pair of gloves that it would be wet."

"He has lost no time in paying for this morning's sunshine," said Mrs. Martin brightly. "May I have one?"

Nelly made a little gesture of detention, and her aunt waited with her pretty hand outstretched.

"Sir Francis," began Nelly, "is very young to have achieved so much, is he not?"

Mrs. Martin withdrew her hand, in some surprise at this irrelevance.

"Sir Francis is 45, and the diplomatic world would be lost without him," she said tersely. "Why?"

"He is so pleasant as a companion," murmured Nelly. "Not at all awe inspiring. He and I get on so splendidly together, and he is so funny. Have you noticed what a lot we seem to have seen of him lately?"

"He's Too Old."

"As one of the most popular men of the day, he is naturally pleasant," returned Mrs. Martin. "Diplomacy and dining out are sister arts. I suppose he comes here because he likes the people he meets." A smile came to her lips as she looked at Nelly's profile, bent meditatively toward the chocolates.

"I am wondering," said her niece, rather suddenly, "if I ought to accept these."

"Good gracious, why not?" cried Mrs. Martin.

"Sir Francis is very well off," returned Mrs. Martin. "He can afford to do things well. It would be difficult if he were a penniless attache."

"It is not the money," said Nelly. "I was wondering if it would not look rather like encouraging him."

"To make bets?" Mrs. Martin spoke without comprehension.

"No, to come here. I should hate to seem to lead him on."

"My—dear—child!" uttered Mrs. Martin feebly. Nelly blushed.

"I can't be sure of my own mind!" she confessed. "I feel honored that he should like to talk to me so much, because, naturally, I haven't his experience of the world, or his cleverness. But he comes here so much, and I can't help seeing that he pays me more attention than is natural in an ordinary acquaintance. There is only one thing to think."

"Has it no alternative?" inquired Mrs. Martin, with a suspicion of a twinkle.

"I can think of none," said Nelly, with great dignity. "I have been wanting to speak to you about this for some time, for I really cannot make up my mind what to do."

"You don't care for him, Nelly?"

"N—no," said Nelly, with a touch of regret. "He's too old, and I shouldn't care to live abroad."

"No, you would prefer home service, I'm sure," remarked Mrs. Martin, with a smile, which quickened Nelly's pink into crimson. "But I shouldn't worry about Sir Francis, if I were you. He probably doesn't mean anything save to be friendly; in fact, I'm sure that's all."

"Ah," rejoined Nelly, rather quickly, "but you have not been with him nor heard him talk as I have. He found me reading French one day, and he was so pleased. I told him that you were such a splendid linguist that I wanted to copy you, and he said: 'Ah, that is good. I love to see women studying languages. In our service, where it should be indispensable, we often see young fellows hampered by wives who cannot speak even French fluently. I wish they all were animated by your spirit; a diplomat's wife ought to know French, German and Italian, if not Spanish.' Could anything be more pointed?" demanded Nelly.

"I'm not such a very wonderful linguist, dear," said Mrs. Martin. "My Italian is faulty, and I hardly know Spanish."

"But your French and German are quite perfect," rejoined Nelly. "Anyhow, that's what happened," she added, anxious to bring the subject back to her perplexity. "I really think I ought to send the basket back."

"You certainly must not, Nelly. It has been sent in pure friendliness, and to return it would be very rude from a girl of your age to a man like Sir Francis."

"But I could not let him propose to me," said Nelly. "And this would be a good way of showing him how I feel about it."

"That is the last thing you must do!" exclaimed Mrs. Martin, in some alarm.

"Oh, why?" asked Nelly. "He ought to know at once that I cannot encourage any hope on his part."

Mrs. Martin, to decide the matter, selected the center chocolate of the elaborately arranged top layer, and ate it with enjoyment and deliberation before answering.

"Nelly," she said then, "you're going home next week, and I hope you have had a very pleasant time with me. I have loved having you, and I hope I shall see you in Berlin next year."

"Berlin?" echoed Nelly.

"Yes, dear. Do have one of these delicious chocolates. The ones with cocoanut on are dreams. You can't send them back now that we've begun on them; but in any case you could not have done so, nor shown Sir Francis your feeling about his friendliness. Because in six weeks, just before he goes to Germany, he and I are to be very quietly married."

In her diary that night Nelly wrote:

"It seems to me that when one is related to a person, one cannot see how that person will strike outsiders. Spent the evening packing."

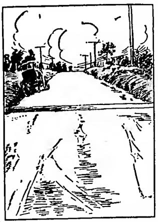
BEFORE AND AFTER DRAGGING.

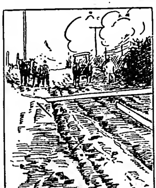
An Object Lesson as to What a Little Work Will Do.

Bad road pictures are as a rule secured when the surface is muddy, but this one was snapped when the surface was hard and dry. It shows how long a stubborn clay will stay bad. On the day of the taking of this picture the journey up or down the hill was dangerous to any vehicle in spite of the slowest and most careful driving.



A Stretch of Road That Has Been Dragged with Split-Log Drag.

On the other hand another picture shows a hill harder than that shown in first picture, so smooth that the lightest or the heaviest loaded vehicle could travel it in safety at any reasonable rate of speed. But more important than all else, the next rain will merely dampen the top of it; all but a very small proportion will run into the ditches and get away, and an hour's sun and wind will dry it.



Ruts and Pockets in a Road Before Dragging.

No ruts are here to guide the rainfall to the bridge nor are there any depressions in which the water may be detained.

The hill shown in the first picture is not so well prepared for rain. The chuck holes and pockets on its face will fill with water and remain in that condition until the wet can evaporate. And should the rain be a quick, heavy dashing one it will rush down the center of the highway, cutting the ruts deeper and adding to the concavity of its already-out-of-shape cross-section.

You will be astonished, writes D. Ward King, in Breeders' Gazette, if you will give a rutted clay hill a close examination in a comparatively dry time. Select a day when a well-dragged road is dusty. Go to the deepest rut on the neglected hill; the ridges of the rut will be baked as hard as a brick; the bottom of the rut, the wheel-tread (provided it is a much traveled road), will be nearly as hard as polished glass and will be darkly iron-stained from the friction of the iron-bound locked wheels of the loaded wagons that rubbed their way down. Now half way between the glassy polish and the brick-hard top, in the wall of the wheel-rut, insert the blade of a penknife. Without a chance putty-like clay can be found before the knife blade penetrates to the handle. Now stand back, look on the two hard surfaces at your feet, consider the moist marble in the palm of your hand and draw conclusions.

Resin Lime Mixture.

Five pounds resin, 1 pound concentrated lye, 1 pint fish oil, 5 gallons water. Prepare stock solution by melting the resin with the fish oil and one gallon of water in a kettle over a fire. Add the lye and about half the water and boil about one hour, or until the mixture will unite with the cold water. Then add slowly enough cold water to make a total of five gallons. When spraying, take one gallon of this solution and add three gallons of milk of lime, four ounces of paris green and 16 gallons of water.

Try This.

Ever try baking powder cans to hold the grain near the coops for the little chicks? The close-fitting covers will keep the contents dry during sudden showers, and the grain safe from sparrows, etc., even if the cans should be upset. By filling the cans when the morning feed is given, they are ready to use for the several feeds during the rest of the day.

HARROW YOUR WHEAT.

The Benefit to Be Derived Is Worth the Effort.

The custom of harrowing winter wheat and rye when they have been put in with a drill, as they should be, is becoming more and more prevalent every year. Many farmers are deterred from harrowing, partly because it is an innovation, a departure from their previous methods, and the conservatism of the farmer usually keeps him from adopting any method unless he is shown pretty clearly why it is a good one. Others are deterred because they think that harrowing will probably injure the wheat. Not having been accustomed to cultivate wheat, they are loath to do so. The object of this article is to show why farmers should harrow their wheat.

In many sections of the wheat country the crop is measured largely by the amount of available moisture. If the frost goes out and the spring rains come a crust is formed on top of the wheat fields. This crust gives the most favorable conditions for the evaporation of moisture. It is brought up by capillary action from far down in the soil, passes out without hindrance, and the result is that the wheat begins to show signs of drouth, often at the critical time when it is finishing up its work. Harrowing breaks up this crust; prevents the evaporation of moisture; stores it up, so to speak, for use when the wheat is heading out and forming its seed.

Furthermore, this crust covering the soil excludes the air. Wheat roots must have air as well as the leaves, although not so great an amount. This harrowing aerates the soil and gives much more thrifty growth than it would otherwise attain. Wheat needs harrowing in the spring of the year just as much as corn needs cultivating when a crust has formed over the field after a heavy rain.

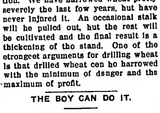
The third reason for harrowing wheat is to secure the proper depth of covering for your grass seed when sown on the wheat stubble, says Wallace's Farmer. If grass seeds are sown upon this hard crust, a portion of them will probably roll into the cracks and germinate, but on account of lack of aeration of the soil they will have a spindling growth. A large portion of them will lie on the surface of the ground or be insufficiently covered. Hence the way that will go farthest to insure a stand of clover seed is to give it covering by sowing it just before you harrow your wheat.

Don't be afraid of pulling out your wheat by harrowing if you harrow when the ground is in the right condition. We have harrowed wheat pretty severely the last few years, but have never injured it. An occasional stalk will be pulled out, but the rest will be cultivated and the final result is a thickening of the stand. One of the strongest arguments for drilling wheat is that drilled wheat can be harrowed with the minimum of danger and the maximum of profit.

THE BOY CAN DO IT.

Hoisting the Wagon Box in the Barn Made Easy.

Here is a device many farmers can make for hoisting their wagon box from the wagon. It is located in some convenient place in the barn. It consists of little more than a roller from an old binder, a large sprocket wheel placed at the end of roller at top and a smaller sprocket wheel, lower down, to which the crank is attached.

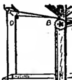


Wagon Box Hoist.

The two sprocket wheels are connected with chain and rope drawn over the roller end carried down to both ends of the box, which are placed as illustrated. This device is particularly valuable, says Prairie Farmer, because any ordinary boy will have no trouble to load and unload a very heavy wagon box or wagon rack. Such a device as this has to be used in order to fully appreciate it.

A GRAIN BAG HOLDER.

Device Easy to Make and a Great Convenience.



The upright is three and one-half feet long, and one inch thick and fifteen inches wide. The bottom plank is two feet long. The hopper is the right size to fit the bag. Hooks are screwed into the sides of the hopper or nails are driven in and filed sharp. The hooks must be just high enough so the weight of the bag will rest on the bottom board. If the hopper is too high the weight will tear the bag and if the hopper is too low you cannot fill the bag full.

The Jaded Appetite.

A jaded appetite is one of the accompaniments of spring. We get tired of salt pork, warm bread and canned goods, and long for fresh fish and something right out of the earth. Your cows have pretty much the same feeling, and the sooner you can get them a little green stuff the better they will like it.

Constant confinement in my store began to tell on my health, and I felt that I was gradually breaking down. I tried several remedies, but obtained no permanent relief until I took Peruna. I felt better immediately, and five bottles restored me to complete health."

A SINCERE RECOMMENDATION.

Mr. D. C. Prosser, Bravo, Allegan Co., Mich., writes: "Two years ago I was badly afflicted with catarrh of the stomach. I had had a run of typhoid fever, was very depleted. I could find nothing I could eat without causing distress and sour stomach. Finally I came to the conclusion that I had catarrh of the stomach and seeing Peruna advertised, began to take it. It helped me soon, and after taking three or four bottles I was entirely cured of stomach trouble, and can now eat anything."

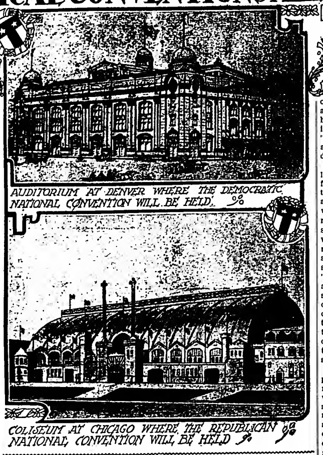
HOW POLITICAL CONVENTIONS ARE MANAGED

A PEEP BEHIND THE SCENES

BY ERNEST McGAFFEY



AUDITORIUM AT DENVER WHERE THE DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL CONVENTION WILL BE HELD.

COLISEUM AT CHICAGO WHERE THE REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION WILL BE HELD

The ordinary political convention is a collection of wild animals, whose antics are extremely amusing, but absolutely without form and void. Nothing outside of a cage full of monkeys can present such an example of futile activity. Each delegate is duly ticketed and loaded with his proper credentials and fondly imagines that he really is of some importance in the gathering; that is, he does if he is a "green hand." If he is a seasoned campaigner, he knows that he merely "represents the people," and the chairman and secretary of the convention "represent" the delegates, and the "bosses" "represent" the chairman and secretary. By means of this sliding scale of actual power it will be seen that the "bosses" represent the people!

It was my deep delight to have attended a number of political conventions. The "will of the people" stood about "deuce high" in the political deck. The will of the "bosses" was always the "ace," and it could be and was turned from the bottom or top just as the emergencies demanded.

Imagine a long, low, rakish hall, the atmosphere a wavy blue with tobacco smoke. Aisles are cut through to the platform, generally three in number, to admit of committees on this, that and the other to go forward to the platform and hand in their cut-and-dried communications. The different wards and districts are ranged about the hall, each with its particular spot to stay in, like checkers on a board before the game begins. Many of these delegates are in their shirt-sleeves, and many are talking wildly, gesticulating powerfully and in other ways molding the destinies of their country. The very few who are not smoking are choking.

On the platform are two tables, at which the chairman of the convention sits, he having been chosen by the powers that be. He is a mere puppet in their hands, understanding what they want, and at any and all times ready to carry out their wishes. The secretary is a mere echo; the assistant secretaries mere assistant echoes. Two or three highly respectable stoughton-bottles of various titles sit on the stage to deceive the unintelligent observer into the belief that things are "on the square." A pitcher of water is on the chairman's desk, for he will open the convention with a speech. In that speech he will glorify the proud history of his own party and skin, salt and nail to the political smoke-house the hide of the opposite party. This is a species of buncombe which is always indulged in.

Sometimes a convention is opened with prayer. This is something which cannot be touched on at length, for the devil himself could not conceive a more grotesque blasphemy. Most conventions are opened with political "jimmies," being burglarious aggregations, brought together for purposes of plundering men of their political rights. The chairman has his speech carefully learned by heart, and he is invariably eloquent, pungent, witty, scholarly, terse, dense, flowery and long-winded. But he finally subsides, and then, after the committees' reports and the platform are finished, and some more political red tape is gotten through with, the work of nominating candidates is begun. But before the convention has reached the point of being ready to vote there have been a number of battles fought to a finish before the various committees on credentials.

In certain wards of the cities, or certain districts in the country, there may be a dispute about some delegates, these claiming the right to represent "the people," those putting in a counter-claim for recognition. In such cases, contests are begun and the respective claims thrashed out before the committee on credentials, which have the power to review these disputes in the various districts or wards.

No one but the contestants and the committee and the other delegates are allowed in the committee rooms in these contests, it being a sort of family affair. Usually, the contests are determined according to the way the "bosses" want them to be decided, but if it doesn't matter about a vote or two, the "bosses" allow the committee to do as they please. Evidence is heard, speeches are made, and the committee picks the winner.

The "bosses" keep accurate "tab" on the number of votes they need, but are ready to achieve results by any means they consider necessary. One unseated delegate rushed madly up to a "boss" on the floor of the convention and screeched out: "What d'ye mean by throwin' me out? There ain't no contest on me at all." The "boss" looked smilingly down at the fiery face of his questioner, surmounted by its bright red covering of locks and responded easily, gracefully and most urbanely: "I don't like the color of your hair." And the delegate remained "unseated." Men were let out of their delegations for any or no reasons. The only question was to have the majority, or at least the loudest and most pugnacious minority. This latter, with the able aid of the chairman and the secretary, will enable any combination to jam through the nomination of their candidates.

Supposing, for instance, that Smith is the candidate the "bosses" want, and Jones the opposition candidate. The Seventh ward, we will say, is called on and the chairman of the delegation roars out "Fourteen votes for Jones and one for Smith." An assistant secretary repeats to the main secretary, "Fourteen votes for Smith and one for Jones," and it is so recorded. The chairman from the Seventh ward may think the vote of his delegation has been recorded properly. Sometimes, when things appear to be running too close, they will not even give the opposition candidate any votes until the "bosses'" candidate is safe. Any motion for a roll-call is "gaveled down" by the chairman, and the sergeants-at-arms, always chosen by the "bosses," are eager to eject any obstreperous patriot who begins any jargon about his "rights."

To "gavel down" a motion is simply to hammer on the table with the gavel and proclaim that a motion has been "carried," or "defeated," just as you want it to go. In this way, no matter what the majority is, the "bosses" and the chairman and secretaries can thwart the will of any convention, unless the convention splits and "a bolt" is started. To "bolt" is to leave the hall, organize a separate convention and proceed as though the other convention was not in existence.

This is a last resort, and is seldom done. Delegates are timid and they rarely have any independent action. They may fume in private, but they "take the gaff" in public. Party fealty, party cohesion, party this, that and the other weighs on them and makes them cowards. For the most part the delegates hope to get some crumbs from the party table and they fear to revolt, knowing well they will be marked men with "the organization." Oh! potent phrase, "the organization." There is the "ward organization," the "county organization," the "state organization," the "national organization," all inextricably linked and welded together, and the national committeeman can put his finger on a garbage wagon driver in a remote ward and separate him from his job if the driver doesn't do exactly as he is told. It's a beautiful system. Don't imagine that it is not perfected so far as it can be.

Occasionally some fossil of respectability, galvanized into spasmodic action by something particularly brazen on the part of the powers that run the convention, will get up from the platform, where he is supposed to be acquiescent to the program, and start the animals by a fiery diatribe against the bare-faced robbery going on under his very nose. At such a time it is really delightful to see the perfect respect in which his remarks are listened to by the chairman and the "bosses." His remarks may be punctured by cheers by the malcontents in the delegates' seats, but the "strong-arm" contingent governed by the "bosses" sits quietly until he fires his broadside. Then possibly a "boss" gets up, or the chairman gets in a happy remark or two, and there is a thunder-roll of applause from the "bosses'" gang. The respectable gentleman has simply talked for the pleasure of having his cerebellum vibrate. He might as well have recited "Mary had a little lamb."

Our ward stood eight to seven in one convention, and our chairman announced it correctly. He was an opponent of mine, but he did not try to change the vote. But when the vote was announced from the stage it was 15 for the other side. Several of us yelled "bloody murder" at the steal, but, bless you, that convention went right ahead with its business as easily as if seven men standing upright in their seats and howling "Mister Chairman; Mister Chairman," was a mere tableau and nothing that concerned the convention in the remotest degree.

By the way, convention oratory is divided into two kinds, the "turned loose" and the "squelched." The "bosses" and the chairman have their eyes on their own orators, and very little latitude is allowed the opposition "jaw-smiths." It is laughable to watch the frantic gyrations of some silver-tongued word-juggler, especially if he be a young man, who is trying to get the chairman's eye in order to let off a philippic against the chairman's tyranny. His companions may hoist him high on a chair, where he balances himself precariously while he shrieks "Meestair Chairmannnn," and froths like something stricken with hydrophobia, but the chairman goes placidly on. "Twenty-second ward, 18 for Smith" is the announcement, when in fact the announcement was just the other way. This raises a counter-irritant and the Twenty-second ward delegation goes on the war-path. But, tush, what's the use? The game goes merrily on and at last the youthful orator is let down from his pinnacle and expends his energy in loud talk in his immediate vicinity, until some low-browed gentleman advises him to "cut it out," at the same time casting a perfectly annihilating look in his direction.

The old stagers always enjoy these interludes. They smile grimly, get a fresh grip on their cigars and elevate the weeds reminiscently in a skyward angle. They keep watchful cognizance when their wards are about to be reached and, if chairmen, rise instantly at the word, shout clearly the vote and, whether it be recorded right or wrong, they settle down stoically into the attitude of mere spectators. Far be it from them to "holler" if the cards are "stacked" against them. They would do the same if they had the power. The other fellows have the whip-hand today; when it shifts, they will give their opponents the same dose. But to cavort around on the floor wailing out "Meestair Chairmannn," not for them. They are too wise to resort to such puerile foolishness.

Nothing can exceed the perfect repose which marks the proceedings as relates to the officers and head men who have it in charge. There is not a shadow of a smile on the countenances of the chairman and his assistants, and the "bosses" move around on the floor of the convention or ascend to the platform with an entirely serious and virtuous air which would indicate extreme self-sacrifice and the most absolute fairness to their opponents.

But once the business is concluded, over the cigars and cocktails these genial gentlemen will unbend and relate delightedly and with rare humor the amusing comedies played on the convention floor. They have remembered the very voices and gestures of the reformers and patriots, they can imitate, and perfectly, the surprised scream of the plundered delegation, or the stentorian yawp of the hard-boiled orator. They enjoy these things with the gusto of the connoisseur, the political bon vivant. But at the hall, and in the midst of the carnage, they are as suave as panthers and as remorseless as cannibals. "Everything goes in politics," is their motto, that is, everything but honesty.

Coming back from my last political convention I met Jack Derby in the "smoker." Jack was from the ward next to mine, and I had missed him just before the voting began. I had noticed a stranger in his seat when I came in rather late, but still in time to vote. Jack was moody and his head was done up in a gaudy handkerchief. "What's up?" I said to him. "I didn't see you when the votes were being cast."

"They thrun me out," was his reply. "I went over to see a friend o' mine in the fourteenth and when I got back to me seat they was a guy there in it. I grabbed him and he caught hold of me arms. The "sarge" (sergeant-at-arms) came runnin' up an' this guy gives him the wink an' says this feller's a pick-pocket. Before I could hand him one the "sarge" grabs me—he's seven feet long and four feet through—and he wings me to the door in four jumps and fires me by the neck and pants. See? An' I lose me vote an' I don't get in the hall again."

"That's tough, Jack," was my consolatory reply.

"Tough," said Mr. Derby, with an injured air, "an' I was goin' to vote right all the time. I think that sergeant must be bugs."

WHAT SAVED "UNCLE JOE"

Old Lifting Machine That Long Ago Proved a Health Preserver.

The secret of perpetual youth, which has permitted "Uncle Joe" Cannon to be as young as he is at 72, has just been rediscovered here by a former senator from New Hampshire, says the Washington correspondent of the Boston Herald. Henry W. Blair, who is no youngster himself, having been born in 1834, and the present speaker were fellow members of the house 30 years ago. Both at that time were in poor health. They suffered from indigestion and were so frail and puny-looking that each anticipated the necessity of purchasing a bouquet to place with reverent hands upon the grave of the other. They lived in the same boarding house in those days and, to prolong their lives, entered into partnership for the purchase of a lifting machine, which they erected in a hallway outside of their rooms and upon which they practiced diligently night and morning with a view to the improvement of their physical beings.

The other day Mr. Blair, in rummaging around his house, stumbled in an attic upon the lifting apparatus long since discarded. It reminded him of the days when he and Cannon were on the verge of the grave and despaired of attaining old age. In great excitement he went down to the capitol, hunted up "Uncle Joe" and broke the news to him.

"Joe," said he, "do you remember way back yonder when you and I didn't think we would live more than a week?"

"I certainly do," said "Uncle Joe." "I think you were the thinnest, sickest man in the world and I lived in constant fear that I would have to buy a pair of black gloves and walk slow behind your hearse. 'Member that old lifting machine we used to have?"

"You bet I do," said Senator Blair, "and I found it this morning. Just as good as new, too."

"I'll be over to try my muscle in a day or two," laughed the speaker. "It certainly was a health preserver, all right."

HOW TO TEST LINSEED OIL

There is nothing that will make paint go wrong on the house more quickly than poor oil. It is as bad in its way as adulterations in the white lead. Petroleum oil cheapeners may be detected by placing a drop of the oil on a black painted surface. If one sees the characteristic iridescence or play of colors which kerosene exhibits, it is evidence of adulteration. Corn and fish oil can be detected by the smell.

Adulteration in white lead can best be discovered by the use of a blowpipe, which National Lead Company will send with instructions free to anyone interested in paint. Address, National Lead Company, Woodbridge Building, New York.

HE ENTERTAINS CHIEF FEENEY SCRAWS

By HUGH PENDEXTER

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

"Tib and I had mapped out a little scamper over Europe, I wagering a Broadway supper I could take him to some spot on the continent he was not familiar with. If allowed to make the experiment, I reckon I would have lost, as I'd picked out a cozy corner in Bulgaria, which I subsequently learned he had once summered in. But when we reached Bombay we were met by orders from the main-spring, asking that we undertake a little African tour, something with leopards in it. This was old work for Tib and me, and although all our plans for dodging the guide-book in Europe were smashed, he displayed no disappointment as he prepared for the sail across the Sea of Arabia to the hunched-up shoulder of Africa, where we shifted to a south-bound boat.

"Once arrived, Tib promptly obtained permission to net anything on four legs in the Congo State, we paying a handsome premium on all victims shipped. He also took out licenses in Uganda Protectorate and for the East Africa Protectorate. You'd suppose those stamping-grounds would suffice to fill all the menageries under canvas, yet Tib began to lose all interest in them when we drew near to the Uganda border and he heard of Lake Bango country, which is encompassed by the big Magil marsh. That region is under no protectorate, and although the inhabitants were said to be replete with disagreeable sentiments towards strangers, the old chap was crazy to visit it. The fact it was forbidden ground to the blond race only conjured up in his mind all sorts of eccentric quadrupedal possibilities; and when our head man shivered in the brazen sunlight and said Feeney Scraws existed solely to kidnap foolish transients, and added that fugitives from that realm had related fearsome nursery tales about man-eating white leopards, I knew the dice were juggled for our going to the Bango.

"An anxious inquiry on my part drew forth the information that Mr. Scraws was probably the most accomplished assassin in all Africa. He was so cruel he ought to have been a dentist. He was a native chief, the head man chattered, a professor of unpleasant practices.

"Thus with a very slim entourage we drew near Mr. Scraws' boma, as the native village is called, and began hunting the fever-laden marsh for white leopards.

"Now that I am out of that business, I'll explain that much of our success in trapping the untamed people of the tanglewood was due to a powerful ammonia pistol, much like those used to-day by cyclists in hesitating ugly dogs. Tib had improved the article as ordinarily made until it would shoot 15 charges of the strongest kind of dope, and our employer often utilized it in quieting caged animals in place of the crude hot iron. One slug of that stuff, as prepared by Tib, would send the average striped cat or lion off to slumberland for several minutes, and the patient on awaking was usually very docile.

"Well, we made the east shore of Lake Bango, undisturbed, and as the hunting was as thin as an almshouse stew we picked up some native boats and crossed to the west side.

"He studied the approaching shore steadily for a few minutes and then observed: 'Too late, my child. I think our host awaits us; the trees are alive. To retreat now would mean a swarm of them upon us, for they have a few bark ferries on the beach, I note. Brace up and try to infuse a little self-respect into our simple followers, as I fear they have forgotten their ancestral pride and will do us scant credit.'

"There he is, Billy—the man with the face like an inflamed nightmare. Jovial, whole-souled-looking chap, eh?' and he nodded his head carelessly toward him we both knew to be Chief Feeney Scraws.

"'Don't make a move, Billy,' warned Tib in a low voice, as with his free hand he reached in his pocket and produced his last cigarette and lighted it.

"The moral effect of this little act swept the chief off his feet for the moment, sir. He lowered his weapon with a grunt of chagrin, or wonder, and released my patron. It was lucky thus, as I was unarmed, all our guns, except our ammonia pistols, being in the boat. And I reckon if I had shot Feeney, Tib and I soon would have overtaken him in the spirit land; for the mob was unusually demonstrative.

"'Keep near me and walk slow,' cautioned Tib. 'And show of fear means the emergency ward.' Then he mopped his brow and motioned for the chief to lead us to some shade. It was coolly done, and some lone corpuscle of our host's tainted blood began to admire the old fellow's nerve, as was evinced by the swift gleam of his green eyes. It was fleeting, but we both caught it, and Tib murmured over his resolute shoulder: 'We've got him puzzled a bit. Wouldn't he make an elegant wild boy! I'd almost prefer him in a cage to a white leopard.'

"'I'll chasten his proud spirit,' grinned Tib. 'Any millinery display of white feathers will mean an immediate clinic. Tread on his heels a bit.'

"This command seemed to me to lend itself to funereal environments, but I obeyed, and would have been brained instanter if Tib had not stepped in between and in the traders' lingo called a halt. Although the chief stayed his hatchet arm he jumped enthusiastically up and down several times in an ecstasy of pique and knocked one of his body-guard senseless with the flat of his ax. The fellow would have received the edge, only the blade caught in an overhanging creeper. Tib smiled in approbation, and to further show his approval gave the prostrate warrior a hearty kick.

"But Mr. Scraws did not possess a reputation for being thoughtfully and exquisitely cruel for nothing, and after a short session of storm signals his merry face was distorted into a smile and he clapped us both on the shoulder amiably and indulged in spasmodic cluckings.

"'You've done the trick,' I remarked admiringly. But the face Tib turned on me was puckered with apprehension.

"'I fear you are in error, my child,' he protested. 'When Brother Feeney laughs way down in his stomach there's something stirring for the spectators. We had him dubious at first; now he has decided just what he's going to do and it tickles him. And, I guess, what agitates his risibles wouldn't take any prize in a Vermont parlor entertainment.'

"And hang me, sir, if Feeney's men weren't all of a shake! The squaws, too, who ran up to meet us, no sooner saw their master enjoying his little joke than they began tearing their hair and scuttling for cover. Feeney, choking with mirth, called a warrior to approach. This man rolled his eyes in despair and gave a tree a farewell rap with his head before obeying. His legs wabbled as he dragged himself forward and kneeled. His boss tapped him coyly on the pate with the ax-handle. It seemed to me the chief ruffled the address longer than was necessary and was loath to desist. But with a sigh he finally lowered his comforter and the sweat rolled from the crouching figure's limbs.

"And Feeney's eyes were blood red.

"'Certainly not the innocent jollity of childhood,' groaned Tib.

"At this point the chief gave the warrior some command, and as if reprieved from death the subject sprang to his feet and motioned us to follow him. The chief, still decorated with his hideous smile, nodded for us to obey, and as we were led to a hut in the middle of the glade he kept us company and bowed us within with much mock humility.

"'Too intensely polite,' snorted Tib, once we were alone and the opening filled up by the backs of two giant guards. Then he added, thoughtfully, 'But my ancestors weren't Green Mountain boys just for notoriety's sake, and he'd have a run for his money if I had a gun.'

"'They are busy about something,' I remarked, as the sound of falling timbers and the guttural cries of the men bent against the hide sides of our prison.

"'I guess it is something elaborate,' admitted Tib, trying to peer through the opening; whereat the guards pushed him back.

"And as if I didn't have enough to fret over, Tib began to go light-headed from a taste of the swamp fever, and talk rapidly in a hectic-flush kind of a voice. 'We don't know what it is, but you can anticipate it is very complete and finished as to detail,' he mumbled, as the sound of the laborers grew scant in the coming gray of the morning. Then, 'Good-by, My Sweet,' he began to babble in his clear, seven-story tenor as our guards silently rose and left us.

"'You silly jade,' he quizzed, the red spots on his plump cheeks now glowing as if stamped with a stencil. 'Great Scott!' next he muttered, while I sat with despairing head ensconced in my hands. 'I guess, my child, I've a touch of the fever. Hum! and now I've got 'em. Walk in, ladies and gentlemen, walk in. One hour in the big animal tent before the first act in the triple sawdust arena. This is Gooseberry, the man-eating lion. See him—'

"'Oh, quit,' I cried. 'Can't you see you're going daffy with swamp suggestions?' For my little seance with the oven heat and shivers of the disease had left me peevish.

"'Just as you say, my child,' he replied, humbly. 'Maybe old Tib is cross-eyed mentally, but hang me if he doesn't look like a lion. A figment of the—'

"And great Scott, sir! I turned, and if there wasn't the bulky, befringed head of a big male leo in the narrow aperture of the tent!

"'Tib!' I shrieked. 'It's real!'

"And at that my patron pealed forth one resonant roar that caused the massive beast to snarl and spring back. 'Where's the keeper?' he cried, again going a bit flighty. 'The idea of letting him out to scare women and—I forgot. It's real.' Then he put to rout his imagination for a moment and swayed to the opening and scowled as he fixed his attention on the present. 'We stand about as much of a chance as an old-fashioned safe in the hands of a gang of yeggmen,' he mumbled.

"The timid peep I stole over his shoulder, reinforced by the rising sun, revealed for the first time what those captains of industry had been doing. During the night they had inclosed us and our villa in a palisade of young trees and slabs of bark; while at the other end of the corral the tawny form of our recent visitor walked nervously back and forth with slow, gliding step.

"'We're the newer, better breakfast food,' explained Tib, as he tried to wipe the nightmare from his eyes.

He Jumped Enthusiastically Up and Down.

Then he gazed on me cunningly and demanded: 'Don't play it too strong on the old man, Billy. I feel doped; but is that—or is it not—'

"'It is,' I gasped. 'For my sake come out of it. It's real.'

"'Enough to scare a scarlatina germ into being sterilized?' he lisped. 'And, oh, for the touch of a Maxim gun and the sound—'

"'We've only our pocketknives,' I reminded, going so limber I had to clutch his hysterical shoulder for support.

"'Shut up!' he roared. 'We have the ammonia guns. Quick! See if they are loaded!' Then, more slowly, 'If that bee would keep out of my head I'd teach 'em that the spirit of Spartacus still loafs about in old New England.'

"'Please be sane,' I begged, my head going cool again. 'A lion is all I can stand. My gun's loaded.' And my heart gave a mighty thump as I yanked it forth and found its bulb filled to the limit with Tib's ex-special brand of dope.

"As he produced his pistol the fever returned, and he patted the barrel waggishly, and then mumbled, 'I only hope the lion that eats me won't ever fight or have any quarrels with your lion.'

"'Very well,' the old chap assented, apologetically, 'if he comes one at a time he can never get through the door.'

"It was a mighty tough combination, you'll admit, sir—the lion and Tib's erratic delirium. It was more trouble than an unmarried man ought to inherit. 'Only one, remember,' I begged.

"'Just as you say, Billy, but I can see two,' he insisted, mildly. 'One's coming towards us; t'other ain't. Which shall we shoot at?'

"And bless you, sir, there were two lions. I thought at first I'd caught his hallucinations and half expected to see a pink giraffe crawling up my shirt-sleeve. But it was real. The audience, to enliven the scene, had let loose another tense in the pen.

"'One at a time and a huge surprise for each,' cheered Tib, swerving on his pins a bit.

"But even this shadowy chance was eliminated, for as he spoke our hut vanished. The rascals had fastened a line to the top and had yanked the meager shelter over the barrier. There we were in the open, with a fringe of black faces mocking us over the fence.

"Tib stood with his mouth ajar in astonishment. Then he drew me aside reproachfully, and whispered: 'Don't try to humor me. Tell me the truth. Did that really happen, or was it a delusion?'

"'All real,' I howled, clutching his arm.

"'I always like to know,' he explained, gravely. Then he cried: 'In the name of the continental congress—Don't shoot too quick!'

"For the big, eight-foot male, accompanied by a four-foot tail, was creeping towards us on his belly, while his pal stood and watched the proceedings with morbid curiosity, and as calmly as if it were a mail-order business.

"We separated about ten feet and crouched ready to spring aside, and as the ammonia repeaters were held in the palm of the hand, Feeney, shedding tears of unrestrained joy, had no intimation we possessed the masked batteries.

"'Be sane,' I again implored, but Tib, kneeling with both hands steadying his gun, cast me a whimsical smile and fluttered his head as if amused. And the red spots on his cheeks didn't look good a bit.

"The king of the wild-wood, probably empty of stomach and hungry enough to eat a whole tribe of white men, now began knitting his claws and agitating his tail for a record-breaking jump. He put his head close to the ground when giving his class cry, and this caused it to rumble and reverberate intensely.

"'Take him!' cried Tib, and with a numb heart I squirted a charge of the soothing-syrup and noted it ruffle his breast.

"And although it did not hit him fair, it pestered him and weakened him, and he struck between us and whirled undecidedly in a circle. Then Tib staggered forward and idiotically made a grab for his highness with his left hand, while with his right he tried to send home a settler.

"And their eight-footer, seemingly oblivious of Tib, began humping himself in a narrow circle, with me at the center. If Tib let go and fell I knew the beast would make the circuit and be upon him before he could get out of the way. For his every jump possessed all of the hilarious energy of a fast-freight train.

"'Hang on and sprint faster,' I encouraged, dancing wildly in my hysteria.

"'D'ye — think — I'm—trying—to—throw—this race?' retorted Tib, in jerks, over his shoulder, as his heels cuffed only the elevations and his fat form snapped playfully into a horizontal position.

"Then from down the lists came a roar that re-echoed even above the hooting of the mob, and I turned to see the other cat, a female, smaller and maneless, bounding up the aisle. This nerved me to jump onto the race-track and send two shots full into the mouth of Tib's steed, and as the mischief-maker rolled over and sighed sleepily my old patron was flung at my feet.

"Number two didn't pause to indulge in any funny stunts. Disregarding all frills and fancy crouches, she gave one more bellow, and with her four legs flung wide, and the sun's rays turning her yellowish flanks to old gold, sprang for Tib. The old chap, although panting heavily, calmly planked her twice in mid-air and had a third prescription ready when she landed. And as the sleep-germs began to work, the spectators were simply swept off their feet, sir, to see their ill-advised lady man-killer trip a morris on her hind legs, spar at the atmosphere and then come down with a crash.

"My head was swimming dizzily, but I gave a cheer of defiance and, standing with one foot on the prostrate monarch, viewed with pardonable pride the paralyzed assemblage, while Tib copied my pose on No. 1.

"'Habet! habet!' cried Tib, grabbing me by the hand and leading me gracefully forward in front of Feeney's opera box as if I were the leading lady, and we both bowed easily, with a bright sparkle in our fickle, fever-lighted eyes; and Tib bowed even more deeply with all his old-time curtain grace, as Feeney, in pure resentment, tried to bite his ax.

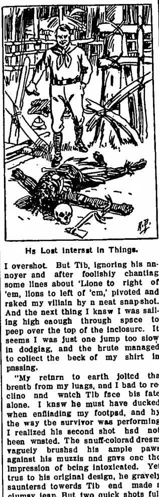
"Then the galleries began to cheer, realizing we were the best pages ever torn from a materia medica. I reckon at that moment we completely filled in the foreground, middle distance and background of all their josa dreams, and if it hadn't been for Mr. Scraws they'd have made us a present of all Africa. You see, we'd done it so quiet. No noise, no rudeness, just an inclination on our part, and their biggest champions were put to bed. We were little tin gods in their eyes, and their yelping now took on more of awe than venom. But Feeney didn't appreciate our growing popularity and foamed at the mouth. Then he barked an order.

"We were still scraping a modest hoof in mild deprecation of the encore when the squaws began bobbing their heads violently and I was inquisitive enough to shyly turn and look over my shoulder.

"'Atttention!' I cried, and Tib wheeled just in time to see our host's orders had resulted in another rude cage being unloaded through an opening in the paling, and two more beasts entered.

"These started toward us on a center, and to my horror I observed Tib was frittering away the precious seconds in gallantly kissing his moist digits to a bevy of frenzied valentines, presumably the wives of the chief.

"'For my sake!' I had just time to invoke, when the lion in the lead turned at an acute angle and got very close before I could pull the trigger.



He Lost Interest in Things.

I overshot. But Tib, ignoring his annoyer and after foolishly chanting some lines about 'Lions to right of 'em, lions to left of 'em,' pivoted and raked my villain by a neat snap-shot. And the next thing I knew I was sailing high enough through space to peep over the top of the inclosure. It seems I was just one jump too slow in dodging, and the brute managed to collect the back of my shirt in passing.

"My return to earth jolted the breath from my lungs, and I had to recline and watch Tib face his fate alone. I knew he must have ducked when enfilading my footpad, and by the way the survivor was performing I realized his second shot had not been wasted. The snuff-colored dream vaguely brushed his ample paws against his muzzle and gave one the impression of being intoxicated. Yet true to his original design, he gravely sauntered towards Tib and made a clumsy leap. But two quick shots full in the yellow eyes announced his exit, and after I'd gained my feet we both sank down wearily on his muscular flank.

"Well, sir, I reckon Central Africa never saw such a perfectly astounded set of natives as in Feeney Scraws and his little ones. There were four of their king pins quiescent and we lolling lazily back on the biggest. We had laid them to rest as easily as a laughter-loving chauffeur runs down a crippled beggar with a 60-horse power smoke-wagon. Naturally it made the crowd nervous, and the yowls they let out would have frightened a pumping station into hysterics.

"'Will the lions show fight when they revive?' I panted.

"'Will Feeney ring in actors until we've used up all the dope?' Tib asked, thoughtfully, in return, mechanically giving our cushion another desuetude drop. 'This anger-killer won't last forever,' he added, moodily. Then the swamp-light stole into his eyes again, and I knew some quaint conceit was addling his brain.

"'All down, Feeney,' he cried, cheerily, dancing towards the paling. 'Set 'em up in the other alley.'

"I pulled him back and tried to quiet him, while the aborigines yelped as if afraid of the round, laughing man who hushed lions to sleep. The black bands no longer were shaken at us in derision, but instead were pointed in hesitation, and by the gesticulations and rolling eyes I knew the people were petitioning the chief to hold up his thumb.

"'I'd like a nice, cool drink from old Champlain,' rambled Tib, playing carelessly with his lion's whiskers. 'Old Vermont! Recall those lines—I remember, I remember the house where I was born? I can't, but I could if there had been lions in it.'

"'He's about to play another card,' I warned, giving the nearest lion another shot.

"'We've four lions now,' ruminated Tib, proudly. 'Say, Billy, did you ever try to do a sum in lions? Now, in adding three columns of lions, when you have two to carry—'

"'They are opening the barrier again,' I groaned, giving my patron up as a hopeless slave to purple pipe-dreams.

"Tib raised to his feet and tore open his shirt and peered under a shaky hand down the line.

"'More lions,' he said, simply.

"'White leopards! Two of 'em!' I corrected.

"'Hurrah!' he shouted, and I believed him thoroughly crazy again. 'They looked leopards to me,' he cried, 'but I thought I must be fuzzy again. So I said lions. But white leopards!'

"And he waltzed me around joyfully. 'We must have 'em. Isn't this luck?'

"'Awfully good luck,' I despaired; for I knew a leopard was as formidable as a lion or tiger and harder to dodge.

"And the brunettes along the fence evidently were now determined to stick to their gods through one more whirl and, forgetting their recent fears, began to shout exultantly. It sounded like a Russian college yell, and Tib tossed back a little circus talk and dragged me in between the two sleeping pups nearest the center of the arena.

"The big cats, white with dark polka-dots, about five feet in length and with abnormally long tails, now saw us, and after a few preliminary snarls began circling the palisades, desirous of pouncing upon us from behind, true to their feline idea of propriety. I wanted to get my back against the stockade, but Tib, with less strabismus in his intellect, restrained me. We'd seen enough of leopards to realize these beauties had been kept in a cage and were used to men, and we believed they had been starved for just some such purpose as this. Yet it was evident they weren't anxious to come too near our breastworks. Then an old lady, probably with a local reputation as a witch-doctor, rose behind her boss and flung her skinny arms aloft and bestowed a few imprecations upon us. The cats began to get hold. The crowd believed it was due to the spell cast by the lady. Anyway, as we were like a hot hand-out to a famished orphan on Christmas eve, the evil brace were game to try and eat us.

"The audience went wild when the twin spotted ones left the barriers and dragged themselves towards us, inch by inch, as if the proceedings were very secret. It was like betting money on the home nine when the umpire is your friend and lives in your village. And to add to the festivities the lions began to wriggle and act uneasy. We realized they were about to awaken.

"'A yah, jnli!' shrieked the Romans.

"'Give 'em another nullifier,' I cried in Tib's ear, indicating the quartet of sleepers.

"'Except this biggest one,' he telephoned back. 'I may need him awake.'

"And friend Feeney, believing it was the last act, threw back his head and laughed in low gurgles. His blood-curdling jollity seemed to jerk the head tabby into radical action, and a streak of white marked her spring.

"'Missed!' I yelled.

"'Rotten!' cried Tib, as he also scored a zero, and the target lighted on our uneasy parapet.

"Then the breastworks came to life.

"And say, sir, if the dope had quieted old Nero so far as we were concerned, it didn't preclude his having a little argument with puss. Screeching and roaring they rolled over and over, while the other cat looked on in amazement.

"'Nail her!' directed Tib.

"And ping! I did, at a distance of 20 feet. She whacked her paws against her nose in vain, for the aroma would not down, and while thus engaged Tib ran in and gave her her conge.

Then we turned to watch the duel, just in time to see the cart-wheel of beasts strike the barriers fairly opposite the chief's lookout.

"There was a crash, and the whirling, furry forms bounded out into the audience.

"As the orchestra circle emptied in flight Feeney, indigo with rage, raised his ax to hurl at me, who was nearest. But Tib did a little rainbow stunt with his gun, and as the gentle shower fell on Feeney's nose he lost interest in things, ditto his balance, and toppled over and down onto the fighting animals. The leopard promptly resented his intrusion with a tap of her paw, and the lion also found time to bestow a hearty cuff.

"As the two rolled away in the forest we enjoyed a good scrutiny of the now quiet ruler. It didn't need a medico-legal expert to diagnose he had cast his last vote.

"'Somehow, I like him best this way,' murmured Tib, pensively.

"By this time the natives had all fled, evidently satisfied we were fairies with evil intentions.

"One old hag, even in her fright, could not resist the temptation to turn in her course and hurl a nervous spear at her prostrate master.

"This simple act of courtesy cheered me wonderfully, as I didn't believe the gang would feel much hurt because Scraws had made his exit. We were not taking any chances, however, by loitering. We found our boys snugly yoked together ready for a slave jaunt north, and with their aid managed to sling the still insensible pussy on a pole. We left the lions, and with only the cat to show for our pains we recrossed the Bango and picked up our reserve force.

"Since then Lsea the Bango district has passed under the control of the Uganda protectorate.

"So, I reckon, our little act in the arena was productive of some good outside of furnishing this country an opportunity to inspect at popular prices the only prize white leopard in captivity.

VOL. VIII. SUNBEAM, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, MAY 8, 1908. NO. 6.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Increase of Creameries.

Brainerd. — Figures compiled by Secretary W. W. Wall of the state dairy and food department show that in sixteen counties which in 1903 had no creameries there are now sixty-four in operation. All these counties are in the northern half of the state, showing that the farmers in the comparatively newer counties are awakening to the advantages from a financial point of view of the dairy business.

The success of creameries in the southern counties in which creameries have been in operation for a number of years has resulted in a great increase in the number of creameries and the quantity of the output and a consequent improvement in the financial condition of the farmers furnishing the milk and in many cases owning an interest in the creameries.

The number of creameries in each of these sixteen counties at present is as follows: Kittson, 7; Roseau, 3; Marshall, 13; Red Lake, 7; Hubbard, 1; Cass, 1; Aitkin, 1; Crow Wing, 2; Carlton, 1; Pine, 4; Mille Lacs, 5; Benton, 0; Wadena, 5; St. Louis, 1; Kanabec, 2; Clearwater, 5.

Cost of Prairie Fires.

Crookston.—As a result of the many prairie and forest fires in this part of the state, State Auditor Iverson will have a heavy expense account this season on moneys to be paid to fire fighters. The number of fire fighters might be conservatively estimated at 10,000 in the northern part of the state this month.

Each of these, if assisting, will receive $1.50 a day and the fire wardens will receive $2 per day.

Minnesota statutes prescribe that mayors of cities, presidents of village councils and supervisors of townships are ex-officio fire wardens and must take the responsibility of looking after fires in their districts.

The fire fighters make application to the state auditor after making out verified claim to which they have sworn before a town clerk, justice of the peace, notary public or other persons authorized by the state to administer oaths.

The expenditure by the state for extinguishment of public fires this month will go up to near $30,000.

Cresceus Sold.

Savage.—For the first time in harness horse history, Russia has come to Minnesota to secure speed. After several weeks of cabled negotiations, Cresceus, 2:02¼, champion trotting stallion of the world, has been sold by M. W. Savage to one of the most prominent of Russian horsemen, Tshemerzin by name, and a resident of St. Petersburg, for $25,000. The famous stallion will be shipped across the water some time during the first part of May.

The closing of this deal is the culmination of a series of interesting incidents extending over the past three years, and is the result of very persevering efforts on the part of a group of Russian horsemen to get possession of the great son of Robert McGregor.

Getting Pike Spawn.

Towner.—The state game and fish commission now has five crews in the field gathering pike spawn to be taken to the fish hatcheries and used for stocking the streams throughout the state. A report received from one of the crews was that in one day they had gathered 2,000,000 pike but no reports have been received from any of the other crews.

Last year the total haul was about 200,000,000 pike, and it is expected that this year's crop will be at least as large as that of last year.

CONGRESS
WANTED APPROPRIATION FOR FOUR BATTLESHIPS
CLEVELAND LEADER

And Only Half Full.

FLEET AT MONTEREY BAY

CITIZENS BEGIN ENTERTAINING THE BLUEJACKETS.

Passage of United Atlantic and Pacific Fleets Through Golden Gate Will Be Stirring Spectacle.

Monterey, Cal.—The Atlantic fleet of battleships steamed in here Friday to give Monterey peninsula a place in the history of the American navy's record-breaking cruise around the world. The residents of Monterey and Pacific Grove and all the other settlements of the vicinity made the occasion of the arrival a holiday. They lined the water front when the fleet dropped anchor at six o'clock in the morning and lingered long to view the beautiful marine spectacle of the 16 ships drawn up in divisional formation.

A great variety of entertainments ashore, both for the men and the officers of the fleet, marked the first day of the battleships' stay and the visit of the squadrons promises to be a thoroughly enjoyable one.

New orders were issued covering the entry of the fleet through the Golden Gate into San Francisco bay on Wednesday, May 6. The revised plans provide for the most picturesque naval display in the history of the nation. It is now ordered that all of the vessels of the Pacific fleet shall join the Atlantic battleships outside the Golden Gate and steam with them through the harbor entrance to the anchorage in the bay where the review of the navy is to be held. Practically the entire fighting force of the navy, with the exception of a few newly-commissioned ships in the east and a few gunboats in Philippine waters, will be in the great column of white and buff vessels that thread their way between the headlands of the gateway —Point Bonita on the north and Point Lobos on the south.

Forty-six vessels will be in line and the long column will stretch as far out to sea as the eye can see. The variety of fighting craft will range from the massive 16,000-ton Connecticut down to the little destroyer Fox of only 154 tons.

FATAL POLITICAL FIGHT.

Mayor of Fort-de-France and Others Are Killed.

Fort-de-France, Island of Martinique. —A serious and fatal conflict broke out in this city Wednesday between hostile groups of politicians in connection with the present campaign for municipal elections. A band of men led by M. Lahat, the vice-mayor of Fort-de-France, engaged in an armed conflict at the city hall with another band under the leadership of the mayor, M. Severe. The mayor was killed in the fighting. Several other men also lost their lives, and a number of persons were wounded.

KOREAN PLOT IS FOILED.

Bishop Harris Saved from Threatened Death at Frisco.

San Francisco.—Warned that a number of Koreans in San Francisco were preparing to assassinate Bishop Merriman Colbert Harris upon his arrival Wednesday morning on the Pacific mail steamship Korea from the Orient, Surveyor of the Port Woodward, accompanied by a number of other federal attaches and members of the local police force, met the steamer upon its appearance in port and, placing the divine upon the revenue cutter Golden Gate, caused his removal to Oakland.

Standard Oil Has Big Fire.

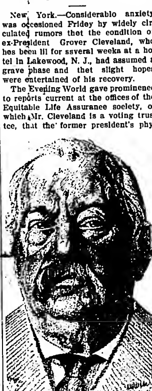
Cleveland, O.—In a spectacular fire Wednesday night, the candle and grease works of the Standard Oil company were destroyed. Officers of the company estimated the loss at $203,500. For a time all of the buildings surrounding the two plants were threatened.

ANXIETY FOR MR. CLEVELAND.

Former President Said to Have Cancer of the Stomach.

New York.—Considerable anxiety was occasioned Friday by widely circulated rumors that the condition of ex-President Grover Cleveland, who has been ill for several weeks at a hotel in Lakewood, N. J., had assumed a grave phase and that slight hopes were entertained of his recovery.

The Evening World gave prominence to reports current at the offices of the Equitable Life Assurance society, of which Mr. Cleveland is a voting trustee, that the former president's physicians had diagnosed his illness as cancer of the stomach and had decided that there was no hope of their distinguished patient's recovery.



Grover Cleveland.

Positive denial of these statements were not obtainable. Dr. Joseph D. Bryant, who has attended Mr. Cleveland for years, said that his patient was "all right" and that all his reports from Lakewood were favorable. In answer to a question as to whether Mr. Cleveland was suffering from cancer of the stomach, Dr. Bryant said that as a physician he could not make public the diagnosis in the case of any of his patients. Any information on such a subject, were it to be given to the public, should come from the family, he said.

DARING EXPRESS ROBBERY.

Two Bandits Overpower Messenger and Get Four Bags of Money.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Two train robbers, who evidently boarded the New York & St. Louis express on the Pan-Handle railroad at the Union station in this city when that train left at 10:05 Thursday night, overpowered the express messenger and got away with four bags of currency, containing an amount of money as yet unknown.

The robbery was committed near Walkers station, about 11 miles west of the city. The train was brought to a sudden halt by an emergency signal from the bell cord and when Conductor William Lafferty went forward to learn the trouble he found the express messenger, N. Roshen, bound and gagged and so frightened that he could not give any connected report of what had happened.

Risk Concern Is Attacked.

Detroit, Mich.—Attorney General Bird Friday filed in the Wayne circuit court a bill asking for a receiver for the American Health and Accident association of this city and for an annulment of its charter and an injunction to prevent the company from collecting more money. Judge Hosmer ordered the company to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed. President Eyre of the company says he knows nothing of the action begun by the attorney general and declares the company's affairs are in good condition.

JAP WARSHIP SUNK

TRAINING CRUISER SENT TO THE BOTTOM BY EXPLOSION.

MORE THAN 200 DROWNED

About 150 Members of the Crew and Cadets Are Rescued by Two Other War Vessels—Many Officers Perish.

Tokyo. — More than 200 men, including the captain and many other officers, perished early Thursday when the training cruiser Matsushima was sunk by the accidental explosion of a projectile. According to a report from Admiral Yoshimatsu, commanding the training squadron, the disaster occurred while the vessel was anchoring at Makong, in the Pescadores islands. About 150 of those aboard the Matsushima were rescued by the cruisers Hashidate and Itsukushima.

Cruiser Immediately Sinks.

The Matsushima immediately sank until only the bridge was visible. Efforts at rescue by boats from the cruisers Hashidate and Itsukushima continued for a long time, saving the lives of 141 men, including some officers. The majority of the officers were not saved, and at the time of the admiral's report the cadets numbered 58 out of a complement of 300. The sons of Baron Chinda, vice-minister of the foreign office, and of Prince Oyama, field marshal, are among the cadets who it was feared were lost, also Capts. Neme, Yoshmori and Yashiro. The cause of the explosion was unknown.

Seek Facts Before Report.

Washington. — Baron Takahira, the Japanese ambassador, was just about to start for the state department Thursday when he was shown the dispatch from Tokyo telling of the loss of life by the explosion on the cruiser Matsushima. It was the first news the ambassador had received of the tragedy and he expressed deep regret over the occurrence. With their usual caution and conservatism the naval officials at Tokyo evidently are obtaining all the information possible before giving out any full report of the disaster. No report of the explosion reached the navy department during the morning from the American naval attache at Tokyo. Naval officers who at once looked up the record of the cruiser drew the conclusion that her loss was not a heavy one to the Japanese navy.

Vessel a Small One.

She was of less than 5,000 tons displacement and of a type which has not been followed since her construction. The peculiarity of the Matsushima was her armament, which consisted of one 12-inch gun mounted on her poop deck. In addition she carried 12 four-inch guns and a battery of smaller caliber and four above-water torpedo tubes. She was built in 1890, being designed and constructed at La Seyne, France. Her principal historic record consists of her part in the war between Japan and China, when she was the flagship of Admiral Ito in the battle of the Yalu river. She also participated in the battle of the Sea of Japan. Two sister ships were built, the Itsukushima in 1890 and the Hashidate in 1891. The cruiser had no armor. She is classed as a protected cruiser, having a protected deck of 1½ inches thick.

AID TORNADO SUFFERERS.

Work of Relief in Afflicted Southern States Is Organized.

New Orleans. — The work of relief for the tornado sufferers in Louisiana and Mississippi is now so thoroughly organized that it covers every part of the wide territory affected by the storm. At Hattiesburg, Miss.; Thursday Red Cross officials took charge of the care of the 160 or more severely injured in Hattiesburg hospitals. It is planned to concentrate as many of the badly injured as possible at Hattiesburg in order to better care for them. Some of the injured will be cared for at Lumberton and other towns.

Low Fare Helps Railroads.

Des Moines, Ia. — With the two-cent fare law in operation for the greater part of the period, the eight representative railroads of Iowa show a net gain of $383,057 in passenger earnings for the year ending January 1, 1908. Notwithstanding a falling off $386,000 in the gross earnings for the same period, the conclusion is drawn that the reduction in price of mileage has benefited the railroads as well as the people.

Indian Chief Killed.

New Orleans. — Passengers arriving from Bluefields, Nicaragua, reported that the fighting between Mosquito Indians and Nicaraguans has ended with the killing of the Indian chief. The fighting began about two months ago, and a large number of persons were reported to have been killed.

SPEAKER CANNON YIELDS

WILL PERMIT ACTION ON TWO IMPORTANT BILLS.

Anti-Injunction Law and Amendment to Sherman Anti-Trust Act Will Come Up.

Washington.—Two important measures are to be reported to the house from the judiciary committee very soon. These are the bills concerning abuse of the injunction and amending the Sherman anti-trust act. Speaker Cannon, through Representative Watson of Indiana, the Republican "whip," let Representative Townsend of Michigan know Thursday that he would permit action on these measures at this session of congress.

This action grew out of a step taken by Mr. Townsend to obtain the signatures of enough Republican members to call a caucus to commit the majority favorably on such measures.

The statement was made Thursday by a prominent Republican in the house that a movement is on foot, backed by between 30 and 40 members of the majority, to refuse consent to the passage of any financial bill at this session until assurance has been given that something will be done towards placing wood pulp on the free list.

Consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill was resumed in the house. Mr. Townsend of Michigan offered an amendment increasing from $50,000 to $350,000 the appropriation for the enforcement by the interstate commerce commission of that clause of the Hepburn act directing the commission to cause to be made examinations of the accounts of the interstate railroads of the country to determine whether that law is being violated, and to make public the results of such examinations. After a debate lasting four hours, the amendment was agreed to.

The house disagreed to the senate amendments to the district of Columbia and pension appropriation bills and sent those bills to conference.

NINE MEET DEATH IN CRASH.

Fatal Collision on an Interurban Road Near Ypsilanti, Mich.

Detroit, Mich.—Two large interurban trolley cars on the Detroit, Jackson & Chicago railway, a part of the Detroit United railways system, running from Detroit to Jackson, collided head-on Tuesday afternoon while running about 45 miles an hour, 25 miles west of here, near Ypsilanti. Nine men were killed and about 30 men and women injured, some of them seriously.

A mistake in orders on the part of Motorman Isa Fay of the limited car, who was crushed to death beneath his vestibule, is alleged to have caused the collision. It is charged that he overran his orders. His home was at Jackson, Mich.

The dead are: Motorman Isa Fay, Jackson; John Paget, Detroit; Charles Carmen, Detroit; George E. Howard, Detroit; Jack McMullen, Syracuse, N. Y.; Barborino Gronni, Detroit; three unidentified men.

BANDITS LOOT BANK OF $8,000.

Scandia State Institution Robbed by a Gang of Six Men.

Crookston, Minn. — Robbers burglarized the Scandia State bank Wednesday and secured about $8,000. They terrorized the inhabitants by "shooting up" the town, and made good their escape.

There were at least six men in the gang, and the front door of the bank was forced by crowbars. The explosion when the vault door was dynamited awakened William Merdink, a merchant who resides over his store in a building adjoining the bank. Others were aroused by a second explosion. Merdink got on the roof of his building, and when the robbers left the bank opened fire, sending 15 bullets after them. The robbers fired a fusillade of shots. One robber was injured, as bloodstains were found.

Ask for Van Schaick's Pardon.

Washington.—An immense petition, bearing the signatures of 245,800 persons, requesting that a pardon be granted to Capt. William Van Schaick, master of the ill-fated Gen. Slocum when the vessel was destroyed by fire in New York harbor on June 15, 1904, with a loss of more than a thousand lives, was presented Thursday to the president by a committee of the American Association of Masters, Mates and Pilots. The president assured the committee that the matter would receive careful consideration.

Oklahoma Town Burned.

Anadarko, Okla.—A supposed attempt of the lawless element in the little town of Verden, nine miles east of here, to take revenge on City Marshal Gillespie for his policy of strict law enforcement resulted in an incendiary fire which destroyed the principal business section of the town, burning a general merchandise store, the first National bank, a grocery, hardware, drug and harness store, and causing a loss of $50,000.

Down With Instructions.

The Hallock News suggest that the delegates from the Ninth Congressional district should all unite and pull togeather in the state convention. This would be what the rank and file of the republican party would like to see, but there is only one way to accomnlish this and here you have it Start right at you township, village and city caucuses, and elect men as delegates to the County conventions that are opposed to instructions of delegates to the state convention. If the republican party will do this, instead of letting the politicians come into the County conventions and "railroad" through resolutions of Instructions for as many different candidates for governor as there are Counties in the District, they will prevent a fight in the state convention, that will last until after the Democratic party elect the governor of Minnesota next November. We have taken this same position regarding the instructing of the delegates to the state convention in the last two campaigns, but got the worst of it in the County conventions, and we know some of the fellows that helped to get instructed delegates, that turned in and helped the democrats to beat the man that beat them, at the state convention, when the November election came. We would like to see a campaign made this year by a man that was placed in nomination to head the republican state ticket, who was nominated by uninstructed delegates to the State Convention. It seems to us that the party may as well try that one year, as to allow the politicians to stir up factious strife in the party, geting instructed delegations. We can not see why the would be nominee's for governor care to go to the expense and trouble to get instructed delegations, as about all they get out of it is the fun of running, and when the votes are counted in November he find that the nominee of the Democratic party is elected for governor, and he is still running

The County Commissioners did not meet to act on the county seat removel petition, although they were in Red Lake Falls on the date they were to meet, but three of them were 'arround with their hands behind them You bet they did not miss going to town that day, for they loo after their financial intercats.

The Plummer Ploneer claims we are the mouthpiece of butter maker Louritzon. If that was a fact we would rather be the mouthpiece of a butter maker than to have a "Booze Slinger" doing our writeing, as a man handling butter is liable to have a clearer idea of right and justice than an old Beef-witted saloon keeper, that continnaly has his old carcass soaked chuck full of "Sunney Brook Rye" whisky.

The eastern part of the county are beginning to get into the political game, as Herman Lillo, of Lillo will be a candidate for sheriff. Mr. Lillo is well qualified for the position, and [illegible] into the fight to win [illegible] makes three candidates in [illegible] for this office, besides IT [illegible] take a notion to "run."

If the Republican party in this state want to see the history of their defeat in the last two campaigns repeat this year, all they have got to do is to allow the politicians to railroad resolutions through the County Conventions instucting the delegates that are elected by the people, who to vote and "fight" for, at the state convention, and if they get beat in the convention, they keep right on fighting and help the Democratic party beat the man that beat them, Then history will repeat its self,

Lobster Fare.

Hungry lobsters in their natural state seldom refuse fish of any kind whether dead or alive. The favorite bait with fishermen is fresh or stale herring, but even shark meat is used at a pinch. Lobsters also eat small crabs, sea urchins and mussels. Indeed, there are few forms of marine life suitable for food which they refuse. Lobsters sometimes capture fish alive, striking them with the smaller of their two great claws, which for this reason fishermen call the "quick" or "fish" claw, but they will live for a long time, especially when confined without taking any food. If you tether the lobster by the large claws, you will find that, like the muskrat, he will go off some fine morning, leaving only his legs in the trap, for this animal has the remarkable power of "shooting a claw," or amputating its limbs, and what is still more wonderful, of growing new ones from the stumps left behind.—St. Nicholas.

The Microscope.

There is good reason to believe that the magnifying power of transparent media with convex surfaces was very early known. A convex lens of rock crystal was found by Layard among the ruins of the palace of Nimrud. And it is pretty certain that after the invention of glass hollow spheres blown of that material were commonly used as magnifiers. The perfection of gem cutting shown in ancient gems, especially in those of very minute size, could not have been attained without the use of such aids to the eye, and there can be little doubt that the artificers who could execute those wonderful works could also shape and polish the magnifiers best suited for their own or others' use.—New York American.

Rifled Firearms.

In the South Kensington museum are several wheel lock muskets with rifled barrels made during the reign of Charles I., if not earlier. Such barrels were then usually called "screwed." Zachary Grey in a note on "Hudibras," part 1, canto 3, line 533, says that Prince Rupert showed his skill as a marksman by hitting twice in succession the vane on St. Mary's Stafford at sixty yards with a "screwed" pistol.—London Notes and Queries.

The Forests.

A true forest is not merely a storehouse full of wood, but, as it were, a factory of wood and at the same time a reservoir of water. When you help to preserve our forests or to plant new ones, you are acting the part of good citizens.—Roosevelt.

Reputation and Character.

Lawyer (examining jury)—Do you understand the difference between character and reputation? Juror—Reputation is the name your neighbors give you; character is the one they take from you.—Judge.

Strategy.

"How did pa act when you asked him for my hand?"

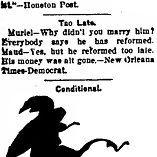
"Very gentle and courteous. It quite took me by surprise."

"I told him you used to be a pugilist."—Houston Post.

Too Late.

Muriel—Why didn't you marry him? Everybody says he has reformed. Maud—Yes, but he reformed too late. His money was all gone.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Conditional.



"Will you be a good girl now that I've bought you that pretty muff?"

"Yes, ma; but if you wants me to be a real angel just buy me a boa and fur lined coat to go with it."—New York World.

Somewhere.

"Pardon me, madame. I think I have seen you somewhere."

"Very likely. I go there very often."—[illegible]

It's Results That Count

In cooking it's the results that count. So when a housewife starts to make Bread or Rools or Pies, naturally she wants her cooking to have that rich crisp, pleasing odor. But it must also have that whiteness, lightness and wholesomeness which is so essential to good cooking.

Much of this depends upon the flour—and thousands depend upon,

Writers' Cramp.

Writers' cramp is a serious matter to people whose work requires that they use a pen very much, while for the nonaccustomed writer who takes an afternoon off now and then to catch up with her correspondence it is, to say the least, very discouraging. The trouble is more than muscular in this kind of cramp. Very often a low, nervous condition will cause it. Then one should take it as a warning that the system is run down and needs general toning up. Very often, however, the trouble is all in the way you hold your pen.

Children now in school are not likely to be troubled with writers' cramp, because they are taught to hold the pen lightly and make all the movements from the arm instead of the hand. The old fashioned method which most of us learned of holding the pen between the thumb and forefinger is also very likely to encourage a cramp. The muscles become tense and hard, until finally they contract so much that all control over them is lost. The pen should be held between the first two fingers, well up toward the joint. The trouble may often be relieved by putting the hand and wrist into the hottest water one can stand. —Boston Herald.

BUYING PAINT BLINDLY.

Many people look upon paint buying as a lottery and so it is, the way they do it. It is not necessarily so, however. Pure White Lead and linseed oil are the essential elements of good paint. Adulterants in white lead can be easily found by the use of a blowpipe. Adulterations in linseed oil can be detected with a fair degree of certainty. See that these two elements are pure and properly put on and the paint will stay put.

National Lead Company, Woodbridge Building, New York City, will send a blowpipe outfit and instructions for testing both white lead and linseed oil, on request.

SPORTING FACTS AND FANCIES

Baseball is king again. The big leagues have opened up another season and the game started off propitiously, with good crowds and fine weather. Only one game was postponed—the St. Louis-Pittsburg game in the National league. The White Sox gave the Detroit champions a terrible drubbing and the Cubs played a wonderful uphill game and won out in the ninth, after Cincinnati had scored five times in the opening inning. The finest game played was the New York-Philadelphia game in the American league, where not a run was scored until the twelfth inning. The attendance at all the games was unusually large, the total attendance being considerably larger than on opening day last season. The work of the St. Louis Browns was a very pleasant surprise. McAleer's team had been considerably ridiculed, but it showed a form that may well land the Browns close to the top. Every fan in America will personally rejoice in the splendid showing made by old Cy Young. After 19 seasons of pitching in the big leagues Cy began his twentieth year with a notable victory, pitching as well as he ever did. That a man 41 years old could be pitching about as well in his twentieth year of service as he ever did in his younger days must be a wonder for years to come. There is no man past or present with such a record as Cy himself. The race is now on officially, and for the coming six months some millions of people will give a large part of their attention to the great American game.

Johnny Evers, second baseman of the Chicago Cubs, says that after this year he is going to retire from baseball for one season at least. His determination to do this, he declares, is irrevocable. He planned to rest in 1908, but as the Cubs won the world's championship and his contract extended over this year, he decided to play out the season. Lack of health is the reason given by the wonderful little second baseman for his decision. He is young, and does not want to take any chances of prematurely impairing his health. If, after resting and recuperating one year, he feels stronger, he is willing to don the spangles again, if wanted, but insists that he needs the rest and is going to take it. No ball player in the game to-day works harder than this little bundle of nerves and muscles when a battle is on. He loves to win, and fights to the bitter end before he will acknowledge defeat. It is the nervous tension under which he labors that he has undermined his strength, he thinks, and the "rest cure," he is confident, will rejuvenate him. "When I joined the Chicago club in the fall of 1902 I weighed only 115 pounds," says Evers. "Now I am up to about 137, stripped. That isn't enough to stand the strain of many such seasons as we have had the last two years when we won the National league pennant, each time followed by a world's championship series. No one loves to play the game more than I do, once I am in uniform. I could stay on the diamond all day, morning and afternoon, but I dislike to go get ready. Before I put on my uniform I feel as though I'd have to be driven to get out. Once the game starts I forget everything else and I want to fight all the time. I've got to talk. If I can't talk I can't play ball, that's all. Chance won't let me chew at the pitchers so I take it out on him and the umpire, and what a lacing I do give the manager sometimes. Fortunately for both of us Frank doesn't hear distinctly, and some of my talk goes by without notice. Long ago I made up my mind I was going to lay off one year while still young. I am none too strong. The nervous tension under which I play is telling on me and it is my desire to quit for one year at least and have a good time like other young men. I had figured on quitting in 1908, but the fact that we won the world's championship and that my contract called for one more year caused me to change my plans and play this season. But I fully intend to lay off in 1909."

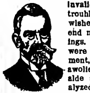
ALMOST A MIRACLE.

Raised Up When Science Said There Was No Hope.



G. W. L. Nesbitt, Depot Street, Marion, Ky., writes: "I was a chronic invalid with kidney troubles, and often wished death might end my awful sufferings. The secretions were thick with sediment, my limbs swollen and my right side so nearly paralyzed I could not raise my hand above my head. The doctor held out no hope of my recovery, and I had given up, but at last started using Doan's Kidney Pills and made a rapid gain. After three months' use I was well and at work again."

15 YEARS OF SUFFERING.

Burning, Painful Sores on Legs—Tortured Day and Night—Tried Many Remedies to No Avail—Cured by Cuticura.

"After an attack of rheumatism, running sores broke out on my husband's legs, from below the knees to the ankles. There are no words to tell all the discomforts and great suffering he had to endure night and day. He used every kind of remedy and three physicians treated him, one after the other, without any good results whatever. One day I ordered some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent. He began to use them and in three weeks all the sores were dried up. The burning fire stopped, and the pains became bearable. After three months he was quite well. I can prove this testimonial at any time. Mrs. V. V. Albert, Upper Frenchville, Me., July 21, 1907."

The Details.

"The particulars—?"

"Well, Capt. Feebles was shot in the back, originally, and went around with his back bent a good deal like an interrogation mark, until he got a portly slab of back pension. Then he straightened up his back until it was decidedly concave instead of considerably convex, dyed his whiskers a fighting black and set out in pursuit of a buxom widow, who, being a widow, knew exactly how to be caught while maintaining all the symptoms of eluding capture to the very best of her ability."—Smart Set.

"Feather Diagnosis."

A woman who was perfectly well but fancied she was suffering from fever, called on an old and experienced physician to consult him. She described her symptoms at some length, and he listened patiently. At last he said: "I think I understand your case, madam. Sit perfectly still a few moments and let me look at you." She complied and he eyed her attentively for nearly a minute, glancing at his watch once or twice in the meantime. "There is nothing the matter with you, madam," he said. "You haven't the slightest indication of fever. Your heart beat is perfectly normal." "Why, how do you know, doctor?" she asked in surprise. "You didn't feel my pulse." "I didn't need to," he answered. "I counted the vibrations of the ostrich feather on your hat." And he bowed her out.

FRIENDS HELP.

St. Paul Park Incident.

"After drinking coffee for breakfast I always felt languid and dull, having no ambition to get to my morning duties. Then in about an hour or so a weak, nervous derangement of the heart and stomach would come over me with such force I would frequently have to lie down.

"At other times I had severe headaches; stomach finally became affected and digestion so impaired that I had serious chronic dyspepsia and constipation. A lady, for many years State President of the W. C. T. U., told me she had been greatly benefited by quitting coffee and using Postum Food Coffee; she was troubled for years with asthma. She said it was no cross to quit coffee when she found she could have as delicious an article as Postum.

"Another lady who had been troubled with chronic dyspepsia for years, found immediate relief on ceasing coffee and beginning Postum twice a day. She was wholly cured. Still another friend told me that Postum Food Coffee was a Godsend to her, her heart trouble having been relieved after leaving off coffee and taking on Postum.

"So many such cases came to my notice that I concluded coffee was the cause of my trouble and I quit and took up Postum. I am more than pleased to say that my days of trouble have disappeared. I am well and happy." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

90 BUSHELS OF OATS TO THE ACRE.

WHAT MR. KALTENBRUNNER HAS TO SAY ABOUT HIS GRAIN CROPS IN CENTRAL CANADA.

Writing from Regina, Saskatchewan, Central Canada, Mr. A. Kaltenbrunner writes:—

"Some years ago I took up a homestead for myself, and also one for my son. The half section which we own adjoins the Moose Jaw Creek; is a low, level and heavy land. We put in 70 acres of wheat in stubble which went 20 bushels to the acre, and 30 acres of summer fallow, which went 25 bushels to the acre. All the wheat we harvested this year is No. 1 Hard. That means the best wheat that can be raised on the earth. We did not sell any wheat yet, as we intend to keep one part for our own seed, and sell the other part to people who want first class seed, for there is no doubt if you sow good wheat you will harvest good wheat. We also threshed 9,000 bushels of first class oats out of 160 acres. 80 acres has been fall plowing, which yielded 90 bushels per acre, and 80 acres stubble, which went 30 bushels to the acre. These oats are the best kind that can be raised. We have shipped three carloads of them, and got 53 cents per bushel clear. All our grain was cut in the last week of the month of August before any frost could touch it.

"Notwithstanding the fact that we have had a late spring, and that the weather conditions this year were very adverse and unfavorable, we will make more money out of our crop this year than last.

"For myself I feel compelled to say that Western Canada crops cannot be checked, even by unusual conditions."

NATURE AND A WOMAN'S WORK

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

Nature and a woman's work combined have produced the grandest remedy for woman's ills that the world has ever known.

In the good old-fashioned days of our grandmothers they relied upon the roots and herbs of the field to cure disease and mitigate suffering.

The Indians on our Western Plains to-day can produce roots and herbs for every ailment, and cure diseases that baffle the most skilled physicians who have spent years in the study of drugs.

From the roots and herbs of the field Lydia E. Pinkham more than thirty years ago gave to the women of the world a remedy for their peculiar ills, more potent and efficacious than any combination of drugs.

Mrs. Bertha Muff, of 515 N. C. St., Louisiana, Mo., writes:

"Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my troubles public.

"For twelve years I had been suffering with the worst forms of female ills. During that time I had eleven different physicians without help. No tongue can tell what I suffered, and at times I could hardly walk. About two years ago I wrote Mrs. Pinkham for advice. I followed it, and can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice restored health and strength. It is worth mountains of gold to suffering women."

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Muff, it will do for other suffering women.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

More Shortage.

St. Paul.—An additional alleged shortage of $4,755.20 in the accounts of John A. McDormott, former state oil inspector, and of $3,526.92 in the accounts of F. G. Warnor, his predecessor in that office, were reported by Public Examiner Anton Schaefer in his final report on the examination of the accounts of that department during the incumbency of these two men.

This report covers the entire period from February, 1903 to November 1907, being from the begining of Mr. Warner's term to the close of Mr. McDermott's.

The first report on Mr. McDermott's accounts covered only the collections in Ramsey, Hennepin and St. Louis counties, and disclosed an alleged shortage of $6,190.75, which was turned into the state treasury by W. E. McEwen, the present oil inspector, through his monthly reports, except the last payment of about $3,400, which was turned in separately. The present report makes the total alleged shortage in his accounts for the entire state $10,954.95.

First Street Car Runs.

Mankato.—The electric street car line which has been under construction since last July, began operations. The business men and others united in making the day a partial holiday, and races, ball game, band concerts, street festivals and banquets were among the features of the day. Rain snow and sunshine, with a piercing northwest wind, had no effect on the crowds, and many visitors from the surrounding towns and country were in the city. The street cars were packed most of the day.

The electric car line was entirely constructed by home capital, with no watered stock or inflated valuations, and its active operation is the culmination of twenty-five years of work and hoping on the part of the commercial organizations and citizens in general.

Burned to Death.

Rochester.—Miss Bessie Mae Tracy of Minnesota Junction, Wis., a nurse at the state hospital in this city, was burned to death by her clothes catching fire from a small alcohol stove.

Miss Tracy has been a nurse for two years and was doing night duty in the west annex. At 1:30 in the morning she found it necessary to use a small alcohol stove. In lighting the stove her clothing caught fire. She screamed and ran out into the ward hall, where she fell unconscious, remaining in that condition until the other nurses came to her assistance.

An alarm of fire was turned in and the local fire department responded. No damage was done to the property.

Homesteader Wins Again.

Washington.—The supreme court of the United States decided the case of the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway company vs. John R. Donahue, involving a conflict over the possession of land in the Cass Lake land district of Minnesota, in favor of Donahue. The land was settled by a homesteader through whom Donahue made claim in 1893, before it had been surveyed, but no effort was made to enter it until 1896, after the survey had been made. In the meantime the tract had been included in the list of land grants to the railroad. The Minnesota supreme court decided in favor of the homesteader and the federal court affirmed the decision.

Convicted.

Minneapolis.—The state dairy and food commission has secured the conviction in Minneapolis of a grocer on a charge of misbranding goods. The grocer recently suffered a fire loss and after the settlement with fire insurance companies, it is charged, new labels were placed on some of the canned goods. Complaints were received by the commission from people who had purchased the goods with the new labels over the old and after an investigation the proprietor was arrested and pleaded guilty, insisting, however, that his goods were as good as new.

NEWS NOTES.

Stephen.—Hearings of alleged robbers of the bank fail to develop any strong evidence against the men.

St. Paul.—Out of the total increase of 101 in the deaths last year over the previous year, 68 were caused by tuberculosis. The increase over 1906 is more than proportional to the growth of the city. The number in 1906 was 254 and in 1907, 422, an increase of 68.

There are "pony ballets," "broilers," and all that sort of thing with the various musical shows, but the newest bunch of show girls are "The Frisky Bronchos," the youthful, graceful and comely chorus seen in a series of evolutions and fancy steps in "The Cowboy Girl" which will be the attraction at the Bijou Opera House, Minneapolis, the week of May 10th.

METCALF REVIEWS FLEETS

ADMIRAL EVANS UNABLE TO PARTICIPATE IN CEREMONY.

Formally Relinquishes Command of Fighting Vessels and Departs for Washington.

San Francisco.—The combined Atlantic and Pacific fleets of battleships, armored cruisers, torpedo boat destroyers and auxiliaries, aggregating in weight of displacement the enormous total of more than 400,000 tons, were reviewed in picturesque San Francisco harbor Friday by Secretary of the Navy Metcalf.

The 44 vessels of the two fleets lay at anchor in four long columns and, proceeding from the Oakland shore, the secretary on board the little gunboat Yorktown—a reminder of the days when the navy was in its infancy—proceeded southward through the lines formed by the armored cruisers of the Pacific fleet, nearest the Oakland shore, and the second squadron of the Atlantic fleet, headed by the Minnesota. Turning back to the north at the end of these two lines, the Yorktown traversed the lane formed on the starboard by the battleships of the First Atlantic squadron and on the port by the little destroyers.

Rear Admiral Evans, who had hoped to end his active naval career by participating in the official ceremonies, was not permitted by his attending physician to go aboard the Connecticut. Rear Admiral Charles M. Thomas was again the senior office. Admiral Evans formally relinquished command of the fleet Saturday and left for Washington.

The afternoon was marked by the presentation of silver services to the battleship Nebraska and the armored cruiser California, from the states after which the ships were named. Gov. Sheldon of Nebraska and Gov. Gillett of California personally made the presentation speeches.

At night in the St. Francis hotel the official dinner of welcome by the city of San Francisco was presided over by Mayor Edward R. Taylor. All the flag and commanding officers of the fleet were present. At a later hour and attended by all the higher officers and a host of the younger men, came the dance of the Friday Night club at the Fairmont hotel.

CHESTER PUPILS STRIKE.

Teachers Forced to Apologize for Riding on Street Cars.

Chester, Pa. — As a manifestation of the bitterness with which many people regard the Chester Traction company and the men who took the places of the motormen and conductors when they went on a strike several weeks ago, this city Friday witnessed a sympathetic strike of the pupils of the Morton avenue school because two teachers, Miss Anderson and Miss MacFarland, rode on the trolley cars manned by strike-breakers. When the pupils learned that the teachers had ridden on the cars they refused to attend the sessions.

As a climax to the incident mothers of the children went before the school board and demanded the removal of the teachers. The parents were promised that the teachers would make an apology to the children on Monday and also make a public apology through the columns of the local newspapers.

Harmon for Ohio Governor.

Columbus, O.—In a tumultuous convention characterized by the most intense factional feeling, the Democrats of Ohio Wednesday nominated Judson Harmon of Cincinnati, attorney general of the United States under President Cleveland, for governor and indorsed William Jennings Bryan, and instructed the delegates-at-large to the national convention to vote for him for president.

Three Die in Auto Crash.

Bakersfield, Cal. — W. E. Loncke, his wife and their baby were instantly killed Thursday when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by a Southern Pacific train at Reedley. Loncke was a prominent business man of Selma.

PRINCE EULENBURG ARRESTED.

Once a Confidential Friend of the Kaiser—His Ruin Predicted.

Berlin. — Prince Philip Zu Eulenburg was Friday placed under actual arrest. The crown prosecutor took this step as a result of the testimony given by two men at the prince's bedside to the effect that Prince Zu Eulenburg had been guilty of wrongful actions with them 25 years ago. Prince Zu Eulenburg was involved in the court scandal in Berlin that grew out of the charges brought by Maximilien Harden, editor of Die Zukunft last summer. At the second Harden trial the court declared that all the charges made by Harden were absolutely without foundation. The prince was taken into custody at his castle at Liebenberg and brought in an ambulance automobile 40 miles to the charity hospital, where he was detained pending a further investigation of a charge of perjury made against him. The prince's arrest is taken to mean the irretrievable ruin of this brilliant man who was at one time a confidential friend of the emperor.

OHIO TROOPS ORDERED OUT.

Threats to Burn Two Towns in the Tobacco District.

Columbus, O.—Threats to burn the towns of Aberdeen and Higginsport, emanating from unknown sources but resulting from the bitter warfare in the Burley tobacco district of Ohio and Kentucky, were largely responsible for an order issued by Gov. Harris Tuesday evening to Adjt. Gen. Critchfield to dispatch troops to the towns mentioned.

Troop B of Columbus left for the scene of threatened trouble Wednesday morning at five o'clock. Capt. R. W. Kneuss had about 50 cavalrymen in his command. Companies of the First regiment at Cincinnati and Batavia are also said to be under waiting orders.

LEVEE BREAKS AT VINCENNES.

Preparations Are Being Made for a Serious Flood.

Vincennes, Ind.—Friday night at eight o'clock the Wabash river was 18.8 feet, the rise being at the rate of an inch an hour. The levee broke in two pieces, flooding thousands of acres and threatening the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern tracks three miles west. The second break in the levee occurred on the Indiana side, five miles south of here. Two mills closed and preparations are being made to fight the biggest flood in the history of this section.

GREAT FIRE IN ATLANTA.

Two Business Blocks Destroyed, the Loss Being $1,250,000.

Atlanta, Ga.—One million and a quarter dollars is the loss, conservatively estimated, of a fire which started at 3:30 o'clock Friday morning and swept two blocks of Atlanta business property.

By night the fire was under control with ruined buildings in the district bounded by Forsythe, Nelson, Madison and Hunter streets. Late in the day the police and fire departments dynamited what was left of the ragged walls.

Declares Thaw Is Insane.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y. — Dr. Amos T. Baker, acting superintendent of the Matteawan state hospital, in his return Tuesday to the writ of habeas corpus obtained by counsel for Harry K. Thaw, denied the allegations in the petition of counsel that Thaw is now sane, and alleges on the contrary that Thaw is insane. Dr. Baker has had Thaw under observation during his confinement in Matteawan following the trial for the slaying of Stanford White.

Arrested as Murderous Bandit.

Denver, Col.—"Red" (Roy) Hisle was arrested here Friday on the charge of murdering Charles Huntington Wright, the Globe express messenger who was shot and killed in the express car of a Denver & Rio Grande train. Hisle is 27 years of age.

VICTIMS NOW TEN

ONE MORE BODY DUG UP IN MRS. GUINNESS' BARNYARD.

PROBABLY WAS A WOMAN

Witness Found Whose Story Tends to Prove Lamphere Knew of Crimes and Tried Blackmail.

Laporte, Ind.—One more body was added to the death roll of the Guinness farm Friday, the grewsome relics now numbering ten.

Coroner Mack at first announced that the grave opened in the morning contained one complete cadaver and portions of a second, but in the evening said that what he had at first believed to be additional thigh and arm bones are in reality pieces of the first set.

Developments of the Day.

Peter Colson, a new witness in the case, told R. N. Smith, the prosecuting attorney, that Ray Lamphere had acknowledged attempts to blackmail Mrs. Guinness. This is considered as definitely establishing a motive for a disagreement between Lamphere and the woman which resulted later in the burning of the farmhouse.

Mrs. Leo Greening said that her son Emil, who formerly worked on the notorious farm, saw two strangers at the place the night that Jennie Olsen disappeared in November, 1906. Emil Greening is now in Oklahoma City, and the sheriff's office will try to communicate with him in the hope of establishing the fact that Mrs. Guinness had accomplices in the murders at her place.

Mrs. Bella Guinness.

Matt and Oscar Budsberg departed for Iola, Wis., in the afternoon, after making arrangements to have the body of their father, Ole Budsberg, shipped to that town as soon as Coroner Mack releases it for burial.

Fort Wayne Officials There.

Sheriff Griece, Chief of Police Angenberk and Dr. White, all of Fort Wayne, visited the Guinness farm in the afternoon and had a long conversation with Sheriff Smutzer of Laporte county. None of the three would reveal the object of their visit and all refused to discuss a report that they were searching for a missing resident of Fort Wayne.

Finding of One More Victim.

The resumption of excavation at the farm again drew an immense crowd of spectators. The rush of visitors has become so great that some of the local liverymen have established a regular 'bus line from the downtown district to the farm.

The premature announcement by Coroner Mack that two bodies had been discovered only served to increase the rush of curiosity-seekers. The scraps of humanity were found in the barnyard which had already given up nine cadavers. About four feet below the surface, the excavators encountered bits of bone and burlap and a few strokes more of the spades and hoes revealed the skull, a decomposed torso and leg and arm bones.

Less Skilfully Dismembered.

The body was by far the least preserved of any of the ten grewsome relics. In addition to the usual traces of lime, the evidences were that a less skilful hand had accomplished the dismemberment of this corpse. The legs had been, as usual, severed above the knee joint, but the bones were splintered and the shoulder blade shattered. The skull had been separated and was lying near the feet. It was thought that the body was that of a woman, as a pair of woman's oxford tie shoes and the metal frame of a woman's purse were found in the grave.

FOUR KILLED IN FLAMES

NEW YORK TENEMENT-HOUSE FIRE PROBABLY INCENDIARY.

Mother Trying to Reach Safety Drops Child and It Is Burned to Death —Twenty Injured.

New York.—Four persons were killed and 12 injured Thursday in a fire believed to have been of incendiary origin, which destroyed a five-story tenement house. The dead are: Eva Berg, 53 years old; Samuel Sach, ten years old; Hattie Koplemann, 2½ years old, and an unidentified man.

Policemen carried several children to the ground before the firemen arrived. Men, women and children were packed so closely on the narrow fire escapes that no one could get down. While persons in the building who had been unable to get out because all the windows leading to the fire escapes were crowded struggled for exit on one side, the firemen on extension ladders worked on the other. One by one the women and children were dragged from the overcrowded platforms and carried down the ladders to the street. More than a hundred persons were taken from the fire escapes in this way.

It was in attempting to reach the upper part of the house that little Hattie Koplemann lost her life. Her mother had a remarkably narrow escape from death. Mrs. Koplemann had gone out on a fire escape, intending to make her way to the roof, as the flames were sweeping around the lower part of the iron ladder. She had the child in her arms when she stepped on the platform. A misstep caused her to fall, and as she struck the side of the platform Hattie fell from her arms and rolled through the opening in the platform to the platform of the floor below, which was red hot. There the child was burned to death. Mrs. Koplemann rolled across the opening, but saved herself from falling through. Mrs. Eva Berg and the Sach boy were burned to death in their rooms.

BLOODY TRAGEDY IN OHIO.

Horseman Kills Two Persons, Wounds Woman and Commits Suicide.

Washington Court House, O. — Bert Devaney, aged 43, (white) a well-known horseman, Tuesday night shot and killed Lida Bird, aged 22, a colored girl, and shot her mother in the abdomen, inflicting a probably fatal wound. He then ran across the town to the barn of Silas Shackelford, where he took refuge. Shackelford went in after him and was shot and killed by Devaney. Later Devaney committed suicide. It is thought Devaney was insane.

Following the shooting of the two women, the authorities organized a posse and company M Fourth regiment, Ohio National Guard, was called, permission having been given by Gov. Harris. The officers surrounded the barn and threatened to burn it. Finally persons ventured up to the barn door and found Devaney had shot himself.

JEROME REFUSES JURY MINUTES.

New York Attorney Balks at Order to Turn Over Evidence.

New York. — District Attorney Jerome said Tuesday that he would go to jail rather than comply with an order received from Judge Rosalsky that certain grand jury minutes be filed with the clerk of the court of general sessions. Mr. Jerome made this statement at the hearing of charges against him before Commissioner Hand, who was appointed by Gov. Hughes to take evidence in the matter of the King committee's charges that the district attorney had failed to fulfill the duties of his office. The records which Judge Rosalsky ordered filed with the court of general sessions were those of the grand jury which investigated the affairs of the Metropolitan Street Railway system last November. The effect of filing these minutes with the clerk would have been to make them public.

Flood at East Alton.

East Alton, Ill.—Wood river broke through its banks, after rising four feet in four hours Wednesday afternoon, and half of East Alton is under water. The tracks of the Chicago & Alton, Big Four and the McKinley interurban line are overflowed, and traffic temporarily is suspended. Two big factories have been forced to shut down because of the high water, which covers an area five miles long and a mile wide. Many families were forced to vacate their homes.

Express Messenger Murdered.

Denver, Col.—Train robbers, who boarded Denver & Rio Grande train No. 4 at Castle Rock Thursday, murdered Express Messenger Charles H. Wright, aged 60, employed by the Globe Express company.

From the dead messenger the robbers took the keys to a small safe in the baggage car, which they opened and took the contents, in all worth less than $100.

DESERVED TO WIN HIS CASE.

Really Able Argument Put Forward by Accused Sailor.

A very good story has recently been told in the fleet of an incident which happened when Admiral Evans was in command of the Indiana. An old-time bluejacket was at the mast before Capt. Evans, charged with getting food out of a mess chest outside of meal hours. This getting of food for night watches is a common and strong desire on the part of most men aboard ship.

Capt. Evans asked the man what he had to say; and the man, sizing up the delicate situation, said:

"Captain, I didn't take no food outer that chest. Why, captain, there weren't no food in that chest! I looked in that chest, and, captain, I met a cockroach coming out of that chest with tears in his eyes."—Harper's Weekly.

You Would Not Accept Counterfeit Money, Why Accept Counterfeit Goods?

Good money is made by the Government in which you have implicit faith and confidence. Good goods are made by manufacturers who are willing to stake their reputations on the quality of the material offered to you through the medium of their advertisements in this paper. Counterfeit goods are not advertised. The reason for it is they will not bear the close scrutiny to which genuine advertised goods are subjected. Counterfeit money pays more profit to the counterfeiter. Counterfeit goods are offered to you for the same reason.

Insist on the Genuine—Reject the Counterfeit.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Bees in Block of Stone.

While workmen were sawing through a block of Bath stone at Exeter, England, they cut into a cavity in which was found a cluster of two or three dozen live bees.

The incident occurred at the works of Messrs. Collard & Sons, monumental sculptors. There was not much sign of life in the bees at first, but when air was admitted they gradually revived and after a few hours several of them were able to fly.

Hanging Scaffolds.

With the modern skyscraping office building has come a new form of building scaffold. Instead of constructing the scaffold from below, which is impossible in the cases of buildings ranging from 10 to 50 stories high, platforms are suspended from the steel girders above. On these swinging platforms the bricklayers work and the scaffold is raised as the work progresses.—System.

The People And Mills.

The large amount of type that s being set by the newspapers n the southern part of the state n opposition to Judge Mills for ailroad and warehouse Commissioner, would lead one to believe hat the farmers (that "the gang" laim to represent), had raised a ig campaign fund to defeat Mills. We all know how much ove that "pot gang" of politici ns, led by Heatwole has for the armers. As a matter of fact he actual farmers, and business nen of northern Minnesota, that ave had any business transact ons with the railroad and warehouse Commission are all warm friends of Judge Mills He has ot used his official position t make any grand stand plays, for olitical effect, but has always een ready and willing to give rompt and careful attention to ny complaints made to him by he people. We do not know if e is a candidate for re election, ut we do know that Mr. John H rass, and his political backers re not gaining any votes for him r the party they claim to represent by throwing mud on Judge Mills.

Crookston is going to celebra e July 4th. and you bet they will make the eagle scream.

Fosston is warming up for the county division fight next fall. They want to warm up good, for hey are up against big odds.

There is a movement on foot o unite all the newspapers of he country to oppose Cannon or speaker of the next congress. We bet if the newspapers unite hey will make "Uncle Joe" go.

A. R. Jones of St. Hilaire has led for the republican nomination for sheriff. This will make our candidates in the field for his office for the republican nomination. Some will vote for Tillman and some for Lillo, or Jones, while the 32 special deputies that went down to Red Lake Falls, after the automobile will likely vote for IT.

We see by the Crookston Journal, that Martain O'Brien accuses Judge Montague, and Elle Steenerson of trying to spring "roarback" on him in the Democratic convention at Crookston but it seems it did not work as well as one that was sprung on him in a Crookston populist convention a few years ago.

Polk County has five candidates filed for the republican nomination for sheriff. The Red Lake boys seem to be a little slow this year about filing for this fat office but we suppose they think it is a rough road to travel to get the republican nomination, and when they get it they have still got to defeat J. W. McGinty in November, before they are elected sheriff of Red Lake county.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Miss Clara Barton says she has not become a Christian Scientist.

At the age of eighty years Mrs. Jacob Peters of Venango, Pa., is a correspondent of five newspapers.

Mary Dawson, aged eighty, still works as a maid in the New England House, Boston, where she has served for sixty years. Her first employer was Paran Stevens.

Miss Julia Chapman won a set of silver knives, forks and spoons in a board sawing contest given in Stelwer hall, Fossil, Ore., recently. She went through her board before any of her competitors had got well started.

The dress of Miss Elizabeth Loughridge of Lexington, Ky., who was leading a grand march wearing a wreath of fire, known as an electric sparker, took fire, and she escaped injury. The dress took fire a second time, and she was severely burned.

Mrs. Evelyn Fellows Masury, a society woman of Boston, surrendered her house the other night to her maid, Della Landers, who gave a party to her friends. The house was theirs for the night, and dances, refreshments and music filled the evening.

The family of Mrs. Eliza Allen of Augusta, Me., claim that she is the youngest great-grandmother in the United States. Mrs. Allen is fifty years old and has been a great-grandmother more than a year. She is a vigorous woman and personally manages her farm.

Pen, Chisel and Brush.

The late Professor Jebb is said to have done considerable work, as yet unpublished, on the "Fragments of Sophocles," and this work is to be carried on by a competent Cambridge scholar.

Professor Gustav Eberlein, one of the foremost German sculptors, has arrived in New York. For the last seven years he has worked exclusively for Emperor William. While in this country he expects to make busts of President Roosevelt, J. P. Morgan, E. H. Harriman and other leading Americans.

Walter Crane, the English artist, lives in an old fashioned house in a narrow street off High street, Kensington. When Mr. Crane and his wife send out invitations to their "at homes" and other functions, they always commence "Master and Mistress Crane request the pleasure," etc. They are exceedingly popular as hosts

Sporting Notes.

An American trainer has this to say of the Orloff trotter. "The Russian horses look well and do well in front of a family carriage, but they would be badly out of place on the race track of any other country than the —"

Starboard and Port.

Why do the sailors call the right hand side of the ship "starboard" and the left hand "port?" For the answer it is necessary to go back to the days of the Norsemen and Saxons. In the viking ships the warriors hung the "bords," or shields, on the side of the ship above the places for their oars. The viking himself held the steer oar, which was fastened to the right hand side of the stern. Thus the right hand side of the ship became known as the steer side, and as the bords of the warriors were hung there it was called the "steerbord," or starboard side, while the lower, or larking side, became the larboard. Bord eventually became corrupted into "——"

Lead Pencils.

Lead pencils, which really contain graphite or plumbago, derive their name from the use of lead plummets for ruling faint lines on paper before the discovery of the Cumberland graphite mines.

It's Results That Count

In cooking it's the results that count. So when a housewife starts to make Bread or Rools or Pies, naturally she wants her cooking to have that rich crisp, pleasing odor. But it must also have that whiteness, lightness and wholesomeness which is so essential to good cooking.

Much of this depends upon the flour—and thousands depend upon,

This woman says that sick women should not fail to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she did.

Mrs. A. Gregory, of 2355 Lawrence St., Denver, Col., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I was practically an invalid for six years, on account of female troubles. I underwent an operation by the doctor's advice, but in a few months I was worse than before. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it restored me to perfect health, such as I have not enjoyed in many years. Any woman suffering as I did with backache, bearing-down pains, and periodic pains, should not fail to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Economical Physician.

Ambassador Wu Ting-fang was once, it is alleged, telling about a certain selfish politician. He said: "The man reminds me of a doctor of Shosghai. A mandarin came to this doctor for advice. He could not sleep, had no appetite, suffered a good deal from depression and nevertheless was taking on fat at an alarming rate. 'We'll soon put you in condition again,' said the physician. 'What you need is exercise, good, hard exercise. Four times a week you can come here and put in the morning polishing my floors.' 'But why not my own floors?' the mandarin inquired. 'Mine,' said the physician, 'are larger.'"

SPORTING GOSSIP

Did the baths at Hot Springs weaken the Tiger pitchers? Larry Lajoie says they did, and gives that as the reason the two veterans who have worked, Siever and Mullin, did not display the form usual for them in the spring. Larry gives his explanation of the lack of speed and points to the Cleveland pitchers of last year as an example. "The baths at Hot Springs weaken one after taking them," declared the Cleveland leader to M. W. Bengoy of Detroit. "For the average man who does not have to indulge in athletics the effects wear off in a few weeks, but for the ball player who must be on edge it takes longer. Especially is this so of the pitchers. They don't gain the strength in their arms they should have until the season is a month old. Last year the Detroit pitchers were down there, you say. They were, but they went earlier and had plenty of games in the south before coming north to work. That made a difference. We sent our pitchers to Hot Springs last year. Addie Joss was the only man who didn't go, and he was the man who was in the best shape. The baths are probably good if you have time to recover from them before starting in to work in league games. Mullin is usually sent against us for the early games, and I've never seen him with less speed." The Tiger pitchers were at Hot Springs for about three weeks, and this year, owing to extremely rainy weather and delays, they have worked in very few games. There may not be anything to Lajoie's argument, but it is interesting, nevertheless. It is true that the Nap pitchers who were at the springs last year did not do as good at the start of the season as those who did not have that trip to make. "We did not send a man to the springs this year," continued Larry, "and we came north with our pitching staff in better shape than I have ever seen it."

Statistics show that shortstops last longer than other infielders, and yet it is always said second base, for instance, is easier to play than short. There are more veterans playing short than any other infield position. Dahlen of the Boston Nationals, Wallace of the St. Louis Browns, and George Davis, who until this year played in the short field, are veterans in the game, and no other infield position can claim men of as much experience. Good shortstops are scarce, and when a club gets a suitable man it usually keeps him as long as he can play any sort of ball, because it is hard to find a youngster who can take his place. Of all the infielders the game has ever produced, John McPhee, who a few years ago quit the game, has the greatest record. He played 19 seasons on the Cincinnati team at second base, and for 17 years wore a glove. He was playing as good ball as he ever did when he quit, but found it a hardship to get himself in condition in the spring. Baseball men claim there is a scarcity of catchers now. Fewer good backstops are being developed and more pitchers than guardians of any other position. This no doubt because the boy, when he starts to play ball, soon finds out that catching is not an easy job.

BOBBY WALLACE

Monte Cross, manager of the Kansas City club and formerly with the Philadelphia Athletics, when asked for his opinion on the American league race, said: "I pick the Chicago White Sox to land the pennant this season, with the New York Americans a close second. The Detroit Tigers and St. Louis will fight it out for third place. The Browns are exceedingly fast and will cause all the clubs a lot of trouble."

Cross thinks the Athletics will not figure largely in the race. He is pleased with his berth at Kansas City and says if he can ever get his club to playing the inside ball he tells them to, Kansas City easily will win out.

Connie Mack is thinking of buying a uniform and appearing on the coach line for the rest of the season. Connie has not fully decided to leave the ranks of the bench warmers, but the players are urging him to make the move, as Jennings, McGraw, McAleer and other famous non-combatants help win games on their teams by their encouragement in the coachers' box.

AT A CRITICAL TIME.

Women Are Likely to Suffer with Dangerous Kidney Disorders.

Mrs. John Kirk, R. F. D. No. 2, Detroit, Mich., says: "Five years ago at a critical time of life I was on the verge of a collapse with kidney troubles, backache, dizziness, puffy dropsy swellings and urinary irregularities. I lost flesh and felt languid, nervous or unstrung all the time. As my doctor did not help me I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. In a few weeks all these symptoms left me. I now weigh 163 pounds and feel in excellent health."

BOY KEPT SCRATCHING.

Eczema Lasted 7 Years—Face Was All Raw—Skin Specialists Failed, But Cuticura Effected Cure.

"When my little boy was six weeks old an eruption broke out on his face. I took him to a doctor, but his face kept on getting worse until it got so bad that no one could look at him. His whole face was one crust and must have been very painful. He scratched day and night until his face was raw. Then I took him to all the best specialists in skin diseases but they could not do much for him. The eczema got on his arms and legs and we could not get a night's sleep in months. I got a set of Cuticura Remedies and he felt relieved the first time I used them. I gave the Cuticura Remedies a good trial and gradually the eczema healed all up. He is now seven years old and I think the trouble will never return. Mrs. John G. Klumpp, 80 Niagara St., Newark, N. J., Oct. 17 and 22, 1907."

The Coloring Matter.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the government's famous food expert, was talking about the adulteration of wines.

"One day," he said, "I heard a wise salesman discussing a new price list with his father. The father was going to buy some wines. He turned page after page of the list, ticking off his selections with a pencil.

"'Look here, son,' he said, 'how is it that your red wines are all dearer than your whites?'

"'Why,' said the son indignantly, 'do you think that crimson lake costs nothing?'"

The New Baby.

A young woman of a religious turn of mind wished to announce to a friend the birth of her first-born child. She sent the following telegram: "Isaiah, 9-6," which, being interpreted, read, "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given."

The friend, more literal and less familiar with the prophets, read the message, and said to her husband: "Margaret has a boy, but why on earth did she name him Isaiah? He must be a healthy chap, though, for he weighs nine pounds and six ounces."—Woman's Home Companion.

How He Got Rid of Rats.

A farmer describes his method of clearing the premises of rats in the following manner: "On a large number of old shingles I put a half-teaspoonful of treacle each, and on that with my pocket knife I scraped a small amount of concentrated lye. I then placed the old shingles around under the stable floors and under the cribs. The next morning I found 40 dead rats, and the rest left the farm for parts unknown. I have cleared many farms of the pests in the same way, and have never known it to fail."

CHANGE IN FOOD

Works Wonders in Health.

It is worth knowing that a change in food can cure dyspepsia. "I deem it my duty to let you know how Grape-Nuts food has cured me of indigestion.

"I had been troubled with it for years, until last year my doctor recommended Grape-Nuts food to be used every morning. I followed instructions and now I am entirely well.

"The whole family like Grape-Nuts, we use four packages a week. You are welcome to use this testimonial as you see fit."

The reason this lady was helped by the use of Grape-Nuts food, is that it is predigested by natural processes and therefore does not tax the stomach as the food she had been using; it also contains the elements required for building up the nervous system. If that part of the human body is in perfect working order, there can be no dyspepsia, for nervous energy represents the steam that drives the engine.

When the nervous system is run down, the machinery of the body works badly. Grape-Nuts food can be used by small children as well as adults. It is perfectly cooked and ready for instant use.

THOUGHT IT NATIONAL TRAIT.

Driver Couldn't Understand American Not Being in a Hurry.

A traveler returned from Jaffa tells a tale at his own expense. Having journeyed to the historical seaport on his way to Jerusalem, he succeeded in hiring a conveyance to carry him to the station. By speech and gesture he informed the native driver that he wished to be carried in a leisurely, sightseeing fashion through as many as possible of the principal thoroughfares of Jaffa, and to be delivered at the terminal just in time to take the outgoing train.

He had no sooner seated himself in the vehicle, however, than the driver whipped up his horse and whirled the dismayed traveler at a furious pace through all the dust and over all the stones of the notoriously rough streets of Jaffa. The passenger was too busily employed in saving his bones to be able to see anything of the interesting town.

Arriving at the station, he found that he still had two hours to wait.

"Why in the world," he demanded, indignantly, "did you ever hurry like that?"

"You American," responded the driver, with an expressive shrug. "All American like go very much fast."—Youth's Companion.

COMPLAINTS ABOUT PAINT.

The time to complain about paint is before the painter applies it. The man who puts up the money should not shirk the responsibility of choosing the paint. True, the painter ought to know paint better than the banker, the professional man or the merchant. The trouble is, the house-owner too often deliberately bars the competent and honest painter from the job by accepting a bid which he ought to know would make an honest job impossible.

Secure your bids on the basis of National Lead Company's pure White Lead and pure Linseed Oil and see that you get these materials.

No one need be fooled by adulterated white lead. A blowpipe testing outfit will be mailed to anyone interested in paint.

What is Pe-ru-na?

Is it a Catarrh Remedy, or a Tonic, or is it Both?

Some people call Peruna a great tonic. Others refer to Peruna as a great catarrh remedy.

Which of these people are right? Is it more proper to call Peruna a catarrh remedy than to call it a tonic?

Our reply is, that Peruna is both a tonic and a catarrh remedy. Indeed, there can be no effectual catarrh remedy that is not also a tonic.

In order to thoroughly relieve any case of catarrh, a remedy must not only have a specific action on the mucous membranes affected by the catarrh, but it must have a general tonic action on the nervous system.

Catarrh, even in persons who are otherwise strong, is a weakened condition of some mucous membrane. There must be something to strengthen the circulation, to give tone to the arteries, and to raise the vital forces.

Perhaps no vegetable remedy in the world has attracted so much attention from medical writers as HYDRASTIS CANADENSIS. The wonderful efficacy of this herb has been recognized many years, and is growing in its hold upon the medical profession. When joined with CUBEBS and COPAIBA a trio of medical agents is formed in Peruna which constitutes a specific remedy for catarrh that in the present state of medical progress cannot be improved upon. This action, reinforced by such renowned tonics as COLLINSONIA CANADENSIS, CORYDALIS FORMOSA and CEDRON SEED, ought to make this compound an ideal remedy for catarrh in all its stages and locations in the body.

From a theoretical standpoint, therefore, Peruna is beyond criticism. The use of Peruna, confirms this opinion. Numberless testimonials from every quarter of the earth furnish ample evidence that this judgment is not over enthusiastic. When practical experience confirms a well-grounded theory the result is a truth that cannot be shaken.

St. Paul, May 14—Governor John A. Johnson was today made the candidate of his state for the presidential nomination by the Democratic party. Mid scenes of the wildest confusion and enthusiasm the boom of the Minnesotan was launched in a manner that indicates that the "Tall Pine" will have one state solidly behind him to the finish at the Denver convention.

It was a significant event, and its significance was realized by the representative body of Minnesota Democrats that filled the convention hall. Although insurrection was in the air and Bryan Democrats were standing about, ready to bolt if the order came, it was a Johnson convention through and through. His followers controlled the organization, dictated the names on the committees, wrote the resolution and placed the stamp of Johnson upon every move of the convention. The enthusiasm was conclusive.

The first cheers for Minnesota's executive came when Frank A. Day after working the delegates up to a high pitch by severely attacking the Bryan men in this state for what he called the vilest attack that had ever been made in Minnesota politics, mentioned the name of Governor Johnson.

At the auditorium there was a picturesque sight. The different counties were assigned to their places designated by signs. Some of the delegates unable to find places on the main floor, were assigned to seats on the stage. The American colors were draped about the proscenium of the stage, and pictures of Governor Johnson and other Democratic leaders were in evidence. Band music added a light touch to the situation, and made the wait for the convention a delightful affair. The galleries were crowded, made up mostly of Bryan men of the different contesting delegations.

At the close of his address, Andrew Nelson, of Duluth, was chosen secretary of the convention, being escorted to the platform by Senator J. C. Hardy, of Ramsey county, and A. C. Weiss, publisher of the Duluth Herald. Delegate Wheaton, of Hennepin county, made the motion that the following be chosen as assistant secretaries to the convention. John Casey, of Todd county, and Fred Schilplin, of St. Cloud, and Frank Battley, of Ramsey county. The motion of Mr. Wheaton passed.

The credentials committee voted unanimously to reject the contest of the Hennepin county Bryan men.

T. D. O'Brien, chairman of the committee on resolutions, came forward and presented its report. He stated that it had been signed by all except T. J. Knox of Jackson and W. J. Whipple of Winona. Mr. Knox presented the minority report and moved its adoption as an amendment.

The Platform.

We affirm our allegiance to the principles of the party of Jefferson and Jackson and pledge our entire and faithful support to the candidate for the presidency whom the national Democratic party in its wisdom shall select at the convention to be held in Denver next July.

We commend and indorse the honest, upright and efficient administration of public affairs of this state during the past four years. With the cooperation of the legislature and other public officers our wise and able executive has secured a system of taxation of high merit, the public resources have been conserved, the laws have been enforced and public duties discharged with efficiency and thoroughness.

We declare that the high protective tariff now maintained by the Republican party has made possible unlawful trusts and combinations, has destroyed the equilibrium which should exist between the producing classes, and is still the chief rampart behind which predatory wealth is intrenched.

We hold that while this condition remains unchanged the best efforts of prosecuting officers, courts and juries will be ineffectual to afford permanent relief from trust domination.

We therefore insist that the tariff be at once revised to meet these conditions, and that the revision be by the friends of the people rather than by the friends of the tariff.

Corporations.

The corporate form of organization has been freely used as a cloak to hide overcapitalization, reckless speculation and illegal business methods. Strict supervision and control of the great industrial enterprises and public service corporations is necessary for the continued welfare of the American people.

Railroads and Labor.

We recognize that the commercial and transportation business of the country cannot be transacted except through the instrumentality of large aggregations of capital, but that fact makes it more than ever necessary that the rights of the individual citizen should be zealously guarded. It is not only their right to do so, but it is necessary that those who labor with their hands should organize for their own protection. The demand of labor shall be granted for reasonable hours of work, for the compulsory adoption of safety appliances in connection with dangerous employments and for the modification of the rules of common law fixing the liability of the master for injuries to servant so that in the future our jurisprudence will guarantee to labor that the industry will bear the risk.

We favor progressive and practicable measures for the taxation of incomes, the establishment of postal savings banks, and safeguarding of bank deposits along lines suggested by William J. Bryan.

State and Nation.

We believe that the powers ceded to the federal government by the states through the constitution in its present form are ample. Notwithstanding the closer relations between the people which improved transportation, has established, a too great centralization of power is as dangerous as when the constitution was framed.

The dangers to be apprehended from centralization of power are already apparent, for under autocratic leaderships congress has become ineffective and no longer responds to the public will, while a bureaucratic form of government is being rapidly extended to a point which threatens the extinction of state autonomy.

In Governor John A. Johnson, Minnesota presents to the nation a Democratic candidate for president of ability, integrity, and honor, a constructive statesman, who holds no brief from any class, one who from early youth has been a wage earner, whose private life has been of such purity, vigor and earnestness as to win him the love, respect and confidence of all who know him. In public life he has by his virtue won the admiration of the people of his state and nation regardless of condition in life or political faith.

We therefore instruct our delegates to the national Democratic convention to vote as a unit for, and continue to so vote as long as necessary to secure the nomination of Hon. John A. Johnson as the candidate for president.

John Dwan of Two Harbors was recognized and read the names of those slated as delegates at large and alternates at large. There were to be four delegates at large, but in order to get all the big guns on the delegation, eight were selected and given a half vote each. This slate was accepted.

GUNNESS VICTIM IS BURIED

HELGELEIN'S BODY INTERRED AFTER IDENTIFICATION.

Woman Herself Is Dead—Doubt Removed by Dentist's Examination of Jawbone Fragments.

Laporte, Ind.—The first of the Gunness victims to be interred with Christian rites was buried Friday night in Patton's cemetery, on the outskirts of Laporte. The corpse was that of Andrew K. Helgelein of Mansfield, S. D., the last man to meet his death in the trap to which Mrs. Gunness lured her victims.

The body was released for burial after Coroner Mack had received the reports of the Bertillon experts who have examined it and compared their findings with figures taken from the records of the Minnesota penitentiary at Stillwater.

"The identification of the piece of jawbone taken from the ruins of the Gunness farmhouse as a portion of Mrs. Gunness' skull, bears out most conclusively the contentions of the state regarding the identity of the bodies found in the cellar on April 28. It is the clinching bit of evidence which should set at rest the rumors that Mrs. Gunness had escaped."

This statement was made by Ralph N. Smith, prosecuting attorney, Friday night. It followed a report from Dr. C. P. Norton, a dentist, who found that the piece of charred bone presented characteristic conditions which he had observed while working on Mrs. Gunness' teeth.

David Havens, for whom both the defense and state were said to have been searching, was found Friday at Galien, Mich. He was one of the men who helped disinter the bodies from the ruins of the farmhouse and his departure from this vicinity had given rise to comment. He explained, in his communication to the city authorities, that he had merely gone to Michigan in search of work.

Another missing man also turned up in Charles Edmonds, a former employe of Mrs. Gunness, who was supposed to have been one of her victims. He has been working at a farm only a few miles from the Gunness place.

BANDITS TAKE AWAY $35,000.

Rob New Mexico Station—Are Pursued by Bloodhounds.

El Paso, Tex.—Pursued by men and bloodhounds, three bandits with $35,000 of loot in their possession fled through the rugged mountain passes north of French, a little station 80 miles from East Las Vegas, N. M., on the Santa Fe railroad, in an effort to escape the clutches of the law.

At French Thursday afternoon they broke down the door of the depot, bound and gagged the station agent and special guard, blew open the safe, took the money and rode away, leaving their victims helpless.

Bishop of Cleveland Dead.

Canton, O.—Rt. Rev. Ignatius F. Hortsman, bishop of the Catholic diocese of Cleveland, was stricken with heart failure here Wednesday after having celebrated mass at St. John's church. He remained unconscious for some time but finally responded to stimulants. Later, however, he suffered another attack and died at 9:30 o'clock.

Church and School Burn.

Cleveland, O.—The church and school of the Immaculate Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary were completely destroyed by fire Tuesday. Church and school occupied the same building. The fire occurred during the afternoon recess and very few children were in the building at the time. They escaped from the building easily.

SENATE PASSES ALDRICH BILL.

Substitutes It for Vreeland Measure Adopted by House.

Washington.—The Vreeland currency bill, which was passed by the house Thursday, was delivered to the senate Friday and at once sent to the committee on finance. Senator Aldrich promptly made a report from the committee substituting the Aldrich bill in an amended form for the house measure and in that form it was passed by the senate. This action threw the bill into conference, the house refusing to accept it.

The work of cleaning up legislation in the house preparatory to adjournment May 23, proceeded at a rapid pace. Both the military academy appropriation bill and the omnibus public building bill were passed, leaving of the supply bills only the general deficiency bill to be considered. In addition 825 private pension bills were put through.

A bitter and sensational attack on former Speaker Keifer of Ohio by his colleague, Gen. Sherwood, was a feature of the day's proceedings.

Washington.—The Vreeland currency bill, agreed upon by the Republican caucus, was put through the house Thursday under a special rule by a vote of 184 to 145. Fifteen so-called insurgents of the majority party voted with the Democrats, who went on record solidly against the measure.

The great sundry civil appropriation bill, carrying a total of about $120,000,000, was passed by the senate. This is the last of the large supply bills, and its passage places the senate squarely alongside the house in the consideration of the appropriation bills, and of the entire 14 leaves only the general deficiency and the military academy bills to be considered by either house.

JOHNSON IS NAMED.

Minnesota Democrats Stand by Their Favorite Son.

St. Paul, Minn.—The Democrats of Minnesota Thursday formally indorsed Gov. John A. Johnson as a presidential candidate and at the same time, by a vote of 772 to 166, refused to declare in favor of William Jennings Bryan as second choice.

The followers of Mr. Bryan did not carry out the threat which they had so often made during the last ten days—that they would bolt and hold a rump convention if their contests were defeated before the committee on credentials, or if they were not able to secure a partial indorsement of their leader. They made a sturdy fight for their man, and when they had been overwhelmingly defeated, remained quietly in their seats and made no motion to leave.

Illinois Sues for Fees.

Springfield, Ill.—Five suits in action of debt aggregating $1,750,000, and for damages of $150,000, were filed in the Sangamon county circuit court Friday by Attorney General William H. Stead and Gov. Charles S. Deneen against the sureties of former state treasurers and one former state auditor, for fees retained during their administrations for collecting interest on county, municipal and district bonds.

Temple for Springfield Masons.

Springfield, Ill.—With imposing ceremonies and with a parade of all the Masonic bodies in the city, the corner-stone of the new Masonic temple, to cost $100,000, was laid Thursday afternoon by the grand lodge of Illinois.

Three Bribe-Takers Fined.

Rockford, Ill.—Dr. E. C. Dunn, John Mash and C. H. Woolsey, ex-aldermen, who were indicted Wednesday for accepting bribes from the Central Heating and Power company, pleaded guilty and were fined $2,000 each.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

MINNESOTA.

Minneapolis—May 11, the state of Minnesota was 50 years old. On that day, fifty years ago the telegraph station nearest to Minneapolis was Prairie du Chien, Wis. The news of the passage of the bill by congress for the admission of the state was flashed over the wires from Washington to the little Wisconsin town only a few minutes after President James Buchanan had attached his signature to the document making it a law, but the people most interested were not aware of their good fortune until two days later, when the steamer Milwaukee, at 6 a. m. arrived in St. Paul bringing both official and private advices of the auspicious event. The newspapers of the twin cities issued "extras" that day, and followed these on the 14th with liberal extracts from papers published "down the river" brought on the afternoon of the 13th, by the steamer Gray Eagle.

The first session of the state legislature began on the first Wednesday of December at the capitol in St. Paul, five months before the state was admitted to the Union. In that month, Henry M. Rice and James Shields were elected United States senators. On Jan. 29, 1858, Senator Stephen A. Douglas submitted a bill to the United States senate for the admission of Minnesota into the union. On April 7, the bill passed the senate with only three dissenting votes, was shortly concurred in by the house of representatives and on May 11, 1858, the president affixed his signature to it.

The population of the new state was 150,037. The state officers, who had been elected in October of the previous year, assumed their duties on May 24, 1858. They were: H. H. Sibley, governor; William Holcomb, lieutenant governor; Francis Baason, secretary of state; George W. Armstrong, treasurer; W. F. Dunbar, auditor; Charles H. Berry, attorney general; Lafayette Emmett, chief justice; Charles E. Flandreau and Isaac Atwater, associate justices. The clerk of the supreme court was Jacob J. Noah, and the reporter, Harvey Officer; James Shields and Henry M. Rice, democrats, United States senators; J. M. Cavanaugh, democrat, representative in congress from the first district, and W. W. Phelps, democrat, from the second district.

Remove Blots.

St. Paul—The state of Minnesota, through its capitol grounds commission, is about to take the first steps to clearing up the approaches to the new capitol by wiping out some of the big billboards which are in such generous abundance in that neighborhood. The first attack will be along Wabasha street on the ground recently purchased by the commission.

The state has now acquired title to the land on Wabasha street, between Central avenue and Park avenue, except that occupied by the buildings at the corner of Central avenue. The old sheds whose roofs were formerly visible over the tops of the billboards have already been removed and the billboards will soon follow them.

Watching.

Long Lake—Sheriff Dreger and his deputies are maintaining a close watch on the Kadelbach farm near here, where the murder of Mrs. Katherine McCart was committed a year ago.

It is thought that George Kadelbach, the suspect, may return for a few days to look after his farm. In case he does there will be officers waiting to welcome him.

Mrs. Kadelbach has been away from the farm several weeks and it is believed that she has been in California, where Kadelbach has taken refuge since the crime. She is expected home soon to look after business affairs.

To Impeach Recorder.

Mankato—Alleging that City Recorder John B. Hodopp had wilfully, unlawfully and fraudulently placed the name of A. L. Baby on the city payroll and refuses to remove it although the presence of the objectionable name prevents the other laborers from getting their pay, inasmuch as Mayor Andrews refuses to sign the order, the city council has preferred formal charges against the recorder and has set his hearing for the evening of May 22. If he is found guilty the charter requires the council to remove him from office.

NEWS NOTES.

Hamline—Hamline students celebrate baseball victory and are quelled by the mounted police.

Mapleton—At a meeting of the village council it was voted to accept the proposition of Andrew Carnegie to give Mapleton $5,000 for a public library, and a levy of $500 will be made annually for its maintenance.

Minneapolis—Thirty-five saloons are in danger of being wiped out of existence.

Crookston—Hjelmer Vikjord, fifteen-year-old son of Peter Vikjord of this place, ran away again.

Minneapolis—Salaries cut and officers elected at state convention of Knights of Pythias held here.

Brainerd—Six saloon men were arraigned, four on two warrants each, charging violation of the Sunday law.

St. Paul—Fred Eschle, self-confessed slayer of John Smolensky, the ragpicker, is indicted by the grand jury on the charge of murder in the first degree.

Crookston—Two new creameries are being erected in the vicinity of Krotko and Highlanding, Mayfield township, in northeastern Red Lake county.

Northfield—The first annual meeting of the third district of the Minnesota State Federation of Women's clubs opened its sessions in the First Congregational church.

Spring Valley—The Woodmen's annual picnic of southern Minnesota is to be held here on June 2, and in connection with that gathering is to be a "homecoming" of former Spring Valley people.

Brainerd—J. P. Saunders, of the fisheries department of the state fish and game commission, seized 865 wall-eyed pike caught in Mille Lacs and being shipped from J. Tolefson to Sprague & Co.

Mankato—The Mankato Electric Traction Company has placed on record a trust deed for $400,000, in favor of the Northwestern Trust Company of St. Paul. This is to secure an immediate bond issue of $75,000.

Belle Plaine—Fire starting in the basement of the People's store in the Bailey block, threatened to destroy the entire building. The flames started among matches and oil goods were badly damaged by fire and water.

Lake Crystal—During the thunder storm which prevailed here and in this vicinity, T. C. Norman, of Garden City township, suffered the loss of his barn and several head of horses. The barn was struck by lightning.

Crookston—A drove of eleven caribou were seen near Roseau City going in the direction of Red Lake and Red Lake river. There is a general movement of deer and caribou into Northern Minnesota from Manitoba.

Hibbing—The common council decided to erect a new three-story fireproof city hall that will be up to date in every respect. The cost of the building will be about $100,000. Plans for the new structure will be received until May 19.

Minneapolis—Charles Dufrene, a driver of one of the large shaving wagons of the Northern Pine Lumber Company, Thirty-second and Washington avenues north, was smothered to death while loading his wagon with shavings at the mill.

St. Paul—From box in the Majestic theater four shots were fire at Burt Swan, the alligator "tamer," who appeared in a Minneapolis vaudeville theater last week. Mrs. Swan, wife of the performer, was in the box. Swan was performing before a spotlight on the stage.

Faribault—A meeting of the Commercial Club has been held to consider the proposition for establishing a manufactory for amber cane syrup in this city. A number of capitalists from the Twin Cities, headed by H. W. Brown, are prepared to invest $150,000 in the enterprise.

Eveleth—Mike Jackson, a timberman at Adams' Mine No. 4, got his back broken in an accident but still is alive, although doctors say he cannot survive long. He was standing on the lift in the timber shaft close to the wall, in such a position that the counter-balance weight struck him on the back. Jackson is at a local hospital.

Hamline—Work was received that the Rockefeller board, or, as it is commonly known, the general educational board, has made a conditional gift to Macalester college of $75,000, provided the college trustees and friends raise the entire endowment and building funds of the college to $450,000, of which this gift shall be a part.

Minneapolis.—The attraction at the Bijou the week of May 25 will be "The Cow Puncher," a play of western ranch life, which made a decided hit here last year with Bijou patrons. It was written by the well known playwright, Hal Reid, and produced by W. F. Mann. It is a western drama of the highest order, and tells the story of a young eastern girl whose brother dies, leaving her a ranch in Arizona.

THE SUNBEAM.

The state of Minnesota are after the International harvester trust and have set the convicks to making binders and mowers.

All the members of the board of Directors of the Highlanding Creamery are farmers, who are making their liveing by milking the cows, instead of milking the farmers.

The article from Kratka regarding the farmers boat is so foolish that we would hardly consider it worthy of notice We presume the article was written by the same lunatic that was running up and down the river last fall trying to get the boats to hawl freight for him when the river was so low that the boats could not run, and sensable people were drawing their freight overland, He seems to have an idea that his trade is vary valuable, but there is so much C.O.D. to put up that the farmers boat company have not got the cash to pay for another mans goods, so he bad better keep Fred Haug doing his work as he wants to make a liveing to Wasp's Jaws Make Colony's Nest.

Wasps readily succumb before the increasing cold of autumn. The few that escape the merciless scourge of mortality are the queens of next season. They pass the winter in some warm cranny, and when the spring arrives each comes forth from its hiding place and seeks a suitable place for the nest that is to be. This found, the queen repairs to a fence or tree trunk and with her jaw rasps off a bundle of wood fiber which when moistened with saliva and kneaded forms the paperlike substance of which the nest is entirely constructed.

Just as bees have invented a peculiar nest building material in wax, so wasps have prepared a special durable paper for the same purpose. The queen mother lays the foundations of the city with her own jaws. She attaches a sort of stalk of wood paper to a chosen support. This may be the branch of a tree, a root in a cavity below ground or a beam in a garden shed. The stalk prepared, the queen builds a few shallow cells, in each of which she lays an egg. As these mature, hatch and develop into workers the labor of the little colony is turned over to them, and thus a vast nest with thousands of cells is evolved —Chicago Tribune.

The Wrong Nell.

Nell is a girl who lives up on Capitol hill. On Mondays a woman comes to Nell's house to wash clothes. The woman's name is Nell too. One Monday Nell, the girl, was in the sitting room reading when the telephone rang. Nell, the washerwoman, answered the ring. Nell, the girl, then heard Nell the washerwoman, say:

"Yes, this is Nell."

Silence.

"How's that?"

Silence.

"What! Am I mad because you kissed me last night? Look here, man, you're too fresh. Who are you anyway? I never kissed"—

Just then the telephone receiver was wildly snatched from her hand. Nell, the girl, blushing furiously, had grabbed it. She hung it on the hook.

"He wanted me," she said. "He always tries to tease me that way. I—I never kissed him in my life."

As she disappeared up the stairs the washerwoman smiled and said:

"That's a big one."—Denver Post

The Tea Taster.

What are a tea taster's duties? He must distinguish the mixture of two blends; point out in each separate instance if the mixtures are of equal grades, he must know to a nicety the difference between a pure brand and an inferior one; he must know the taste of every individual sort of tea—not an easy thing, when it is remembered that brands of tea are many and the blends are constantly being reblended. In ten years' time a tea taster cannot be deceived as to the history or nationality of any tea in the world. He can prevent his firm from being deceived, for he has drunk tea with milk, cream, lemon, straight, served according to the peculiar wish of every nation. He is sent to China, Japan, Russia, India, to study the tea [illegible]

The "Donk" Wakes Up.

We don't enjoy getting into newspaper controversys, for the reason that the other fello usaly kicks befor we get thru and say we abuse them but when we are attacted and called vile names, we shall hit back.

We want to say to the farmers of Kratka that it is not our purpose to try to injure you, or your creamery, but we will endeavor to point out to you the way you were led into a proposition to injure yourselves, when you allow store keepers to lead you to refuse to join the Highlanding farmers to build one creamery on the range line The way you are now we would suggest the following extra by laws so the farmers will know where they are at.

Aart 1 The object of this association shall be to premote the store business at Kratka Minn

2, The store keeper shall be the secretary and dictate who shall be the butter maker. This gives him free access to all the creamery books, so he knows how the farmers stand, so it will be an easy matter for him to balance his store books so as to get all of the farmers cream check every month.

3. The Secretary, store keeper, and butter maker hirer shall have the checking up of the patrons done weekly, to see to it, that they are doing business at the store so the store keeper can get all of their cream check. and if he finds they are not, he shall notify the butter maker (his hired man). to cut down on the cream test of the said patrons.

4 Any farmer bringing all his cream to the creamery can get butter milk enough and have it charged on the books of the secretary, store keeper to make cheese to eat with his bread, if Carl Jensen don't put in hogs to feed it to, and if he does he will want all the butter milk, and the farmer can "root hoge" or die, as fat hugs fetch a good price, while a "skinned" farmer is of no velue whatever.

5 No Skandinavan language will be spoken at the creamery, but the following signs can be used by Skandinavian patrons, who can not speak good english. viz: If the farmer wants butter milk, he shall rub his hand back and forth across his stomach, and the butter maker will give him two gallons of buttermilk, if he has it to spare. But if the man has given all the buttermilk to Jensen for his hogs he will grunt like a pig, then the farmer must understand that the merchant, secretary will have to "charge" him with something else to ballance up the monthly creamery check, as the hogs need all the buttermilk.

6 Any farmer making any complaint about the gradeing or testing, or weighing of cream, by the butter maker, shall notify the Secretary, and it shall be the duty of the secretary to write up some first class recomendations of the buttermaker and have them published in the Plummer Pioneer, and the Thief River Falls News, and cause a copy of said papers to be sent to each and every patron to be kept on file, so any time the farmer is of the opinion that he is being "done" for cream he can read said recommendations and shut up.

7 The Secretary shall have authority to employ the services of the editors of the Plummer Pioneer and the Thief Rive Falls News, whose duties shall be as follows' It shall be the duty of the editor of the Pioneer, (assisted by our branch talking machine at Rhoda) to publish and circulate all the dirty black lies they can think of about Wm. Laurentzon, the buttermaker at High landing, and in addition to this the editor shall drive out once a week and wipe off the udders of the patrons cows with a damp cloth. It shall be the duty of the editor of The News to assist the secretary to punctuate, fix up, and publish vile, and insulting articles regarding the editor of The Sunbeam. whose chief crime was that he refused to betray the best interests of the farmers of Highlanding and our neighbor town of Kratka.

It's Results That Count

In cooking it's the results that count. So when a housewife starts to make Bread or Rools or Pies, naturally she wants her cooking to have that rich crisp, pleasing odor. But it must also have that whiteness, lightness and wholesomeness which is so essential to good cooking.

Much of this depends upon the flour—and thousands depend upon,

FOUND THE CAUSE.

After Six Years of Misery and Wrong Treatment.

John A. Enders, of Robertson Avenue, Pen Argyl, Pa., suffered for six years with stinging pain in the back, violent headaches and dizzy spells, and was assured by a specialist that his kidneys were all right, though the secretions showed a reddish, brick-dust sediment. Not satisfied, Mr. Enders started using Doan's Kidney Pills. "The kidneys began to act more regularly," he says, "and in a short time I passed a few gravel stones. I felt better right away and since then have had no kidney trouble."

SEVERE HEMORRHOIDS

Sores, and Itching Eczema—Doctor Thought an Operation Necessary —Cuticura's Efficacy Proven.

"I am now 80 years old, and three years ago I was taken with an attack of piles (hemorrhoids), bleeding and protruding. The doctor said the only help for me was to go to a hospital and be operated on. I tried several remedies for months but did not get much help. During this time sores appeared which changed to a terrible itching eczema. Then I began to use Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills, injecting a quantity of Cuticura Ointment with a Cuticura Suppository Syringe. It took a month of this treatment to get me in a fairly healthy state and then I treated myself once a day for three months and, after that, once or twice a week. The treatments I tried took a lot of money, and it is fortunate that I used Cuticura. J. H Henderson, Hopkinton, N. Y., Apr. 26, 1907."

Griefs That Die Unspoken.

Read what the singing women—one to ten thousand of the suffering women—tell us, and think of the griefs that die unspoken! Nature is in earnest when she makes a woman; and there are women enough lying in the next church yard with very commonplace blue slate stones at their head and feet, for whom it was just as true that "all sounds of life assumed one tone of love," as for Letitia Landon, of whom Elizabeth Browning said it; but she could give words to her grief, and they could not.—Holmes.

Not Such a Fool.

John was a Chinaman. He had been employed as a cook in a family in San Francisco. During many years he never failed to be at his post of duty. One morning, as usual, the family assembled for breakfast, but John was nowhere to be seen, nor did he send word what had happened to him. After several weeks he re-appeared with the symptoms of a severe cold still clinging to him. The master of the house greeted him by saying: "Well, John, we were wondering what had happened to you; but I see you have caught cold." John indignantly protested, saying: "Oh, no, sir; me no catchee coldie, me no such foolie; coldie comie to me."

FIT THE GROCER

Wife Made the Suggestion.

A grocer has excellent opportunity to know the effects of special foods on his customers. A Cleveland grocer has a long list of customers that have been helped in health by leaving off coffee and using Postum Food Coffee.

He says, regarding his own experience: "Two years ago I had been drinking coffee, and must say that I was almost wrecked in my nerves.

"Particularly in the morning I was so irritable and upset that I could hardly wait until the coffee was served, and then I had no appetite for breakfast, and did not feel like attending to my store duties.

"One day my wife suggested that inasmuch as I was selling so much Postum there must be some merit in it and suggested that we try it. I took home a package and she prepared it according to directions. The result was a very happy one. My nervousness gradually disappeared, and today I am all right. I would advise everyone afflicted in any way with nervousness or stomach troubles, to leave off coffee and use Postum Food Coffee." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

PREMIER TWIRLER OF NATIONAL LEAGUE

Christy Mathewson of the New York National league team is generally conceded to be the greatest pitcher in baseball at the present day. Mathewson won the National league flag for his team in 1905, and then aided materially in defeating the Philadelphia Athletics for the world's championship. He is in grand shape this season.

EIGHTH SEASON OF THE THREE I LEAGUE OPENED

Hard to Determine Relative Strength of Teams at Present—Letter to Club Owners.

The eighth annual season of the Three-I league opened a few days ago with ceremonies at Bloomington, Decatur, Cedar Rapids and Dubuque. At the latter city Charles A. Comiskey and White Sox rooters from Chicago were the feature of the opening. Comiskey pitched the first ball and President Loftus was behind the bat to receive it. There was the usual parade, headed by the White Sox rooters and their band, followed by the ball teams and city and county officials.

It is difficult at present to determine the relative playing strength of the various teams, but the consensus of opinion among the unbiased critics around the circuit is that Decatur, Springfield and Peoria will be the strongest contenders for the pennant, as was the case last year.

Nearly all the teams have lost strong players by draft or sale, but just how the loss of these men will affect the playing strength cannot be positively told until the season is well advanced.

Bloomington appears to be much stronger than last year, and this is also true of Dubuque. Cedar Rapids, Rock Island and Clinton are uncertain, due to extensive changes.

Clinton has a new manager, Charles Beulow, and it is believed by the patrons there that he will be able to get results this year better than those of last season.

Rock Island has lost Hines, O'Leary, Vandine and Wanner, four of the best men in the league. The management there believes, however, that the team will make a creditable showing.

President Loftus has issued the following letter to the presidents of the various clubs of the league:

"I want the presidents of all clubs to assist me in giving the public good clean baseball. If you do the success of the league is assured, as the American people are clamoring for good and clean amusements, so start your organization on a good foundation. I insist on you instructing your managers and captains to give the umpire a square deal, and when he makes a decision to consider it final, as he is the sole judge of the play, and when he makes a decision no argument can make him change it. The successful men in business adhere to clean methods. Why not in the great national game?

"If the umpire gives a decision against your club do not imagine he wants to rob you; he gives the decision as he sees it. Do not wake me up at midnight with a telegram stating that the umpire is rotten. He will keep until morning. Write me a letter the next day, after the heat of the battle, and let me know if you think he is incompetent. The mail is fast enough for me to hear bad news. I have been connected with baseball for over 30 years and I have never met a dishonest umpire, but have seen awful bad ones. Instruct your captains to make your clubs more lively on the ball field, as the patrons of the game like quick action."

Four New First Basemen.

Four new first sackers make their bow to American association baseball fans this season. They are Lister of Toledo, Rowan of St. Paul, Freeman of Minneapolis and Brown of Milwaukee. The veterans are Kihm, Carr, Sullivan and Beckley. The indications are that the newcomers will be forced to travel a mighty fast pace to keep their heads above water.

Columbus Gets Pitcher Harris.

Joe Harris, the Boston American pitcher, has been released to the Columbus American association team.

SQUEEZE PLAY KILLED BY UMPIRE'S RULING

Decision of O'Loughlin in Recent Game at Detroit Practically Put It Out of Existence.

Umpire Silk O'Loughlin made a ruling in a recent game at Detroit between the home team and the White Sox which practically puts the squeeze play out of existence. Dougherty started to steal home in the third inning while Siever was standing on the rubber ready to deliver the ball to the plate. As soon as Pat started to Payne ran up in front of Davis and caught the ball, preventing George taking a swing at it. Fielder Jones declared he had been interfered with, but O'Loughlin's ruling was that as long as Siever had not started to wind up his delivery he had a right to throw the ball to the plate to stop a runner, the same as he had to throw to first or any other base.

Rule 31 of the playing rules describes a fair ball as any ball delivered to the plate while the pitcher is standing on the rubber and the ball is over the plate. Any fairly delivered ball must be called a strike. An unfairly delivered ball is a ball that is delivered to the plate which does not come over the plate and the umpire must call it a ball.

Manager Jones declared that any ball delivered while the pitcher is standing on the rubber is either a ball or a strike, and that the catcher has no right to run up on the batter and prevent him taking a swing. According to the ruling made by O'Loughlin the squeeze play is practically killed, because the runner might start before the pitcher winds up, although he is on the rubber ready to deliver the ball.

"The only way a pitcher can prevent a man stealing from third to home after he is on the rubber ready to pitch is for him to step back off the rubber and throw to the plate," said Jones. "After a pitcher is on the rubber and delivers the ball to the plate it is either a ball or a strike, and the rules explicitly state that. When a right-handed batter is on the plate he would have his back turned to third base and he would be unable to see that the runner was coming in, and if he swung on the ball he would be out for interference with the ball, according to the ruling made by O'Loughlin. The batter would be unable to determine whether the pitcher intended to pitch or throw the ball to the catcher to prevent the runner stealing."

O'Loughlin declares the play has been ruled on by President Johnson. If Siever had started to wind up for his delivery before Pat started, the play would have been all right.

Corbett to Pitch for Denver.

Joe Corbett, a brother of James J. Corbett, who pitched the Baltimore team into the championship of the National league on several occasions, and then retired from baseball because he and Manager Ed Hanlon could not agree upon terms, will sign with the Denver Western league team. He has been taking splendid care of himself. At present he is engaged in business in San Francisco, but Brother Jim has induced him to join Denver about June 10.

Falkenberg is Suspended.

Fred Falkenberg, the Washington pitcher, has been suspended by President B. B. Johnson of the American league. Some time ago Falkenberg was with the Harrisburg Tri-State league team and received about $250 in advance money from that club that he never earned. The national commission ordered him to pay the money back, but he has not complied with the order. As a result he was suspended from his league until he squares himself with Harrisburg.

Mr. Newrich's Visiting Card Left Friend in the Shade.

Mr. Newrich, the dust contractor, having made a fortune, part of which he had invested in house property in the east of London, wished to rise, like a Phoenix, from his ashes into some sort of society. His golden key, applied to the coffers of an impecunious aristocrat, opened the way.

His new friend, among other things, advised him that visiting cards were a necessity, and, as a guide to drawing one up ready for the printer, handed him one of his own, which read, "Harold De Vere, Iona House, Portemouth Square, W."

Two days later, as De Vere was sitting in his dressing room at breakfast, a servant brought in on a salver a visiting card bearing the following: "Ephraim Newrich, I Own 23 Houses, London. E."

If an Advertisement Convinces You, Stay Convinced

When you read in this newspaper the advertisement of a manufacturer who has paid for the space used to convince you that it is to your interest to buy his goods, and you go to a dealer where such articles are usually handled for sale, do not let the dealer or any one of his clerks sell you something else which he claims is "just as good." If an advertisement convinced you, it was because of the element of truth which it contained.

De Organ's Busted.

In a little church in Maryland, not far from Washington, the motive power for the organ comes from the strong arm of an industrious Irishman.

During a recent service there the choir got into trouble and, to cap the climax, during the confusion that ensued, the organ suddenly stopped.

The situation was not greatly relieved when there came floating out into the auditorium a hoarse whisper:

MARK TWAIN ON MONEY.

Humorist Points Out What He Considers Some Wrong Conceptions.

Mark Twain said that the financial panic has caused a wrong idea of the use and value of money.

"The spendthrift says that money, being round, was made to roll. The miser says that, being flat, it was made to stack up. Both are wrong.

"Strangely wrong, too, in their ideas about money are the veteran Australian gold diggers. These simple old fellows, though worth perhaps a half million or more, live in the simple dug-outs and shanties of their lean early days.

"Once, lecturing, I landed at an Australian port. There was no porter in sight to carry my luggage. Seeing a rough-looking old fellow leaning against a post with his hands in his pockets, I beckoned to him and said:

"'See here, if you carry these bags up to the hotel I'll give you half a crown.'

"The man scowled at me. He took three or four gold sovereigns from his pocket, threw them into the sea, scowled at me again, and walked away without a word."

Thousands of American women in our homes are daily sacrificing their lives to duty.

In order to keep the home neat and pretty, the children well dressed and tidy, women overdo. A female weakness or displacement is often brought on and they suffer in silence, drifting along from bad to worse, knowing well that they ought to have help to overcome the pains and aches which daily make life a burden.

It is to these faithful women that comes as a boon and a blessing, as it did to Mrs. F. Ellsworth, of Mayville, N. Y., and to Mrs. W. P. Boyd, of Beaver Falls, Pa., who say:

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

"I was not able to do my own work, owing to the female trouble from which I suffered. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me wonderfully, and I am so well that I can do as big a day's work as I ever did. I wish every sick woman would try it.

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

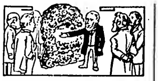
House Remembers Cannon's Birthday



WASHINGTON.—Speaker Cannon was 72 years old the other day, but being a presidential candidate, he was not aware of the fact until the anniversary was half over and then reminders came thick and fast, and brought tears of emotion from him. The first hint was contained in a telegram from a constituent in Danville, Ill., who is the family Bible expert for that part of the country.

"What day of the month is this, Busbey?" he asked of his secretary. "Here is a fellow who has the nerve to say I have turned another milestone."

A calendar was consulted, and "Uncle Joe" acknowledged that the boys back home had one on him. In a few minutes Mr. Busbey was called out to the corridor and notified that about the biggest floral piece ever seen in the capitol would arrive at four o'clock, and that there would be big doings in the speaker's room.

"Uncle Joe" was kept in ignorance of the arrangements, and when, at the appointed time, he was summoned from the floor of the house by the entire Illinois delegation, he was genuinely surprised.

Representatives Graff and Raisey, one a Republican and the other a Democrat, spoke felicitously and presented the floral piece, which was six feet high, of dogwood blossoms and American Beauty roses. As the speaker started to reply, a tear trickled as he said:

> "The sweetest flowers of all

He then spoke of his long career in congress, thanked his 27 colleagues individually and collectively, and a few minutes later was called back to the floor of the house. A roll call was being taken on a motion to recess until the following day, but when it was half over Champ Clark jumped to his feet and said:

"It seems to me this is the speaker's birthday."

This was the signal for general applause, and the speaker blushed, smiled and bowed like a schoolgirl as he waited for it to subside. Then he gave voice to his appreciation.

"I move that in honor of the occasion the roll call be suspended," said Representative Macon of Arkansas. This motion was passed with a whoop and the Democratic filibuster was relaxed for a few minutes at least.

Tattooing Very Popular in the Navy

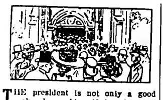
AN INTERESTING report on tattooing in the navy has been made to Secretary Metcalf by Surgeon Ammon Farenholt as a result of his observations while serving on the receiving ship Independence at the Mare Island navy yard in California.

The enlistment records of 3,572 men were examined by Dr. Farenholt, this being the enlistments on the Independence for eight and a half years. These records show that the percentage found tattooed on examination for second and subsequent enlistments was 53.61, and the percentage found tattooed on examination for first enlistment was 23.01. The opinion is expressed that about 60 per cent. of the sailors who have served over ten years in the navy are tattooed.

Dr. Farenholt says it is not fair to assume from the figures that 23 per cent. of the male citizens are tattooed, as a considerable proportion of applicants for enlistment are sea-faring men. He was surprised to find so many, probably eight per cent. of the recruits, who are tattooed and who denied having been at sea or even having lived in seaport towns. In Dr. Farenholt's opinion, the custom is more common in camps and in places where men are collected in large numbers than is imagined.

The report contains statistics regarding the location of tattoo marks and the frequency of various designs. Letters, mottoes, initials and allied devices lead the list and constitute about 26 per cent. of all ink marks. Coats of arms and national emblems follow with about 25 per cent., then flags, anchors.

President Roosevelt a Good Churchgoer



THE president is not only a good churchgoer himself, but deserves the thanks of at least two Washington preachers for his aid in boosting the size of their congregations.

With his predilection for having everything reformed it is no more than natural that his church also should bear the magic label. It is Grace Reformed, a rather small, gray stone building on Fifteenth street, not quite a mile from the White House.

Grace Reformed is not a fashionable church. The congregation is unassuming in appearance and would be decidedly modest in size if it were not for the president. He fills certainly two-thirds of the pews. So far as audiences go the preacher may have to look for lean years after March 4, 1909.

While the president fills dozens of the pews by the mere fact of his expected presence he occupies his own seat in solitary grandeur. Once in a while he goes with his wife and family to St. John's, but they don't seem inclined to reciprocate the attention. St. John's rejoices in the local title of "the church of state," and always reserves a pew for the president of the United States, though it had not been in demand for a good many years when Mrs. Roosevelt became lady of the White House.

Whether he goes to his own church or not, no one but Theodore Roosevelt, unless it is some friend or guest accompanying him, which rarely happens, is ever seated in the president's pew at Grace Reformed. Two secret service men always accompany him, but do not sit with him.

Big Weekly Pay Roll of Wage Earners

WEEKLY PAY ROLL IN U.S.
$33.185.791

WHEN the bureau of the census took the census of manufactures in 1905 it also undertook the task of classifying the weekly earnings of the employes in all kinds of manufacturing establishments. Questions as to the actual earnings of all employes were asked of each manufacturer in the country and the surprising number of 123,307 establishments replied. This number of establishments is 62.9 per cent. of all enumerated in the census and they employ more than one-half of all the wage earners engaged in the factory industries in the country.

In a bulletin just issued by the census bureau, containing compilations of these statistics it is shown that of the 3,297,819 wage earners covered by the investigation, 2,619,053 were men; 588,599 were women and 90,167, or 2.7 per cent., were children. The pay rolls of the 123,307 establishments for one week aggregated $33,185,791, and of this amount the men received $29,240,287, or 88.1 per cent. of the whole; the women received $3,633,481 or 11 per cent, and the children $312,023, or 1 per cent.

More than half of all the wage earners included in the bulletin earned $9 and over during the week. The earnings are classified for totals of states and of industries, while 25 industries are shown in detail by states and territories and 25 states by leading industries. Average earnings are also computed for all the states and industries shown.

The figures show that in 1904 the average wage earner employed in manufacturing received $10.06 per week. The average man received $11.16, the average woman $6.17 and the average child under 16 years of age $2.46.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT A RISING CONGRESSMAN

John Joseph Fitzgerald, or "Fitzie," as he is known among those who enjoy his friendship, is one congressman who is making a name for himself in the present alleged "do nothing" session. John Joseph is a member of the minority and a loyal follower of John Sharp Williams, hence he is in his element in these closing days of the session, when John Sharp is making campaign material for the Democracy.

John Joseph is gradually, but surely, working his way to leadership on the Democratic side. While Congressman De Armond of Missouri is the man upon whom will descend the mantle of John Sharp Williams when the latter goes to take the senate seat to which the Mississippi Democrats elected him last fall, the Democracy will want one or two others to bear the brunt of battle on the floor. Fitzgerald appears to be sure of being one of them.

Fitzgerald was born in Trolleydodgerville March 10, 1872. After a course in Brooklyn public schools he went to Manhattan college, graduating with the degree of bachelor of arts. Then he studied law in the New York law school, and was admitted to the New York bar when 21. It wasn't long before he became interested in Brooklyn politics. He was a delegate to the national Democratic convention in Kansas City in 1900, when W. J. Bryan was nominated for the second time. He was then a representative in congress, having been elected from the Seventh New York district to the Fifty-sixth congress in 1898, when only 26 years of age. He was re-elected to the Fifty-seventh, Fifty-eighth, Fifty-ninth and Sixtieth congresses by big majorities.

AMEER OF AFGHANISTAN

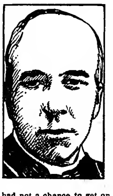
Habibullah Khan, ameer of Afghanistan, "Beloved of God," "Lamp of the Congregation," "Light of the Faith," and "Seeker After God's Help," is waging an official war against British India. He has not declared war yet, but he has allowed 20,000 of his soldiers to invade India and attack the frontier guards. The first result of this indiscreet act will probably be the withdrawal of the subsidy of $600,000 a year he has been drawing from the British government; the second a sound thrashing and the third may be the withdrawal of the title, "Your Majesty," conferred upon him by King Edward when the ameer visited India lately.

He was invited to India in the hope that the sight of an Asiatic nation of 300,000,000 people prospering and peaceable under British rule would reduce his bumptiousness, for he had begun to entertain the idea that his capital, Kabul, was the center of the universe. The sight of the riches of India seems only to have stirred up his cupidity and the predatory instincts of his robber ancestors.

The ameer is an autocratic ruler and has an army of 50,000 men. This by no means accounts for his full fighting force, for every man of the 4,000,000 population is a born fighter and goes about armed at all times, ready to defend his own life and take that of his neighbor if a good opportunity offers. The Kentucky mountaineers could learn much from the Afghans.

The ameer is not a bad ruler, as Orientals go. He has a total lack of respect for human life, and his punishments are sometimes what we would consider excessive. The story told by Rudyard Kipling of the nervous sentry who rushed into the ameer's presence and announced that the Russians were coming illustrates this trait. The ameer ordered him into a tree to watch for them and posted guard below to keep him there. When unable to hold out any longer he dropped upon the bayonets below.

REAL RULER OF IRELAND



Cardinal Michael Logue, archbishop of Armagh and primate of all Ireland, the man who is regarded by all, even the British government, as the "real ruler of Ireland," quite appropriately took a leading part in the centennial celebration of the archdiocese of New York. Not only is he a fellow countryman of the majority of the people of the diocese, but he is the direct ecclesiastical descendant of St. Patrick, who was the first bishop of Armagh; the Armagh cathedral, like that of New York, is named after that saint, and Armagh is Archbishop Farley's home county.

Cardinal Logue is possessed of the truest sort of patriotism, a patriotism that urged him in the first speech he ever delivered in America—for this is his first visit to this country—to urge his hearers never to forget the old sod, but not to allow their love for their native land of their fathers to render them less devoted citizens of the land of their adoption, where no man could say that he had not a chance to get on in the world.

Cardinal Logue was created a cardinal in 1893 when he succeeded the late primate, whose coadjutor he had been. He is a stern disciplinarian, as some of his clergy know, and will tolerate no shirking of duty.

SON TO RIVAL KING EDWARD

Mrs. Bradley Martin in in the limelight once more, not as giving a ball that cost more than any other ball ever given in America, or as managing mamma marrying her daughter to a foreign earl, but as the mother of the director-general of New York society, the man who has extended its bounds to include 2,000 of the elite instead of the original 400—Frederick Townsend Martin, better known among his intimates as "Bachelor" Martin, he being a single man.

The passing of Ward McAllister and the panic left New York society demoralized, and it was Bachelor Martin who pulled it through the past season. Now he is going to England to plan entertainments for his sister, the countess of Craven, to devise novelties to give a fillip to the jaded appetites of English society. It is no light undertaking to go into exclusive English society in the role of professional entertainer, so much different are their tastes from ours, but this young man goes without any qualms whatever, for he has supreme confidence in himself. He has tact, originality and determination, and a total lack of self-consciousness, and does not fear to rival that prince of the art of entertaining—King Edward himself.

Mr. Martin doesn't go in for a town house, for he believes that in the future, because of the growth of society, the hotels must serve in a large measure the purposes of private homes.

Musings of the Metropolis

News of New York Town Outlined in Brief Form.

Limelight Unpopular with Hetty Green

NEW YORK.—Mrs. Hetty Green does not like the limelight and threatens to give up her luxurious apartments at the Plaza. Since her removal there from her simple flat in Hoboken she has been pestered with all sorts of cranks, who believe she is carrying a too heavy load of the mazume and want to relieve her of some of the burden. They think, too, that she has no more regard for filthy lucre than the Gaikwar of Baroda or the Nawab of Rampur, and fleets of would-be borrowers are cruising about the hotel. They have the mistaken impression that Mrs. Green has tapped an unexpected gold mine.

The richest women in the world, however, has avoided in every way making any display. But she finds that she cannot get away from the widely published fact that she is living in a hostelry famous for its luxuriousness, its many millionnaire guests and its possibilities of spending money with both hands and a shovel. Mrs. Green could dine on rare wines and exotic foodstuffs if she wished, but she has only an appetite for simple foods.

From Hoboken to the Plaza is a dizzy climb and the contrasts are worth noting. In Hoboken the woman who has cornered the long green market got along with $8.50 a week for expenses. Her rent was $19 a month. At the Plaza she spends $600 a month for her suite. When she lived in her Hoboken flat Mrs. Green spent 11 cents for muslin curtain in her kitchen to keep out the eyes of prying neighbors. The curtains that screen her from the vulgar gaze at the Plaza are of the finest Valenciennes. Her grocery men in Hoboken never contemplated retiring on the proceeds of Mrs. Green's custom. A quart of milk lasted her three days, he said. It was kept on the window sill to save ice bills. In Hoboken the richest woman in the world could look out on a backyard inhabited by dingy cats and across which were strung long lines of ragged washing. Any time she feels like taking a stroll through the hotel corridors Mrs. Green can bump into people who count their money by the hundred thousands and in some cases millions, and to whom the luxury that to her seems so wonderful at her first sip has grown to be a simple necessity of life.

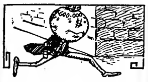
"New" Clubs for the Women of Gotham

AT last the women's club has arrived at man's estate in New York at least. The new style women's club is modeled on the same lines as those followers in the exclusive man's organizations, with its own quarters, including restaurants, library, lounging room, and, so it is whispered among those who disapprove the new idea, smoking and card rooms.

The start in the direction of establishing woman's clubs on the masculine model was made a year ago, when the Colony club, exclusively for women, opened its handsome new building, with a membership that includes many women of the "four hundred." Now the Eclectic club, another fashionable organization, has gone the Colony one better by leasing quarters in the Waldorf-Astoria and announcing that it will provide sleeping quarters for its members, so that they need not go home at night if they feel otherwise inclined. This step was taken only after a bitter fight, for the husbands of some of the members objected strenuously to the prospect of sitting up till the small hours of the morning waiting to hear wifey fumbling with the latchkey.

Another woman's club that has its own house is the Three Arts, composed of young women who are studying art and music in New York. Altogether the city seems to be in a fair way to be as well supplied with woman's clubs of the latest model as with men's, and the women whose husbands have the club habit will be in a position to retaliate in kind.

Great Wealth Passes Corner Every Day



MORE money passes the corner of Broad and Wall streets in New York's financial district than any other single point in the world. According to an estimate just made the amount moving past this corner every minute of the working day is $600,000 or $60,000 for every tick of the clock. This tremendous wealth is the daily contribution from Wall street to the subtreasury of the United States. Approximately one-third of it goes by in gold and currency.

The precautions taken to guard this tremendous store of wealth are as little understood as they are unobtrusive. Messengers carrying millions pass this corner every moment unobserved except by the paid "shadows" employed to guard the money-bearers.

Ever since an express company bringing a shipment of $7,000,000 in gold to the subtreasury forwarded it in wagons on which sat men armed with rifles the old method has gone out of vogue. Such a mob collected, attracted by the sight of the armed men, that it was impossible to unload the coin. As a result a new style of guarding the treasure has been adopted. Few people realize that when they pass the subtreasury they are passing a veritable fortress. Such, however, is the case. Gold and other forms of currency averaging $350,000,000 are deposited behind doors which weigh 40,000 pounds each and cost $30,000. Within the subtreasury is an armament of 100 rifles, with 12,000 rounds of cartridges; 100 revolvers, with 1,200 rounds, and, chief of all, four gatling guns, with 20,000 rounds of ammunition. With this armament any attacking mob could be repulsed in a few moments.

"Court of Tears" Aids Jews in Trouble

TO keep poor Jews out of court, the Hebrew Educational alliance has established a tribunal for ghetto residents known as the "court of tears," and to this come all Jews with disputes, especially family troubles, to settle.

The chief purpose of the court is to settle matrimonial difficulties, and it is becoming harder and harder pressed owing to the great increase in desertion, due partly to the hard times and partly, as is believed by the managers of the alliance, to the brusque manner in which domestic differences are treated in the police courts.

The court of tears sits every day, holding one long session in the afternoon and another at night. The Sunday sessions are the most crowded.

Though this court has no legal authority, and none of the decrees of "Judge" Robbino can be enforced, except by moral suasion, he stated that his court does more to mend broken hearts and reunite separated families than all of the police courts put together.

As an outcome of the experiences in the court of tears, a movement has been started by Mr. Robbino, under the direction of the alliance, looking to the establishment by the legislature of a court of domestic relations, to deal exclusively, in a judicial capacity, with family troubles.

"We keep up a number of costly courts for the enforcement of our civil rights," says Judge Robbino. "We spend hundreds of thousands to compel the payment of a money debt, or to send a culprit to prison. But where is the public tribunal whose duty it is to look out for the welfare of the family, to prop the tottering walls of the home, and restore it, if possible, to the normal functions which God intended it to perform in and for human society?"

Gun That Makes No Noise.

There is surely a terrible responsibility resting to-day upon the shoulders of Hiram Percy Maxim, the son of the inventor of the machine gun. So writes P. Harvey Middleton in the Technical World Magazine. For he has patented a gun which will kill a man with no more noise than the hissing of a snake. Armed with this silent weapon a murderer could shoot down his victim without attracting the least attention, and only on examination would the cause of death be revealed. On the other hand a single policeman using the noiseless gun could disable every member of a gang of burglars before they recovered from their surprise. It is an invention which may lead to the re-equipment of the armed forces of the world, and the revolutionizing of modern methods of warfare—will perhaps even hasten the happy day when there will be no war, for the very best safeguard against war is the invention of weapons of such terrible power that armies will never dare to stand against each other. "War," said Bismarck, "is the greatest enemy of war, and will eventually put war out of existence." In the next great war skirmishers may use noiseless rifles, enabling them to creep along an enemy's front and shoot down unsuspecting pickets one after another, and not until their dead bodies were discovered would the alarm be given. The extended front of a whole army, concealed in the underbrush or behind rocks, could work terrible havoc among the opposing forces before its position could be located. To the big game hunter the silent firearm will open up new horizons.

Perch Fishing.

And the other fishing days when you got up before dawn and stole down-stairs to the dim kitchen. A drink of milk, a doughnut, and a triangle of pie, then you stole out quietly to the barn and got the spading-fork. Then the search, armed with fork and tomato-can, under the broad leaves of the rhubarb bed, back of the henhouse and down by the cow barn, until you had enough worms for the day's sport. Then, of course, you left the fork sticking in the ground—you never would learn to put things away—and started off. Through the garden and orchard, stopping long enough for a handful of currants and a pocketful of sopsyvines—over the pasture bars, eating a handful of huckleberries or low-bush blackberries here and there. Into the wood road—very dark and still in the dawn—where you stepped along very quietly so as not to disturb the bears. You knew perfectly well there were no bears, writes a contributor of the Atlantic, but you rather enjoyed the creepy sensation. Then out through the deep wet meadow grass to the river, where the sun was now beginning to burn away the wisps of mist, and the red-winged blackbirds were making a tremendous fuss over their housekeeping. You reached the river bank at the pout hole, or the big rock, or the old willow (of course, you know the exact place), and then you started fishing.

State universities, at the request of their professors, are to benefit by the Carnegie pension fund. Ten million dollars were originally given as an endowment for pensions for professors in unsectarian colleges. Colleges supported by churches and by the states were omitted, on the ground that if pensions were to be provided, they might well come from those who maintain the institutions. Many colleges, nominally denominational, have given evidence that they are unsectarian, and have been admitted to the benefits of the fund, and the National Association of State Universities petitioned for the enjoyment of the pension provisions. It set forth four reasons, the chief of which were that in the absence of pension allowances the state universities would find it difficult to compete with the other colleges for first-class professors, and that the prospect of pensions paid by the states was remote, as it would involve the acceptance of the policy of pensioning state officers. Mr. Carnegie has admitted the force of their argument by adding $5,000,000 to the original fund, so that the state institutions may benefit. But professors in such universities will not be pensioned unless the state legislature and the governor join in the application that they be admitted to the foundation.

"Always ready for sea duty, but afraid of social festivities," is the way the wife of Admiral Evans recently characterized her distinguished husband. Medical science would probably agree that the admiral has discovered which is the greater danger of the two.

The Tacoma Ledger has discovered that "the art of letter writing has suffered with the introduction of picture post cards," but it isn't noticeable yet in the divorce courts.

SIXTY PERISH IN A WRECK

AWFUL RAILWAY COLLISION AT CONTICH, BELGIUM.

Express Train Crashes Into Local Full of Pilgrims—The Injured Number About 100.

Antwerp.—One of the worst railroad accidents in Europe in recent times occurred at Contich, a station six miles southeast of this city on the main line, at eight o'clock Thursday morning. The exact number of victims has not been determined, owing to the difficulty of removing the bodies from the debris, but the latest estimate places the number at 60 killed 100 wounded.

The catastrophe appears to have been due to a defective switch where the main line crosses a local line. At this point a train, carrying a large number of pilgrims on their way to a local shrine, was standing. Into this the Antwerp-Brussels express dashed at a speed of 50 miles an hour, literally leaping on top of it. The heavy coaches of the express crushed the lighter train into splinters. The sides of the express cars were torn from their fastenings, the floors practically collapsing, thus precipitating the passengers to the side of the track uninjured, whence they fled, frenzied, across the fields. But for this fact the death roll would be much greater. Few of the occupants of the local train escaped alive. Those that were not killed were badly injured, many of them mortally. The engineer and fireman of the express were both killed at their posts.

Prince Albert went to Contich in the evening and visited the injured, having cancelled an engagement to preside at a banquet at Antwerp.

With regard to the cause of the collision, a railroad official stated that the switches were being repaired and that a workman who had been placed at the temporary hand switch appeared to have made a mistake or else the switch failed to act.

UNIVERSITY OFFICIAL QUITS.

Secretary Wade of Michigan Resigns Because of Charges.

Ann Arbor.—James H. Wade, for 25 years secretary of the University of Michigan, submitted his resignation Friday to the board of regents and it was unanimously accepted. The resignation followed an investigation of the university finances, which Attorney General Byrd has been pursuing for several weeks. The investigation centered around the alleged improper use of university property, such as coal and painting and building materials and workmen's time, to an amount estimated at about $5,000. Prof. Martin L. D'Ooge was appointed acting secretary to sign this year's diplomas.

Chicago Jeweler Slain.

Laporte, Ind.—B. Kvasnicka, owner of two Chicago jewelry stores, died Friday afternoon at his country home, one miles northeast of North Judson, a small town south of Laporte, as the result of being shot at 10:30 o'clock Thursday night by an unknown person.

Albert Roubik, who had been employed as a hired man by Kvasnicka, but was discharged Wednesday, has been arrested and charged with the murder, the allegation being based upon a deathbed statement made by Kvasnicka. Roubik declares he is innocent.

Health Good in Canal Zone.

Washington.—By far the most favorable showing as to health conditions in the isthmian canal zone yet made is in the canal commission's report just received for April. It shows that the general death rate for the zone, including Panama and Colon, was 20.04 per thousand, against 40.97 per thousand in the previous April, the population this year being estimated at 116,178 against 97,815 last year. There was but one death from disease among the 9,000 American white people connected with the commission.

RAY LAMPHERE IS INDICTED.

True Bill Also Returned Against Mrs. Gunness, Though Dead.

Laporte, Ind.—In returning seven true bills against Ray Lamphere Friday afternoon, the Laporte county grand jury also indicted Mrs. Belle Gunness for the murder of Andrew Helgelein of Mansfield, S. D. No warrant was issued for Mrs. Gunness, as she was declared officially dead by the verdict of Coroner Mack, but in order to vote a true bill against Lamphere as an accessory in the killing of Helgelein, it was necessary to indict Mrs. Gunness as the principal. Lamphere now stands charged with arson, five murders and being an accessory in the Helgelein murder.

Separate bills were voted against Lamphere for the murder, in the first degree, of Mrs. Belle Gunness and her three children, Philip Gunness, Myrtle Sorenson and Lucy Sorenson.

The digging Friday under the direction of Sheriff Smutzer resulted in the unearthing of a human skull, which it was decided belongs to one of the bodies dug up in the chicken yard two weeks ago. At that time three skeletons were found in one hole, but there were only two skulls. The skull found was in a cess-pool, but why it was dropped there and the rest of the body buried in the little cemetery the authorities cannot explain. Long hair attached to the skull is considered evidence that it is that of a woman. One of the three dismembered bodies referred to was that of a female.

RUEF JURY DISAGREES.

Mistrial in Case Against Former Boss of San Francisco.

San Francisco. — After being out for 43½ hours, the jury in the trial of Abraham Ruef, the former political boss of San Francisco, and central figure in the bribery-graft prosecution, against whom wholesale indictments were returned, failed to agree upon a verdict and was discharged at five o'clock Thursday afternoon by Judge Maurice T. Dooling.

The specific charge against Ruef in the trial just closed was the offer of a bribe of $1,000 to former Supervisor Jennings Phillips to influence his vote favorably upon an electric railroad franchise applied for by the Parkside Realty company. The jury stood six to six upon the first ballot and remained so without a change during the 13 ballots taken. It was learned that the question upon which the jury split was the credibility of the witnesses. There still remain 111 indictments pending against Ruef.

Falling Girder Kills Workmen.

Detroit, Mich.—Thomas Hoin and Joseph Kulkie were killed Friday afternoon and three other workmen were seriously injured by being knocked from the Howard street bridge by a falling steel girder that was being hoisted to strengthen the bridge superstructure. The men were swept from the floor of the bridge and hurled to the Michigan Central railroad tracks 20 feet below. A workman named A. West, who was riding the girder as it was being hoisted, fell with it without being hurt.

Dr. Fullerton Elected Moderator.

Kansas City, Mo.—Rev. Dr. Baxter P. Fullerton of St. Louis was elected moderator of the Presbyterian church in the United States Thursday, to succeed Rev. Dr. William H. Roberts of Philadelphia.

Prof. Milukoff Assaulted.

St. Petersburg.—Prof. Paul N. Milukoff, leader of the Constitutional Democrats in the Duma, and editor of the Rech, was the victim of an assault Friday night at the hands of two editors of the Liberal organ, Russ, whom the Rech had accused of blackmailing banks and the improper conversion of popular funds. The editors were admitted to the office of the Rech and during a conversation with him, struck M. Milukoff in the face, knocking him to the floor, where they left him bleeding from his wounds.

MURDERER OF SIX?

DOWAGIAC (MICH.) MAN ACCUSED OF KILLING HALF DOZEN.

STORY OF WIFE BETRAYS

She Declares He Sought Her Life—Police Assert Prisoner Has Confessed to Slaying Two Men.

South Bend, Ind.—James Brimmingstall, aged 40, is under arrest at Dowagiac, Mich., 27 miles from South Bend, charged with six murders. The police say he has already confessed to two, and Prosecutor Bresnahan is confident the prisoner will admit the other crimes. His arrest followed an alleged attempt to make his wife his seventh victim. She escaped and appealed to the police. It is probable that Brimmingstall will be subjected to further "sweat-box" examinations, and that he will be held on a charge of murdering David Huff here last June.

The police say he confessed to killing a man in Kansas, who he had a grudge against, and was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. After his release he killed a companion and received a sentence of three years. He gave no names.

List of Alleged Victims.

The list of Brimmingstall's victims, according to the officers, is:

Man in Kansas (name not given), killed by Brimmingstall when 16 years old.

Two men sleeping in a tent in Missouri, names unknown to officers.

David Huff, Dowagiac, June, 1907.

Smith Hortium, Dowagiac, February, 1908.

Mrs. Brimmingstall, apparently distracted, appealed to Prosecuting Attorney T. J. Bresnahan for protection. She said that "Jim" was going to kill her; she could not go to sleep for fear he would break into the house and murder her. She gave hints that led to the discovery that her husband has a criminal record.

Deeded Property; Supposed Slain.

David Huff, an aged citizen of Dowagiac, went to the Brimmingstall home to live a year and a half ago. He deeded them his property on their proposition to support him for the remainder of his life. One night last June a scuffle was heard in an upper room of the house. Huff was found dead in bed with the bed clothing very much disturbed. Brimmingstall said that Huff had some sort of violent illness—colic or something like it, and accidentally choked himself to death with the bed clothing. The body of Huff was buried next day and the apparent haste occasioned some comment.

In February of this year Smith Hortium disappeared. There are several circumstances tending to connect Brimmingstall with the disappearance of Hortium. Hortium's body was found frozen in the ice of a near-by stream. His money had disappeared.

STRIKE MAY BE ENDED SOON.

Good Progress Toward Peace in the Cleveland Trouble.

Cleveland, O. — Greater progress in settling the street railway strike peacefully and by arbitration was made Wednesday than any day since the strike began. Both sides made material concessions.

President Du Pont of the Municipal Traction company stated that he would take back the old employes as new men. He insisted upon giving the present men at work the preference. This was objectionable to the union. In a later conference with the union the members of the state board of arbitration obtained a slight concession from the strikers. They agreed to have the men go back as new men as a temporary expedient. Coupled with this, however, was the further agreement to allow the future status of the strikers to be arbitrated.

Later it was stated that the company and the strikers had agreed and that the formalities of preparing the arbitration bill would proceed. Meantime, it was further stated, there would be an armistice and the strikers would be advised to return to work at once.

Violence ceased to be a prominent factor in the strike during the day and evening. Mayor Johnson issued a proclamation offering rewards for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons placing explosives on the tracks.

Meets Predicted Death Bravely.

New York. — The fate that the physicians at the Pasteur institute predicted for him on Monday overtook William H. Marsh of Brooklyn late Wednesday, when at his residence on Ocean avenue the well-to-do manufacturer of water meters died of hydrophobia. His end was peaceful, as he was put under the influence of opiates early in the day and was kept free from pain to the last.

Woman and Man Whipped.

Morgantown, Ky.—A band of masked men called at the home of Widow Haynes at Horse Mill, about 12 miles from here, in this county, and whipped her severely. They then went to the home of Crit Johnson and took him out of bed and whipped him.

Fire at Summer Resort.

St. Joseph, Mo.—Fire, caused by crossed electric wires, caused $50,000 loss to the Midway at Lake Contrary, a summer resort about two miles from St. Joseph, Friday.

SENATOR PLATT WINS SUIT

PLAINTIFF IN DIVORCE CASE IS HELD FOR PERJURY.

Locked Up in the Tombs—Expert Witnesses Destroy Credibility of Her Story of Marriage.

New York.—Mae C. Wood, whose suit for an absolute divorce from United States Senator Thomas C. Platt of New York has been on trial in the supreme court here for several days, was committed to the Tombs prison late Thursday after Justice O'Gorman had dismissed the complaint in her action and ordered her held in $5,000 bail on a charge of perjury.

The decision in Senator Platt's favor and the sudden and sensational end of the suit came after a day which the defense occupied largely with the introduction of expert and other testimony attacking the authenticity of the documents by which the plaintiff was seeking to establish her alleged marriage to Senator Platt.

A handwriting expert testified that in his opinion the body of the letter, in which Senator Platt was alleged to have admitted his relation as husband to the plaintiff, was added after the senator's signature had been affixed. More telling still for the defense were the depositions by engravers and stationers called by counsel for Senator Platt that the blank form upon which the alleged Platt-Wood marriage certificate was prepared, was not lithographed until three months after the date upon which the marriage of Miss Wood to Senator Platt was alleged to have taken place.

Senator Platt's counsel moved for a dismissal of the complaint. It was forthwith granted by Justice O'Gorman, who in rendering his decision said:

"I cannot credit the plaintiff's evidence as to the alleged marriage, and the testimony as it impresses the court is that this is a most wicked design to support a false and fictitious claim by forgery and perjury."

Forthwith Justice O'Gorman ordered Miss Wood committed to the Tombs on the charge of perjury, fixing bail in her case at $5,000.

TANK EXPLODES; SEVEN DIE.

Society People Aboard Launch Perish by Drowning in Arkansas.

Clarendon, Ark. — Seven prominent young society people were drowned when the gasoline tank of a launch in which they were going for a moonlight excursion exploded. Other members of the party were rescued with difficulty. One of those rescued, Miss Mary Cavett of Clarendon, was badly burned. Details of the tragedy are meager. The boat left Clarendon early in the evening, bearing a merry party, who had planned to go several miles down the river. When about five miles below Clarendon the boiler of the launch exploded, wrecking the boat and hurling the occupants into the river, which at this point, more than 50 feet from shore, is very deep. Few could swim, and some were stunned by the force of the explosion and went down before swimmers in the party could make an effort at rescue. The survivors were found on the river bank by runners dispatched from here because of the prolonged absence of the party.

BANKRUPT BROKER ARRESTED.

T. A. McIntyre is Indicted on Charge of Grand Larceny.

New York.—Upon the finding Wednesday of an indictment against him by the grand jury, Thomas A. McIntyre of the failed firm of T. A. McIntyre & Co., was arrested on a warrant charging grand larceny in the first degree. He gave bail in the sum of $25,000 and was released.

Mr. McIntyre's arrest was made in the face of vigorous protest by his physicians at the sanitarium where he has been a patient since shortly after the failure of his firm. They declared him too ill to be removed, but after the officers had offered to take him to Bellevue hospital in an ambulance as a prisoner he consented to the other alternative and went with the detectives to police headquarters.

Gas Explosion Wrecks Store.

Chicago. — An explosion of gas in the basement of the John A. Colby & Sons furniture store, 156 Wabash avenue, Wednesday afternoon partly wrecked the newly remodeled establishment and probably fatally injured Miss Frances Branitzky, cashier of the company. A dozen other persons had narrow escapes. A careless search for a leak in the gas pipes is given as the cause of the accident.

Veteran Theater Manager Dies.

Chicago. — John Austin Hamlin, proprietor of the Grand opera house, died Wednesday night at the Virginia hotel of heart disease. He was one of the best known theatrical managers in the country and noted for the independent manner in which he conducted the Grand opera house. He built the theater in 1872.

Gov. Sparks of Nevada Dies.

Reno, Nev.—Gov. John Sparks of Nevada, who had been ill for some time, died at his ranch near Reno Friday of Bright's disease. Don S. Dickerson now becomes governor of Nevada. He is 34 years of age.

American Vice-Consul Dead.

Washington.—A telegram was received at the state department Friday from Hector Do Castro, American consul general at Rome, announcing the death there of Charles M. Wood, the vice-consul general.

MISS. SOPHIA KITTLESEN.

HEALTH VERY POOR—RESTORED BY PE-RU-NA.

Catarrh Twenty-five Years—
Had a Bad Cough.

Miss Sophia Kittlesen, Evanston, Illinois, U. S. A., writes:

"I have been troubled with catarrh for nearly twenty-five years and have tried many cures for it, but obtained very little help.

"Then my brother advised me to try Peruna, and I did.

"My health was very poor at the time I began taking Peruna. My throat was very sore and I had a bad cough.

"Peruna has cured me. The chronic catarrh is gone and my health is very much improved.

"I recommend Peruna to all my friends who are troubled as I was."

PERUNA TABLETS:—Some people prefer tablets, rather than medicine in a fluid form. Such people can obtain Peruna tablets, which represent the medicinal ingredients of Peruna. Each tablet equals one average dose of Peruna.

Man-a-lin the Ideal Laxative.

He Was Practical.

"Young man, you write a good deal of poetry to my daughter."

"Yes, sir."

"It takes a practical man to support a wife."

"Well, it's this way. I have to write her an occasional letter, and I'm so busy at the office that I just copy the poetry to fill in."

The explanation was satisfactory.

An Indignant Editor.

Last Saturday evening after sewing two patches on our Sunday trousers and cleaning and pressing them we hung them out to dry. An hour later we found that they had been stolen. This will explain why we were not in our accustomed place in church on Sunday. The human being who will deliberately steal a pair of trousers from the editor of a weekly paper, and knowing that they are his only pair for church-going, deserves a worse fate than our indignation will allow us to mention. It seems to us as if civilization had been turned back half a century.—Hometown (Pa.) Banner.

The Young Idea.

"How many seed compartments are there in an apple?" he asked. No one answered. "And yet," continued the school inspector, "all of you eat many an apple in the course of a year and see the fruit every day, probably. You must learn to notice the little things in nature."

The talk of the inspector impressed the children, and at recess the teacher overheard them discussing it. A little girl, getting her companions around her, gravely said:

"Now, children, just suppose I am Mr. Taylor. You've got to know more about common things. If you don't you'll all grow up to be fools. Now, tell me, Minnie," she continued, looking sternly at a playmate, "how many feathers are there on a hen?"

DR. TALKS OF FOOD

Pres. of Board of Health.

"What shall I eat?" is the daily inquiry the physician is met with. I do not hesitate to say that in my judgment a large percentage of disease is caused by poorly selected and improperly prepared food. My personal experience with the fully-cooked food, known as Grape-Nuts, enables me to speak freely of its merits.

"From overwork, I suffered several years with malnutrition, palpitation of the heart and loss of sleep. Last summer I was led to experiment personally with the new food, which I used in conjunction with good rich cow's milk. In a short time after I commenced its use, the disagreeable symptoms disappeared, my heart's action became steady and normal, the functions of the stomach were properly carried out and I again slept as soundly and as well as in my youth.

"I look upon Grape-Nuts as a perfect food, and no one can gainsay but that it has a most prominent place in a rational, scientific system of feeding. Any one who uses this food will soon be convinced of the soundness of the principle upon which it is manufactured and may thereby know the facts as to its true worth." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

State's Earnings.

Minneapolis—Receipts at the various state institutions for April as reported to State Auditor Iversen by the state board of control aggregated $31,990.63. This amount includes $15,582.34 from the twine and hemp plant at the state prison, and $1,363.39 from the sanatorium for consumptives at Walker. The receipts at this institution since it was opened in January now aggregate $3,224.76. The receipts at the other institutions were as follows: Anoka state asylum, $414.10; Hastings state asylum, $66.57; Fergus Falls state hospital, $432.73; Rochester state hospital, $1,169.13; St. Peter state hospital, $420.44; school for the blind, $97.94; school for the deaf, $338.24; school for feeble minded, $911.49; state public school, $126.48; state training school, $107.16; state reformatory, $1,526.46; state prison, $9,414.16.

Postoffice Appropriations.

Washington—The Minneapolis public building bill passed the house without change, carrying with it the authorization of a $100,000 appropriation and a $500,000 limit of cost of the new Minneapolis postoffice. Congressman Frank M. Nye expressed satisfaction at the appropriation.

Other Minnesota and Dakota appropriations authorized in the bill are: For enlargement: Alexandria, $29,000; Crookston, $25,000; New Ulm, $20,000; Sioux Falls, S. D., $50,000.

For buildings and sites: Austin, $50,000; Brainerd, $45,000; Rochester, $50,000; Faribault, $50,000; Virginia, $60,000; Willmor, $50,000; Bismarck, N. D., $150,000; Minot, N. D., $125,000; Huron, S. D., $65,000.

For sites: Moorhead, $5,000; Rapid City, S. D., $7,500.

Slept Three Days.

Long Prairie—Miss Amanda Peterson, who recently came from Sweden to the home of a sister who lives a few miles from this city, has slept for three nights and three days, and all efforts of doctors to awaken her have been futile. Her sister heard a noise in the girl's room Tuesday night, and upon investigation found the girl raving and demented. For an hour members of the family struggled with Miss Peterson in an effort to keep her from doing herself injury, and finally she sank into quiet slumber. Since then she has not awakened, and she was brought to a local hospital, where further efforts were made to arouse her, but without success.

Suicide.

Avoca—The body of Mrs. Ole Rakness, who disappeared from her home here two weeks ago, was found floating in the lake near town. On the night of her disappearance a number of neighbors spent the evening at the Rakness home. After their departure she suddenly disappeared and it now seems that she went directly to the lake, where she waded in beyond her depth. The cause of her suicide is attributed to poor health, which brought on temporary insanity.

A number of years ago her father committed suicide by hanging himself, shortly after which her brother drowned himself in an old well.

No Reduction.

St. Paul—The state tax commission denied the application of the United States Steel corporation and the independent iron mining companies for abatement on the assessments of their properties aggregating about $15,000,000. The applications were submitted to the tax commission after their allowance had been approved by the county commissioners of the counties in which the properties are located, but after fully considering the matter the commission turned them down.

Stricken When on Roof.

Winona—Peter Milkowski, 64 years old, while seated on the ridge-pole of his house, shingling the roof, succumbed to paralysis of the heart and fell to the ground. He was killed instantly. The body was found some time later, rigidly upright, with the hammer held as it was in driving the last nail. Milkowski was one of the earliest Polish pioneers in this city.

NEWS NOTES.

Minneapolis—William C. Rogers shot himself in the head and lay dead in a room at the Victor hotel, 36 Washington avenue south for about twenty-four hours before the tragedy was discovered.

Crookston—Farmers sat with the county commissioners here and had a long drawn out fight over the division of a school district in the towns of Brandt and Helgaland in this county. The new school district was finally set off.

Washington—A certificate has been issued by the controller of the currency authorizing the First National Bank of Deer River, Minn., to commence business with a capital of $25,000.

Minneapolis—After four years of experiments in Idaho, a local man announces he has discovered a new wheat that will yield 275 bushels per acre.

Minneapolis—Thieves broke into the hennery of C. E. Crowley, 3052 Fifteenth avenue south and stole fifty pure bred Wyandottes.

St. Paul—School children this summer will distribute flowers among sick people.

Moose Lake—A. E. Anderson, principal of the Moose Lake school, was drowned in the Kettle river.

Stillwater—Twelve-year-old boy admits series of recent burglaries and court reprimands lad's father.

St. Paul—Jas. Schwartz finds body of infant which had been strangled to death, in Calvary cemetery.

Duluth—United States Steel corporation begins work in preparation for the building of its plant at the head of the lakes.

Kennedy—Arthur Anderson, the eleven-year-old son of August Anderson, was drowned while swimming in a pond near that place.

Minneapolis—Minnie Olson, injured in a storm at Lake Independence, Aug. 19, 1907, died in the City Hospital, never having recovered from the injuries received then.

Hamline—Miss Jennie Constance and Warren Heins, juniors at Hamline university, are probably fatally hurt in street car accident while returning from a class function.

Crookston—In a game of ball at Fisher, east of here, between the village baseball team of that place and a team of farmer boys, Ohmer Woodward, one of the Fisher team, broke his lower leg while base running.

Minneapolis—While shopping in a Nicollet avenue department store, Mrs. Mamie Slocum, whose address the police failed to learn, was robbed of property valued at $2,000, including diamonds, bank notes, checks and a $1,000 mortgage.

Crookston—The fight over the establishment of ditch 72 in this county was settled for the time by the direction of the county board that the opponents of the ditch draw up a petition for a big ditch for an outlet, on which question the farmers are divided.

St. Paul—Secretary Thomas H. Salmon, of the Republican state committee, sent out the call for the state nominating convention, which will be held in St. Paul July 1. The call provides that the convention shall meet in the St. Paul Auditorium at 11 o'clock.

Duluth—Thomas A. Bury, postmaster, and for years an honored and highly respected citizen, killed himself at his home at Two Harbors. It was thought at first that he had committed suicide, but Coroner Goldsworthy held an inquest and a verdict of accidental death was returned.

St. Paul—Crashing into a large plate glass window at the North St. Paul Casket Company's display rooms, while running at full speed, Gracie Walker, fourteen years old, 510 St. Peter street, was perhaps fatally cut by falling glass. Her sister Lulu, twelve years old, was also badly cut about the arms and shoulders.

Crookston—Oro Funseth was brought into this city by Sheriff Richmond of Roseau county and appeared before Judge Watts here charged with forgery of a check on a party named Haggland in Roseau county. The check was forged on the state bank at Warroad. He was sentenced to the reformatory at St. Cloud.

Minneapolis.—"Tempest and Sunshine," a dramatization of Mary J. Holmes' widely read novel of the same name, will be seen at the Bijou Opera House, Minneapolis, the week of May 31st. The scenes are laid in Kentucky, and the story follows the careers of two beautiful southern girls, "Tempest" and "Sunshine."

St. Cloud—In response to inquiries from commission men the state dairy and food commission is serving notice that the veal of calves less than four weeks old cannot be sold in this state. A law passed in 1905 prohibits it and imposes a penalty of a fine of $50 to $100 or imprisonment for not to exceed ninety days for a violation of its provisions.

St. Paul—The expenses in St. Paul give a fair example of the cost of holding an election in a large city, although the expenses in Minneapolis are somewhat larger for each precinct than they are here. In 1906 two elections were held in St. Paul, the city election in the spring and the general election in the fall. The total expenses in the spring election were $25,770.96 and in the fall they were $26,472.51.

Eveleth—Eveleth will place a strong team in the field this season. Recently a mass meeting was called and with the wildest enthusiasm the organization of a strong semi-professional team was determined upon.

St. Paul—State Treasurer Dinehart drew a draft on the Soo road for $10,291.38 which Public Examiner Schaefer reports is due the state from the company.

SPORTING GOSSIP

No other problem before the club owners of the American and National leagues can be compared with the question of feeding the players when they are on the road. The rapid disappearance of American plan hotels, the wretched substitutes therefor offered by the European plan taverns, and the propensity of ball players to "make money" when given an allowance for their meals, are responsible for it all. The club owners would not object at all to paying $1 a meal per man when the teams are on the road if the player would buy 100 cents' worth of food with the dollar, after he once gets his paws on the money. Not more than one player on a team, the country over, will do this, however. In such an extremity it becomes necessary, under Johnson's august dictatorship, in cities like Chicago and St. Louis, for the teams to go to European plan hotels that put up an "American plan bill of fare" for the players. It doesn't take a very fanciful imagination to figure out the bill, made up as it is of stuff not good enough to serve in the a la carte dining room and not quite, but almost, poor enough to throw out to the dogs. Strangely enough, the western hotels are far worse than the eastern hostelries in this respect and the ball players usually return from their trips to Chicago and St. Louis famished for good, wholesome food. The time is near at hand when the club owners in making up their estimate of expenses for the season will figure on a $5-a-day rate per player. In this way and no other can the management be assured that the men are eating enough of the proper kind of food to keep them in condition.

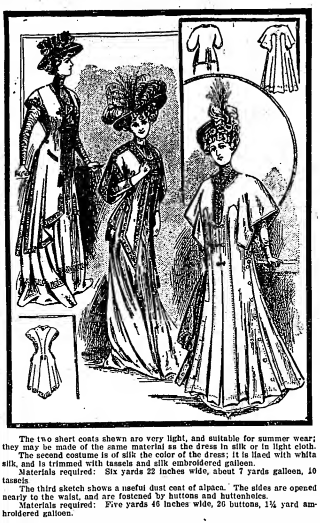
If a player is allowed to eat a dollar's worth of good food—such as served in the a la carte dining rooms—per meal, signing the check on each occasion and thus have no opportunity to starve himself and "make money on the side," the big problem will have been solved.

Harry Niles has been a factor in the Yankees' fast start and has been getting bouquets along Broadway. The New York Journal says of him: "At Elberfield's left is the young man who the 'Kid' says will be the sensational infielder of the year—Harry Niles. Niles has just begun to get his batting eye and holds out promises that he will return to the form that put him at the head of the league for weeks last year."

HARRY NILES

Why longer talk of the .300 hitter when talking of excellence? The term is now a misnomer. It's just like talking to the greatest ball player instead of a great ball player. The .300 is now the greatest. When it comes to great, .275 is more like it from the standard set. It is a noteworthy fact but 13 men hit over .300 in both major leagues last season. With the great strides made in pitching and the use of the "spit ball," coupled with the more heady playing of outfielders, for certain batsmen, the .300 hitter hasn't much chance any longer. Taken as a matter of comparison, the .275 hitter of to-day perhaps is just as good as the .300 hitter ten years ago. He is up against just that much stronger pitching. Ever since baseball has become popular enough to warrant the title of the national sport the move has been to handicap the batsmen and help the pitcher. It's time the table is being turned and the game is opened up. Fans are educated day in and day out to appreciate the great work of pitchers and to enjoy a 1 to 0 game. They may sit on the bleachers and drink in that sort of play and think it's great. In the year 1887 there were 50 batters who hit over .300. Then the real crusade began to help the pitcher. The following year the number of strikes was reduced to three instead of four, and there were but six .300 batsmen. In 1889 the batsmen became more used to conditions, and there were 16 men who hit over .300. Again his power was curtailed in favor of the pitcher. This time the number of balls was reduced from six to four and again there was a falling off. Since then it has been a fight between pitcher and batsman for supremacy. The pitcher has been getting the best of it, too, with the fans growling disapproval.

SOME NEW COATS



The two short coats shown are very light, and suitable for summer wear; they may be made of the same material as the dress in silk or in light cloth.

The second costume is of silk the color of the dress; it is lined with white silk, and is trimmed with tassels and silk embroidered galloon.

Materials required: Six yards 22 inches wide, about 7 yards galloon, 10 tassels.

The third sketch shows a useful dust coat of alpaca. The sides are opened nearly to the waist, and are fastened by buttons and buttonholes.

Materials required: Five yards 46 inches wide, 26 buttons, 1¼ yard embroidered galloon.

TOO FEW THINK OF HARMONY.

Many persons have excellent taste for colors, but not combinations of shades. The following are excellent rules for fancy work, interior or exterior house decorations and valuable in suggestions for dress purposes.

Cold green contrasts with crimson, purple, white, pink, gold, orange; harmonizes with olive, citron, brown, black and gray.

Warm green contrasts with crimson, maroon, red, pink, white, black and lavender; harmonizes with yellow, orange, sky blue, gray, white, brown and buff.

Orange contrasts with purple, blues, black, olive, crimson and gray; harmonizes with yellow, red, warm green, brown, white and buff.

Gold contrasts with any dark color, but looks richer with dark tones and least with yellow.

Gold's best harmony is white.

Dark, bright colors are usually warm.

Mourning Veils.

Now that the larger hats are admissible in mourning, the question of an appropriate veil is sometimes vexing. Speaking generally, supposing the hat to be on the droopy brim order, or even slightly bent, as over the face and down in the back—for a shape that raises itself at the side is not correct—then the veil may be of crepe or grenadine, falling over the hat down the back, when the hat becomes French mourning.

If, however, the brim is perfectly straight and flat (though broad), as the sailor shape, then a face veil of plain net, with or without a border, is worn.

Buying Tan Shoes.

An authority claims that tan shoes should be purchased late in the day, because earlier in the day a much smaller shoe can be comfortably worn, yet will prove a torment later in the day. Tan leather does not "give" like other leather and often shrinks slightly when dampened. For this reason a tan shoe holds its shape much better than a black one, though it must be comfortably fitted when purchased. This should be remembered by mothers buying tan shoes for children, for a pinched shoe is too annoying for anything and doubly so for children.

The Children's Table.

A friend of mine has a set of small square doilies, which she keeps for the children to use when they have a party or a distinguished guest. They are also used on birthdays, and if a child is ill one of these doilies is sure to grace his tray. They are embroidered with quotations from "Alice in Wonderland," [illegible] different, and all concerning things to eat. The children are so fond of these doilies that I think some other mother might like to make her children a set.—Housekeeper.

MISUSE THEIR CHIEF BEAUTY.

Women All Too Prone to Abuse the Crown of Glory.

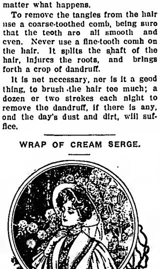
You know, and every woman knows, that women treat their hair to unpardonable abuse. Women treat their hair to deeper insults than any of their other possessions. One night when a woman feels amiable and bright she will brush and pat her hair and put a good, refreshing tonic on it, and then braid it down her back. But O! the next night, when she comes home after a bridge party, she will yank the hundred odd hairpins loose and shake her hair away from her head and neck, and hop into bed unmindful of the consequences.

The hair needs regular and constant care, and under these conditions only will it flourish. Find some course of treatment which suits your hair and stick to this particular treatment, no matter what happens.

To remove the tangles from the hair use a coarse-toothed comb, being sure that the teeth are all smooth and even. Never use a fine-tooth comb on the hair. It splits the shaft of the hair, injures the roots, and brings forth a crop of dandruff.

It is not necessary, nor is it a good thing, to brush the hair too much; a dozen or two strokes each night to remove the dandruff, if there is any, and the day's dust and dirt, will suffice.

WRAP OF CREAM SERGE.



With Cream Silk Kilting Round the Collar.

Crochet Belts.

Now that the princess modes are so much in vogue the belt counter is not so well patronized as heretofore, and this causes the manufacturers to be more than ever on the alert to produce new lines that will be more than usually tempting.

This little accessory will be ever in demand for shirtwaists, and among the novelties of this kind is a soft, flexible belt that looks like crochet. It closes with a mother-of-pearl buckle and is very dainty. Price, 25 cents only.

LANDLORD KNEW HIS CAPACITY.

Would Need to Lay in Supplies for Student Guest.

"Lawyer Hummel entertained us with his brilliant conversation on the Lusitania," said a tourist.

"Hummel had one night in the smoking room an argument with a terribly scarred German about education.

"'There's nothing like our German students. You can't get away from that,' the German boasted, and his face, all slashed from corps duels, beamed with pride.

"'No, you're right,' said Hummel. 'I once visited a German student in Heidelberg. As we conversed on dueling in the students' sitting room a waiter knocked, entered and said politely:

"'"The landlord of the Keg presents his compliments and wishes to know if you are thinking of stepping across this evening, sir?"

"'"What does he want to know that for?" the student inquired.

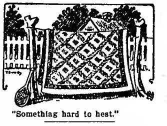
"'"Because, sir, if you don't," said the waiter, "it will scarcely be worth while to tap a fresh barrel to-day."'"

NO SKIN LEFT ON BODY.

For Six Months Baby Was Expected to Die with Eczema—Now Well—Doctor Said to Use Cuticura.

"Six months after birth my little girl broke out with eczema and I had two doctors in attendance. There was not a particle of skin left on her body, the blood oozed out just anywhere, and we had to wrap her in silk and carry her on a pillow for ten weeks. She was the most terrible sight I ever saw, and for six months I looked for her to die. I used every known remedy to alleviate her suffering, for it was terrible to witness. Dr. C—— gave her up. Dr. B—— recommended the Cuticura Remedies. She will soon be three years old and has never had a sign of the dread trouble since. We used about eight cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment. James J. Smith, Durmid, Va., Oct. 14 and 22, 1906."

COMMON PHRASE.



"Something hard to beat."

Saved From Being a Cripple for Life.

"Almost six or seven weeks ago I became paralyzed all at once with rheumatism," writes Mrs. Louis McKey, 913 Seventh street, Oakland, Cal. "It struck me in the back and extended from the hip of my right leg down to my feet. The attack was so severe that I could not move in bed and was afraid that I should be a cripple for life.

"About 12 years ago I received a sample bottle of your Liniment but never had occasion to use it, as I have always been well, but something told me that Sloan's Liniment would help me, so I tried it. After the second application I could get up out of bed, and in three days could walk, and now feel well and entirely free from pain.

"My friends were very much surprised at my rapid recovery and I was only too glad to tell them that Sloan's Liniment was the only medicine I used."

Belgium Buying Autos.

Belgium is now importing yearly about $1,500,000 worth of automobiles, motorcycles and bicycles. These imports have quadrupled in four years.

Truth and Quality

appeal to the Well-Informed in every walk of life and are essential to permanent success and creditable standing. Accordingly, it is not claimed that Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is the only remedy of known value, but one of many reasons why it is the best of personal and family laxatives is the fact that it cleanses, sweetens and relieves the internal organs on which it acts without any debilitating after effects and without having to increase the quantity from time to time.

It acts pleasantly and naturally and truly as a laxative, and its component parts are known to and approved by physicians, as it is free from all objectionable substances. To get its beneficial effects always purchase the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

We note that Theo. A. Thompson is candidate for Regitser of deeds of Polk county, and we wish we was down there to give him a good solid vote.

There will be no Republican Convention fights this year. The people will elect the delegates to the state conventions, and they will nominate the ticket, and then the fight will start for their election.

The Republican State Convention will be held in the Auditorium at St. Paul on July 1st, and it will soon be time to grind up the butcher knives, so as to have them ready for business, if the Convention should not nominate just the men of your choice.

We have received word from Congressman Halvor Steenerson that he had passed the bill authorizeing the constructing of a bridge across the Red Lake River in the town of Highlanding It was certainly no easy matter to pass this bill under the existing circumstances in in Congress, and again has Mr, Steenerson shown that he has the ability to get measures throu congress, and that he will use it to get what the common peo- ask him for. He is the first REPRESENTATIVE of the people that has been in congress for a good many years, and they will undoubtly keep him there as long as he wants to stay,

That's The Stuff,

While there are plenty of candidates for the republican nomination for governor, it does not seem as if any of them had created a great deal of inthusiam in their favor, Present conditions would indicate that there will be a large number of uninstructed delegates sent to the convention, In a great maney of the counties no candidate will have sufficient strength to carry instructions. Besides a large number of republican voters are adverse to having a county convention fight for the reason that it has a bad affect on the party. With these conditions prevailing it will be almost impossible to pick a winner until after the convention has decided it. Let the counties select good representative men as delegates, let them go uninstructed and then let the state convention decide who is the most available man. In this way we would stand a good show to elect our entire ticket,—St. Hilaire Spectator.

A Question.

"My wife thinks she will never find a better cook than the one we now have."

"Humph! Uh—er—say, what would you call your wife, a pessimist or an optimist?"—Cleveland Press.

Those Wicked Clubs.

Doctor (to wife whose husband is ill) —Is not your husband a hypochondriac? Wife—Oh, doctor, he doesn't belong to any society at all!—Meggendorfer Blatter.

Mind is the partial side of man. The heart is everything.—Rivarol.

Tough Fare.

In a New Zealand town one of the municipal candidates, a pronounced teetotaler, had received a present of a huge Scotch thistle, which at the moment happened to be lying on the table of his committee room. A friend, entering, withdrew hastily, with the remark: "I beg your pardon. I didn't know you were at luncheon."

Notice Of Sale Of Bonds.

Bids for the purchase of $700.00, ten-year, six per cent bonds of school district No. 60 of the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, will be received by the undersigned, up to June 13th, 1908, at 2 o' clock P.M., at which time the Board of Trustees of said District will meet at the residence of the undersigned in said District to consider such bids, and to sell such bonds. The Board reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

TOWNSHIP NOTICE.

Editor The Sunbeam:

At our last annual Town meeting we voted to purchase a Town ditcher, and later a request was made for a special Town Meeting for the purpose of bonding the town to purchase the ditcher. The election was held, but was not very well atteeded, as only 16 votes was cast, viz: 14 votes for bonding and 2 against. The intention was to make a loan from the State, but upon request for said loan the state would not consider the matter as they use and furnish their own blanks and forms for any loans from the state, which must be used by Townships and other applicants for state money, or they will not be considered legal according to state law.

For this reason the special Town meeting held will not be valid. Upon receiveing this information the Chairman of the Town board instructed me to notify the voters, to this affect.

W. A. Swanson, Ass't Town Clerk,

The Value of Diamonds.

The value of the diamond is at so much per carat, and up to a certain limit the value per carat increases as the size of the stone increases. When a carat diamond is quoted at $125, a diamond weighing a half a carat is counted at the rate of $75 per carat, three-quarter carat diamonds at $100 per carat, one and one-quarter carat diamonds at $140 per carat, one and one-half carat diamonds at $150 per carat, one and three-quarter carat diamonds at $180 per carat, and two carat stones at $200 per carat. Stones weighing more than two carats sell at about the same rate as that quoted for two carat stones, and do not increase as rapidly owing to the more limited demand for the larger sized stones.—New York Herald.

It's Results That Count

In cooking it's the results that count. So when a housewife starts to make Bread or Rools or Pies, naturally she wants her cooking to have that rich crisp, pleasing odor. But it must also have that whiteness, lightness and wholesomeness which is so essential to good cooking.

All kinds of garden tools, and garden seeds, at A. Ellingsons.

Judgeing by the way the logs are running in the river, "there must have been another boom busted" up the river. It will be almost impossible for the boats to run up the river as it is solid full of logs from Highlanding to Thief River Falls.

Creamery Express Boat.

The board of Directors of the Highlanding Creamery have made arrangements with the Mr. Hansons, of Hilda to have their gasoline boat run to carry cream to the creamery. The boat will start from Hilda in the morning, on Mondays and Fridays and run down the river to Highlanding and take on all cream delivered to them on the river bank to the creamery. They will then go down the river as far as Joe Maxwells and Parnos and bring the cream up the river to the creamery. The price is 5 cents for a 10 gallon can and 8 cents for a fifteen gallon can.

Yes We Have Him.

The creamery at Highlanding opened for business last week and the first butter was churned on Saturday. There will be one reason to believe that this creamery will be one of the best in this section in time. Wm. ODD BOATS IN MANY LANDS
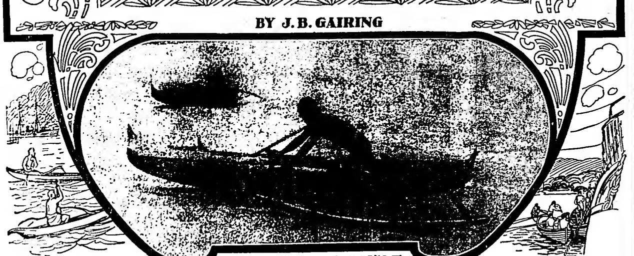
PECULIAR MEANS OF NAVIGATION THE WORLD OVER

BY J. B. GAIRING



THE NATIVE CANOE OF HAWAII

To any observing tourist who might journey around the globe the various types of sea and river craft that he would see on such a trip are as distinctive as are the costumes of many of the countries he would travel through.

Few Americans there are who are not familiar with our present styles of water craft, such as the common rowboat and sailing yachts, but there are many who, if told that these boats set down on some foreign stream would excite considerable curiosity, would be greatly surprised. However, if they would stop to consider that these boats were evolved from the primitive crafts of our forefathers and that the various conditions in different lands would make these boats impracticable, the surprise would be somewhat tempered.

First, let us consider the gondola of Italy, renowned in song and story. The gondola has probably been drawn oftener than any other boat on record. Crank and black and dismal, with the bright steel beak on the lofty prow, this boat does not appeal so successfully to the nautical mind as it would seem to do to the artistic and poetical one. But on the miles of canals in the city of Venice this craft is peculiarly adaptable. The gondola was formerly the only means of getting about the city, but it is now being displaced in part by small launches. The ordinary gondola is 30 feet long and four or five feet wide, and is flat-bottomed so that the draft is light. The bottom rises slightly above the water at the ends, while at the bow and stern slender ornamental stem and stern pieces reach to about the height of a man's breast. There is a covered shelter for passengers in the middle of the boat which is easily removable. In accordance with mediaeval regulation gondolas are painted black. The gondolier stands erect with his face toward the bow and propels the boat with a forward stroke, making his way through the narrow and often crowded canals with amazing dexterity.

Throughout the islands of the Pacific the canoe is a common sight. Strictly speaking the canoe is a light boat designed to be propelled by a paddle held in the hands without any fixed support, although in some cases canoes may be seen that have an auxiliary sail to be used under favorable conditions.

The canoes most commonly seen in the waters of the Hawaiian islands are built from a single tree trunk hollowed out with an outrigger as seen in the illustration. Wonderful sailors, too, are the natives who in them often undertake long sea voyages, far out of the sight of land, and passing from one island to another.

The canoes of Samoa are built of several pieces of wood of irregular shape fastened together and cemented with gum to prevent their leaking. The coasts of the mainland of Siam, Burmah and China also swarm with canoes.

While the catamaran is a type of water craft that may be seen in several countries, each type as a rule has its distinctive features. The catamaran is a favorite of the Chinese fishermen and the larger streams of that oriental country are well populated with these boats. They are constructed of two narrow canoes fastened together and propelled from the stern with a long, narrow oar. In its original form the catamaran consisted of three logs, the middle one being the longest, lashed together. It was used by the natives of the Coromandel coast, particularly Madras, and also in the West Indies and on the coast of South America.

The Fiji islanders developed the catamaran idea in their war canoes, which consist of two parallel logs joined together with a platform on which a mast is placed. These boats are safe and also very swift.

The flying proa of the Ladrone Islanders is another type of the catamaran made with two hulls of unequal size. The larger hull, which carries the rigging, is perfectly flat on one side and rounded on the other. On this are placed bamboo poles projecting beyond the rounded side, and to their ends is fastened a boat-shaped log one-half or one-third the size of the larger hull. This prevents capsizing as effectually as the Fiji double canoe. Both ends of the proa are made alike, and the boat is sailed with either end first; but the out-rigger is always to windward. Against a head of wind the proa is kept away till the stern approaches the wind, when the yard is swung around, and what was the stern becomes the bow. Proas are from 40 to 65 feet long and six or seven feet wide, and are said to attain a speed of 20 miles an hour.

The junk is the distinctive type of Chinese marine architecture, a somewhat unprogressive science among the celestials. Even before the Christian era, John Chinaman voyaged from port to port in vessels of this build and rig. The sails are made of matting and are reefed in much the same way as a Venetian blind is raised. The junk is built along the lines of an oriental slipper with the curved keel for the sole and the drop aft for the heel. The common river boat or sampan is on the even more familiar model of the inverted flat iron. The modern large junk is a good sea boat and will ride a severe typhoon in safety.

On the streams of India may be seen a type of rowboat which somewhat resembles our American craft. It is, however, of clumsy construction and the oars, which are lashed to wooden uprights fastened to the sides of the boat, overlap each other. The natives, however are expert in the handling of the craft.

In southeastern India, near the Strait Settlements, an odd sailing craft may be found. This vessel is rigged with four sails, the larger one set slightly to the front of the center, while two others of still smaller design are set one at the prow and the other midway between the two. The smallest of the sails is rigged at the stern and is intended to aid in steering the craft.

On the rivers of England and Ireland may be seen several types of the wherry, which is very popular in these waters. Oars are used to aid the single sail in the smaller boats of this type but the Portsmouth wherry, used in the open sea, has a mainsail and rejoices in a topmast and a topsail.

The Turkish caique is a familiar object in the Sea of Marmora and among the islands of the Aegean. She is distinguished by her peculiar mainsail, which is a combination of a fore-and-aft sail and a square sail.

Pages of interesting reading might be written of the many peculiar boats which may be found the world over. While the essential principle of boat-building must necessarily be similar, various nations and tribes have developed the idea along different lines until to-day the various styles and types of water craft can be numbered by the hundreds.

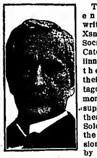
WHY THE BOY WAS BAPTIZED

At a little luncheon given on the day before his departure for Europe to Joseph Cowen, the English Zionist, the subject of apostasy came up and one man, to illustrate its prevalence, related that only a few days ago the first child in the home of one of New York's wealthiest Jews had been baptized because "the parents hoped by that means to remove an obstacle in the way of the boy's progress." This recalled to another man at the table a story told at Basle by the late Dr. Theodor Herzl. At a dinner party, so went the story, given by Mr. Stocksen Bonds, a precocious child asked the father: "Do all people turn into Jews when they grow old?" "No, my boy," answered the father, who had renounced his faith and become a Christian before the little fellow was born; "no, my boy, why do you ask?" "Well, father, we children are all Christians, you and mother are Christians, but grandfather, who just came from Russia, he's an awful Jew."

IS THE THEATER BAD?

By REV. A. C. DIXON, D. D.,
Pastor of the Chicago Ave. (Moody's) Church, Chicago.



The best Greek and Roman writers, such as Xenophon, Plato, Socrates, Tacitus, Cato and Tertullian, denounced the theater of their time as antagonistic to good morals. Athens suppressed the theater by law. Solon denounced the actor's profession as "tending, by its simulation of evil character and by its expression of sentiment not genuine or sincere, to corrupt the integrity of human dealings." In Rome "gross exhibitions and licentious buffoonery became the common rule of the play." "The Roman theater," says Dr. Schaff, "became more and more the nursery of vice and deserved to be abhorred by all men of decent feeling and refinement." Of England Macaulay writes: "From the time that the theaters were opened they became the seminaries of vice." And Sir Walter Scott says of the theater of his day: "It was abandoned to the vicious. The best portions of the house were set apart for the abandoned characters."

The Modern Theater.

Is the modern theater any better? Let us hear the testimony of those who know. "None of my children," said Macready, the actor, "shall ever with my consent, on any pretense, enter a theater or have any visiting connection with actors or actresses." Dumas, the play-writer, wrote to a friend: "You do not take your daughter to see my play. You are right. Let me say, once for all, you must not take your daughter to the theater. It is not mainly the work that is immoral; it is the place." Mr. Sothern, in a newspaper article over his own name, says: "I have known some of our best performers who have found it necessary to first attend a play before they would allow their wives and daughters to go. Why was this necessary? Why, because they knew that there was very little cleanness in those pieces, and who better than they should know?" John Gilbert, the veteran actor, wrote in the North American Review: "I believe the present condition of the drama, both from a moral and artistic point of view, to be a subject of regret." An actor, in passing a theater, said to a friend of Dr. Cuyler: "Behind those doors lies Sodom." Edwin Forrest, hearing Dr. Brantley denounce the theater as an immoral institution, lingered long enough to assure the preacher that he agreed with him only he would put it stronger.

Purity on Stage Impossible.

Mr. William Winter, a dramatic critic, asserts that Christian ethics on the stage would be inappropriate. Mr. A. M. Palmer, the Nestor of the theater managers, says in a "Review" article: "The chief themes of the theater are now, as they ever have been, the passions of men, ambition and jealousy, leading to murder; lust, leading to adultery and death; anger, leading to madness." Mr. Clement Scott, a distinguished theatrical critic of the London press, was asked to give his views as to the effect of the stage upon a pure-minded girl who might enter the profession to make a livelihood and to pursue the dramatic art. And here are his words: "Stage life, according to my experience, has a tendency to disorder the finer feelings, to crush the inner nature of men and women out and to substitute artificiality and hollowness for sincerity and truth, and, mind you, I speak from an intimate experience of the stage extending over 37 years. It is nearly impossible for a woman to remain pure who adopts the stage as a profession. Everything is against her, and, what is more to be deplored, a woman who endeavors to keep her purity is almost of necessity doomed to failure in her career. It is an awful thing to say, and it is still more terrible that it is true, but none who know the life of the greenroom will deny it."

The Passion Play.

The modern stage had its birth at a time during the dark ages when men were playing at religion in their daily lives, and they would not, of course, refuse to play at it for the entertainment of an audience. Lecky is right when he says that the "Mystery Plays" led to the degeneration of religion, and it is equally true that the degeneration of religion led to the "Mystery Plays." Playing at marriage and divorce on the stage weakens, if it does not destroy, the sanctity of marriage and keeps the divorce courts busy. Playing at vice cannot fail, sooner or later, to make an actor vicious. It is one of the discouraging signs of the times to-day that religious plays are becoming popular. It proves that the religious instinct in the theater-going people is a thing to play with, and while faith, prayer and praise are feigned it is evident that real faith, prayer and praise are lacking. The "Passion Play," though performed by simple country people with deep religious feeling, has not improved the state of true religion at Oberammergau, and I can think of nothing that would go farther toward breaking down real Christianity than the presentation of this farical crucifixion of our Lord in the theaters of the world.

The Soft Answer.

Senator Tillman at a banquet in Washington said in humorous defense of outspoken and frank methods:

"These people who always keep calm fill me with mistrust. Those that never lose their temper I suspect. He who wears under abuse an angelic smile is apt to be a hypocrite.

"An old South Carolina deacon once said to me with a chuckle:

"'Keep yo' tempah, son. Don't yo' quarrel with no angry pusson. A soft answah am allus best. Hit's commanded an', furthermo', sonny, hit makes 'em madder'n anything else yo' could say.'"

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE MOTHER'S LAMENT.

My son, and only one, was battle slain,
And he was all the world, and more, to me;
I gave him at my country's sacred fane,
When Sherman marched his legions to the sea.

In danger's threat'ning cloud, at country's call,
He left my side, and parting said to me:
"If in the battle, mother, I should fall,
My country and her God will care for thee."

And now, throughout the fair and blessed land,
On love-ordained and sweet Memorial day,
We go, a flower-laden, faithful band,
To spread on hero graves the bloom of May.

But for my soldier-boy that solace is not mine;
Within a southern vale, afar, he sleeps,
And in my heart is twined the myrtle vine,
For him, and there rosemary droops and weeps.

AT A PATRIOT'S GRAVE

Grandmother's Memorial Day Speech

By DORA OLIPHANT COE.

GRANDMOTHER ADAMSON had reached into the depths of her rose-sprigged bandbox, but just as her fingers touched the stiff ruching in the front of her best bonnet her attention was arrested by a ring at the front door. As though suddenly petrified in her stooping position, grandmother waited while Susan Ann, her daughter, creaked through the passage way leading from the kitchen.

At the first words of greeting grandmother straightened with a snap like a jack-knife, and an angry color flamed on her cheeks.

"Why, Marthy Ellen, what lovely roses! Did you ever see the flowers so handsome as they are this year? Come right in. It's dreadful hot, ain't it? Seems like I never knowed it to warm up as early as it has this season, but, then, it's been awful fine for the flowers. 'Pears like the roses and laylocks and pinies has just tried theirselves to see who could do the most bloomin'. Now, that's a pretty idee, ain't it, Mrs. Rayburn, that laylock wreath?"

"Yes; laylocks was Dick's favorite flower, and he sot this bush out hissel, and I thought I'd make a wreath to hang on the cross on his tombstun."

The expression on Grandmother Adamson's face would have made a good study. From a blaze of anger it passed through all the stages of horrified scorn to a stony determination.

The development of the conversation beyond the paper-covered board walls collected her nebulous chaotic emotions into a stern resolve.

Susan Ann was stout, and she had grieved all the morning over the long walk to the graveyard. As she sank ponderously into a chair, she lamented:

"I get heavier on my feet every day I live, and the heat to-day is just awful on me. If mother hadn't had her heart so set on it, I wouldn't try to go to the cemetery. I just know I'll be sick."

"Couldn't she walk up with us?" Mrs. Rayburn asked. "We'll not walk fast."

"Oh, mother's as spry on her feet as you be. I hadn't thought of her goin' with any one else, but I don't see why she couldn't. It'd be a real help. She ain't got nothin' to carry, for she took a big basket of flowers up this morning, before breakfast. She's just that wrapped up in Decoration day I couldn't disappoint her about goin'. She's gettin' ready now. I'll go and see if it'll be all right."

But grandmother, with what was almost one movement, had stooped forward and slipped off her congress gaiters, at the same time taking from its box her bonnet. She slipped a hand through the round handle of a little basket and scurried down the passageway and out through the back door. On the step she delayed just long enough to put on her shoes; then, with her best bonnet carried more carelessly than ever before in its dozen years of use, she hurried out through the back gate.

The cemetery was being made bright with flowers when grandmother passed through the iron gateway, and her face hardened as she recognized some of the stooping figures and the graves over which they bent.

At a brilliantly-decked mound she stopped and, kneeling, said:

"I hate to do it, Jeremiah, but I know you'd want me to. I won't take them to any one else, though, Jeremiah, though I know you'd say fur me to, if you was here. But dearie, I've keered fur these things ever sence they was buds, jest as tender as if they'd a b'en babies, and jest so's you could have them to-day, and I jest can't see any one else have 'em. How would you like to look over these posies and see that laylock wreath a-hangin' on old Dick Rayburn's tombstun? You fought, bled and died almost fur nothin', Jeremiah, when that old copperhead gits jest as many flowers as you do."

Grandmother had turned up the skirt of her black alpaca dress and, into the receptacle thus formed, had put every flower that had lain on Jeremiah's grave. She carried them all over to a far corner of the cemetery and buried them under a pile of last year's leaves. Then she went back to the bare mound.

Soon the faraway notes of "Cover Them Over with Beautiful Flowers," told that the procession was coming. Grandmother heard, but she did not once lift her eyes. She sat directly upon the middle of the grave, her skirts spread as far as they would over the flowerless mound, and she was knitting as calmly as if she were seated on a little splint-bottomed chair in her own room. She paid no attention to the astonished group that stopped before her.

"Ahem!" coughed the master of ceremonies, Henry Blake.

Grandmother looked up. "Howdedo, Henry." Then, looking down again, "one, two, three, widen; one, two, three, turn."

"We've come to decorate Comrade Adamson's grave," hesitated the puzzled Blake.

"Comrade Adamson's grave don't need no decoratin'—five, six, narrow; one, two—"

"You hain't forgot it's Decoration day, have you?" questioned the man.

"If I have, I've been the only one that has." A flourish of her needle indicated the flower-decked mounds.

"But Comrade Adamson was a hero, and he—"

"Because he was a hero is why I don't want him decorated. That's the only way to distinguish him from them as ain't heroes."

With a little sweep of her skirts, grandmother rose to her feet.

"It's jest because Jeremiah was a hero that his grave ain't goin' to be strewed with flowers jest like the ones where the babies and copperheads lies. The babies might a-growed up to be heroes, if they'd had a chanst, but they didn't, and they's three hundred and sixty-four and a quarter other days in the year to decorate their graves in. It's almost a insult to—to—

"THERE AIN'T NO MEMORIAL DAY NO MORE."

"Well, this day don't mean nothin' no more. It used to be set apart that we might honor the nation's dead, but the day, like me and some of the others here, has outlived our usefulness and our time. Let it be Decoration day, if you want to, but don't call it Memorial day any more. It's just a holiday for the young folks to have ball games and picnics, and the older folks to put flowers on the graves of their dead.

"Jest look through them trees. Can you tell which is the graves of soldiers who fought, bled, and died for this beautiful country? If this day was what it was named fur, there wouldn't be a flower in this hull graveyard exceptin' on a soldier's grave. I reckon it's little enough we do, even when we set aside a whole day out of a year to them as give their hull lives, and mighty promisin' lives some of 'em was, too.

"Take your flowers. Put 'em on any grave you happen to see. It don't matter. This is jest Decoration day. There ain't no Memorial day no more."—Los Angeles Times.

Memorial Day.

No pages of a nation's history are more interesting to its people than those which record the brave deeds of its soldiery and no nation on the face of the earth has established so beautiful a custom as that which is contemplated by Memorial day, the strewing of spring flowers over the graves of her departed soldiers.

May the full meaning of the day come to us with all its solemnity and all its beauty, and with the patriotic lesson it presents.

A Soldier's Life's the Life for Me

By COL. HENRY L. TURNER*

GREECE, once beside a summer sea,
In splendor queened it royally;
But now her greatness is decay,
Her mighty men but mouldering clay;
Yet down o'er many a century
Still glory gilds Thermopylae.

ROME, once o'er all the trembling world,
Her flaunting ensigns wide unfurled;
But now that city, seven-hilled,
With but dim memories is filled;
Yet, though her heroes are but shades,
Still glory gilds their ancient blades.

THE great King Arthur's table round
Once righted wrongs, wherever found;
No more rests lance in mailed grip;
Gone is the great Pendragonship;
The lists are closed at Camelot,
Yet glory flames round Lancelot.

ROSE, once, the sun o'er Austerlitz;
Once, as some meteor flames and flits
Unheralded across the sky,
A man of destiny rode by;
And though his wondrous work's undone,
Still glory crowns Napoleon.

ONCE through our land, in dread array,
Battled to death the blue and gray.
But now the dead united lie;
The living, hand in hand, pass by;
And though war's clamors sound no more,
Its glory gilds our country o'er.

A SOLDIER'S life's the life for me;
Soldiers achieved Thermopylae;
Rome's army won supremacy;
The sword and lance made chivalry,
France' eagles won him victory,
And soldiers set Columbia free.

VISION OF GETTYSBURG.

Painted by a Little Girl for Her Soldier Grandfather.

"Some years ago an old man with silvery hair was led into the cyclorama of Gettysburg by a bright-faced little girl. Aged and feeble, he sat down, while the child described to him the features of the picture. Occasionally he asked her a question as in doubt of the accuracy of her account. She had described the charge of the confederate columns and the struggle at the stone wall, when he asked: 'But where's the artillery, May?' 'Do you mean the big guns? They're over there on the hill in a row.' 'All in a row?" he asked. 'Yes,' she said; 'there are some more down here, but they are all upset. I think they are bursted.' 'Is that where the men are coming over the hill?' 'Yes, grandpa.' 'Is there a grove of trees?' 'Yes, it seems to be full of men, but the smoke is so thick you can not see them.' 'Oh, I see them,' he cried.

"It was then noticed by some of the party near him that he was blind. The little girl answered: 'O, no, grandpa, you can't see them.' 'Yes, I can,' said the old soldier. 'I can see the men, the grove, and the broken cannon lying about.' The child looked at him in innocent surprise, and said: 'You are joking, grandpa.' 'No, my dear,' answered the old man. 'No, that was the last thing I ever saw. There was a caisson exploded there just this side of the stone wall, and that was the last terrible picture I ever saw, for it was then that I lost my eyesight, and I have never got the picture out of my mind.'"

HIS DAY.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

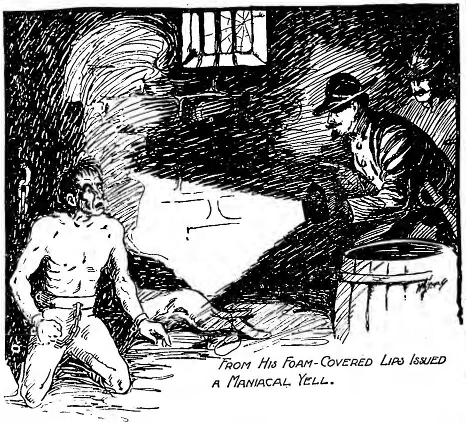
THE ACHIEVEMENTS OF MONSIEUR CLAUDE

Edited by George Tickell

BEING THE CHRONICLES OF A FAMOUS PREFECT OF POLICE DURING THE REGIME OF THE SECOND EMPIRE, IN THE REIGN OF NAPOLEON III, NOW PUBLISHED FOR THE FIRST TIME.

THE DUKE OF LAMBAY'S .... DIAMONDS ....



FROM HIS FOAM-COVERED LIPS ISSUED A MANIACAL YELL.

"A MURDERER most magnificent!" was the phrase coined by Monsieur Claude when referring to his grace the duke of Lambay in the years following that worthy gentleman's departure from Paris to take up his residence in Switzerland. Be it understood that M. Claude in thus speaking did not express himself abhorrent of the singular character of the nobleman in question. On the contrary the noted chief of police spoke in accents that almost approached admiration.

It must be confessed that the remarks of the majority of his critics were the reverse of complimentary, and with good reason. This man, in whose veins ran the royal blood of England, had by his monstrous actions and dark mysterious mode of living, completely severed all bonds of sympathy between him and the human race. The members of his own great family did not look upon him with less scorn than did those whom chance brought into contact with his repulsive personality.

The house in which he dwelt was no mean index of the perverse nature of its proprietor. It stood, in the early sixties, in a secluded corner of the old Beaujon quarter, painted from eaves to foundation in bright broad stripes of varied hues.

The building of odd design and peculiar shape, nestled in an angle of neglected gardens surrounded by high walls. An air of ghastly gloom enveloped the whole estate, an air that was in perfect keeping with the mysterious inhabitant, who came and went secretly by a small door in the western wing, the main entrance, guarded by large, rusty iron gates, always remaining closed and offering an insurmountable obstacle to the curious neighbors.

The treasure contained in this mansion consisted of 16,000,000 francs' worth of diamonds, and indeed the house might have been described as a species of gigantic strong box wherein a cunning fiend kept watch and ward over the precious contents. For the duke was a miser of the most pronounced kind, a miser who in point of avariciousness has seldom, if ever, been equaled. It was for this reason that his pursuit of pleasure frequently led him to the lowest slums of Paris where his name had grown to be a by-word among the denizens of the underworld. "As mean as the duke of Lambay" was a phrase which was often uttered by the lips of the gamins of Paris.

If the grotesque appearance of his mansion was such as to awaken suspicions of the owner's insanity, one might infer upon second thoughts that there was method in his madness and that he hoped to inspire fear thereby in the minds of his enemies. And the number of those enemies was legion, ranging from the lowest to the highest members of society. Not only did his chosen associates of the gutter hate him, but his family ever treasured resentfully the memory of the fraud by which, when cast out of his duchy, the discrowned prince succeeded in annexing the diamond millions which rightfully belonged to the crown.

But the duke was far too cunning to rely entirely upon the outside appearance of his forbidding lair and the man traps that lurked here and there in the grounds, for protection. Ere a hostile step could approach his apartments a thousand bells would startle the air with their brazen clangor. Every door was equipped with a bell and all of these doors converged towards the bedroom and private study of the duke. In the rear of these two rooms reposed the strong box which contained the diamonds. And here a row of loaded pistols communicated by unseen wires with electric bells.

Should a careless hand unwittingly press one of the buttons which operated the alarms a sheet of flame and volley of bullets would scorch and shatter the luckless intruder.

Living as he did the person of this erratic nobleman was an object of no small solicitude to the police of Paris who were constantly called upon to extricate him from the intrigues and plots of the ruffianly partakers of his pleasures. It might be imagined that he must inevitably have fallen a victim to some of the many schemes hatched by those desirous of acquiring his wealth, but though the perils to which he was exposed were numerous and deadly it pleased an inscrutable providence to enable him to avoid the pitfalls which surrounded him. Nor were there wanting instances where this degraded scion of a noble house was compelled to appear before the authorities in the role of a defendant. In most of these cases the duke was selected as an object for blackmail, but on one occasion at least there was scant doubt of his guilt.

Among his servants there was a pretty young English lass named Ellen Crosby who had not been long in his service before attracting the admiration of the duke, who made advances to her which were indignantly spurned by the girl, the latter evidently being a different type from the class of females that usually belonged to his grace's household. Exactly what transpired within the walls of the gloomy mansion after Ellen repulsed her master was never brought to light, but the fact remains that on the morning of November 20, 1863, her lifeless body was discovered lying in the garden below the west wing of the house. It was evident that death had been the result of a fall from an open second story window under which the body was found.

Thus far the police investigation went, and not much further, for none of the domestics who were examined admitted having heard any unusual noise during the night which might have helped to explain the tragedy. The duke testified that, feeling indisposed, he had retired at an early hour after swallowing a sedative prescribed by his physician for insomnia. He had slumbered heavily, according to his statement, and knew nothing of the girl's death until notified by his confidential valet. The latter, an Englishman, 26 years of age, was closely questioned by the detectives, it having come to their knowledge that a strong affection was supposed to have existed between him and the deceased. He proved a complete alibi showing that he had passed the night away from the house with a friend, having obtained leave for that purpose, and not returning until just after the body was found. His demeanor, as was perhaps natural when his fondness for the girl was taken into consideration, was that of a man half frantic with grief, but he bore up well under the cross examination and replied to every question asked him with a promptness and lucidity that left no doubt as to his innocence.

The duke furthermore averred that the girl had acted strangely for several days and that he believed her to have committed suicide. This assertion was corroborated by several of the servants, although their testimony did not greatly impress the officers, who were well aware that none of the duke's domestics was likely to contradict any statement made by their employer. Shaw alone ventured to deny the allegation, but his word was not of sufficient weight to establish the girl's sanity, and in the end Ellen Crosby was officially declared to have destroyed herself while in an unsound state of mind.

It may be plainly stated, however, that neither M. Claude nor his assistants believed that the unfortunate victim had gone to her death as described by the verdict. Popular opinion held the duke responsible for her demise and in their hearts the inmates of the prefecture agreed with this view. But to attempt to convict the duke was useless.

Meanwhile, to the surprise of many, Henry Shaw continued in the duke's service. He had succeeded in gaining the confidence of his master and all of the latter's secrets, even including that of the fraud by which he had obtained the greater part of his wealth, were in his possession.

Beyond expressing his belief in Ellen Crosby's sanity, Shaw made no effort towards exposing the true facts of the girl's sad fate, and wrapped himself in a mantle of impenetrable reserve that effectually withstood the inquiries of all his associates.

But still waters run deep, and this man who apparently took no further interest in the tragedy was in reality planning a bitter revenge upon the individual whom he regarded as the author of his sweetheart's death. He knew that the hardest blow he could strike the miser would be to deprive him of his treasures that were dearer to him than his life blood. The first step he took in the furtherance of his scheme was to write a letter to the duke of Molinford in London, pledging himself in return for a sum of 100,000 francs to restore to the family of the duke of Lambay the diamonds of which their unscrupulous kinsman had defrauded them.

Shaw had made a careful study of the strong box and the arsenal defending it and watched patiently for an opportunity when he could open it without risking annihilation by so doing. The coffer containing the diamonds was built in the wall of the bedroom adjoining the duke's study.

On December 7, 1863, the duke removed a few stones from the coffer for the purpose of having them reset by a jeweler. With almost incredible carelessness in a man of his suspicious temperament, he forgot for the first time to lock the inner steel door. Shaw, who was present when his master opened the coffer, was quick to note the duke's negligence. He waited until his master had gone out, and then taking a file he carried in preparation for just such a contingency, forced the lock of the outer door and opened the inner one. As the bolt of the inner lock had not been shot into its socket, the pistol battery was rendered harmless and the muzzles of the loaded weapons gaped impotently in the valet's face.

A great treasure lay before his gloating eyes. There were diamonds of fabulous value, jeweled decorations and gold in abundance. Carefully Shaw selected the most valuable stones, stowed them away in a leather bag which he had provided for this auspicious moment, and having filled his pockets with gold, left the house. He went straight to the railway station and caught the first express train for Boulogne.

The duke returning home that evening missed the familiar figure of his trusted attendant. As the hours wore on and Shaw did not appear a terrible suspicion flashed across the miser's mind. He rushed to his precious strong box, tore aside the silken draperies and beheld the forced lock. Flinging open the doors a glance told him that the most cherished gems of his collection had disappeared. There were missing diamonds and money to the extent of 4,000,000 francs.

For a few minutes the panic-stricken duke raged furiously, shrieking in his high falsetto voice at the servants whom his cries had summoned to the spot. It is questionable whether the approach of death could have caused more anguish in his avaricious heart.

Messengers were at once dispatched to the prefecture and in a short time two detectives made their appearance.

Having replied to their interrogations the duke inquired if their chief, M. Claude, was in his office. On receiving a reply in the affirmative he ordered his carriage and drove post haste to the head of the police department.

M. Claude was at this time a man about 45 years of age. He was of middle height, sinewy of frame and possessed of a pair of keen steel-blue eyes before whose penetrating gaze many a habitue of the underworld had shrunk and stammered forth damning confession of crime. Living in the corrupt period his uncompromising honesty of purpose shone all the clearer by contrast with the intriguing element which surrounded him and rendered him as remarkable for his integrity as he was famous for surpassing skill in his profession. He was seated at his desk, bending over a pile of correspondence, when his ducal visitor entered.

"I salute your grace," he said, suavely. "Pray be seated."

The nobleman allowed his thin, emaciated figure to sink limply into a chair, and drawing a flask of perfume from his pocket removed the stopper and inhaled the contents before speaking. M. Claude watched him coldly and when the duke raised his head said gravely:

"I regret to hear of the loss your grace has sustained. I presume it is in connection with the robbery of your diamonds that I am honored by this visit?"

"Yes, yes," said the duke, distractedly. "But above all I wish to have this affair conducted so that the details of the case will not be made public."

"We will endeavor to respect your wishes in the matter, your grace," responded the chief.

"Listen, M. Claude," said the duke, in subdued tones. "I know that I can trust you. Now the truth is that I cannot afford to appear in court to prosecute this thief should you arrest him. It is imperative that the former history of the jewels which he has stolen should not become a topic of public interest."

"If I am not mistaken," returned M. Claude, languidly, "the diamonds in question at one time provoked a serious discussion between your grace and the duke of Molinford."

The duke started. "How do you know this?" he queried, uneasily.

M. Claude's even, white teeth flashed in a brilliant smile.

"We learn many curious things in the course of our profession," he said, quietly.

"As you are acquainted with the circumstances then, you will understand that it would be by no means agreeable to have them exposed in court for the benefit of the masses," said the duke, anxiously.

"Exactly," responded M. Claude. "And the question of how the stones came into your possession does not in the least affect the fact of the robbery by your valet, nor would I have mentioned the circumstance had not your grace referred to it in the first place."

The duke gave vent to a sigh of relief.

"You are a model of discretion, my dear M. Claude," he said. "For the present I will bid you adieu."

As events proved, it would have been vastly better for Henry Shaw, having executed his master stroke of plunder and revenge, had he trusted to the assistance of some professional thief in disposing of his booty. For his endeavor to gain the aid and gratitude of the duke of Molinford recoiled upon him in a startling fashion. The latter, a prince of the British blood royal, waxed indignant over the presumption that he would consent to act as a rogue's confederate, and turned the ex-valet's letter over to the London police. They, in turn, forwarded it to the prefecture at Paris, thereby furnishing M. Claude with information which made certain his capture.

In a postscript to the letter, Shaw, to whom it did not seem to have occurred that the duke of Molinford would refuse to benefit by his services, stated that he would wait at Boulogne until a messenger arrived from England with authority to receive the diamonds and pay him the reward demanded. Immediately upon receiving the clue from the London police M. Claude started for Boulogne, and the following day saw him seated in the Hotel d'Angleterre in company with Henry Shaw whose own heedlessness had thus delivered him into the hands of the law.

The ex-valet's face was downcast and sullen, and M. Claude surveyed him with a certain amount of benignant pity.

"I do not mind telling you that personally I regret in a certain sense being obliged to put you under arrest," said the chief. "Officially, of course, I regard you as a successful criminal. But your story with reference to the unfortunate Ellen Crosby leads me to declare that your former master richly deserves any retribution that may overtake him."

"I might have thrust a knife in his heart," said Shaw, looking up. "But I who know him so well, knew that the keenest agony I could inflict upon him would be to deprive him of the idols he worships, the bright gems for which he sold his worthless soul to Satan."

"That," said M. Claude, gravely, "is probably true. But in a game where Fate deals the cards the boldest and most skillful gambler knows not what the end may be. And this time the duke has won the trick."

Much to the surprise of certain people who knew of the capture of Shaw, the duke of Lambay upon receiving his valuables back positively refused to prosecute the prisoner.

"I wish to ascertain," he said to the chief, "when and to what time the wretch who robbed me is to be restored to freedom?"

"Your grace's motive is no doubt a philanthropic one?" queried M. Claude, with the ghost of a smile hovering on his lips.

"My motive is that I may take additional precautions against becoming a victim of his audacity a second time," rejoined the duke, testily.

"I think you overestimate your danger," returned M. Claude, tranquilly. "Nevertheless your grace is welcome to the information. M. Shaw leaves the prison at eight o'clock to-morrow morning."

From the hour that the released prisoner stepped across the threshold of the gaol into the streets of Paris those who knew him saw him no more, and it was generally supposed that he had returned to his native land. Two weeks later the newspapers contained an item to the effect that the eccentric duke of Lambay was leaving Paris and would reside for the future in Switzerland. On the following day the chief of police received a communication from the nobleman in question which read as follows:

"Monsieur Claude: Enclosed you will find a key which will admit you by the small door in the west wing to my late habitation. In the upper rooms there is naught but dust and emptiness to greet the eye. But in a cellar below I have left a souvenir which may interest you.

"In common with many other mistaken persons I fear that you have hitherto supposed me dead to all feeling save that of gain. Desolated by the thought of leaving a false impression on the mind of such an admirable man I have endeavored to prove to you that a prince of my blood is competent to execute revenge upon one who incurs his displeasure through a far more satisfactory medium than that of your police courts. Hasten therefore, my dear friend, and behold the proof of my assertion.

"Lambay."

Shortly after receiving the above missive, M. Claude, accompanied by three detectives, approached the deserted house in the Beaujon quarter and entered by the side door. The interior of the building, denuded of its rich furnishings, gaped black and empty before them. Mr. Claude signaled to one of his assistants to light the lantern he carried.

"We must seek the duke's souvenir underground," he said, and directed his steps to a stairway in the rear which wound its way down to the cellars of the mansion. Midway on the steps he paused and held up his hand.

"Listen!" he said, with a warning gesture.

A muffled moan, at times low and hoarse and again rising into a strident shriek, broke upon their ears. There succeeded a harsh, horrible snarling as of a brute in pain or anger.

M. Claude shook his head in response to the questioning gaze of his man.

"Some new deviltry of his grace," he said, drily. "Let us proceed, but be wary."

He produced a pistol and having examined the charge carefully crept cautiously downward with the detectives at his heels. Reaching the foot of the stairs they found themselves in a vault which apparently extended under the entire building. It was traversed by a corridor and on either side yawned the open doors of small rooms apparently intended to accommodate provision and wine supplies for the house.

The noise, which for a few moments had died away into silence, now broke forth with redoubled vigor from the far end of the corridor, and the clashing of iron against stone mingled with the hoarse, guttural growls and ear splitting cries which had appalled the listeners before.

The detectives paused and glanced askance at each other, but M. Claude's stern voice rang out crisply.

"Forward!" he commanded. "Hold the lantern high, Franz, so that its rays may shine before us."

Peering into the gloom they advanced cautiously and came to a halt before the closed door of a room at the end of the passage. M. Claude turned the handle and the door swung open easily. A snarl like that of a wild beast caused them to spring back swiftly, but the next instant they rushed into the room uttering a simultaneous cry of horror at the sight that met their startled gaze.

Chained to an iron staple in the wall there crouched in a corner the naked figure of a man whose wide staring eyeballs glared hideously in the yellow light of the lantern. His face, crusted with blood clots and horribly lacerated, writhed convulsively as they looked upon it. Then from his foam-covered lips issued a maniacal yell, which changed at its highest note into a series of barks and growls, deep and menacing as the bay of a blood-hound.

Despite the awful change in the visage of the unfortunate, M. Claude recognized him at once.

"It is Henry Shaw," he ejaculated, "but who or what is that lying beside him?"

In the shadow of the corner could be discerned the vague outlines of a dark shape lying prostrate and the man with the lantern brought the light to bear upon it.

"A dog—and dead, M. Claude," he exclaimed. "See how its swollen tongue protrudes from its mouth!"

M. Claude bent forward and picked up an object that his foot had trod upon and held it to the light. It was a piece of meat thickly encrusted with salt. The chief drew a deep breath as the truth flashed upon him.

"The explanation is here," he said. "This is the duke's revenge and one well worthy of him. He caused this wretched creature to be kidnaped on his release from prison, chained him here with a savage mastiff, fed the brute on salt meats and allowed it no water until it went mad and attacked its companion prisoner."

"But the beast is dead," said Franz, staring at the inert hulk of the huge animal.

"Strangled," responded M. Claude. "They fought to the death and the man conquered, but at a frightful cost. His hands are bitten into mere shreds of flesh. And he too is a victim of hydrophobia."

As he finished speaking the maniac uttered another terrific yell and sprang to an erect posture with his chain clanking furiously. He stood for an instant with mutilated hands outstretched and then lurching forward fell heavily on the stone floor. His limbs twitched convulsively, stiffened and lay still. M. Claude bent over him and saw that a film of ghastly white had settled over the staring eyes.

"It is finished," he said softly to his men. "The vengeance of the duke has run its course."

Fight for Life.

Crookston—Pinned between a boat and a boom stick in the midst of the wild Red Lake river rapids in the cut-off four miles south of Thief River Falls, Billy Lee, a well-known lumberman and log driver of the north country, fought for two hours for his life.

Twenty-four rivermen boarded a boat belonging to John McCoy and William Flynn just above the cut-off to be taken to the wanegan a short distance down the river to dinner. While trying to work across the river in the quieter stream, the boat became unmanageable and shot into the swift sixty-mile current of the cut-off rapids. The boat capsized and all the passengers were thrown into the water.

All but Lee managed to get out, but he was pinned between the lumber boom and the boat. He held the boat away from him by main force for two hours while the vessel was cut entirely in two, freeing him.

Taxation of Ore.

Duluth—Ore taken from underground mines and stored in stock piles awaiting shipment is taxable as personal property, according to an opinion given the state tax commission by George W. Peterson, assistant attorney general. The opinion holds that when the ore is severed from the land it ceases to be realty and becomes personalty.

The objection raised by the companies operating underground mines was that under the present system of assessing the ore in stock piles they are really subjected to a double taxation. The tax commission requested an opinion of the attorney general as to whether the statute relating to the subject would permit of an interpretation of the minerals in the stock piles as a part of the real property belonging to the company.

Beaten by a Burglar.

St. Paul—William Beck, 70 years of age, and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. W. Beck, were choked and badly beaten by a burglar who broke into the shoe store of W. Beck, Jr., 683 East Third street, and stole two pairs of shoes. Mrs. Beck was knocked down by a blow and choked, the robber leaving his finger marks on her throat. Mr. Beck was struck to the floor with a fierce blow in the face and then kicked.

Father and daughter clung tenaciously to the burglar, but he managed to escape from their grasp by slipping out of his coat. He also left his hat behind, but he managed to take with him two pairs of shoes.

Paid Up.

St. Paul—The account of John A. McDermott, former state oil inspector, was closed by the payment to Attorney General E. T. Young of $4,705.20, the additional shortage reported in his accounts as a result of the second examination by Public Examiner Schaefer.

The first report gave the shortage as $6,199, and stated that this amount had been paid back to the state. The money was paid to the present oil inspector, W. E. McEwen, who included the payments in his monthly reports of collections in the department. The payment made by Thomas McDermott, the former inspector's brother, closes this account.

No $100 Exemption.

St. Paul—The attention of the assessors throughout the state has been called by the tax commission to the law which provides that where no returns of personal property are made to the assessor the usual $100 exemption shall not be allowed.

This law has been generally disregarded, but assessors have been instructed to see that it is enforced. The law provides that the allowance shall be made only when returns are made.

The assessors have also been directed to list all personal property in the various classes and not in lump sums.

Protect Game.

Hibbing—The Hibbing Commercial club has taken vigorous action in the matter of protecting the fish and game of this section. Pot hunters and poachers have been violating the law with great boldness, and nearly every lake in the vicinity has been dynamited. One poacher marketed 400 pounds of pike in Hibbing last week. His name is William Weaver, and he pleaded guilty in municipal court as a result of the action of the Commercial club, and was fined.

CONSPIRACY CHARGES LIFTED BY CHICAGO JURY.

Former Chief of Police Collins and Frank D. Comerford Are Acquitted After Long Trial.

Chicago.—Former Chief of Police John M. Collins and Frank D. Comerford, police attorney under the Dunne administration, were found not guilty by a jury in Judge Chetlain's court Wednesday of conspiracy to defraud the city of Chicago by diverting the services of the police to political work. The verdict was received with enthusiastic clapping of hands, and the former chief at once became the center of a storm of congratulations. The verdict ended one chapter of the prosecutions growing out of the last city campaign.

Two indictments still pending against Collins, one charging the collection of campaign funds from the police and the other the mutilation of public records, it was announced, might be brought to trial in their regular order so far as the plans of the state's attorney have been formed. But State's Attorney Healy was not at all positive about this. The first-named indictment is also pending against William L. O'Connell, former commissioner of public works, and E. H. Roche, former city purchasing agent.

When the spectators in the court room were quieted Attorney Nathaniel Sears arose and thanked the jurors.

"I want to thank the jurors and the court for the absolute fairness with which this case was tried."

Comerford also expressed his thanks.

"I also want to thank the court and individual jurors for the expression of justice."

The former chief of police individually thanked the jurors and then hurried into the judge's chambers and notified his family of his acquittal. Former Mayor Dunne was also notified of the verdict.

TWO DROWNED; FIVE SAVED.

Disaster Overtakes Launch Off Santa Catalina Island.

Avalon, Island of Santa Catalina, Cal.—Capt. A. Crist of the launch Zens of Avalon, and C. E. Hooline, ordinary seaman on the United States converted cruiser Buffalo, were drowned, and E. E. Easton, wife, two small children and colored nurse were rescued by the Buffalo on the high seas Tuesday night, after drifting helplessly for two days in a small launch.

Capt. Crist was lost from the launch Sunday night several miles off Avalon in a mysterious manner. Seaman Hooline was lost overboard from the Buffalo in effecting the rescue of Mr. Easton and his party.

Admiral Crowninshield Dead.

Washington.—Funeral services over the body of Rear Admiral A. S. Crowninshield, retired, of the navy, who died in Philadelphia Wednesday will be held here Friday and interment will be at the National cemetery at Arlington. Full military honors will be accorded the dead officer. Admiral Crowninshield served with distinction during the Spanish-American war when he was in charge of the bureau of navigation.

Pastor Saves Son, But Drowns.

Jacksonville, Ill.—Rev. S. H. Glasgow, for many years pastor of the Woodson (Ill.) Presbyterian church, was drowned Tuesday afternoon at the village, after rescuing his little son, who had been overcome by cramps while bathing.

CURRENCY LAW IS ASSURED.

House Passes Compromise Bill and Senate Will Do Same.

Washington.—An emergency currency is assured. The currency question held its place Wednesday, as practically the only subject of consideration at both ends of the capitol, and when both houses adjourned the compromise bill which was drafted by the Republican conferees had received the sanction of the house and had been presented to the senate, where it was announced it would be taken up for consideration Thursday, and where it will also be passed when the vote is reached.

The day began with a continuation of Tuesday's conference between the Republican representatives of the two houses. This resulted in a complete agreement which, being later presented as a matter of form to the Democratic conferees, was shortly after two p. m. presented to the house. There it was taken up at three o'clock, discussed for one hour and passed by a vote of 166 to 140.

The house had no sooner recorded its verdict in favor of the bill than it was hurried over to the senate, shortly before five o'clock, with the announcement of the approval of the house.

The conference report was read, and after the reading had been concluded Mr. Aldrich announced that Thursday, after routine business, he would move to take up the report and continue its consideration until it was disposed of.

Senator La Follette refused to outline his probable course further than to say that he would vote against the new bill. He was in consultation with Democratic leaders at different times during the day, and his bearing was such as to lead to the conclusion that if the Democrats would agree to fight the measure he would assist them.

REPORTS ON PAPER TRUST.

Majority Urges No Action Until Matter Is Probed Further.

Washington.—The special committee of six members of the house appointed upon the complaint of the American Newspaper Publishers' association to investigate the wood pulp and print paper situation in relation to the tariff and with regard to an alleged conspiracy in restraint of trade, Thursday submitted a majority and a minority report.

The majority report, signed by Representative Mann of Illinois, Miller of Kansas, Stafford of Wisconsin and Bannon of Ohio, recommends that legislation be not enacted before the committee has investigated further. The minority report, signed by Representatives Sims of Tennessee and Ryan of New York, recommended the passage of the Stevens bill to place wood pulp and print paper on the free list.

Sacrifice to Medical Science.

New York.—In the hope of discovering a preventative and cure for tuberculosis, Frank Merritt, who about two weeks ago volunteered to surrender his body in the interest of humanity and medical science, has permitted a physician to innoculate his system with the germs of the dread disease. An examination showed that already the disease has made considerable progress since the innoculation a week ago.

ASYLUM FOR THAW

RELEASE ON HABEAS CORPUS WRIT IS DENIED.

DECLARED STILL INSANE

Justice Morschauser Says No Injustice Has Been Done White's Slayer—No Appeal Is Expected.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y. — Harry K. Thaw has accepted, apparently with resignation, the decree of Supreme Justice Morschauser that he is still insane and that the interests of the public will be best served by denying him his liberty. Pending the signing of the papers of re-commitment, which probably will not be done before a week from next Saturday, Thaw will occupy Sheriff Chandler's suite in the county building here. In the meantime an effort will be made by Thaw's attorneys to induce District Attorney Jerome to consent to the commitment of the prisoner to one of the state hospitals other than Matteawan. It is said that in the event of Mr. Jerome giving his consent to such a change no appeal will be taken from Justice Morschauser's decision. Even if an appeal were taken, it would not be argued before fall.

attorneys are decided against him. The justice declares that the prisoner is insane and should not be allowed at large, and that the commitment to the asylum by Justice Dowling after the second trial of the murder case was legal.

Decision of the Justice.

Following is the decision: "Upon application duly made a writ of habeas corpus was allowed by which Harry K. Thaw was directed to be produced in court. In the petition it is alleged that Thaw is illegally imprisoned and restrained of his liberty by Amos T. Baker, acting superintendent of Matteawan state hospital, a state institution for the insane.

"Thaw's detention is attacked upon the grounds:

"First. That he is now sane.

"Second. That the act under the provisions of which he was committed and detained is unconstitutional and the court was without jurisdiction to issue the order of commitment, and such order was null and void.

"The return to the writ alleges that said Thaw is now insane and that the statute providing for the confinement of said Thaw is constitutional and valid, and that the court had jurisdiction to make the order of commitment.

"The proof and evidence on the part of the respective parties have been ably presented and the matter has been submitted.

"Thaw, at the time of his trial for homicide, as a defense, pleaded insanity and presented proof to show his insanity at the time of the killing of White, and, by the proof offered on his behalf, the jury was convinced that he was insane and acquitted him upon that ground. I am satisfied from the evidence adduced before me that the mental condition of Harry K. Thaw has not changed, and I find that he is now insane and that it is so manifest as to make it unsafe for him to be at large.

No Injustice to Thaw.

"I believe no injustice has been done to Thaw or will be done to him by depriving him of his liberty until such time as he can be discharged by the method prescribed by law. Bearing in mind that the usual punishment for the act which led up to the detention of said Thaw is death, or a long term of imprisonment, and that said Thaw escaped the consequences of such act solely by reason of his existing mental condition, I do not deem it proper to allow Thaw his freedom, suffering as he is from some form of insanity with the possible recurrence of an attack similar to that which the jury believed he was suffering from when he killed Stanford White. In view of the existing mental condition of said Thaw, the safety of the public is better insured by his remaining in custody and under observation until he has recovered or until such time as it shall be reasonably certain that there is no danger of a recurring attack of the delusion or whatever it may be. The writ is dismissed. The order remanding the said Harry K. Thaw can be settled on notice pursuant to stipulation."

Evelyn Withdraws Suit.

New York.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, through her counsel, Tuesday withdrew the suit she instituted some time ago for the annulment of her marriage to Harry K. Thaw.

Immediately following the dismissal of the action Daniel O'Reilly, personal attorney for Mrs. Thaw, issued a statement in which he declared that Mrs. Thaw had been an unwilling party to the proceedings from the first. It was only because of pressure on the part of her husband's relatives that she had any part in such a proceeding, said Mr. O'Reilly, and that she withdrew the action because she believes her husband's present position demands her loyalty.

LIVES LOST IN TORNADOES

TEN ARE KILLED AND TWELVE HURT IN OKLAHOMA.

Wichita, Kan.—Ten dead, 12 injured, several fatally, hundreds of head of cattle killed, a vast acreage of crops destroyed, ruin and desolation, are the results of a series of tornadoes that visited Alfalfa county, Oklahoma, Tuesday night.

The dead are: Mrs. Guy Hutchison and baby, Peter Rady, wife and two children; Mrs. Elliott, Mrs. Parker and baby, R. C. Atchison.

Omaha, Neb.—A severe storm, accompanied by a wind which destroyed everything in its path, struck the north end of the city early Wednesday.

Three Nebraska towns were visited by small tornadoes. At Hastings the barns of James Ralliston and Frank Kellar were razed and their homes badly wrecked. No person was hurt. At Chadron a storm with tornado features occurred, wrecking small buildings. Two persons were injured. At Fremont a small tornado demolished the cribs and sheds of the McCaull-Webster Elevator company and destroyed the elevator at Wood Cliff.

Quincy, Ill.—A severe rain and windstorm prevailed here Wednesday interfering with steamboat traffic and blowing down many shade trees throughout the city. George Werner, a cupola tender at Sheridan Stove works, was killed by lightning, which ran down the elevator cable.

Jackson, Minn.—A special circus train, carrying 26 cars and pulled by two engines, was wrecked in an extraordinary manner two miles west of Alpha on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road Wednesday. Five empty box cars on a siding were started in motion by a terrific wind and running into an open switch, struck squarely upon the main track. The empty cars then rushed down the steep hill and crashed into the approaching circus special.

Chicago.—One of the severest electrical wind and rainstorms in years struck Chicago Thursday evening, doing immense damage in the city and suburbs. The greatest destruction was done to Forest Park, a large new summer amusement resort just built on the western edge of the city and which was to have been opened Saturday.

St. Joseph, Mo.—Reports from Maryville, Oregon, Tarkio and other northwest Missouri towns are to the effect that thousands of acres of lowlands have been flooded. Most of this land had been planted to corn and the damage is heavy.

GEN. STEPHEN D. LEE DEAD.

Commander of United Confederate Veterans Passes Away.

Vicksburg, Miss.—Lieut. Gen. Stephen D. Lee of Columbus, Miss., commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans, answered his last roll call Thursday. Cerebral hemorrhage was the cause of his death. Gen. Lee died at the official residence of the Vicksburg national park commission of which he was a member. He was stricken here consequent upon an exhaustive speech welcoming four regiments of Iowa and Wisconsin soldiers, whom he had fought upon the Vicksburg battlefield 45 years before.

Stephen D. Lee.

Snell Will Is Set Aside.

Clinton, Ill.—At one o'clock Friday morning the jury in the Snell case, after having been out six hours, brought in a verdict setting aside the will. The jury was unanimous in declaring its belief that Col. Snell was of unsound mind. The $2,000,000 estate will be divided as in cases where no will is left.

Denies Marrying Anna to Helie.

Majority Urges No Action Until Matter Is Probed Further.

Washington.—The special committee of six members of the house appointed upon the complaint of the American Newspaper Publishers' association to investigate the wood pulp and print paper situation in relation to the tariff and with regard to an alleged conspiracy in restraint of trade, Thursday submitted a majority and a minority report.

The majority report, signed by Representative Mann of Illinois, Miller of Kansas, Stafford of Wisconsin and Bannon of Ohio, recommends that legislation be not enacted before the committee has investigated further. The minority report, signed by Representatives Sims of Tennessee and Ryan of New York, recommended the passage of the Stevens bill to place wood pulp and print paper on the free list.

Sacrifice to Medical Science.

New York.—In the hope of discovering a preventative and cure for tuberculosis, Frank Merritt, who about two weeks ago volunteered to surrender his body in the interest of humanity and medical science, has permitted a physician to innoculate his system with the germs of the dread disease. An examination showed that already the disease has made considerable progress since the innoculation a week ago.

ASYLUM FOR THAW

RELEASE ON HABEAS CORPUS WRIT IS DENIED.

DECLARED STILL INSANE

Justice Morschauser Says No Injustice Has Been Done White's Slayer—No Appeal Is Expected.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y. — Harry K. Thaw has accepted, apparently with resignation, the decree of Supreme Justice Morschauser that he is still insane and that the interests of the public will be best served by denying him his liberty. Pending the signing of the papers of re-commitment, which probably will not be done before a week from next Saturday, Thaw will occupy Sheriff Chanler's suite in the county building here. In the meantime an effort will be made by Thaw's attorneys to induce District Attorney Jerome to consent to the commitment of the prisoner to one of the state hospitals other than Matteawan. It is said that in the event of Mr. Jerome giving his consent to such a change no appeal will be taken from Justice Morschauser's decision. Even if an appeal were taken, it would not be argued before fall.

attorneys are decided against him. The justice declares that the prisoner is insane and should not be allowed at large, and that the commitment to the asylum by Justice Dowling after the second trial of the murder case was legal.

Decision of the Justice.

Following is the decision: "Upon application duly made a writ of habeas corpus was allowed by which Harry K. Thaw was directed to be produced in court. In the petition it is alleged that Thaw is illegally imprisoned and restrained of his liberty by Amos T. Baker, acting superintendent of Matteawan state hospital, a state institution for the insane.

"Thaw's detention is attacked upon the grounds:

"First. That he is now sane.

"Second. That the act under the provisions of which he was committed and detained is unconstitutional and the court was without jurisdiction to issue the order of commitment, and such order was null and void.

"The return to the writ alleges that said Thaw is now insane and that the statute providing for the confinement of said Thaw is constitutional and valid, and that the court had jurisdiction to make the order of commitment.

"The proof and evidence on the part of the respective parties have been ably presented and the matter has been submitted.

"Thaw, at the time of his trial for homicide, as a defense, pleaded insanity and presented proof to show his insanity at the time of the killing of White, and, by the proof offered on his behalf, the jury was convinced that he was insane and acquitted him upon that ground. I am satisfied from the evidence adduced before me that the mental condition of Harry K. Thaw has not changed, and I find that he is now insane and that it is so manifest as to make it unsafe for him to be at large.

No Injustice to Thaw.

"I believe no injustice has been done to Thaw or will be done to him by depriving him of his liberty until such time as he can be discharged by the method prescribed by law. Bearing in mind that the usual punishment for the act which led up to the detention of said Thaw is death, or a long term of imprisonment, and that said Thaw escaped the consequences of such act solely by reason of his existing mental condition, I do not deem it proper to allow Thaw his freedom, suffering as he is from some form of inanity with the possible recurrence of an attack similar to that which the jury believed he was suffering from when he killed Stanford White. In view of the existing mental condition of said Thaw, the safety of the public is better insured by his remaining in custody and under observation until he has recovered or until such time as it shall be reasonably certain that there is no danger of a recurring attack of the delusion or whatever it may be. The writ is dismissed. The order remanding the said Harry K. Thaw can be settled on notice pursuant to stipulation."

Evelyn Withdraws Suit.

New York.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, through her counsel, Tuesday withdrew the suit she instituted some time ago for the annulment of her marriage to Harry K. Thaw.

Immediately following the dismissal of the action Daniel O'Reilly, personal attorney for Mrs. Thaw, issued a statement in which he declared that Mrs. Thaw had been an unwilling party to the proceedings from the first. It was only because of pressure on the part of her husband's relatives that she had any part in such a proceeding, said Mr. O'Reilly, and that she withdrew the action because she believes her husband's present position demands her loyalty.

LIVES LOST IN TORNADOES

TEN ARE KILLED AND TWELVE HURT IN OKLAHOMA.

Wichita, Kan.—Ten dead, 12 injured, several fatally, hundreds of head of cattle killed, a vast acreage of crops destroyed, ruin and desolation, are the results of a series of tornadoes that visited Alfalfa county, Oklahoma, Tuesday night.

The dead are: Mrs. Guy Hutchison and baby, Peter Rudy, wife and two children; Mrs. Elliott, Mrs. Parker and baby, R. C. Atchison.

Omaha, Neb.—A severe storm, accompanied by a wind which destroyed everything in its path, struck the north end of the city early Wednesday.

Three Nebraska towns were visited by small tornadoes. At Hastings the barns of James Rallston and Frank Kellar were razed and their homes badly wrecked. No person was hurt. At Chadron a storm with tornado features occurred, wrecking small buildings. Two persons were injured. At Fremont a small tornado demolished the cribs and sheds of the McCaull-Webster Elevator company and destroyed the elevator at Wood Cliff.

Quincy, Ill.—A severe rain and windstorm prevailed here Wednesday interfering with steamboat traffic and blowing down many shade trees throughout the city. George Werner, a cupalo tender at Sheridan Stove works, was killed by lightning, which ran down the elevator cable.

Jackson, Minn.—A special circus train, carrying 26 cars and pulled by two engines, was wrecked in an extraordinary manner two miles west of Alpha on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road Wednesday. Five empty box cars on a siding were started in motion by a terrific wind and running into an open switch, struck squarely upon the main track. The empty cars then rushed down the steep hill and crashed into the approaching circus special.

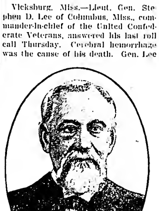
Chicago.—One of the severest electrical wind and rainstorms in years struck Chicago Thursday evening, doing immense damage in the city and suburbs. The greatest destruction was done to Forest Park, a large new summer amusement resort just built on the western edge of the city and which was to have been opened Saturday.

St. Joseph, Mo.—Reports from Maryville, Oregon, Tarkio and other northwest Missouri towns are to the effect that thousands of acres of lowlands have been flooded. Most of this land had been planted to corn and the damage is heavy.

GEN. STEPHEN D. LEE DEAD.

Commander of United Confederate Veterans Passes Away.

Vicksburg, Miss.—Lieut. Gen. Stephen D. Lee of Columbus, Miss., commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans, answered his last roll call Thursday. Cerebral hemorrhage was the cause of his death. Gen. Lee died at the official residence of the Vicksburg national park commission of which he was a member. He was stricken here consequent upon an exhaustive speech welcoming four regiments of Iowa and Wisconsin soldiers, whom he had fought upon the Vicksburg battlefield 45 years before.



Stephen D. Lee.

Snell Will Is Set Aside.

Clinton, Ill.—At one o'clock Friday morning the jury in the Snell case, after having been out six hours, brought in a verdict setting aside the will. The jury was unanimous in declaring its belief that Col. Snell was of unsound mind. The $2,000,000 estate will be divided as in cases where no will is left.

Denies Marrying Anna to Helle.

New York.—Justice of the Peace William Budenbender of Hoboken, whose name had been mentioned in connection with reports that Prince de Sagan and Mme. Gould were married in New Jersey, denied positively Monday that he performed the marriage.

Read the call for the Republican county convention and turn out to the caucuses and take an interest in helping nominate the ticket, that wants your help to elect it in November.

Should governor Johnson go in for the candidate of the Democratic party, for the third term, he will have a strong opponent in the person of Mr. Precedent, for we have had some pretty good governors in this state, who had to step aside for this old loan.

Returns from the Grant county O'kla. County seat election gives Medford 2,020 votes; Pond Creck, 1,086; Jefferson, 673; giving Medford a toal majority of 262. Forty two inspectors were sent into the county to conduct the election. Medford won after a ten year fight and the county seat will be moved to that place.

RADNEY LOCALS.

To late for publication in last weeks issue.

The heavy rains greatly delayed seeding in this locality.

Peat Gustufson commenced the erection of his large farm residence this week, and when it is comleted he will have the largest and best farm residence in the township of Deer Park.

Our Rhoda gambler and "wind jammer" has missed several good meals worring about the invoice of a nearby store.

Mr. John A. Peterson is enlarging his pasture and when he has it completed he will have 90 acrs in fine pasture.

Lindtvet bros. have just finished seeding on their fine farms.

Stephen Singer, of Kratka was up this way Monday trying to buy the bankrupt stock of the Radney store, but it was a little to much cash for him, as c. o. d. would not go "and he had to produce the nickle before he orried off the codfish.",

Mr. Orvick of Crookston was up this week taking invoice of the Radney store stock.

Mr. Bruckmann made a trip to his Winsor farm this week, and disposed of a 100 tons of timothy hay

The gambling rooms run by "Skinner bros. Sokum and Co." at Rhoda are open all night now All are welcome.

TOWNSHIP NOTICE.

Editor The Sunbeam:

At our last annual Town meeting we voted to purchase a Town ditcher, and later a request was made for a special Town Meeting for the purpose of bonding the town to purchase the ditcher. The election was held, but was not very well attended, as only 16 votes was cast. viz: 14 votes for bonding and 2 against. The intention was to make a loan from the State, but upon request for said loan the state would not consider the matter as they use and furnish their own blanks and forms for any loans from the state, which must be used by Townships and other applicants for state money, or they will not be considered leagal according to state law.

For this reason the special Town meeting held will not be velid. Upon receiving this information the Chairman of the Town board instructed me to notify the voters, to this affect.

It's Results That Count

In cooking it's the results that count. So when a housewife starts to make Bread or Rools or Pies, naturally she wants her cooking to havo that rich crisp, pleasing odor. But it must also have that whiteness, lightness and wholesomeness which is so essential to good cooking.

Much of this depends upon the flour—and thousands depend upon,

MASCOT FLOUR,

to get these results—and they get them. Manufactured by Red Lake Falls Milling Company

It is very aggravating to parents that are trying to get a school started for their children, to have it delayed, by a smart Yankee, in an adjoining Township sticking his nose into other peoples business.

"It And Nit"

We note that "it" has employed the support of the brilliant? writer from Kratka, (who has gaind the reputation of not haveing as much sense as M. E. Hylands goat) to assist him in his campaign for sheriff, but we are of the opinion that it will be, "it" and "nit" went up the hill to get a pail of water: "nit" fell down and broke his crown, and "it" come tumbling after." If they can't raise more votes for "it" than one of "de gang" did for town clerk of Deer Park last spring, after two months campaign, "it's" chances of election are rather slim However they are the proper ones to support "it", as "birds of feather flock togeather", and a dog delights to roll in "carious matter."

Drowned In The River.

Tallek Dale, a boy 16 years old, was drowned near Hilda on Sunday afternoon. Him and two of his yonger brothers were in bathing, when he waded out to far from shore and was caught by the swift current and drawn into a whirlpoole and sank in 9 feet of water. The younger boys tried to go to his assistance and the elder one had a narrow escape from being caught in the swift current and drawn into the whirlpoole. The body was recoverd Monday by draging the river with nets, and funeral services held at the residence of his parents, near Hilda on Wednesday afternoon, who have heartfelt sympathy of the entire neighborhood in their bereavement

A gallant act no doubt is here.
All wicked foxes ought to fear
When twenty dogs and twenty men
Can kill a fox that killed a hen.

SAD ITCHING HUMOR.

Limbs Below the Knees Were Raw—Feet Swollen—Sleep Broken—Cured in 2 Days by Cuticura.

"Some two months ago I had a humor break out on my limbs below my knees. They came to look like raw beefsteak, all red, and no one knows how they itched and burned. They were so swollen that I could not get my shoes on for a week or more. I used five or six different remedies and got no help, only when applying them the burning was worse and the itching less. For two or three weeks the suffering was intense and during that time I did not sleep an hour at a time. Then one morning I tried a bit of Cuticura. From the moment it touched me the itching was gone and I have not felt a bit of it since. The swelling went down and in two days I had my shoes on and was about as usual. George H. Farley, 50 South State St., Concord, N. H., May 14, 1907."

STAR PHILADELPHIA FIELDER

WATER CUTS IMPORTANT FIGURE IN BASEBALL

Game Lost by Pittsburg as Result of a Flood—Cincinnati Field Twice Invaded.

The postponement record of the major leagues has been broken this spring on account of unprecedented rain and wet grounds. Perhaps never before have so many games been prevented as during this season, but there have been some that have been queerer.

A few years ago Pittsburg lost one of the oddest games on record on account of water. The game was played on a beautiful afternoon, but it happens that the Pittsburg grounds are situated just at the point where the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers flow together and form the Ohio. On this afternoon Pittsburg was playing Brooklyn and the rivers were all high. The Monongahela rose rapidly during the afternoon, forming a cross current and backing up the water of the Allegheny until it began to flood center field.

Inning by inning the outfielders were driven in closer and closer to the diamond as the flood invaded the ball park, until finally, in the ninth inning, a short fly ball to center field fell in two feet of water while the Pittsburg center fielder was diving and wading out toward it, and cost the game.

Cincinnati has twice had floods invade the grounds during the progress of games, but neither time has the water played any important part in the game, although one game was stopped in the seventh inning.

On that occasion the Ohio river had backed up around the grounds, but a dike had been built inside the fences to hold it back. The water had been rising steadily all afternoon and the workmen were striving desperately to build up earthworks and save the grounds.

Just at the end of the seventh inning a Chicago player, George Decker, hit a fly to left, and Burke, who was playing left, was waiting to catch the ball when the dike broke. Burke waited, caught the ball, and by that time the water, rushing in a tidal wave across the field, was above his ankles. He sprinted hard, got ahead of the water and fled over dry ground. Two minutes later the greater part of the field was under water and the game was called.

Arthur Hofman, now the regular center fielder of the world's champions, once jumped a contract on account of a similar occurrence. Hofman then was playing with East St. Louis in the Trolley league, and he had a contract with the team whereby he was to receive eight dollars per game every time a game was scheduled, provided the game was not prevented by the weather.

One day East St. Louis was scheduled to play Belleville and the weather was perfect, the sun shining and the air warm. But the Mississippi river rose suddenly and flooded the grounds. Hofman demanded his eight dollars on the grounds that the weather did not prevent the game. The management refused to pay and Hofman jumped his contract and went to Alton.

Barrett Let Out by Beaneaters.

Jimmy Barrett has been given his unconditional release by the Boston Americans. Barrett was a wonderful outfielder until he broke his leg in a game at Detroit. Since then he has lost much of his speed. He was drawing big money from the Boston club, and as there were young outfielders with the team drawing less and performing better, Manager McGuire decided to let Barrett go. Jimmy will have no trouble hooking up with a class A league team.

Brush After Pitcher Raymond.

It is said in baseball circles that John T. Brush, owner of the New York National league team, has made an offer of $8,000 to the St. Louis club for the release of Raymond, a pitcher. It is said the St. Louis nine intends to dispose of the services of some of its pitchers, and New York has put in an early offer to obtain Raymond, if the St. Louis management will permit him to go.

BASEBALL PLODDERS BETTER THAN STARS

Willing and Winning Players Are in More Demand by Managers of To-Day.

"The more I see of star ball players," said an old fan, "the better I like the plodders.

"There are two kinds of diamond artists, star ball players and winning ball players. Give me the latter any time. After a tough game is lost you usually hear the star ball player and his satellites, coming back from the grounds, singing at the tops of their voices.

"The winning ball player is sitting over in a corner without a word to say. As long as he gets his bite and fields cleanly, the star is satisfied. On the other hand, the plodder is out to win, and if his club is beaten then he wants to bite somebody's head off.

"On the field the plodder is working for every point and never overlooks a bet. All stars are not working for themselves alone, however. When you find a top-notcher who is out on the greensward working his legs off, then you will find a grand ball player, who is worth a lot of money to any team.

"Often you wonder why a player who has been doing good work, as far as batting and fielding averages are concerned, is traded or released to some other team. Few fans understand it, but the manager who lets him go does.

"Every winter one hears of many trades and the report gets out that this magnate and that one has been buncoed. As a matter of fact, the chances are both have been handed something, for it is a cinch that no manager will let a player out unless there is something the matter with him.

"But you never hear of a willing ball player cut loose, even if his batting or fielding is not as brilliant as some others. He is the man every manager is looking for and once they land him they never let go until his usefulness has gone."

NOTES OF THE MINORS

Pitcher Albert of the South Bend Central league team shut out Wheeling the other day without a hit. The first of the season.

Geyer, the Columbus pitcher, is a strong entry in the hard-luck stakes. His team has not scored a run behind him in the last 25 innings in which he worked.

Larry Schlafly, a former National, is playing sensational ball at second for the Toronto Eastern league team.

Pitcher Joe Harris, has been tincanned by Jim McGuire. He goes to the three-time American association champion Columbus club.

Terre Haute of the Central league has released Catcher Campbell and Infielders Shields and Ellis. Campbell goes to Danville of the Eastern Illinois league.

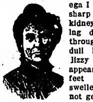
The Louisville club has released Pitcher Willie Sudhoff and Catcher F. E. Holmes and has purchased Pitcher J. W. Durham from the Philadelphia Athletic club.

Cockhill, the infielder turned over by Detroit to Williamsport, is simply eating 'em alive in the Tri-State. He is batting close to the .400 mark and fielding his position well.

Billy Phyle, the Toronto outfielder, rapped out two home runs and a double against Jersey City the other day, which makes him the most imposing slugger in the Eastern. He has now four circuit clouts to his credit. Hitting for ten sacks in an afternoon is stepping along.

Monte Cross Is Suspended.

President J. D. O'Brien of the American association suspended Monte Cross, manager of the Kansas City team, for three days for umpire baiting, and fined Outfielder Neighbors $25 for refusing to obey the umpire's instructions and unnecessarily delaying the game. Both offenses were committed at Kansas City on May 15 against Umpire Kane.



A KENTUCKY CASE.

That Will Interest All Suffering Women.

Mrs. Della Meanes, 328 E. Front St., Maysville, Ky., says: "Seven years ago I began to notice sharp pain in the kidneys and a bearing down sensation through the hips, dull headache and dizzy spells. Dropsy appeared, and my feet and ankles swelled so I could not get my shoes on. I was in misery, and had despaired of ever getting cured when I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills. One box helped me so much that I kept on until entirely cured."

Unkind Analysis.

"He seems to be a very thoughtful and serious man," remarked one statesman.

"That's an optical illusion," replied the other. "He's merely sitting down, taking life easy and letting his mind wander."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

"Helpful Hints" That Hinder.

Many of the "helpful hints" followed by our mothers are now proved utterly useless, if not more harmful than helpful. For instance, no one now uses moist tea leaves to clean a carpet or rug, because of the inevitable staining. And salt used on a carpet collects dampness and rusts the tacks. Newspapers, dampened and torn, answer the purpose much more satisfactorily. Rugs should be shaken from the sides, for the strain of the weight on the end is very apt to loosen the weft.

Too Much for Pa.

The visitor to the home of a well-known Hoosier state author found his three youngsters romping in the hallway.

"What are you playing, boys?" he inquired.

"We are playing pirates," elucidated the smallest.

"Pirates? Why, how can you play pirates in Indiana? There are no seas bordering on this state."

"Oh, we don't need any sea. We are literary pirates like pa."

And five minutes later a chorus of yells from behind the barn told that the hand that wields the pen can also wield the shingle.

Dispenser of Kisses.

A Frenchman, who apparently has been amusing himself by reckoning up the number of kisses he has given his wife during the first 20 years of his married life.

He finds that in the first year he dispensed about 100 kisses a day, or, say, allowing for birthdays and legal and church holidays, about 36,700 in the year.

In the second year this number was reduced by half, and in the third year to ten a day, while in the fifth year his better half had to be content with two a day, one in the morning and one in the evening.

What happened after the fifth year is "wrapped in mystery," but at the same rate of "progression" he probably arrived eventually at one kiss on the first of January every leap year.—Chicago American.

THE FIRST TASTE

Learned to Drink Coffee When a Baby.

If parents realized the fact that coffee contains a drug—caffeine—which is especially harmful to children, they would doubtless hesitate before giving the babies coffee to drink.

"When I was a child in my mother's arms and first began to nibble things at the table, mother used to give me sips of coffee. As my parents used coffee exclusively at meals I never knew there was anything to drink but coffee and water.

"And so I contracted the coffee habit early. I remember when quite young, the continual use of coffee so affected my parents that they tried roasting wheat and barley, then ground it in the coffee-mill, as a substitute for coffee.

"But it did not taste right and they went back to coffee again. That was long before Postum was ever heard of. I continued to use coffee until I was 27, and when I got into office work, I began to have nervous spells. Especially after breakfast I was so nervous I could scarcely attend to my correspondence.

"At night, after having coffee for supper, I could hardly sleep, and on rising in the morning would feel weak and nervous.

"A friend persuaded me to try Postum. My wife and I did not like it at first, but later when boiled good and strong it was fine. Now we would not give up Postum for the best coffee we ever tasted.

"I can now get good sleep, am free from nervousness and headaches. I recommend Postum to all coffee drinkers.

HELPFUL ADVICE

You won't tell your family doctor the whole story about your private illness—you are too modest. You need not be afraid to tell Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., the things you could not explain to the doctor. Your letter will be held in the strictest confidence. From her vast correspondence with sick women during the past thirty years she may have gained the very knowledge that will help your case. Such letters as the following, from grateful women, establish beyond a doubt the power of to conquer all female diseases.

Mrs. Norman R. Barndt, of Allentown, Pa., writes:

"Ever since I was sixteen years of age I had suffered from an organic derangement and female weakness; in consequence I had dreadful headaches and was extremely nervous. My physician said I must go through an operation to get well. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I took it and wrote you for advice, following your directions carefully, and thanks to you I am today a well woman, and I am telling all my friends of my experience."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

State Loses Money.

St. Paul—Minnesota has come to the realization that she has been cheating herself through the cash sale of timber tracts in the northern part of the state, and in the future cash sales of timber tracts by the state in all probability will be tabooed. Auditor Iverson has recommended to the state timber board that the cash sales be abolished, and it is expected that the suggestion will be followed.

The matter was taken up a year ago with the intention of dropping the sales, but at that time it was decided to try them another year.

According to the state law, all tracts of land containing less than 100,000 feet of timber were available for cash sale.

Many tracts were surveyed and found to contain less than the required amount, but in other cases after the lands had been sold it was discovered that more than 100,000 feet of timber had been cut on them. Permits for two logging seasons to cut the timber were given by the state board, which also had the privilege of extending the permit another year if for some reason the purchasers had been unable to get onto the land. In cases where the cut had been made two years and the land still contained uncut timber the extensions were not granted.

New Cathedral.

Minneapolis—With all the solemn splendor and dignity characteristic of Roman Catholic ceremony, the effect of which was heightened by a crystal clear sky, the ceremonies attendant upon the laying of the pro-cathedral cornerstone at Sixteenth street and Hennepin avenue, Minneapolis, were ... to the minutest detail before a vast concourse of people which extended for blocks around the reviewing stand. It was an epoch-making event for the church not only in Minneapolis but in the Northwest.

For more than an hour and a half devout parishioners from the two cities, as well as scores of communities in the state, filed past the reviewing stand, 30,000 strong. Under the canopied platform this tribute to the strength and influence of the church was viewed by distinguished prelates from various parts of the country and the apostolic delegate from the Vatican at Rome, the assemblage including archbishops, bishops, monsignori and abbots. Following the sacred rites at the laying of the cornerstone, a multitude surged about the speakers' platform and the reviewing stand. Including both those seated in the stand and the thousands who packed the street it is probable that fully 50,000 persons attended the ceremonies.

Ditches.

Crookston—Minnesota will spend approximately a million dollars on drainage work this year, and not less than 13,000,000 cubic yards of dirt will be moved during the season to complete drainage ditches. Fully half a million acres of land will be reclaimed or benefitted for agriculture by the 1908 drainage operations.

This is the biggest season in the history of drainage operations in the state. The state drainage board is spending the better part of a $200,000 appropriation merely to improve state lands, and the state, the counties and private citizens together are putting in $431,112 just on ditches built under state supervision. Hundreds of other ditches are put in under authority of the counties or by order of the district courts on the assessment plan.

In this work Minnesota is giving a lively demonstration of the conservation of natural resources.

Drowned.

Northfield—Bern Livingston, a second year student in the local high school, was drowned and Alson Blodgett, a companion, almost met a similar fate when their gasoline launch went over the dam here Thursday afternoon. The accident occurred at 6 o'clock, just below the lower bridge, and between 150 and 200 people saw the accident, but were powerless to help the boys. Among the crowd on the bridge was Blodgett's mother.

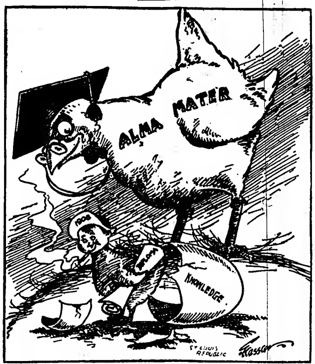
Winona—Coroner John Steinbach has investigated the death of George Messick, who was found dead beside the railway track near Dreshach, and expresses the opinion that death was due to heart failure, produced by a loud clap of thunder.

Mankato—Thomas Marshall, a ten-day prisoner in the county jail for drunkenness, sentenced to hard labor, while returning with other prisoners from work on the streets, stopped a runaway and probably saved the lives of the two young children of Frank Schaefer.

Mankato—Because the young woman with whom be was walking in North Mankato slapped him with a banana skin, William Ward threw a banana at her. She dodged it, and the banana crashed through the window of M. Dudke's residence. Mr. Dudke had Ward arrested on the charge of wilfully destroying personal property, but the case was compromised by Ward's paying for the window and part of the costs of his arrest.

St. Paul—Two hundred children, boys and girls, gathered in the Hope chapel to see stereopticon views, were thrown into a panic by the explosion of the apparatus. Many leaped through windows and hundreds fell pell mell down the stairway to the church and fell in a promiscuous heap in the street. Many of the children were bruised or scratched and ran hurriedly to their homes, but only one is said to be hurt seriously.

INTO THE COLD, COLD WORLD!



GOING TO HUNT IN AFRICA

PRESIDENT WILL LEAVE WHEN HE GOES OUT OF OFFICE.

Statement from White House Puts Quietus on Third Term Talk—Kermit to Accompany Father.

Washington. — Important significance in connection with President Roosevelt's determination against a third term is contained in the admission made Friday for the first time, that the president is making definite plans to leave the United States in April next year for Africa, where he will pass a year hunting big game. Rumors that Mr. Roosevelt was to leave the country at the conclusion of his term of office have been printed heretofore, but when confirmation was sought at the White House the answer has been that no definite conclusion had been reached as to the president's plans.

But Friday it was stated positively that Mr. Roosevelt, with his son Kermit, would sail from New York, for Cairo in April, 1909—just as soon as the necessary arrangements for the departure could be made after March 4. It is the desire of the president to bring back at the end of the year from the wilds of Africa specimens of every species of big game to be had on the dark continent. He will visit no other country, it is stated.

The outfit for the expedition will be obtained on reaching Africa, but an active correspondence in this connection already is under way. The exact size of the hunting party—number of guides and retainers, animals, etc.—has not been determined on. The president, however, will take with him an assortment of arms which he will require in the variety of hunting contemplated. This outfit will include, of course, guns of the highest power. During the absence of Mr. Roosevelt in Africa Mrs. Roosevelt and other members of the family will remain at the family home at Sagamore Hill, Oyster Bay.

MRS. W. B. LEEDS LOSES.

Must Pay 60 Per Cent. Duty on $340,000 Pearl Necklace.

New York.—Customs duties of 60 per cent. must be paid on the $340,000 pearl necklace imported from France by Mrs. William B. Leeds, under a decision rendered by Judge Lacombe in the the United States court Tuesday.

After the necklace was purchased in Paris the pearls were separated and brought to this country as individual gems in the belief that they would be admitted upon the payment of ten per cent. duty, which the law provides for individual pearls. The collector of the port ruled, however, that as the pearls had been used as a necklace, and were intended to be used in that form again, the full duty of 60 per cent. should be levied.

President Has Narrow Escape.

Washington. — President Roosevelt had an exceedingly narrow escape from a serious accident while horseback riding in Rock Creek park. His horse reared and fell backward with him into a creek. Mr. Roosevelt was uninjured and continued his ride.

Plan a Prosperity Convention.

New York.—A prosperity convention of the Commercial Traveler's Interstate congress will be held in New York August 14 and 15 under the auspices of the Travelers' Protective association and the United Commercial Travelers.

EIGHT KILLED; MANY HURT.

Terrible Collision on Electric Railway Near Annapolis, Md.

Annapolis, Md. — In a head-on collision between two special cars on the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis electric railroad shortly before eight o'clock Friday night, eight persons were killed outright and a score of others were seriously injured, some of them perhaps fatally. The collision was due to confusion of orders, as the line has been running several extra cars each way in connection with the commencement festivities at the Naval academy.

The disaster occurred just beyond Camp Parole, which is the first station after leaving this city. Both the wrecked cars were specials, one of them bound from Baltimore for Annapolis, the other running from here for Washington. The latter carried few passengers, while the other was well filled. The impact was terrific and both cars were wrecked, that bound for this city being thrown from the rails. As quickly as possible aid was sent from here and the dead and injured were brought to this city. Of the injured, General Traffic Manager William E. Slaughter of the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis was in the worst condition.

NEGROES KILL A SHERIFF.

Oklahoma City Official Slain in Trying to Make Arrest.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—Sheriff George W. Garrison of Oklahoma City was shot and killed, an unknown deputy wounded and a negro was shot in a battle which took place three miles east of Hitchcock at seven o'clock Friday evening.

According to reports received by the local police department, seven negroes were in a party that opened fire on the sheriff when he attempted to arrest Alf Hunter, alias James Kingsbury, who killed Susie Pride in Oklahoma City on the evening of May 19.

BURLINGTON ROAD FINED.

Convicted of Violating Regarding Live Stock in Transit.

Springfield, Ill.—The federal government won a notable victory in the United States district court Wednesday when the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad company was found guilty on two charges of violating the 28-hour law which provides that live stock shall not be confined in cars over 28 hours without being taken out for a period of five consecutive hours for the purpose of giving them rest and feed and water. The company was fined $100 and costs on each of three counts.

Edward Goes to Visit Czar.

London.—King Edward, Queen Alexandra and Princess Victoria started for Reval, Russia, Friday night for a visit to the emperor of Russia. A large suite accompanied the royal party. The party reached Port Victoria at 11 o'clock and boarded the royal yacht Victoria and Albert, which sailed at four o'clock Saturday morning.

Gorgas Heads the Physicians.

Chicago. — Col. William Crawford Gorgas, A. B., M. D., Sc. D., member of the isthmian canal commission and chief sanitary officer of the canal zone, was elected president of the American Medical association Thursday at the final meeting of the house of delegates of that organization.

FOUR TARS KILLED

BOILER TUBE ON THE CRUISER TENNESSEE BURSTS.

TEN OF THE CREW INJURED

Rear Admiral Sebree and Other Officers Have Narrow Escapes—Vessel Was on Speed Trial Near San Pedro.

San Pedro, Cal. — A terrible accident occurred on board the United States armored cruiser Tennessee at 11:30 o'clock Friday morning while the ship was steaming at 19 knots on a speed trial off Point Rueneme, Cal., a steam pipe in the starboard engine room bursting under 235 pounds' pressure, killing four men and injuring ten others—all of the men in the compartment at the time. The explosion, the cause of which is unknown, occurred only a few minutes after Admiral Uriel Sebree, Capt. F. B. Howard and Chief Engineer Robertson had left the engine room on a tour of inspection.

Names of the Victims.

Fatally injured: S. Stemetie, first-class firemen, Norfolk, Va.; F. S. Maxfield, second-class fireman, Toughkenamon, Pa.

Men Scalded with Steam.

The tube, which is four inches in diameter and inclosed with water inside the boiler, blew out, driving a torrent of scalding steam, coal dust, cinders and hot ashes through the ash pit and showered the half-naked men. A blast of white steam from the ventilators told those on deck of the accident, and Lieut. Commander S. S. Robinson, the navigator, instantly sounded a general alarm and dropped 20 lines of hose ready for instant use in case of fire.

Within the doomed fire room, amidship on the starboard side, the surviving seamen were fighting for life. Reinhold and Meek were stricken dead at their posts. Boggs and Wood crawled or were dragged into the adjoining fire room, and died almost immediately. The other seamen, all of whom received some injuries, acted with the greatest heroism in aiding their unfortunate mates.

Close Call for Sebree.

Rear Admiral Sebree himself escaped death or serious injury in the fated fire pit by a mere moment's time. He had left the room where the explosion occurred not 50 seconds before the fatal blast. The admiral stood in the engine room adjoining the fire room with Chief Engineer Robertson and Capt. Howard. His first intimation of the tragedy was as he mounted the ladder and a half-naked fireman leaped past him suffering from severe scalds.

When the smoke came from the fire room, the fire call was sounded and all the crew went to their stations in perfect order and in a few seconds 15 to 20 lines of hose were ready to turn on the fire. Several of the crew behaved with heroism and will be reported to the department later.

The ship was undergoing inspection by the commander of the second division and had been under way for over two hours, the engines, boilers and all machinery working perfectly.

Was on a Speed Trial.

The Tennessee, flagship of the second division of the Pacific cruiser fleet, left Santa Barbara at ten o'clock Friday morning with the cruisers Pennsylvania, Washington, Colorado and West Virginia in her wake, on the semi-annual official speed trial provided for by naval regulations. Admiral Sebree had ordered the cruisers to full speed, and the Tennessee had just concluded a series of evolutions and started straightaway a speed of between 18 and 19 knots. The admiral in the engine room had just taken note that the dial recorded a steam pressure of 235 pounds when the explosion occurred. Less than 15 minutes earlier the tubes had endured a pressure of 265 pounds.

Big Steamer's First Trip.

Black Hawk Veteran Dead.

Creston, Ia.—Daniel Ritchey, aged 90 years, is dead at Corning. He was a veteran of the Black Hawk war. He kept a hotel in Adams county in 1855, and when John Brown and Jim Lane were running slaves north into Canada, his hostelry was a rendezvous for them. He was also a Mason, and perhaps the oldest one in the state at the time of his death.

MAJOR DREYFUS IS SHOT

MILITARY WRITER WOUNDS THE NOTED FRENCH OFFICER.

Louis Gregori Says He Fired Bullet as Protest Against the Glorification of Emile Zola.

Paris.—Just at the close of the ceremonies attending the interment of Emile Zola in the Pantheon Thursday, when the president of France, the premier and a host of ministers of state were taking their departure, Louis Anthelme Gregori, a military writer of note, drew a revolver and fired two shots point-blank at Maj. Alfred Dreyfus, for whose liberty Zola fought and won.

Men distinguished in all walks of life filled the Pantheon and when the shots rang out there was intense excitement in fear that the president had been assassinated, but even the attempt on the life of Maj. Dreyfus created a profound impression. Soldiers speedily surrounded Gregori and he was taken to jail, bruised and bleeding, with his clothes almost torn from his back.

The affair has created a tremendous sensation in Paris and the motive of the would-be assassin is the cause of much mystification, for Gregori, instead of being an ordinary fanatic, such as is carried away by the political passions of the moment, is a man of mature age, having been born in 1844, and was highly esteemed in the circles where he was known.

Some do not hesitate to express the opinion that he may have been the tool of a little clan of Royalists, who, under the name of l'Action Francaise, have never ceased to insist that the court of cassation illegally prevented an appeal of the Dreyfus case, nor abandoned hope of seeing a revision favorable to the contentions of the Nationalists.

Maj. Dreyfus was not seriously injured. A bullet entered his forearm, but did not injure the bone. At a late hour the official statement was made that his condition was very favorable and that no complications were feared.

Gregori made a statement to the police directly after his arrest and during a second interrogation Thursday night he said: "I did not wish to kill Dreyfus. It is true I aimed at him, but I only wanted to graze him. My object was to protest against the participation of the army in the glorification of Zola and the rehabilitation of Dreyfus. My blow was aimed less at Dreyfus than at Dreyfusism."

A curious feature of the ceremonies in the Pantheon was the absence of many of the foreign ambassadors. It is understood that the Turkish ambassador was the prime mover in the plan to induce the members of the diplomatic corps to abstain from going to the Pantheon.

ACCOUNTS SHORT; KILLS SELF.

New York Bank Teller Commits Suicide After Writing Confession.

New York.—On being questioned by the bank's officers Wednesday about an apparent discrepancy in his accounts, Charles T. Muir, paying teller of the Forty-second street branch of the Corn Exchange bank, asked to be excused until he could obtain a deposit ticket to explain the matter, went to the basement and, after writing a brief confession that his accounts were short, shot himself in the head. He died within an hour at the hospital. Vice-President Frew of the Corn Exchange bank said that Muir's shortage was $9,068.

VICTORY FOR TAFT FORCES.

Alabama and Arkansas Contests Decided in Their Favor.

Chicago.—Without roll calls the Republican national committee Friday decided the contests from Alabama and Arkansas, involving 24 seats in the Republican national convention, in favor of the delegates instructed for Secretary Taft.

The victory for the Taft forces was sweeping, not even a division being required to determine the will of the committee.

School Pupils Starving.

New York.—Emergency measures for the relief of hundreds of pupils in East side schools who have been found to be suffering from lack of food have been adopted by the committee of East side school board members, organized as a result of the serious conditions which the reports of school principals in the section revealed.

At a conference late Wednesday the committee decided to arrange for the speedy opening of two kitchens on the lower East side at which the hungry children may be fed.

Two Die in Auto Crash.

Brunswick, Germany. — A fatal automobile accident took place near here Friday. Lieutenant Commander Asemann and First Lieutenant Johannes Fritzsche were killed and First Lieutenant Elmnhorst and the chauffeur, a man named Eicke, were severely injured.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

It would be just as well to elect the Johnson supporters of two years ago, that call themselves republicans, for delegates to stay at home, when they loom up in the republican caucuses, this year.

Did you notice the offer of $150 for best article in an other column? We don't expect to win this money, but we do expect to write some articles before next November, to the affect that it is for the best interest of the Ninth Congressional District of Minnesota to keep their present member in congress.

Some of the Republican editors seem to be getting "savage" because the Crookston Times is supporting M. W. Savage for the republican nomination for gov., but as The Times is a democratic paper in principal and a republican paper for policy you can not blame them for trying to get a weak candidate nominated by the republican party, if they can.

Republican Call.

TOWNSHIP NOTICE.

Editor The Sunbeam:

At our last annual Town meeting we voted to purchase a Town ditcher, and later a request was mede for a special Town Meeting for the purpose of bonding the town to purchase the ditcher. The election was held, but was not very well attended, as only 16 votes was cast, viz: 14 votes for bonding and 2 against. The intention was to make a loan from the State, but upon request for said loan the state would not consider the matter as they use and furnish their own blanks and forms for any loans from the state, which must be used by Townships and other applicants for state money, or they will not be considered leagal according to state law.

For this reason the special Town meeting held will not be valid. Upon receiving this information the Chairman of the Town board instructed me to notify the voters, to this affect.

Promp attention given to Probae Cour Work.

The Truth Anyway.

A teacher in a tenement district hurried from the school to find the mother of a pupil who had been taken quite ill.

"Can you show me where Mrs. Angelo Scandale lives?" she inquired of a cherub transplanted from the sunny south to a dark, sunless alley.

"Yes, teach', I show you," and a willing, sticky hand dragged her on with such speed as to make her stumble over an Italian dame seated on the threshold.

After the teacher's breathless flight toward the clouds the little hand stopped lugging.

"There where Mees Scandale live," indicated the horizontal arm and finger, "but she downstair sitting on the step," finished the smiling lips.—Harper's Magazine.

Firstborns Will Agree.

They were discussing the law of entail—the English law bequeathing the bulk of the family property to the eldest son.

"There is 50 per cent of logic in that law," said a physician, "and if the family property went to the firstborn, whether son or daughter, the law would contain 100 per cent of logic. For the firstborn child is practically always the best—best in brain, in build, in beauty, in everything."—Atlanta Constitution.

A Pessimist.

"Don't be too anxious to get a husband," said the wise matron. "Don't go around hunting for one."

"Think I should just sit down and wait for one, eh?" replied the maiden.

"Yes, for you'll sit up and wait for one often enough after you've got him."

Quite Natural.

Husband—What did you think when you heard the chandelier fall last night? Wife—Why, I thought you had been detained on business again and were getting upstairs as quietly as you could.

Missed Vocation.

Client—Didn't you make a mistake in going into law instead of the army? Lawyer—Why? Client—By the way you charge there would be little left of the enemy.—London Tit-Bits.

It's Results That Count

In cooking it's the results that count. So when a housewife starts to make Bread or Rools or Pies, naturally she wants her cooking to have that rich crisp, pleasing odor. But it must also have that whiteness, lightness and wholesomeness which is so essential to good cooking.

Much of this depends upon the flour—and thousands depend upon,

The creamery takes in cream three days a week now, Mondays Wednesdays and Fridays.

The officials of the Highlanding creamery placed $2.500 inasurance on the creamery and contents this week.

The Kratka creamery started up last week, making three creameries built and running in the Eleven towns, with three years settlement. Not so bad!

Walt McAndress went down to Thief River Falls on yesterdays steamer, to have an eye on how the boat is being run, as he one of the board of managers for the R. L. R. T. Company.

The creamery express boat is proveing to be a fine thing for delivering cream to the creamery, which proves that the proper place for a creamery is on the river bank.

Miss Marie and Lena Rustad, came home from Grand Forks Wednesday for their summer vacation. They came up from Thief River Falls on the river with Mr. Dorbins launch

Two additional cream tanks have just been placed in the Highlanding creamery, which butter maker Lowerizon thinks will be sufficient to keep up with the rapid growth of the business.

Mark's Lung Balsam with tar, is sold by all dealers. Price 25 cent, 50 cents and $1.00.

Our Clearwater corespondent has given the new boat built on the river the name of Noahs Ark. The name suggests that the boat was built to save the people from the flood, by geting their butter to market.

Did you ever hear of a country merchant buying cider by the keg, and after selling about all the cider, filling up the keg with water and shiping it back to the wolesale house, and refusing to pay for it because the cider was sour? We have.

E.B. Lanager, of Plummer has just got in a car load of fenceing. Those that are going to build any fence this spring should call on him, and get his low prices on barb wire fenceing.

The steamer Farmers Friend took down a big cargo of choice butter for the Highlanding creamery yesterday. This batter leaves the creamery in first class condition and the boat lands it in the refrigerator car at Thief River Falls in fine shape for a big price, on the market and our farmers get the cash.

All kinds of garden tools, and garden seeds, a A, Ellingsons

The Farmers Friend steamer had their barge loaded with fat cattle, going down the river yestorday, for Kris Larson of Anton, and the boat was loaded with choice creamery butter for the eastern market. The produce goes to market, and the cash comes back. No homes mortgaged for this money.

Our creamery received the returns from their first shipment of butter this week, with a premium of 1½ cents above the market price. How do you clover producers of butter fat like the smell of that? Say how are your steers? We guess the butchers are beginning to look toward the Eleven towns when they want fat cattle.

Excursion To Red Lake.

The new steamer Farmers Friend will make an excursion to Red Lake Agency next week. Leaving Thief River Falls on the morning of June 13th, and Highlanding on the morning of June 14th, All who want go on this excursion are envited to get on board.

The rate for the round trip, is $3.00 from Highlanding. The boat expects to reach the outlet Sunday evening in time to have a moonlight ride on beautiful Red Lake. Aboard!

Installments Are Paid.

We note that the brilliant? nit from Kratka digs in again on installments and C.O.D. Well we will suppose Fred Haug did bring us up a sack of shorts on the installment plan, and we paid him for it in full, freight and all, like a man, instead of making a claim that the shorts was damaged and compell him to loose his freight and some besides. Then when he had left it on the river bank, buy it, at a big discount, and make use of it the same as we or any other MAN would have done in the first place, instead of working up a scheam to beat Fred out of his freight.

"I am glad to write my endorsement of the great remedy, Peruna. I do so most heartily."—Julia Marlowe.

Any remedy that benefits digestion strengthens the nerves.

The nerve centers require nutrition. If the digestion is impaired, the nerve centers become anemic, and nervous debility is the result.

Peruna is not a nervine nor a stimulant. It benefits the nerves by benefiting digestion.

Peruna frees the stomach of catarrhal congestions and normal digestion is the result.

In other words, Peruna goes to the bottom of the whole difficulty, when the disagreeable symptoms disappear.

Mrs. J. C. Jamison, Wallace, Cal., writes:

"I was troubled with my stomach for six years. Was treated by three doctors. They said that I had nervous dyspepsia. I was put on a liquid diet for three months.

"I improved under the treatment, but as soon as I stopped taking the medicine, I got bad again.

"I saw a testimonial of a man whose case was similar to mine being cured by Peruna, so I thought I would give it a trial.

"I procured a bottle at once and commenced taking it. I have taken several bottles and am entirely cured."

SPORTING FACTS AND FANCIES

"I'm not looking for heavy hitters to ever win a pennant," declares Frank Chance, leader of the Chicago Cubs, world's champions. "Batting is sacrificed for team work in the major leagues." By this strong statement it is not meant that weak stickers are wanted, but that a player's ability to hammer the ball must be curbed and used to fit in with the needs of the game, all tending toward the one great end—victory. When a youngster gets his first chance in the big league he may come with a reputation of being a slugger. His first season or two he may fulfill all the prophecies of what was said he could do with the stick, but generally his long-distance smashes will become fewer, and he will work in with the other eight men in the game, curbing his own ability to "hit it out" that he may sacrifice, play "hit and run," or some other of the dozens of combinations, worked up to win a ball game by getting runs over the plate rather than stinging base hits off the pitcher. The greatest batting ball club ever put together—the Philadelphia Nationals of eight or ten years ago—failed to win pennants. Teams with weaker batsmen, but superior team work, carried off the coveted flags. Chance and his men are playing the game this season along the same lines that have already won them two pennants in the National league and one world's championship. The start they have made makes it look as though the Cubs were slated for another season similar to the past two. The batting of the champions has been intermittent—for a few days they would hit well, then they would slump for a day or two. "We will hit as well as in the past," said the leader of the world-beaters. "The men are all going about the same clip; when they slump they choke the bat a little more to follow the ball closer; when they get to hitting freely they let out a bit and slam harder. Against the 'spit' ball most of us have to choke the bat more than for the usual curves and speed, as that ball is about the hardest to connect with satisfactorily."

No club being willing to risk the waiver price of $1,500 on Case Patten, the Washington club is now trying to place the southpaw with a bush-league team. Patten has had nothing this season. In the south this spring he was thought to be in fair shape, and allowances were made for his backwardness because of his long service. His general physical condition was fine, he worked hard and conscientiously, and was confident he would be his old self. When the spring probationary period was over and the real struggle began it was at once and lamentably apparent that the man, who, in 1906, could well claim to be the best pitcher in the American league, and who started last season like a house afire, had seen his day. He lost his speed and cunning in the middle of last season, and there is little or no indication that he has recovered either.

CASE PATTEN

Frank Bowerman, the veteran backstop of Dovey's Boston National league team, declares that no player should stay with any one club more than five consecutive years. Frank was with the Giants eight seasons, and he says that was altogether too long. "No, sir," said Bowerman, when asked if he thought anchoring a star in one city helped the game any. "I sure don't. Five years is long enough for any player to stay with one club. McGann, Browne, and I were with McGraw too long. Dahlen had stayed just long enough, and, of course, Ferguson was a newcomer compared to the rest of us. The best thing in the world that could happen to Nap Lajoie and to the Cleveland club would be the transfer of the big second sacker. He has panned out in Cleveland as a drawing card, and his failure to do all Cleveland fans expected of him as a manager has not helped him any in that city. Think what a drawing card he would become in any other city of the circuit. Then, too, Hans Wagner would be better off in another city. The Pittsburg fans might put up a yell, but a number of good men would be of more use to the club."

DAD AND HIS MEMORY.

Old Gentleman Really Had Very Little to Brag About.

It was a severe trial to Mr. Harding that his only son's memory was not all that could be desired. "Where in the world he got such a forgetful streak from is beyond me," said the exasperated father to his wife on one occasion.

"What has he forgotten now?" asked Mrs. Harding, with eyes downcast and a demure expression.

"The figures of the last return from the election on the bulletin-board," and Mr. Harding inserted a finger in his collar as if to loosen it, and shook his head vehemently. "Looked at 'em as he came past not half an hour ago, and now can't tell me.

"As I said to him: 'If you're so stupid you can't keep a few simple figures in your head, why don't you write 'em down on a piece of paper, as I do, and have done all my life, long before I was your age?'"—Youth's Companion.

TORTURED SIX MONTHS

By Terrible Itching Eczema—Baby's Suffering Was Terrible—Soon Entirely Cured by Cuticura.

"Eczema appeared on my son's face. We went to a doctor who treated him for three months. Then he was so bad that his face and head were nothing but one sore and his ears looked as if they were going to fall off, so we tried another doctor for four months, the baby never getting any better. His hand and legs had big sores on them and the poor little fellow suffered so terribly that he could not sleep. After he had suffered six months we tried a set of the Cuticura Remedies and the first treatment let him sleep and rest well; in one week the sores were gone and in two months he had a clear face. Now he is two years and has never had eczema again. Mrs. Louis Leck, R. F. D. 3, San Antonio, Tex., Apr. 15, 1907."

UNUSUALLY BRILLIANT.

Lady—Your little brother seems to be bright for his age, doesn't he?

Little Maggie—Well, I should say so. Why, he knows the name of almost every player in the big leagues.

Curious Indian Custom.

The following curious custom is recorded by J. Owen Dorsey in his monograph on the sociology of the Omaha Indians:

"In the spring when the grass comes up there is a council or tribal assembly held to which a feast is given by the head of the Hanga gens. After they decide that planting time has come and at command of the Hanga man a crier is sent through the villages. He wears a robe with hair outside and cries as he goes. 'They do, indeed, say that you will dig the ground! Hallo!' He carries sacred corn, which has been shelled and to each household he gives two or three grains, which are mixed with the seed corn of the household."

After this it is lawful for the people to dig up the soil and plant their crops.

How Things Went.

Elliott H. Peabody is one of the best-known men at the Worcester county courthouse. At one time he and a few others were interested in a business deal which they expected to put through on a certain day. He was unable to be there, so the next day telephoned to a Mr. H—— for particulars. A lady answered the 'phone, and said that Mr. H——was not at home. Mr. Peabody, supposing it to be Mrs. H——, said: "Well, perhaps you can tell me what I want to know. I only wanted to inquire how things went last night."

The lady, in a cheerful, reassuring tone, said: "Oh, nicely! Mrs. H—— is doing fine, and the baby weighs six and a half pounds. I'm the nurse."—Lippincott's.

Right Food Gives Strength and Brain Power.

The natural elements of wheat and barley, including the phosphate of potash, are found in Grape-Nuts, and that is why persons who are run down from improper food pick up rapidly on Grape-Nuts.

"My system was run down by excessive night work," writes a N. Y. man, "in spite of a liberal supply of ordinary food.

"After using Grape-Nuts I noticed improvement at once, in strength, and nerve and brain power.

"This food seemed to lift me up and stay with me for better exertion, with less fatigue. My weight increased 20 lbs. with vigor and comfort in proportion.

"When traveling I always carry the food with me to insure having it."

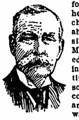
FIVE MONTHS IN HOSPITAL.

Discharged Because Doctors Could Not Cure.



Levi P. Brockway, S. Second Ave., Anoka, Minn., says: "After lying for five months in a hospital I was discharged as incurable, and given only six months to live. My heart was affected, I had smothering spells and sometimes fell unconscious. I got so I couldn't use my arms, my eyesight was impaired and the kidney secretions were badly disordered. I was completely worn out and discouraged when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, but they went right to the cause of the trouble and did their work well. I have been feeling well ever since."

Little Lesson for Rufus.

Uncle Erastus had been polishing his musket for half an hour; at last he gave it a final love-pat, and turned to his grandson. "Chile," he said, "does you see dat bottle about 30 yards over dere?"

"Shore I does," Rufus agreed.

The old man threw up the musket and balanced it rather shakily. "Whang!" it bellowed. "Now does you see dat bottle?" the old man demanded.

"Yes, I does, granddad."

"I's powerful glad to hear dat, Rufe," the old man said, calmly. "I's been afeard from de way you sorted taters lately dat your eyesight was failing—but hit ain't. You's good fo' several yeahs yit, Rufus."

An Occasion for Rejoicing.

Recently the usual morning exercises of a school were interrupted by a knock at the door. After reading a note which had been handed in, the principal announced that one of the teachers would be unable to be at school for several days, owing to a slight illness. Immediately two boys began to whisper. Upon asking what the trouble was, the boys said they were only talking about the selection of a hymn.

"And what would you like to sing?" said the teacher.

"'Count Your Blessings,'" was the quick response.

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Charity in Jail.

Minneapolis—Two hungry children and the grieving wife of a prisoner in the Hennepin county jail have brought out the best side of every prisoner in the cells. When the three called to tell the jailer of their destitution every man awaiting trial who had anything to contribute helped to relieve the destitute family.

The father of the children is in the jail awaiting trial. His arrest left the family without food or money, and the mother went to the jail, where she told Jailer Nels Clausen her story. The younger daughter looked up at the jailer. "I'm hungry," she said. "Ain't had nothin' to eat for two whole days."

A prisoner in his cell overheard the remark, called a trusty, and the relief fund was started.

"Here's my last quarter," he said. "Show it to the other prisoners and make them shell out."

From cell to cell passed the trusty, repeating the story over and over again. Pickpockets, thieves, shoplifters, men convicted of or awaiting trial for all manner of crimes—every one brought out his contribution. When the trusty finished his rounds his hand held, mostly in pennies, nickles and dimes, $4.60, which he passed over to the wife. Matron Woodbun took charge of the mother and children a little later and furnished them with the first real solid meal they had eaten in ten days.

Cultivation of Pearls.

Duluth—There is one enterprise in Northern Minnesota that may some day attract attention, and possibly bring wealth to the promoter. If it brings him wealth it surely will bring him fame, for the enterprise is certainly original and unique. It is nothing less than the cultivation of pearls by scientific treatment of fresh water clams. As is well known, many valuable pearls are found in the clams that inhabit the fresh waters of the Northwest, and former Alderman E. R. Jefferson of Duluth has a scheme for treating the mollusks so that each clam may prove a possible pearl bearer. He is not a dreamer by any means. He is one of the survivors of the First Minnesota, and a hard headed business man. Mr. Jefferson made a study of the pearl question as applied to bivalves. He ascertained the scientific theory of the origin of the pearl in the shell fish, and then he figured that the cultivation of the gems was possibly a practical venture.

Indians at State Fair.

Hamline—Through Commissioner of Indian Affairs F. E. Leupp at Washington permission has been granted the board of managers of the State Fair to bring a band of 300 Wahpeton Sioux from the Sisseton reservation in South Dakota to the coming fair. Under the direction of Maj. C. B. Jackson, Indian agent at Sisseton, an Indian village of 100 tepees will be constructed upon the fair grounds, directly north of Machinery hall. Here the Indians will live for one week exactly as they live at home on the reservation. Maj. Jackson will for the week transfer his office and entire force to the temporary village, and an opportunity will be given fair visitors to see just how Uncle Sam handles the red man.

No. 2 Wheat.

Minneapolis—Losing by 13 votes, the opposition to the amendment making No. 2 northern wheat deliverable on contract in Minneapolis met defeat. As a two-thirds vote was necessary to carry it, and 365 votes were polled, 122 would have blocked it. The opposition polled 109 and the winners 256. No such interest has been shown on 'change since the memorable division seven years ago, on the proposal to locate the new chamber where it now stands as against a plan to build further up town.

Man Killed.

Duluth—One man was killed and another seriously injured in an explosion in the west end of the Wisconsin Central railroad's tunnel. Tom Maki, who was killed, was cooped up in a narrow shaft and the force of the explosion crushed him to a pulp. John Harji, who escaped death, was at the opening of the shaft and was hurled violently against the rock wall. He was severely bruised and burned about the head and body and probably will lose his eyesight.

NEWS NOTES.

Winona—The big state tuberculosis exhibit opened here with two hundred attending.

Minneapolis—The body taken from the river has been positively identified as that of Dr. William S. Gloyd, the dentist who disappeared from his home on the night of Oct. 23.

Owatonna—State firemen decide to meet here in 1911; honorary members elected by association.

Minneapolis—Minnesota grand encampment, I. O. O. F., meets, amends constitution and elects officers.

Mankato—A big gathering of state firemen was held here and control of funds and taxation was discussed.

St. Paul—State Auditor Iverson apportions $62,144.72 out of swamp land interest fund to state institutions.

St. Paul—Elizabeth Hackman, ten years old, was run down on Payne avenue by a cavalryman from Fort Snelling.

Little Falls—A tramp threw acid into the face of Mrs. George Ferrell as she was taking food to him at the door of her home.

Minneapolis—Prohibitionists assembled in state convention in Minneapolis wired "condolences" to brewers and get a scorching reply in return.

Minneapolis—L. A. Wood, George A. Wood and Forest B. Wood were fined $2,500 each by Judge Morris for conspiracy to use the mails to defraud.

Afton—Charged with attempting to pass a draft of $850 to which he is alleged to have forged the indorsement, Wallce Raola is under arrest in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis — Forty-five thousand public school children were turned out of the schools for the long summer vacation. The schools open Sept. 8, a week later than usual.

St. Paul—Mrs. Agnes Gonia, aged fifty-three, was found dead at her home at 769 Seminary street. There had been a wedding at her house the day before, and the excitement apparently had affected her.

Crookston—No. 6 westbound freight on the Great Northern was wrecked east of McIntosh and ten cars of rails were hurled in all directions, tearing up thirteen rail lengths of track. The wreck was caused by a broken flange. No one was seriously hurt.

Minneapolis—That he might spare his family the shock of finding his dead body in the house, A. J. Anderson, a contractor and builder of 2650 Girard avenue north, walked three miles into the country and committed suicide by shooting himself in the head.

Little Falls—Edward Deshrow was drowned while working on the rear drive when his boat struck a log and capsized, eight miles from this city, and two others were nearly drowned. Desbrow's body has been brought here. His mother, who lives at South Haven, Mich., has been notified.

Crookston—The city council of Crookston disregards the letter of the state tax commission of a few weeks ago to County Auditor Hoffard and tax rebates are still the order of the day. The result is a deadlock between the city and county officers, which may ultimately find its way into the courts.

Faribault — Henry Ubricht was found dead on a water wagon, with the reins still tightly gripped in his hands and the team steadily drawing the sprinkler. Ubrich was the driver on one of the city sprinkling carts. He was about 70 years old and for a number of seasons has filled that position.

Chetek—H. R. McIntyre of Chetok is deserving of a Carnegie medal. Sunday afternoon he rescued Theo. Olsen, a farmer, from drowning by jumping twenty feet from a bridge, diving sixteen feet under the water and bringing Olsen to the surface. The youth had gone down the third time, but efforts at resuscitation were successful.

Minneapolis—Two leading national banks of Minneapolis have consolidated into the largest banking institution northwest of Chicago, with deposits of $19,000,000. The directors of the Northwestern National Bank and of the National Bank of Commerce have voted unanimously to consolidate the business of the two institutions.

Minneapolis—The only business transacted by the Prohibitionists was the selection of four delegates at large to attend the national convention of the Prohibition party to name a presidential ticket. The following were named: W. C. Calderwood, Minneapolis; E. E. Lobeck, Alexandria; George W. Higgins, Minneapolis; John W. Shields, Minneapolis.

Minnesota Lake—George Kremer of this place, who travels for a packing company of Austin, narrowly escaped death at Randolph. He was crossing the tracks to reach the depot, and in doing so stepped from in front of an engine that was stationary on a side track, directly in front of some cars that were being rapidly backed. He was struck with considerable force, but was thrown clear of the track.

THE PERSISTENT TROUBADOUR.

TWO DIE IN $350,000 FIRE

PACKING HOUSE IN KANSAS CITY SUFFERS IN BLAZE.

Conflagration Follows an Explosion Which is Felt Over Both the Neighboring Cities.

Kansas City, Mo.—Two laborers lost their lives, two others were seriously injured and property loss estimated at between $250,000 and $350,000 was caused by two explosions followed by a fire in the packing house of Morris & Co., at the riverside in Kansas City, Kan., Friday. The force of the explosions, which was felt all over both Kansas Cities, ruined the cold storage building, and the fire that followed destroyed the smoke house with its contents.

An explosion of sewer gas resulted when a water man in one of the cold storage departments lighted a match. This was followed by another and much more serious explosion caused by the igniting of a quantity of ammonia, and a stubborn fire soon started.

The Morris plant is located near the channel of the Kaw river, and being in the center of the flooded district is in a swift current of water from six to eight feet deep. This condition made the task of fighting the fire most difficult, and it required five hours to place the flames under control. For a time the entire plant seemed doomed. Fire apparatus was transported to the scene after much delay by flat cars. There were 50 men in the plant when the explosions occurred, but all except four escaped. Two of these were instantly killed and others badly mangled.

Antigo, Wis. — The plant of the Frost Veneering and Seating Company was destroyed by fire shortly after midnight. The loss is about $50,000.

Albuquerque, N. M. — The entire plant of the Continental Oil company with the exception of the office building burned Friday. Nearly 100,000 gallons of coal oil, gasoline and naphtha were destroyed. Loss $50,000.

JOSEPH LEITER MARRIED.

Young Millionaire Weds Miss Juliette Williams in Washington.

Washington.—A wedding of unusual interest was that which took place at the home of the bride's parents Wednesday of Miss Juliette Williams, daughter of Col. and Mrs. John R. Williams of this city, to Joseph Leiter, son of the late Levi Z. Leiter of Chicago and Washington.

The ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Father Buckey, assistant rector of St. Matthew's Roman Catholic church, was witnessed by about 20 persons.

Big Grain Elevator Burns.

Chicago. — In a spectacular fire which destroyed the great grain elevator of the Tri-State Grain company in Hammond, Ind., Wednesday night, 250,000 bushels of corn were destroyed and property valued at $200,000, including the corn, was burned. The fire was caused by a hot box on a small wheel on a grain belt which was being used to hoist grain into the elevator.

Ancient Campanile Tottering.

Venice.—The campanile of Santo Stefano church, a Gothic structure of the fourteenth century, which contains the tomb of the Doge Francesco Morosini, threatens to fall like the campanile of St. Mark's, which collapsed in 1902. The question of demolishing it is under consideration.

JOHN VINES WRIGHT DIES.

He Was the Oldest Living Ex-Member of Congress.

Washington.—John Vines Wright, who was the oldest living ex-member of congress, died Friday at his home in this city. Although near 80 years old, he had been regularly at his desk in the general land office until two months ago, when he had a stroke of paralysis. He held the unique distinction of making more treaties with the Indians than any other man.

Judge Wright was born in McNairy county, Tennessee, in 1828 and was educated in Louisville. He was admitted to the bar in 1852 and was elected to congress in 1854, serving in the memorable sessions preceding the civil war. He resigned when the state of Tennessee seceded in 1861 and served in the army until he was elected a member of the confederate congress. While colonel of the Thirteenth Tennessee regiment his horse was shot from under him at the battle of Belmont.

After the war Col. Wright served as chancellor and judge of the supreme court of Tennessee. During Cleveland's first administration he was appointed chairman of the northwest Indian commission. In 1880 he was a candidate for governor of Tennessee but was defeated.

THAW TO REMAIN IN JAIL.

Kept at Poughkeepsie Until Question of Change is Decided.

New York. — Harry K. Thaw will remain in the Poughkeepsie jail pending an application of his counsel to Justice Dowling of the supreme court for a change of the order committing him to the State Hospital for the Insane at Matteawan. This decision was rendered by Justice Morschauser of Poughkeepsie, after hearing arguments of counsel in this city Friday on a motion to transfer the prisoner to any state asylum other than an asylum for insane convicts. Justice Morschauser expressed the opinion that it might be better for Thaw to be incarcerated in some other asylum than the one at Matteawan as it was evident that strained relations existed between the head of the Matteawan institution and Thaw.

AGAINST IMMORAL SALOONS.

United States Brewers' Association Adopts a Platform.

Milwaukee. — The United States Brewers' association at its closing session Wednesday adopted a platform of principles in which it pledges itself to the abolition of the immoral saloon and to the cause of temperance in the use of intoxicants in the broadest sense. At the afternoon session the convention voted to meet next year at Rochester, N. Y., on the first Wednesday in June.

Officers were elected as follows: President, J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; vice-president, C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; secretary, George A. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; treasurer, C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y.

Theft Returned Four-Fold.

Washington. — Secretary Cortelyou has received, in an envelope postmarked Jersey City, a conscience contribution of $8,000, which has been turned into the conscience fund of the treasury. In an unsigned letter the sender says that many years ago he and another man took a considerable sum of money belonging to the government, and that this $8,000 makes a total of $40,000, or four-fold the amount originally taken by himself, that he has returned to the treasury from time to time in several years.

SEAT CONTESTS ALL OVER

TAFT WINS 216 OF THEM AND SENATOR FORAKER THREE.

Former's Total Now 803—"Allies" Declare They Have Not Given Up.

Chicago.—Late Friday afternoon the Republican national committee completed the hearings of all contests submitted, and turned its attention to other matters. It had been in session for seven days of actual work, and had decided contests involving 219 seats on the temporary roll call. These contests have been decided as follows:

FOR TAFT.

Alabama	22
Arkansas	8
Florida	8
Georgia	16
Kentucky	8
Louisiana	18
Mississippi	18
Missouri	6
North Carolina	18
Ohio	7
Oklahoma	10
Pennsylvania	1
South Carolina	8
Tennessee	18
Texas	36
Virginia	18
Alaska	3
Arizona	2
Total	216

FOR FORAKER.

Virginia	2
Ohio	1
Total	3

As Taft had 387 instructed delegates before the national committee began the hearing of contests, he will now have a total of 603 delegates on the temporary roll call without taking into consideration any that have either indorsed him or declared for him in any other manner.

The only complete defeat sustained by the Taft delegates in the contests was in the Fifth Virginia district where a Foraker delegation was seated because a man was allowed to act as secretary of the district convention who had issued a call for a convention in his own county "For white men only."

Outside of the conclusion of the contests before the national committee the most important development of the day was the issuance by the "allies" of a statement in which they declared their intention of "sticking to the finish" and in which they asserted that it was certain that "there will be no nomination on the first ballot."

RAYMOND HITCHCOCK FREED.

New York Jury Finds the Actor Not Guilty.

New York. — The jury in the case of Raymond Hitchcock, accused of mistreating young girls, returned a verdict of not guilty at 2:50 o'clock Thursday morning.

Mrs. Hitchcock was in court when the verdict was returned and, bursting into tears, embraced her husband, who was also congratulated by many friends who had waited in the courtroom for the verdict.

There being four other indictments against Hitchcock, he was remanded to the Tombs prison by Justice Goff. He will be admitted to bail.

JUDGE LANDIS SAVES BILLIK.

Grants Appeal as Preparations for Hanging Are Being Made.

Chicago.—Herman Billik escaped death on the gallows Friday by United States Judge Landis granting an appeal to the supreme court of the United States just as preparations were being made to take his life on the scaffold.

Billik was told the glad news by Jailer William T. Davies in the death chamber, where he was awaiting death with his neck bare of apparel in readiness for the noose. The prisoner thanked God and then collapsed into a chair.

ROBBED OF HIS YOUNG WIFE.

South Carolina Man Relates Strange Experience in Mountains.

Spartanburg, S. C.—W. F. Burns of Jackson county, S. C., while on a bridal trip across Panther mountain, in Greenville county, says he was robbed of his pretty young wife by a gang of six men, after he had been bound, beaten and robbed. He and his wife stopped at a cottage in the mountains and during the night the men entered the room of the couple, attacked Burns and took his wife down the mountain. He says he has not seen her since. The authorities are investigating his story.

Doings of Iowa Bankers.

Sioux City, Ia. — The refusal to go on record as favoring the enactment of a state law guaranteeing bank deposits, the passage of a resolution in favor of placing bank examiners on a salary, the election of officers and the selection of Waterloo as the next meeting place, were the principal features of the concluding session of the Iowa Bankers' association Friday. The new officers are: L. T. Brooks, Hedrick, president; J. H. Ingwerson, Clinton, vice-president; J. M. Dinwiddie, Cedar Rapids, secretary; D. L. Heinsheimer, Glenwood, treasurer.

HER DESTINATION IN DOUBT.

Little Girl's Remark Not Complimentary to Grandma.

Ethel is of the mature age of five. Recently her grandmother concluded that it devolved on her to instruct the child in religious matters.

"You must be a good girl, Ethel," she said. "Then you will go to heaven when you die."

Ethel seemed scarcely pleased with this reward for exceptional conduct.

"Don't you want to go to heaven?" asked grandma, with a look of reproach.

"Oh, I don't know," temporized Ethel. "I guess not."

"Why not?" demanded grandma, severely.

"Because maybe I couldn't get out," answered Ethel.

"You wouldn't want to get out," replied grandma.

"Oh, yes, I should," returned Ethel, with conviction.

"No," argued grandma, "you would not. Why should you want to get out of heaven?"

"Why," answered Ethel, "I guess I'd want to go and see you once in a while, wouldn't I?"—Woman's Home Companion.

FAMILIAR PHRASE.

"He paused for a moment's reflection."

Severe Reproach.

"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Torkins, "I had a dream about a race horse that won three times in succession."

"Great Scott," answered her husband, who has a touch of superstition; "what was its name, what did it look like?"

"I've done my best to remember, but I can't."

"That's the way! There never was a woman who could be relied on to keep her head in business matters!"

Entered at Sunbeam as second-class matter August [illegible], at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

Taft is now certain to be the nominee of the republican party for president.

Anyone reading congressman Steenersons speech made in the house of Representatives, on May 25th, on the efficiency of the militia, would be convinced that he knows what he is talking about and can hold his own in an argument with other congressmen.

The Socialist party of Red Lake county will have a full county and legislative ticket in the field this year, and as it is pretty hard to form any estimate of their stength, until after the votes are counted, there may be some surprises in store for the candidates of the other paties in November.

The Thief River Falls News is authority for the following regarding the canditate Nelson for renomination for sheriff. "Lewis Nelson the present sheriff, is of course going to be a candidate again, and the wise ones say that he will have the fight of his life to win the Republican nomination. Many of the strongest supporters that Mr. Nelson had in Thief River Falls two years ago put on the war paint and are actively at work conducting a campaign that does not mean votes for the present incubent."

It would seem by the above that a large number of the people down at the Falls have discovered they could get along without Mr. Nelson, The News says "others who two years ago were lined up against Nelson are this year for him."

We presume these are the thirty six deputies that went with him to Red Lake Falls to get the automobile.

Has Made Friends Up Here.

As yet there appers to be no opposition to John B. O'Brien for county auditor and N.W. Tarrant for judge of probate, The former has made a good official and is conducting the office in a perfectly satisfactory manner. He certainly is entitled to re-election without opposition. Judge Tarrent is one of the best Judge of probates in the North west. and what he does not know about probate law, he does know about pioneer days in Red Lake county and has the unanimous and unqualified support of the "old timers." Of course the "old timers" are no longer in the majority in Red Lake county, but Nick makes friends with new arrivals and always has a very comfortable majority on election day.—Thief River Falls News.

The "old timers" will find the "new timers" right behind them pushing for the re-election of N.W. Tarrant for judge of probate, if he needs it. No use to say any more, unless an opponent shows up

As to Mr. O'Brien we believe he is justly entitled to re-election as an indorsement of a good official, for if he was elected on the so-called county seat removel proposition, we have not heard a complaint from his opponents, that he had not given them a "square deal."

There is two of your candidates, John, now trot out "it" as "our candidate" so we can have a little "spice" mixed in the campaign,

BIG CELEBRATION.

The Firemans Tournament, of Northern Minnesota will be held at Thief River Falls on June 29, 30th, and July 1s. To this the patriotic citizens of Thief River Falls have added one day, July 2nd, for a grand 4th, of July celebration. Anyone that has never attended a firemans tournament should try to attend this one, as it is certainly worth going miles to see. Thief River Falls are making exstensive preparations to entertain the visiting fireman, and the large crowd from other placeses which it is expected will be present Thief River Falls has gained an eviable reputation as entertainers of visitors to their city and we predict that this entertainment will be no exception to the rule.

People liveing in this part can go down on Monday the 29th, on the steamer Farmers Friend, and be at the tournament the second day June 30th, and return home Wednesday, or stay down until Friday and come up on Friday and take in the BIG CELEBRATION, at Highlanding on Saturday, thus making a solid weeks celebration, which had ought to be enough to satisfy anyone

Cutting Big Diamonds.

Big diamonds lose a great deal in the cutting. The Kohinoor was reduced by an unskillful stonecutter from 793⅝ carats to 280 carats, a second cutting brought it down to 186 1-16 carats and a third to 106 1-16 carats, or less than a seventh of its original size. The original weight of the Pitt or Regent diamond was 410 carats, but in the hands of the cutter two-thirds disappeared, while the Star of the South, which was picked up in a river by a negress, lost a little over half its weight by cutting.

It's Results That Count

In cooking it's the results that count. So when a housewife starts to make Bread or Rools or Pies, naturally she wants her cooking to have that rich crisp, pleasing odor. But it must also have that whiteness, lightness and wholesomeness which is so essential to good cooking.

Much of this depends upon the flour—and thousands depend upon,

How He Wone Out.

It is said that Joseph M. Brown, who has just beaten Governor Smith, of Georgia in the race for the next term, did not make a single speech or a personal canvass of any kind. He stayed at home and "wrote pieces for the papers." Governor Smith stumped the state, but his eloquence could not prevail against the silent influence of Mr. Brown's cards circulated threu the medium of the press. The people went to hear Mr. Smith speak; went home and read their papers, and voted for Mr. Brown.

Liked The Country,

Mr. O. A. Wilson post master at McIntosh spent Friday and Saturday last in this locality, on business and visiting old friends and neighbors. He expressed himself as being very well pleased with the appearance of the country, and with the rapid improvements that have been made in three years settlement. Our up to date creamerys, school and and farmers steam boat, he said showed that the settlers were enterprising people. He returned home Monday, by way of Thief River Falls, going down the river on the steamer.

A Dangerous Job,

Is there a plan on foot to kill County Commissioner Lindquist?

It appears that this is likely to be the next move made, in the county seat removel war.

What would lead an outsider observer to suspect there wss something in the wind, is the fact that the newspapers of the two places are preparing to lay the blame on each other, the same as they did the loss of the county seat removel petition.

In view of these facts we are preparing a fine obituary for Mr. Lindquist which we have entitled, "Our Martyed Commissioner." We are placed at some disadvantage by not being much acquainted with him, only by reputation, and would be very thankful to anyone who will furnish us with the following infomation. Where was he born? If he was born in the old country, what year did he come to America? Is he married or single? If married, how many children will be left to mourn the loss of a kind father and affectionate husband? By answering the above anyone will confer a favor on the editor, as we want to mention all these facts in our obituary, write up.

New Chart Corrects Errors.

The great practical utility of the magnetic survey made in the Pacific ocean by the yacht Galilee since 1905 is shown by a new magnetic chart, from which it appears that the charts previously used by navigators in the pacific ocean were erroneous along some much-traversed routes to the extent of from three to five degrees, and the errors at times were systematic. Errors of this magnitude are of importance in practical navigation where the indications of the compass should be as accurate as possible.

WOMAN'S BACKACHE

The back is the mainspring of woman's organism. It quickly calls attention to trouble by aching. It tells, with other symptoms, such as nervousness, headache, pains in the loins, weight in the lower part of the body, that a woman's feminine organism needs immediate attention.

In such cases the one sure remedy which speedily removes the cause, and restores the feminine organism to a healthy, normal condition is

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Mrs. Will Young, of 6 Columbia Ave., Rockland, Me., says:

"I was troubled for a long time with dreadful backaches and a pain in my side, and was miserable in every way. I doctored until I was discouraged and thought I would never get well. I read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for others and decided to try it; after taking three bottles I can truly say that I never felt so well in my life."

Mrs. Augustus Lyon, of East Earl, Pa., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I had very severe backaches, and pressing-down pains. I could not sleep, and had no appetite. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me and made me feel like a new woman."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

There is much more to catching than merely holding the ball the pitcher sends toward the plate or the ability to throw to the bases. Nor does everything depend on what sort of a ball, fast, curve, or slow, the catcher may call for, unless the pitcher is able to use some judgment in placing the particular ball wanted in a certain place. A good catcher must, of course, be a good receiver and thrower, but it is with men on bases that a catcher is required to display judgment. He must know the game and realize when his opponents are going to do a certain thing and block their play. The hit and run game, for instance, can only be broken up by the catcher. He must know when the base runner is going to steal, and in order to prevent the batsman from helping the runner, he wastes the ball, which means to have the pitcher pitch it out of reach of the batsman, so that he cannot hit it and at the same time give the catcher a clear throw to second or third, as the case may be. The base runner, of course, tries to create the impression that he is going to steal when he isn't, so that the catcher will waste the ball. By doing so he helps the batter, because he gets the pitcher in the hole. One frequently sees the catcher wasting two, and as many as three balls without seeing the runner leave first base, which indicates that the base runner has outguessed the catcher. The real great catchers are those who think quick, watch the opposition's every move, and govern their pitchers accordingly.

Edward Kerger, pitcher of the St. Louis National League club, in one short season has placed himself in the front rank of National league left-handed pitchers. He was born at San Angelo, Tex., on May 6, 1883, and acquired the rudiments of the game at Kerrville, Tex. He made his debut in 1905 with the Houston team, of the South Texas league, for which he won 24 and lost 11 games. At the suggestion of M. J. Finn, manager of the Nashville club, President Dreyfuss drafted Karger for the 1906 Pittsburg club, but Manager Clarke was not satisfied with the southpaw's work and exchanged him for pitcher McFarland of the St. Louis club. Karger was not a dissipated player, but liked his beer. On the advice of Manager McCloskey he became a total abstainer last season and the improvement in his pitching demonstrated to him the wisdom of his course. He fields his position well and is one of the best batsmen among the major league twirlers.

EDWARD KARGER

A ballplayer uses more care in choosing his bats than any of the other implements of his trade, according to those who deal in baseball goods. The balls are all the same, the gloves they wear do not make much difference, because after selecting one the player uses it a long time. The clothes he wears are of little importance. He isn't particular about the spikes in his shoes, but his bats—there is where he is fidgety as a grandmother. The ball player uses many bats. His standing with his manager and with the fans depends largely on how many hits he gets, and the bats make the hits. It is small wonder that the ball player, always superstitious, should regard the bat with unusual care. If the player isn't hitting he at once attributes it to the bat. He never recognizes the ability of the opposing pitcher or fielders, or anything wrong with his eyes. It is the bat.

Jesse Tannehill, the Boston American southpaw, has been traded for Case Patten of the Washington club. This gives the Red Sox a slab artist who can take his turn with the other twirlers. He comes at a time when the club is sorely in need of a good, consistent performer. Tannehill has been in the past a star for the Boston team, but this season it has been impossible for him to get into condition to pitch ball. Tannehill has been regarded as one of the best of the heavy hitting pitchers, and his work contributed largely to the winning of the second American league pennant by Boston.

Sweet Girl Brought to Ask Time for Reconsideration.

"Since you can be no more than a sister to me," said the heartbroken young man, "will you not give me one kiss of farewell?"

She assented, albeit coldly.

And Mannering drew the girl to his heart, he pressed his lips to hers with a passionate fervor born of his despair.

Afterward her head sank gently upon his shoulder.

"Mr. Mannering," she breathed, "this is all so—all so new to me—so strangely different from my expectations—perhaps, if you would give me time—time to reconsider—"

INVALID'S SAD PLIGHT.

After Inflammatory Rheumatism, Hair Came Out, Skin Peeled, and Bed Sores Developed—Only Cuticura Proved Successful.

"About four years ago I had a very severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism. My skin peeled, and the high fever played havoc with my hair, which came out in bunches. I also had three large bed sores on my back. I did not gain very rapidly, and my appetite was very poor. I tried many 'sure cures' but they were of little help, and until I tried Cuticura Resolvent I had had no real relief. Then my complexion cleared and soon I felt better. The bed sores went very soon after a few applications of Cuticura Ointment, and when I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment for my hair it began to regain its former glossy appearance. Mrs. Lavina J. How It Works.

Once there was a struggling young author who was blest with many friends, all of whom told him that he was the coming great writer of the country.

So one day a bright thought struck him. He said:

"I will publish my book, and all my friends who admire it so much will buy my book, and I will be rich."

So he printed his book.

And all of his friends waited for him to send them autographed copies of his book.

And so his books were sold as junk.

And ever after he didn't have any friends.—Success.

What a Dear Little Wife Did.

The leap-year widow had cornered the wily widower.

"Ah, you should marry again, Mr. Primrose," she whispered in her most persuasive tones. "Widowers are like bachelors—they come home at night and toss their clothes all in a heap. You should have a dear little wife to go through your clothes."

"Thanks," replied the wily widower, tersely, "but my last wife went through them so completely that I didn't have carfare in the morning."

A Teacher's Experience.

"My friends call me 'The Postum Preacher,'" writes a Minn. school teacher, "because I preach the gospel of Postum everywhere I go, and have been the means of liberating many 'coffee-pot slaves.'

"I don't care what they call me so long as I can help others to see what they lose by sticking to coffee, and can show them the way to steady nerves, clear brain and general good health by using Postum.

"While a school girl I drank coffee and had fits of trembling and went through a siege of nervous prostration, which took me three years to rally from.

"Mother coaxed me to use Postum, but I thought coffee would give me strength. So things went, and when I married I found my husband and I were both coffee topers, and I can sympathize with a drunkard who tries to leave off his cups.

"At last in sheer desperation I bought a package of Postum, followed directions about boiling it, served it with good cream, and asked my husband how he liked the coffee.

"We each drank three cups apiece, and what a satisfied feeling it left. Our conversion has lasted several years and will continue as long as we live, for it has made us new—nerves are steady, appetites good, sleep sound and refreshing."

"There's a Reason." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

The Missing Link.

What was said to be the "missing link between man and ape" was found by Dr. Dubois in 1895 on the banks of the Bengawan river, in central Java. These fossil remains consisted of a skull, a thigh bone and two molar teeth, from which the scientists "constructed" an animal, not human, yet nearer to man than the ape. The "link" was named "Pithecanthropus Erectus."—New York American.

HOT ONIONS FOR PNEUMONIA.

Dread Disease Robbed of Its Terrors by Simple Remedy.

Owing to the prevalence of pneumonia and the great mortality which attends its ravages during the winter and spring, several boards of health in northern New Jersey have been taking measures to protect the citizens of their towns from the disease. The health board of Washington, N. J., has published a remedy which is said to be a sure cure for pneumonia, and other health boards are looking into the matter with a view of having the same thing published for the good of the general public. This is the publication as it has appeared in the papers of Washington:

"Take six or ten onions, according to size, and chop fine, put in a large spider over a hot fire, then add the same quantity of rye meal and vinegar enough to form a thick paste. In the meanwhile stir it thoroughly, letting it simmer five or ten minutes. Then put in a cotton bag large enough to cover the lungs and apply to chest as hot as patient can bear. In about ten minutes apply another, and thus continue by reheating the poultices, and in a few hours the patient will be out of danger. This simple remedy has never failed to cure this too-often fatal malady. Usually three or four applications will be sufficient, but continue always until the perspiration starts freely from the chest. This remedy was formulated many years ago by one of the best physicians New England has ever known, who never lost a patient by the disease, and won his renown by simple remedies."

Wrong Selections.

"Why doesn't that man get on in politics? He seems capable and industrious."

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum; "he is all that. But he showed bad judgment in selecting his opinions."

Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith let us dare to do our duty as we understand it.—Lincoln.

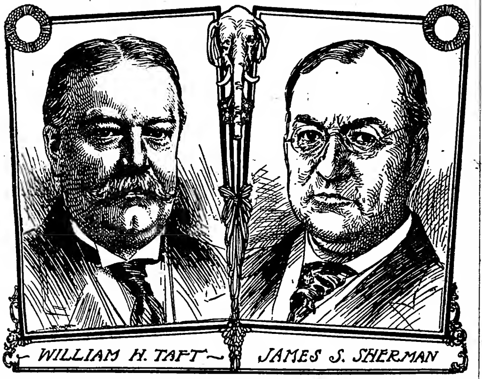
REPUBLICAN NATIONAL TICKET

For President. For Vice-President.



WILLIAM H. TAFT — JAMES S. SHERMAN

TAFT AS PRESIDENT; SHERMAN FOR MATE, IS REPUBLICAN SLATE

Convention at Chicago Selects National Ticket and Adjourns—Wild Enthusiasm on Nomination of Ohioan—Demonstration for Theodore Roosevelt

Chicago. — Taft and Sherman. This is the ticket of the Republican party flung to the breeze Friday as the Republican national convention concluded with the nomination of James S. Sherman of New York for vice president amid a final roar of tumultuous demonstration.

Scene of Wild Enthusiasm.

The picture within the walls of the vast amphitheater as the presidential candidate was named Thursday was one truly gradiose in its magnitude. In front, to the right and left, below and above, the billowing sea of humanity, restless after hours of waiting and stirred from one emotion to another, was in a fever of expectancy for the culminating vote. The favorite sons of other states had been named, save Knox and La Follette, and now on the roll call came Ohio.

As the Buckeye state was reached, the tall, gaunt form of Theodore E. Burton, with student-like face and severe black clerical garb, advanced to the platform to nominate Ohio's candidate. He spoke fervently, with the singing voice of an evangelist, which went ringing through the great building. The close of his speech of nomination was the signal for loosing the long pent-up feeling of the Taft legions. Instantly the Ohio delegates were on their feet, other Taft states following, while the convention hosts, in gallery and on floor, broke into mad demonstration. For 10, 15, 20 minutes, this uproar continued. At last the tired voices died down to a hoarse shout, and subsided.

Seconded by Knight.

This lull now gave the opportunity for the speech seconding Taft's nomination, by George H. Knight of California, his big, round face beaming forth on the sympathetic multitude, and his splendid baritone voice welling forth like the tones of a great church organ. California's tribute to Taft was brief and fervid. Now there was another lull in the Taft movement, while the remaining candidates were placed in nomination.

It was late in the afternoon before the convention, now literally sweltering with the intense heat and weary after nearly seven hours of continuous session, reached the end of the flood of eloquence and the decks were at last cleared for the culminating act.

A hush of expectancy hung over the assembly as the call proceeded. Hasty summaries showed that Taft was far in advance. When New York was reached the Taft column totaled 427. Ohio carried the Taft total to 511, or 20 more than enough to nominate. Still the call went on until the final result was announced by Chairman Lodge:

"For Theodore Roosevelt, 3 votes; for Joseph B. Foraker of Ohio 16 votes; for Charles W. Fairbanks of Indiana, 40 votes; for Joseph Cannon of Illinois, 61 votes; for Robert La Follette of Wisconsin, 25 votes; for Charles E. Hughes of New York, 63 votes; for Philander C. Knox of Pennsylvania, 68 votes, and William H. Taft of Ohio, 702 votes.

A great shout went up as Lodge concluded his announcement, and with one accord the cohorts of Cannon and Knox and Hughes and the other heroes, joined in a common tribute for the candiate of the party.

Sherman for Second Place.

The nomination for the vice-presidency was not made until Friday. When the convention adjourned for the day Thursday the situation regarding second place on the ticket was decidedly unsettled, but before the delegates met Friday an arrangement had been perfected for the Taft delegates to support Representative James S. Sherman of New York as the running mate of the secretary of war.

Three names were placed in nomination when the chairman announced that nominations were in order. Sherman was named as New York's choice by Tim Woodruff, former lieutenant governor of the state; Gov. Curtis Guild of Massachusetts was placed in nomination by Senator Lodge, and Ex-Gov. Franklin Murphy of New Jersey was named by Thomas N. McCarter. Several brief seconding speeches were made for each candidate.

When the roll call was begun it was soon seen that Sherman was the popular choice of the delegates. When enough votes had been cast to insure his nomination Senator Crane of Massachusetts moved that it be made unanimous and it was carried with a shout of approval.

The usual motions of acknowledgment to the officers of the convention and to the city in which it was held were then passed.

Judson W. Lyon of Georgia was recognized to make the motion to adjourn without day. It was put into effect at 11:47 a. m. The band played "The Star-Spangled Banner," the delegates rapidly left the hall and the convention of 1908 had made its way into history.

The second day of the Republican national convention brought the long-expected Roosevelt yell, a whirlwind of enthusiasm which raged within the vast amphitheater of the Coliseum for full 45 minutes Wednesday, and for a time presented to the timid the spectre of a Roosevelt stampede.

This demonstration was decidedly the feature of a day otherwise notable for a stirring speech from the permanent chairman of the convention, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts.

Mr. Lodge early in his address launched his sentence which electrified the assemblage into its first real demonstration of wild enthusiasm.

"The president," exclaimed Mr. Lodge, "is the best abused and most popular man in the United States today."

This was the long awaited signal. Instantly a shout broke from the galleries and was echoed back from the floor, at first only a tempest of detached yells, and cat-calls, and shouts of "Teddy," but gradually gathering force and volume until it swelled to a whirlwind of sound and motion, as delegates and spectators rose en masse, mounting chairs, waving banners, hats, handkerchiefs, flags, newspapers, anything which could be seized upon to add turbulence to the scene.

PLATFORM AT A GLANCE.

Roosevelt—

The abuse of wealth, the tyranny of power, and the evils of privilege and favoritism have been put to scorn by him. We pledge a continuance of the Roosevelt policies.

Anti-Injunction—

The Republican party will uphold the authority of the courts, but believes the rules of procedure in federal courts with respect to injunctions should be more accurately defined by statute, and that no injunction should be issued without notice.

Labor—

The same wise policy will be pursued to lighten the burdens of all who toil.

Tariff—

The Republican party declares for a revision of tariff by a special session of congress. We favor the establishment of maximum and minimum rates.

Money—

An expanding commerce . . . and increasing crop movements disclose the need of a more elastic and adaptable system.

Trusts—

The government should have greater supervision over corporations engaged in interstate commerce.

Inland Waterways—

We call for a large and comprehensive plan to improve the waterways, harbors, and great lakes.

Army and Navy—

While the American people do not desire and will not provoke a war with any other country, we nevertheless declare our devotion to a policy which will keep this republic ready at all times to defend her traditional doctrines.

Good Roads—

We approve the efforts of the agricultural department in good road construction.

Negroes—

We condemn all devices for the disfranchisement of the negro.

Republican Policy—

The difference between Democracy and Republicanism is that one stands for vacillation and timidity in government, the other for strength and purpose. Democracy would have the nation own the people, while Republicanism would have the people own the nation.

MINNESOTA IS STORM SWEPT

TERRIFIC HAIL AND WIND STORM DOES GREAT DAMAGE IN SOUTHERN PART.

City of Austin Alone Has $200,000 Loss. Several Deaths Reported. Brown, Nicollet, Redwood, Blue Earth and Freeborn Counties Hit.

Austin, Minn., June 22.—Hundreds of acres of growing crops have been leveled to the ground and totally ruined, buildings unroofed and damaged, and a great amount of stock has been destroyed as a result of a terrific hail and electric storm which passed through Mower county Saturday afternoon.

It is estimated that the damage in this section as a result of the storm will reach a million dollars, while in Austin alone a loss of $200,000 has been sustained by business houses and residences.

Only one death was reported, Carl Gramenza, a farmer in Burns township, Brown county, having been killed by a stroke of lightning, which set fire to his barn. The barn was burned, together with several head of horses and cattle. The farmer's daughter saved her father's body from being incinerated.

Scores of persons were injured, a majority suffering broken arms and legs.

A passenger train from the West on the Milwaukee road arrived here with every window broken by hail. At Ramsey the wind blew freight cars off the track and obstructed the line.

Between Hayfield and Austin fields were laid bare over a stretch fifteen miles wide.

Buildings were blown down or partly wrecked at Lansing and Waltham.

At Clark's Grove the railway station and other buildings were unroofed and cars were blown from the track.

Mankato was badly rumpled, buildings struck by lightning, trees uprooted and windows blown in.

At Grand Meadow hail stones an inch in diameter shattered exposed glass.

In a near New Richland small grain was beaten down and trees were stripped by hail.

Adrian, Minn., June 22.—On the Sioux Falls line last night a mile of track was washed out. A big wagon road bridge floated several rods.

Crookston, June 22.—Lightning struck in Sampson's addition and severely injured a little girl. A cloudburst is reported at Stephen north of here but no confirmation or particulars have been received.

TAFT RESIGNS

Will Be Succeeded as Secretary of War by Luke E. Wright.

Washington, June 20.—Secretary Taft presented to the president his resignation, to take effect June 30, and it was announced at the White House that Luke E. Wright of Tennessee will be appointed secretary of war to succeed Mr. Taft.

In making this appointment the president was influenced somewhat by the desire to recognize in an emphatic way that there is no longer any dividing line between the North and the South, and that all good Americans are in thought and deed one, and he doubtless was influenced still more by the fact that Gov. Wright's personal attributes and experience pre-eminently fit him for this particular position.

HORSE THIEF IS SHOT

"Rustler" Falls, but Companions Pick Him Up and Carry Him Away.

Fessenden, N. D., June 20.—Last night horse thieves were overtaken in the act in the barn of Alex Maxner, a farmer twelve miles north of here. Mr. Maxner armed himself and, with his two sons, gave the thieves a chase. Shots were exchanged and one of the thieves went down, either dead or wounded, but his two companions seized him, threw him over one of their horses and all made their escape. The sheriff's office was notified and a strong pursuit is being made. The horses were abandoned at Maxbass.

Fatally Burned.

St. Paul, June 20.—Miss Josephine Wagner, a domestic at the home of John McGuire, 272 Fuller street, is dying at the city hospital from burns caused by an explosion of gas at the McGuire home last evening, and Alphonse Bauer, also employed at the McGuire home, was seriously burned in trying to save the girl's life. He is at the city hospital and it is thought that he will recover.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

A Rich Pauper.

Rochester—Peter Johnson, a veteran of the civil war, alone in the world, and a man supposed to be without much worldly goods, living near Preston, was adjudged insane and brought to the state hospital at this place. Upon his arrival here the usual procedure of searching the clothes was inaugurated, and way down in an out-of-the-way place, carefully tucked away, the authorities found on his person the neat sum of $2,726.

His clothes were old and tattered, worn almost threadbare, but the money was found in the corners and in various pockets. There was one certificate of deposit for $900, 76 twenty-dollar bills, a number of tens, and not a few specimens of currency of smaller denominations. Johnson was a well known character in the vicinity of Preston, and for the past few years had been living in a hut on the banks of a river, near that village. He is 63 years of age. His assets have been carefully deposited by the hospital authorities as required by law.

Bad Brandy.

Crookston — Discovery was made here that about $10,000 worth of adulterated and artificial blackberry brandy was loaded on the wholesale trade of the Northwest last fall by a traveling man representing himself to be with a manufacturing concern in Cincinnati. The liquor is declared unsalable because of its impure condition, and the total amount, together with court costs in many impure food convictions thruout this region will be a loss to the wholesalers.

The discovery came about thru the prosecutions made here by Inspector Helberg, of the state pure food department, and prosecutions by the pure food inspectors of North Dakota. Violators of the pure food law were arrested in Crookston, Greenbush, Thief River Falls, Red Lake Falls, Warren, Ada, Fertile, East Grand Forks and other places, for selling impure blackberry brandy in violation of the state law. The merchants handling the questionable merchandise were fined all the way from $5 to $50 and costs.

Knocks Bridge Out Again.

Duluth—The steamer Wilpen, of the Shenango Steamship company, hit the crib work supporting the north end of the draw of the interstate bridge and moved the span three-eighths of an inch. Had she moved the span one and one-half inches it would have gone into the channel again. This span was knocked into the channel by the steamer Troy two years ago, and the bridge has been out of commission ever since, but was approaching completion again when the accident occurred. The accident will delay the opening of the bridge to traffic for thirty days. The span will be jacked back to position. The interstate bridge is owned by the Great Northern road.

Dog Catches Thief.

Minneapolis — "Colonel," a dog, caught Peter Johnson, an alleged thief, and held him until officers placed the fellow under arrest. The man is accused of having stolen a gold watch of Charles E. Leeman in the depot. He was detected by Clarence Wood, of Casselton, N. D., who attempted a capture. Johnson saw there was something wrong and started to run. It was then that "Colonel" got busy. He darted after the fleeing fugitive and caught his foot so securely that the man stumbled and fell, and fearing a renewed attack from the dog if he attempted to resist, lay still on the sidewalk until a policeman took him in tow. The dog is owned by George Weeden, a cabman.

Is Best Drainage Year.

Crookston—Capt. James A. Beard, in charge of the immense state project on the lower Roseau, and who arrived in this city on business, stated that since the opening of the season the machines have been working on the Roseau project, steadily excavating almost continuously 100 yards an hour. The big machine used on this project is the largest northwest of the Illinois drainage canal, and its dipper has a loaded capacity of two and a half yards. The dredge is at present located seven miles down the lower Roseau from Duxby and six miles out in one of the largest muskegs of the north country.

NEWS NOTES.

New Ulm—New Ulm people gave Gov. Johnson and staff a warm welcome to that city.

St. Paul—Supreme court holds that place which simply offers lodging accommodations to public is hotel or inn.

Winona—Frank Gutzer's absentmindedness, which resulted in his being hit by a street car, proved fatal, the victim having died at the La Crosse hospital without regaining consciousness.

YOU'RE TOO THIN.

Even Slight Catarrhal Derangements of the Stomach Produce Acid Fermentation of the Food.

It's Stomach Catarrh

Some people are thin and always remain thin, from temperamental reasons. Probably in such cases nothing can be done to change this personal peculiarity.

But there are a large number of people who get thin, or remain thin, who naturally would be plump and fleshy but for some digestive derangement.

Thin people lack in adipose tissue.

Adipose tissue is chiefly composed of fat.

Fat is derived from the oily constituents of food.

The fat-making foods are called by the physiologist, hydrocarbons. This class of foods are not digested in the stomach at all. They are digested in the duodenum, the division of the alimentary canal just below the stomach.

The digestion of fat is mainly, if not wholly, the work of the pancreatic juice. This juice is of alkaline reaction, and is rendered inert by the addition of acid. A hyperacidity of the digestive fluids of the stomach passing down into the duodenum, destroys the pancreatic fluid for digestive purposes. Therefore, the fats are not digested or emulsified, and the system is deprived of its due proportion of oily constituents. Hence, the patient grows thin.

The beginning of the trouble is a catarrhal condition of the stomach which causes hyperacidity of the gastric juices. This hyperacidity is caused by fermentation of food in the stomach. When the food is taken into the stomach, if the process of digestion does not begin immediately, acid fermentation will take place. This creates a hyperacidity of the stomach juices which in their turn prevent the pancreatic digestion of the oils, and the emaciation results.

A dose of Peruna before each meal hastens the stomach digestion. By hurrying digestion, Peruna prevents fermentation of the contents of the stomach, and the pancreatic juice is thus preserved in its normal state. It then only remains for the patient to eat a sufficient amount of fat-forming foods, and the thinness disappears and plumpness takes its place.

TOO GOOD FOR THIS EARTH.

Type of Office Boy a Creature of Funny Man's Brain.

"So you have come in answer to my advertisement for office boy?" said the old broker briskly. "Do you smoke cigarettes?"

"No, sir," replied the saintly youngster in the doorway.

"Chew gum or read novels?"

"Never, sir."

"Play juggler with the paper weights or talk nonsense through the telephone when your employer is absent?"

"No, sir."

"Ever go to the circus?"

"Never saw a circus in my life, sir."

"How about baseball? Do you take two or three afternoons a week to see the game?"

"Don't like baseball, sir."

The old broker bit the end off his cigar.

"My boy," he said, quietly, "this is the twenty-ninth story, isn't it?"

"I think so, sir."

"Well, it is not high enough for you."

"Not high enough for me, sir?"

"No, you belong up in paradise."—Chicago News.

PLEASANT FOR PAPA.

The Minister—You kept beautifully still while I was preaching, Willie. Did you like the sermon?

Kid—No, sir; but papa said he'd spank me good and plenty if I woke him up.

Obeying Mother

A man had just arrived at a Massachusetts summer resort. In the afternoon he was sitting on the veranda when a handsome young woman and her six-year-old son came out. The little fellow at once made friends with the latest arrival.

"What is your name?" he asked. Then, when this information had been given, he added: "Are you married?"

"I am not married," responded the man, with a smile.

At this the child paused a moment, and, turning to his mother, said:

"What else was it, mamma, you wanted me to ask him?"—Harper's.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30, 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

Now that the county conventions are over we may expect to see the candidates for county office begin to bob up.

We would advise It not to appoint nit as his boodle agent up this way as the "suckers" might be affraid of an other Clearwater bridge deal, and not bite.

For President Wm. H. Taft, of Ohio. So say the republican party, and they are going to win this year, as the great masses of the American people are not looking for an opprotunity to turn the country upside down.

The socialist party have nominated Alfred Hammersteen, of Highlanding for County Commissioner of his district, and if his neighbors had votes enough to elect him he would win out, regardless of party, as he would make a good man for the position.

The general land office at Washington, has substancialy recognized long and faithful service in the U.S. Land office at Crookston, of Frank Montagne and P J. Fearon After July 1st, Mr. Montague will receive $1320 per year and Mr. Fearon $1140. The raise comes as a result of the excellence of their work, the Crookston land office being one of the best conducted government land offices in the United States.

Cutting Big Diamonds.

Big diamonds lose a great deal in the cutting. The Kohinoor was reduced by an unskillful stonecutter from 793⅝ carats to 280 carats, a second cutting brought it down to 186 1-16 carats and a third to 106 1-16 carats, or less than a seventh of its original size. The original weight of the Pitt or Regent diamond was 410 carats, but in the hands of the cutter two-thirds disappeared, while the Star of the South, which was picked up in a river by a negress, lost a little over half its weight by cutting.

German Sportsmen.

Half a million sportsmen in Germany kill annually 40,000 head of red and fallow deer, 200,000 roebuck, 4,000,000 hares, 4,000,000 partridges and 400,000 wild duck, in all some 25,000,000 kilograms of wild game of a value of 25,000,000 marks, or $5,000,000, forming nearly 1 per cent of the total meat supply of Germany.—C. G. Schillings' "In Darkest Africa."

Asserting Himself.

He—Will you be my wife? She—The idea! Don't be ridiculous. He—Yes, I know it sounds ridiculous; but, then, I'm not so particular as some men are.—Boston Transcript.

Nothing is impossible to the man who can and will.—Mirabeau.

Breaking Her In.

A Word For Nero.

"Nero fiddled while Rome burned!" exclaimed the student.

"Well," replied Mr. Growcher, "that's better than the custom many violinists have of practicing at a time when everything is nice and quiet otherwise."—Washington Star.

The Compromise.

All's Fair In War.

"A tenderfoot once visited Tin Can," said a westerner, "and watched with interest the poker play. From saloon to saloon he passed. Everything was wide open and very gay and lively.

"But as he looked on at a poker game that had no limit the tenderfoot suddenly frowned. He had seen the dealer slip himself four aces from the bottom of the pack.

"Gracious powers," whispered the tenderfoot, excitedly clutching the sleeve of the man next him, "did you notice that?"

"Notice what?" said the other.

"Why, that scoundrel in the red shirt just dealt himself four aces."

"The other looked at the tenderfoot calmly.

"'Well, wasn't it his deal?' he said."—Washington Star.

The Sundowner.

A "swagman" or "swaggie"—so called from the "swag" or personal luggage wrapped up in a blanket strapped to his back—is a genuine Australian traveler in search of work, but a "sundowner" is the antipodean professional tramp. The sundowner strolls from one squatter's station to another, always taking care to arrive at sunset, for it is the traditional practice of Australian squatters to give food and shelter to all comers for the night.—Kansas City Independent.

Respecting Her Oath.

"Judge, will you do me a great favor?" asked the lady who was about to be put upon the stand as a witness.

"Certainly, miss. What is it?"

"Will you please ask me my age before I take the oath?"—Yonkers Statesman.

Yes, money talks; but its favorite remark is goodby.—Indianapolis Star.

In a Nitroglycerin "Hill."

In the "danger area" the severest discipline is maintained. All entrances are carefully guarded by searchers, who rigorously examine every individual that desires to enter, relieving him of any metallic objects that may be carried upon his person, together with matches and other suspicious objects which upon coming into contact with the dangerous chemicals used in this zone might provoke serious trouble. No matter how often an employee engaged within the hill may pass in and out, every time he enters he must submit to this preliminary and essential operation. There are also some 500 girls employed, and these are under the charge of matrons. Hairpins, ordinary pins, shoe buttons, metal pegs within the soles of the shoes, knitting and other needles are all religiously barred. Their hair is tied with braid or ribbon, and, as with the male employees, every time they enter the "danger area" they are similarly searched by the matrons.—Scientific American.

Euphemisms For "Mad."

In order to avoid the blunt word "mad" many euphemisms are resorted to in the English language. While "lunacy" refers to the supposed influence of the moon, "insane" simply means unhealthy; "imbecile" signifies only weak, and "crazy," meaning decrepit, almost corresponds to the slang "cracked." "A tile off," "not all there," "a bee in his bonnet," are only a few of the efforts slang has made to carry off the sad fact with an uneasy joke. "Lunatic asylum," for the old "madhouse," represents not only a great improvement in the institution, but also in the term used to designate it.

A Tiny Well Digger.

The mole is one of the thirstiest of animals. It never burrows at any great distance from water, and at times of drought when the supply of the needful element is diminished or cut off the "little gentleman in the velvet coat" counteracts the scarcity by digging wells until it comes to a depth at which water may be obtained.

Reassured.

"Say, pa, won't you buy me a drum?"

"No! I'm afraid you'd disturb me with the noise."

"No, I won't, pa. I'll only drum when you're asleep."—Life.

The Retort Courteous.

I met a goat and said to him,
"The question, pray, excuse—
Why do you always wag your chin?"
Quoth he, "Because I chews!"
—New York Life.

Wouldn't Miss It.

Howell—What a brogue that man has!

Powell—Yes; it is so heavy that if he should leave it off he would take cold.—New York Press.

It's Results That Count

In cooking it's the results that count. So when a housewife starts to make Bread or Rools or Pies, naturally she wants her cooking to have that rich crisp, pleasing odor. But it must also have that whiteness, lightness and wholesomeness which is so essential to good cooking.

Much of this depends upon the flour—and thousands depend upon,

E. M. Stanton, of Thief River Falls will deliver the oration, at Highlanding on July 4th. Mr. Stanton is considered one of the best 4th of July orators in Northern Minnesota, and if you like to hear of the struggle for liberty, of the country in which you live come hear him

At the republican caucus held at Highlanding last Saturday evening, Andrew Ellingson and W. G. Hunt were unamiously elected to represent the town of Highlanding, as delegates to the county convention held at Red Lake Falls yesterday.—Later. Andrew Ellingson voted for Dr. Watson, of Red Lake Falls for chairman of the convetion, W.G. Hunt voted for D. P. ONeal, of Thief River Falls. Onell won out, of course, but which one of the delegates represented Highlanding? We do not make it a rule to jump on a man who is down and out, but we protest against him raising the antie ten per cent on Judas Ariscot. We have known Mr. O'Neal for a good many years, and always respected him as a MAN, but we do protest against placeing his value above that of Jesus Christ, by our delegate from Highlanding, Andrew Ellingson.

Men, Women and Adjectives.

Certain adjectives are reserved for men and others for women. A man is never called "beautiful." Along with "pretty" and "lovely" that adjective has become the property of women and children alone. "Handsome" and the weak "good looking" are the only two adjectives of the kind common to either sex. Even "belle" has no real masculine correlative in English, since "beau" came to signify something other than personal looks. It is singular that "handsome" should have become the word for a strikingly good looking person, since its literal meaning is handy, dexterous. But "pretty" likewise comes from the Anglo-Saxon word [illegible]

Hot Air.

The latest hireling for sheriff Nelson, from Kratka, of the firm of Skinner bros. Sokum & co. gets off the following in the last weeks Thief River News.

"It is amusing to note how easy the "wind jammer" fells felows, because Sheriff Nelson takes to much pride in himself to recognise such a "hot air editor." Nr. Nelson is wise and well enough assured that he well supported by people who have some pull and does not bother himself with any such cheap "it and nit editor"."

Since when has Mr. Nelson be came to nice to recognize "the hot air editor?" It must have been since his visit to our office, in the last campaign, when he was in company with county auditor O'Brien, when he was "turned down cold" and got told to keep his money in his pocket. We was not in that campaign agains Mr. Nelson, as he was a stranger to us, but we did support Mr. Linnihan. For doing this we aroused the ire of the "beer soak" to such an extent that he dranke a couple of extra kegs, at the Thief River Falls fair and made a personal attact on us, because we had refused to accept his "boodle" and give him our support, which has caused us to look up his record, made as sheriff, and we shall publish enough of it to convince any honerable man that he is not entitled to reelection to the responsible position of sheriff of Red Lake County.

The Solemn Back Bay Butler.

Some Boston editor intimated that Back Bay butlers made love to the housemaids. One of them has replied in defense of his class, and incidentally he shows how far culture has got down the back stairs of Boston society. He writes:

"I do not flirt with any of the female members of the household, and it is no exaggeration to say that I am not better than the average butler of the Back Bay, so far as morals are concerned. I have educated my boy in France and England and am now giving him a postgraduate course at an American college. Our feelings have been hurt by the article to which I refer, and we have undergone a great deal of mental suffering from the annoyance unwittingly caused us."

LEADER OF DETROIT TIGERS

Manager Hugh Jennings of the Detroit American League team is an old-time player and knows every angle of the national game.

MORDECAI BROWN WANTS BALL PLAYERS NUMBERED

Star Chicago Pitcher Favors Plan to Have Figures Designate Professionals.

"It will not be long, probably next year, when all ball players will wear numbers just like athletes in a track meet or jockeys on a racetrack," said Mordecai Brown, looked upon as the world's greatest pitcher.

The three-fingered one was asked what he thought of such a scheme and said he had always encouraged it and would like to see a rule passed by the national commission making it compulsory for every player to wear his number on his back, so that every man and woman in the grandstand could readily identify the player at bat or in the field or wherever he might be.

"I know it must be troublesome for the people in the grand stand to follow the players, especially visiting teams," continued Brown. "It would be so easy for a player to have his number made right in his suit and the program would carry the key. For instance, the program could print the list of players on the team. Beginning with Chance, No. 1; Kling, No. 2; Overall, No. 3, and so on down the list of names until every players had been numbered. When he came to bat his number on his back would furnish the key to the identification.

"What a swell mix-up there would be at a track meet if the competitors were not numbered. How many persons in a grand stand would know the winner of a horse race if they were not guided by numbers? Then why should it not be just as important for baseball players to be identified? An umpire gets up before a large crowd and says: 'Ladies and gentlemen, the batteries for to-day are Humpty Doodlebump and Bowwowmen for Boston and Humty Doodlehump and Bing for Chicago.' How many persons in the grand stand are able to catch the name? They tell me 'Silk' just spits out the name of the visiting battery without giving the crowd any warning and not one in a thousand catches the names. By the time he announces the battery for the home team the crowd is quiet and there is a chance to catch the names, but most of the people know the home players, but cannot find out who the visiting battery is.

"We players on the bench are continually answering calls from the grand stand by some of our friends as to who is pitching and who is playing center and such like, when, if the players carried their numbers everybody would know the man in uniforms, and besides the club would sell more programs. If one club ever starts the idea all other teams will follow."

Minors Plan Invasion.

It is rumored that the American association magnates are at present perfecting plans for the invasion of Chicago, St. Louis, Pittsburg and Cincinnati.

The plan most favored, it is said, is to put the St. Paul franchise in Chicago, that of Minneapolis in Pittsburg, and Kansas City at Cincinnati. It is probable that Milwaukee will be placed in St. Louis.

The proposition seems to be up to three eastern magnates of the A. A., although the threat has been made that if they see fit to balk on the invasion the others will go it alone.

The invasion into Chicago is practically assured, as Hanover of Milwaukee has that matter in hand and is in the Windy City once or twice a week working out the details. It is understood that if the blow should come there would be no tampering of players nor any attempt to meet the majors on an equal footing.

Pirates Get Roy Thomas.

Roy Thomas, the fast outfielder, for years with the Quakers, has been signed by Pittsburg. It is understood that Manager Murray and Thomas had a serious falling out over Thomas doing work outside of baseball.

DOVEY HAS SCHEME TO ABOLISH FARMING EVIL

President of Boston National League Club Would Make Clearing House of National Commission.

President George B. Dovey of the Boston National League club has a plan to abolish the so-called farming evil and to lessen the labors of the national commission in ascertaining the status of ball players with reference to ownership. He would have the national commission act as a clearing house for the major league clubs and have all players bought and sold by that body for the various owners.

He says he has already suggested the plan to President Herrmann of the commission and believes that it would be a boon to club owners and players alike and would also relieve the supreme court of many of the annoying details with which it is struggling daily. As an illustration of the working of his idea, Dovey would notify the commission that he wanted to look up a certain player who had been recommended to him. Then it would be the duty of the commission to assign some man, a scout in whom the club owners would have confidence, to obtain the information desired about the player.

The scout would see the player at work and report to the commission, which would then make known to Dovey the result of their investigations. Should Dovey desire to purchase the player on the strength of the commission's findings he would deal directly with that body in obtaining the player. He would be willing to pay a liberal commission. With other club owners doing this same thing the national commission would have enough and to spare to pay the salaries of as many scouts as would be needed.

The Boston magnate says that he for one would be willing to permit the clubs finishing at the bottom of the two leagues to take first pick of the available material for the following season. He says this would tend to equalize the strength of the clubs, which would make the pennant race closer and always more interesting.

President Dovey is not one who is dissatisfied with existing conditions, but he is progressive, and believes that any step to minimize the possibility of squabbling over players should be adopted. He thinks his scheme would work out satisfactorily, and is eager to see it tried out.

GOSSIP OF THE DIAMOND

President Ebbetts of the Brooklyn team has offered Bill Murray of the Phillies $12,000 for Outfielder Magee. And Murray said: "Tut, tut."

Ganzel certainly has that Cincinnati bunch going at a lively clip, and if the same pace is continued the Reds are going to be in at the finish.

Morgan Murphy, the once famous major league catcher, is now in the real estate business in East Providence, and is said to be well fixed.

Detroit is well equipped with outfielders. Few teams have a quartette as formidable as McIntyre, Crawford, Cobb and Jones.

Since Charley Dooin affects a Ty Cobb batting average, the auburn-tipped catcher has become an extra attraction card on the National league circuit.

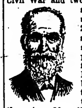
Cleveland has a new catcher in Thomas Doran, who was with the Rochester club of the Eastern league last year. He will get a chance when Clarke and Bemis want a rest.

Cravath, who might have decorated the Boston bench all season but for the injury to Thoney, has been repaying Jim McGuire's faith, by hitting a .300 clip since he became a regular.

"The knuckle ball will ultimately replace the spit ball, and be even more effective than that famous twist, which has made some pitchers the terror of the batsmen. It will do more to destroy big batting averages than anything else." Such is the statement made by Manager Clarke.

VETERAN OF THREE WARS.

A Pioneer of Colorado and Nebraska.



Matthias Campbell, veteran of the Civil War and two Indian wars, and a pioneer of Colorado, now living at 218 East Nebraska street, Blair, Neb., says: "I had such pains in my back for a long time that I could not turn in bed, and at times there was an almost total stoppage of the urine. My wife and I have both used Doan's Kidney Pills for what doctors diagnosed as advanced kidney troubles, and both of us have been completely cured."

Days of Bohemia Ended.

Bohemia has ceased to exist in the Paris Latin quarter, according to Alfred Capus, the playwright, who may be regarded as an authority on the point. In a lecture delivered on behalf of the "Maison d'Etudiants," which is to be the headquarters of the General Association of Paris Students, he remarked: "We must not be afraid to acknowledge that our students are no longer Bohemiens."

Canada's Extensive Fisheries.

The fisheries of Canada are the most extensive of the world. The eastern sea coast of the maritime provinces from the Bay of Fundy to the Straits of Belle Isle covers a distance of 5,600 miles, more than double that of Great Britain and Ireland, and the salt water inshore area, not considering minor indentations nor the great lakes of the west, covers more than 1,500 square miles.

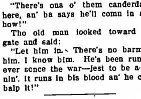
Innovation in Politics.

The recent municipal elections in Paris were remarkable not only for the candidature of M. Laloe, who was soundly beaten, but for the first recorded candidature of a domestic servant. The liveried class is supposed to take on the political color of its surroundings and to be ultra-conservative as a rule, but this candidate stood as a republican socialist, and he is said to have been strongly supported by his kind.

Women and the Suffrage.

The severest criticism of the stupidity and inefficiency of the parliaments of the world is, in M. Marcel Prevost's opinion, the most universal indifference of women on the subject of voting. "Neither the representative nor the voter," says this expert in feminine psychology, "excites their envy. They do not even think about the vote, and if men offer it as a gift they pay no attention, burst out laughing or refuse point blank."

REAL HARD LUCK.



He—Then I am to understand that you absolutely reject my offer?

She—There is really nothing else for it.

He—Well, I think it very selfish of you. Here, I've actually gone and purchased a guide for our honeymoon.

The Perennial.

According to the Atlanta Constitution, a Georgia farmer posted this sign on his front gate:

"Candidates will pass on. No time to talk to 'em."

One morning his little boy shouted from the garden walk:

"There's one o' them canderdates here, an' he says he'll come in anyhow!"

The old man looked toward the gate and said:

"Let him in. There's no harm in him. I know him. He's been runnin' ever sence the war—jest to be a-runnin'. It runs in his blood an' he can't help it!"

Grape-Nuts a Perfectly Balanced Food.

No chemist's analysis of Grape-Nuts can begin to show the real value of the food—the practical value as shown by personal experience.

It is a food that is perfectly balanced, supplies the needed elements of brain and nerves in all stages of life from the infant, through the strenuous times of active middle life, and is a comfort and support in old age.

"For two years I have used Grape-Nuts with milk and a little cream, for breakfast. I am comfortably hungry for my dinner at noon.

"I use little meat, plenty of vegetables and fruit in season, for the noon meal, and if tired at tea time, take Grape-Nuts alone and feel perfectly nourished.

"Nerve and brain power, and memory are much improved since using Grape-Nuts. I am over sixty and weigh 155 lbs. My son and husband seeing how I have improved, are now using Grape-Nuts.

"My son, who is a traveling man, eats nothing for breakfast but Grape-Nuts and a glass of milk. An aunt, over 70, seems fully nourished on Grape-Nuts and cream." "There's a Reason."

IMPRESSED THE LITTLE ONE.

Department of Colored Gentleman a Matter of Admiration.

Little Elsie, who had recently returned from a visit to Washington, was describing to her companion some of the wonderful things she had observed in the Capitol City.

"One evening," said she, breathlessly, "papa took me to have supper at a grand hotel where the dining room was awfully big, and at the tables around us sat great senators and representatives with their wives, all drinking champagne!"

"I suppose the manners of these great persons were perfect?" ventured her companion, with widened eyes.

"Yes," returned Elsie. "But," she added, with a sudden burst of enthusiasm, "the deportment of the colored gentlemen who served the wine was perfectly beautiful!"

ECZEMA ALL OVER HIM.

No Night's Rest for a Year and Limit of His Endurance Seemed Near —Owes Recovery to Cuticura.

"My son Clyde was almost completely covered with eczema. Physicians treated him for nearly a year without helping him any. His head, face, and neck were covered with large scabs which he would rub until they fell off. Then blood and matter would run out and that would be worse. Friends coming to see him said that if he got well he would be disfigured for life. When it seemed as if he could possibly stand it no longer, I used some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent. That was the first night for nearly a year that he slept. In the morning there was a great change for the better. In about six weeks he was perfectly well. Our leading physician recommends Cuticura for eczema. Mrs. Algy Cockburn, Shiloh, O., June 11, 1907."

Some Men's Luck.

His Wife—This afternoon I called on the family who recently moved into the flat across the hall."

Her Husband—Well?

His Wife—The man is so deaf he can hardly hear a word his wife says.

Her Husband—It does seem as though some men have more luck than sense.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Business Amounts to Something.

Last year Brazil needed over 80,000,000 jute bags to hold the year's coffee production. Each bag costs the shippers a trifle over 18 cents. The business of making coffee bags thus amounted last year to nearly $4,000,000.

"Seemed to irritate him as much as mosquito bills," admitted the disgruntled colleague.

GROVER CLEVELAND IS DEAD

Ex-President Passes Away at His Princeton Home.

Rose Rapidly from Time of His Election as Mayor of Buffalo in 1881, Governor of New York in 1882, and Elected to Presidency in 1884—The Last of the Ex-Presidents.

Princeton, N. J.—Grover Cleveland died suddenly Wednesday at his home here.

While it was known that Mr. Cleveland had for the past three months been suffering from a severe attack of rheumatic gout and acute indigestion, his death came as a complete surprise.

He had been a sufferer from gout and diabetes for more than two years. Early in 1906 he was stricken with an attack of indigestion, the result of diabetes, and for weeks was unable to partake of any except liquid nourishment.

A sojourn in the south improved his health considerably.

Suffers Second Attack.

Mr. Cleveland returned to Princeton and resumed his duties as trustee of the Equitable Life Company.

Early last year he had a repetition of the attack of indigestion and for some weeks his condition was such that his life was despaired of.

Mr. Cleveland made a splendid fight for life and won. In February last diabetes began to make itself felt again, and Mr. Cleveland became subject to spells of unconsciousness, coupled again with inability to assimilate food. Death finally came at 8:40 a. m. Wednesday.

Causes of His Death.

The following statement, signed by Dr. Joseph B. Bryant, Dr. George R. Lockwood and Dr. J. M. Camochan, was given out:

"Mr. Cleveland for many years has suffered from repeated attacks of gastral intestinal origin. Also he had a long-standing organic disease of the heart and kidneys and heart failure complicated with pulmonary thrombosis and oedema were the immediate causes of his death."

EX-PRESIDENT GROVER CLEVELAND

LIFE OF CLEVELAND A BUSY ONE.

Born in Caldwell, N. J., and a Descendant of English Stock.

Grover Cleveland, the twenty-second and twenty-fourth president of the United States, was born March 18, 1837, in Caldwell, N. J. His family came from England and settled in Massachusetts in the early part of the seventeenth century. His father was a physician and had been ordained as a minister and married the daughter of a Baltimore merchant, who had come from Ireland. In 1841 the Cleveland family removed to Fayetteville, N. Y., where young Grover received his first schooling, and where later at an early age he served as a clerk in a small country store. Still later, when his parents settled in Clinton, N. Y., he pursued his studies further, and when only 17 he was appointed assistant teacher in the New York Institution for the blind. In 1855 Cleveland assisted his uncle, Lewis F. Allen, in the compilation of the "American Herd Book," and during the same period he served a clerkship with the law firm of Rogers, Bowen & Rogers, at Buffalo.

Mr. Cleveland received his first public office when appointed assistant district attorney of Erie county. At that time he was supporting his mother and sister and when he was drafted to serve in the army he was forced to borrow sufficient funds to send a substitute. In 1865 he was defeated for the position of district attorney of his county and entered into partnership with Isaac V. Vanderpool. In 1869 he joined the firm of Lenning, Cleveland & Folsom.

Nominated for Mayor of Buffalo.

In 1881 he was nominated as the Democratic candidate for mayor of Buffalo and was elected by the largest majority ever given in that city, although the Republican state ticket was carried. While serving as mayor of Buffalo he became known as the "veto mayor," for his fearless exercise of that right in checking the extravagance and the illegal expenditure of public moneys. In 1882 Mr. Cleveland ran for governor of New York against Charles J. Folger, then United States secretary of the treasury, and won by a plurality of nearly 200,000.

At the Democratic national convention held in Chicago in July, 1884, Cleveland was nominated by his party as its candidate for the presidency of the United States and at the election in the following November was chosen to that office. In the electoral college his plurality over his opponent, Mr. Blaine, was 37 votes. Mr. Cleveland was inaugurated March 4, 1885, and the oath of office was administered to him by Chief Justice Waite. While president he exercised the veto power beyond all precedent and out of 987 bills he refused to affix his signature to 115.

Beaten in Second Effort.

In 1888 he was a candidate for a second term, but was defeated in the election of that year by Benjamin Harrison. After his retirement from public life he settled in New York city, where he opened a law office. He had a large practice and was frequently in Washington arguing important cases before the United States supreme court.

At the national Democratic convention held in Chicago in June, 1892, he was for the third time named as his party's candidate for the presidency and in the following November was elected.

ABSENCE OF POMP MARKS FUNERAL

In Accordance with the Wishes of the Widow, Final Ceremonies for Ex-President Cleveland Are of the Most Simple Description—Prominent Men Present.

Among notable utterances of the late ex-President Cleveland the following will be longest remembered:

> Public office is a public trust.
>
> After an existence of nearly 20 years of almost innocuous desuetude these laws are brought forth.
>
> It is a condition which confronts us—not a theory.
>
> Party honesty is party expediency.
>
> If the wind is in the south or west so much the better, but let's go fishing, wherever the wind may be.
>
> Don't give your friend wild duck uncooked unless his wife knows how to cook it; the gift will be discredited in the eating.
>
> The duck-hunter is born, not made.
>
> I would not have our people sober; but I would have them thoughtful and patriotic.
>
> I do not believe that nations any more than individuals can violate the rules of honesty and fair-dealing.
>
> Tread lightly, gentlemen, for you have to do with temples of the Holy Ghost. (This to assembled physicians.)

Princeton.—The funeral of Grover Cleveland was marked by extreme simplicity. No pomp nor splendor had place in the ceremonies. There were no bands to play dirges on the way to the old Princeton cemetery, no military escort, no eulogy by the officiating clergymen.

The half mile of thoroughfare through which the cortege passed from Westland, the Cleveland home on Bayard lane, to the cemetery was policed by mounted troops, but they were there for police duty and as a measure of precaution in protecting the living president rather than for display in paying tribute to a departed chief executive.

Four clergymen officiated at the house and at the grave. They read the burial service from the Presbyterian Book of Common Worship, but offered no eulogy. This simple but impressive service was conducted by Dr. Henry Van Dyke of Princeton, Rev. Dr. Williams R. Richards, pastor of the Brick Presbyterian church of New York; Rev. Sylvester W. Beach, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Princeton, where the Cleveland family attended, and Rev. Maitland V. Bartlett, former pastor of the same church.

There were no honorary pallbearers. Those who bore Mr. Cleveland's body to its final resting place in the Cleveland plot were Mayor George B. McClellan, Paul Morton, Commodore E. C. Benedict, Richard Watson Gilder of New York; Prof. Paul Van Dyke, Dean Andrew F. West, Prof. John G. Hibben, Junius S. Morgan, a nephew of J. Pierpont Morgan; A. D. Russell, Prof. Howard McLenahan, and Bayard Stockton of Princeton. The simple Presbyterian service was said at the grave, the casket lowered into the ground, and one of the country's most distinguished citizens had become but a memory. A silver plate on the casket bore the inscription: "Grover Cleveland, March 18, 1837-June 24, 1908."

TRIBUTE TO GREAT MAN.

President Roosevelt's Proclamation Eulogizing Dead Statesman.

Oyster Bay, N. Y.—News of the death of ex-President Grover Cleveland was communicated to President Roosevelt at his summer home here and caused radical changes in the president's plans for the immediate future.

Mr. Roosevelt was shocked at the tidings, and telegraphed to Mrs. Cleveland at Princeton, N. J., tendering his sympathy and that of Mrs. Roosevelt. Afterward announcement was made that President and Mrs. Roosevelt would attend the funeral services at Princeton.

Mr. Roosevelt immediately announced that he would abandon his proposed trip to New London, Conn., to witness the Harvard-Yale boat races. He also issued a proclamation to the country, eulogizing the dead statesman, ordering all government flags half-masted for 30 days, and directing that military and naval honors be accorded the late president on the day of the funeral.

A beautiful floral wreath was ordered by the president to be sent in his name and that of Mrs. Roosevelt to Princeton, to be placed by the bier.

In accordance with custom, President Roosevelt issued a special proclamation when advised of the death of the ex-president. The proclamation follows:

By the President of the United States.
A Proclamation.
The White House, June 24, 1908.
To the People of the United States:

Grover Cleveland, president of the United States from 1885 to 1889 and again from 1893 to 1897, died at 8:40 o'clock this morning at his home in Princeton, N. J. In his death the nation has been deprived of one of its greatest citizens. By profession a lawyer, his chief services to his country were rendered during a long, varied and honorable career in public life.

As mayor of his city, as governor of his state, and twice as president, he showed signal power as an administrator, coupled with entire devotion to the country's good and a courage that quailed before no hostility when once he was convinced where his duty lay. Since his retirement from the presidency he has continued well and faithfully to serve his countrymen by the simplicity, dignity, and uprightness of his private life.

In testimony of the respect in which his memory is held by the government and people of the United States, I do hereby direct that the flags on the White House and the several departmental buildings be displayed at half-staff for a period of 30 days, and that suitable military and naval honors, under the orders of the secretaries of war and of the navy be rendered on the day of the funeral.

Done this twenty-fourth day of June in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eight and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirty-second.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.
By the president,
ALVEY A. ADEE,
Acting Secretary of State.

ALL JOIN IN TRIBUTE.

Testimony to the Character and Ability of Grover Cleveland.

Prominent men of all party affiliations and leaders in their respective walks in life joined in tributes to the worth of Grover Cleveland. Among them were the following:

> "He was one of the really great men of the country."—W. H. Taft.
>
> "He was the best type of public servant and private citizen."—Vice-President Fairbanks.
>
> "No man realized more fully the ideal of an incorruptible public servant."—George B. Cortelyou.
>
> "The country has lost a citizen whose wisdom, courage, and patriotism were of the highest order."—Admiral Dewey.
>
> "His place in history is sure. Nothing that can be written or withheld can add to or detract from his imperishable fame."—Adlai E. Stevenson.
>
> "Grover Cleveland was a typical product of American life, blood, and training."—Judson Harmon.
>
> "Grover Cleveland was too great a man to dismiss with a few words."—John G. Carlisle.
>
> "One of the greatest presidents the United States has ever had."—Harry Pratt Judson, president of the University of Chicago.
>
> "He was all that any one could be."—Lambert Tree.
>
> "He had a way of gaining the respect even of his enemies."—Judge Kenesaw M. Landis.
>
> "He was ever impelled by a conviction of what was right, and having formed that conviction he was a rock."—Judge Peter S. Grosscup.
>
> "When his history is properly written he will be rated as one of the half dozen greatest presidents."—Gov. Johnson of Minnesota.
>
> "Mr. Cleveland's death ends the phenomenal career of one of the strongest characters in the political world of the present generation."—William J. Bryan.

TORNADO STRIKES CLINTON, MINN.

THE RESIDENCE PORTION OF THE VILLAGE COMPLETELY WIPED OUT.

Without Warning Seven Persons Are Instantly Killed and More Than a Score Injured. Tornado Came From Northwest.

Clinton, Minn., June 29.—Seven dead, twenty-five injured, thirty houses and buildings destroyed with crops and live stock damage is the toll levied on this little town in the heart of Big Stone county, by a devastating tornado which passed through this region shortly before six o'clock Saturday night.

The dead are:
Rebecca Vandermark.
Mrs. Olaf Nicolson and baby daughter.
Mr. Stuckberry.
Miss Kate Mills.
Thomas Rothwell.
Missing:
Mrs. J. O. Johnson.
Among the injured:
Frank Higgins.
Rachel Higgins.
James Morrow.
Mattie Rothwell.
Bert Rothwell.
C. G. Johnson.
Mrs. F. W. Watkins and baby.
Mrs. John Hegaman.
Mrs. Theodore Condit.
Mrs. C. Anderson.
Frank Oestrich.
Mrs. Swanson.
Mrs. George Phelan, and little baby, seriously.
F. D. Cowles of Minneapolis.

Twenty homes in the residence district are in ruins.

Methodist Episcopal church destroyed.

The Norwegian Lutheran church wrecked.

Total damage will reach $100,000.

Combination train of 17 cars with coach attached on Milwaukee road blown off the track and 17 persons injured.

The Advocate printing office and creamery were demolished, but other buildings in the business section all withstood the wind's fury.

The first five of the list were quite seriously injured, while the others sustained painful bruises and fractures.

It was six o'clock when the storm was seen gathering about three miles to the northwest. Suddenly with tremendous force it swooped down about the straggling borders of the village and apparently it seemed it would spare the more thickly settled portion of Clinton.

Through some caprice of the elements the storm seemed to hesitate a moment, and, then, as though dissatisfied with its work, it turned back, with redoubled fury, and swept through the village from the southeast, hitting one last staggering blow at the already stricken town.

Through some strange force the storm at first detoured around the village, first striking the Finkler farm where a large barn was leveled, and then plunging on, the whirling mass encountered the Higgins homestead where seven people were huddled in the frail protection of the farm house.

Although the buildings were literally reduced to kindling wood, no one was killed, but Mr. Higgins and Rachel Higgins were badly injured.

A short distance away, in the path of the storm, stood the home of Thomas Rothwell, and it was at this point that the first fatalities occurred. Mr. Rothwell himself was instantly killed, while his wife's mother, Mrs. P. B. Vandermark, as well as Miss Kate Mills, a young school teacher, also lost their lives. The Rothwell home was literally torn to pieces by the violence of the twisting winds, nothing remaining save a splintered mass of ruins.

Fortunately one telephone wire to the outside world was spared and communication with nearby towns was immediately established. Within an hour the first relief train arrived in the city bearing doctors, nurses and medical supplies, as well as a hastily gathered commissary to meet the needs of some of the homeless.

This aid was immediately supplemented by special trains from various nearby towns, including Wheaton, Ortonville, Graceville, Milbank, S. D., and Wahpeton, N. D.

All the southwest corner of the town is absolutely cleaned out. Thirty-three houses were completely destroyed and 25 ruined.

Congressman Dies.

Deadwood, S. D., June 29.—Congressman William H. Parker of this city died here Friday morning at St. Joseph's hospital after a three week's illness. Most of the members of his family were present. He was a native of Keene, N. H., and was seventy-one years old.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Killed.

Minneapolis—One life was lost and many were imperiled in the fierce windstorm which swept across the Twin Cities June 22.

Henry H. Fortwenger, 1324 Morgan avenue north, a coach carpenter in the employ of the Omaha road at the Minneapolis shops, was killed.

Fortwenger and a friend, August Krick, 3225 Lyndale avenue north, a passenger coach inspector of the Omaha road, had gone to Shady Oak lake, a mile and a half southwest of Hopkins, for a day's fishing. When the storm broke they sought shelter in an abandoned shack or summer house on the shore of the lake. The wind wrecked the building and a heavy beam fell across Fortwenger's chest, crushing it. Krick crawled out uninjured, and at once began tearing away the timbers of the house to rescue his friend. Fortwenger died soon after being taken out.

Fortwenger was about 36 years old and leaves a wife and three or four children. The body is now at Strobeck's undertaking rooms in Hopkins.

Among the Lions.

Minneapolis—A pretty wedding took place in the lions' den on the Red Cross carnival grounds in Minneapolis, when Rev. G. L. Morrill spoke the words that united William J. Geer and Miss Ruth Julia Berglund.

The bride was attired in a becoming going away gown and carried smelling salts. The groom wore conventional black and carried a revolver.

The couple stood under a canopy of harpoons. Seven husky carnival employes acted as ushers.

Guests from out of town included several well-developed specimens from the jungles of Africa. They were inclined to be a bit hilarious, but when Rev. Morrill entered they sank into the back rows and the ceremony proceeded uninterrupted.

The bride and groom, escorted by the Daughters of Veterans and with a band playing a wedding march, proceeded from the hospital tent to the animal show. The lions were turned into the performing arena, after which the bridal party entered.

Commemorate Battle.

New Ulm—Arrangements are being made by the people of New Ulm, Fairfax and Redwood Falls suitably to commemorate the memorable attack on Fort Ridgely by the Indians on August 22, 1862. It is proposed to make the forty-sixth anniversary of the battle a reunion of old settlers and survivors of that historic struggle. The Indians at that time laid siege to the fort, but were repulsed by the valiant defenders. The fort was set on fire by the Indians several times, and the defenders, under a rain of shot and shell, extinguished the blaze in each instance.

Some years ago the Fort Ridgely National Park and Historical Association was organized, with Charles E. Flandrau, of St. Paul, as president, and Charles H. Hopkins, of Fairfax, as secretary. The former died several years ago and his place never has been filled.

Buying Up Houses.

Eveleth—The United States Steel Corporation is making a clean sweep in its negotiations to purchase business and residence property in the village of Sparta so that mining of iron ore can proceed.

The method adopted is that of securing options on the property for a limited time, with privilege to purchase at prices agreed upon. By the middle of this week the majority of owners had made deals with D. M. Mouser, the representative of the steel corporation.

Has Five Legs; Two Tails.

Stately—J. B. Rubey is the owner of a freak Poland China boar pig, which was born on April 25. The animal has five legs, the extra leg being between the two front legs; three ears, the additional one being behind the right shoulder; and it has two tails, the one out of place being located on the right hip. The animal weighs about twenty pounds at this time and is thriving. Mr. Rubey has received some flattering offers for his freak pig.

NEWS NOTES.

Crookston—The 25,000 club of this city has distributed 5,000 "Crookston Offers Opportunity" buttons thruout this and surrounding cities.

St. Peter—G. H. Fairclough, of St. Paul, will head the Minnesota State Music Teachers' association next year, having been elected at the seventh annual convention of the association being held in this city.

Minneapolis—Diamonds and rubies valued at $2,000 were stolen from the apartments of Miss R. S. Baum, 914 Fourth avenue south, in broad daylight. The burglars smashed open a trunk containing the gems, "snipped" the sparklers from their settings and escaped.

The republican state convention meet at St.Paul next Wednesday and it looks like an easy victory for Jacobson for governor.—Last weeks St.Hilaire Spectator

We don't know whether it is an easy victory or not at the date of this writeing July 1st, but we do know that Red Lake county have 12 delegates there voting solid for him.

We having heard a goodeal of mention made of county seat removel in connection with the late Republican convention. we desire to say that we were not attending a county seat removel convention, but a republican convention to elect 12 delegates to the state convention at St. Paul We paid our own expense and wore no mans collar. We as a free born American citizen claim that we have just as good a right to vote for who we like for governor as a man liveing in either Thief River, or Red Lake Falls. We want to say to the Red Lake Falls boys, that you put up a good fight, and now we expect you to follow our example of two years ago and get into line and support the ticket. We ask no more, and expect no less.

The Feeding of Dogs.

"No dog kept indoors and indeed very few outside should be fed on meat nor should he be fed from the table at mealtimes, as he will soon become a nuisance, especially when there are visitors. If he is always fed at the conclusion of a certain meal—dinner, for instance—he will wait patiently until the prescribed time. It is a good plan to feed after one's midday meal, giving plenty of green vegetables, bread and potatoes, with a very few scraps of finely cut meat, the whole well mixed and some gravy poured over it. If two meals are given, one should be at breakfast time and one in the evening. One should consist of only a little oatmeal and milk or a piece of dry dog biscuit.

"At no time should the dog have more than he will eat, and if he leaves anything on his plate except the pattern his allowance should be reduced or a meal omitted."—Suburban Life.

The Shoulder Strap.

If it were possible to compile such data it would be extremely interesting to know to what extent women have influenced the uniforms and equipment of their fighting states. A little instance in point is the steel curb shoulder strap of the British cavalry.

When Sir George Luck was setting out for Kandahar during the Afghan operations Lady Luck, knowing probably something of the fighting methods of the tribesmen, whose four foot knife can cut clean from shoulder to belt, sewed a couple of steel curb chains under each of the shoulder straps on her husband's tunic. As a protection from sword cuts these proved so effective that at the end of the campaign Sir George made a report in relation thereto, with the result that they were adopted as a permanent feature of the cavalry uniform.—Harper's Weekly.

Weeds Worth Millions.

New Zealand flax is one of a number of wild weeds that yield their gatherers great wealth. The flax, the strongest known, grows wild in marshes When it is cultivated it dwindles and its fibers become brittle and valueless.

Indian hemp grows wild, and out of it hasheesh, or keef, is made. Keef looks like flakes of chopped straw. It is smoked in a pipe; it is eaten on liver; it is drunk in water; it produces an intense, a delirious happiness, and among orientals it takes the place of beer and whisky.

The most valuable weed of all the wild growths is the seaweed. The nitrate beds of South America, which yield something like $65,000,000 a year, are nothing but beds of seaweed decomposed.—Columbus Dispatch.

Advancing.

"Is your daughter going to make her debut this season, Mrs. Parvenue?"

"No, indeed! Mme Pakin attends to all that. We don't have to do our own sewing no more."—Baltimore American.

To forgive a fault in another is more sublime than to be faultless oneself.—George Sand.

Leap Year.

Go slow, girls. There will be 366 days in 1908.—Chicago News.

Leap year is an old world institution. American girls are too pretty to need it.—New York American.

With 80,000 more women than men in Massachusetts even leap year may be futile here.—Boston Record.

We can't think very much of the young man who pretends to be afraid that some girl will marry him during leap year.—Toledo Blade.

Pointed Paragraphs.

The antics of love seem to become worse every year.

You might as well be good. There is no fun in being wicked.

If you could only be satisfied with what another man says is good for you!

Every succeeding generation sees its young people giving advice a few years earlier than the young folks of the generation ahead of it.—Atchison Globe.

Postal Notes.

The currency taken from misdirected letters at the dead letter office last year amounted to $67,715.69.

At the close of the fiscal year 1907 rural delivery was in operation on 37,728 routes served by 37,582 carriers.

The dead letter office handled 13,005,255 pieces of mail last year. About one half was restored to the senders.

Woes of a Drummer.

"I'm just a little discouraged with my work," said the tall New York boy who has started out on the road. "I was making my second trip west when I met an old drummer who had been on the road for more than thirty years. He sat with grip between his knees and talked to me.

"'Chuck it, my boy,' he said. 'If there is anything else in the world you can do, do it. Look at my gray hairs. I don't know what it is to have a home. For thirty years I have seen my wife about once in five weeks. I know that I've a wife and children in a flat in New York, but that's all I do know about them. The children have grown up and married, but I have not had time to attend their weddings. My wife has grown gray, too, but she has had the best of it. She has had a home and the children. If there is anything else in the world you can do, my boy,' he repeated, 'quit drumming and do it.'"

Curious Blunders.

Some remarkable mistakes in memorials have totally escaped notice until it was too late to rectify them. The spurs on the boots of Cromwell's statue at Westminster abbey, London, are the most interesting feature of the monument, although they generally get no attention at all from sightseers. They are worn upside down. In a painted window on the staircase which leads from the floor of Westminster palace to the committee rooms an inscription on a sword wielded by the "Black Prince" has the words "Prince of Wales." Again, in the fresco depicting the embarkation of the pilgrim fathers in the corridor leading from the outer lobby at St. Stephen's to the house of lords the Mayflower is shown to be hoisting the union jack, a flag which did not come into existence until 250 years after the days of the historic Mayflower.

Samuel R. Gummere.

Samuel R. Gummere, United States minister to Morocco, through whose cleverness the American authorities obtained possession of Paul O. Stensland, the fugitive Chicago banker, has a post whose duties are often peculiar. The sultan of Morocco is superior as a ruler to some of his predecessors, but he is a young man of many freaks and fancies, and to get on well with him the representative of the United States has to keep his wits with him all the time. Minister Gummere was United States consul at Tangier when the Perdicaris kidnaping occurred, and his efficient conduct during that episode resulted in his promotion to his present post. Now he has another feather in his cap.

He Was Spurned.

"Believe me," said old Gotrox, "although I'm an old bachelor I'm sure I could learn to be a good husband. You know, a man is never too old to learn."

"Nor too old to yearn, perhaps," replied Miss Pechis; "also I'm sorry to say you're not too old to spurn."—Philadelphia Press.

Always Something Lacking.

Love is like a waltz. It never quite fulfills all one expects of it. Either the man's lead is too fast or too slow, his hold too tight or too loose, he stumbles over your gown or steps on your feet, and if everything else is right it is the wrong man.—Life.

Mentally.

Euphemisms For "Mad."

In order to avoid the blunt word "mad" many euphemisms are resorted to in the English language. While "lunacy" refers to the supposed influence of the moon, "insane" simply means unhealthy; "imbecile" signifies only weak, and "crazy," meaning decrepit, almost corresponds to the slang "cracked." "A tile off," "not all there," "a bee in his bonnet," are only a few of the efforts slang has made to carry off the sad fact with an uneasy joke. "Lunatic asylum," for the old "madhouse," represents not only a great improvement in the institution, but also in the term used to designate it.

A Tiny Well Digger.

The mole is one of the thirstiest of animals. It never burrows at any great distance from water, and at times of drought when the supply of the needful element is diminished or cut off the "little gentleman in the velvet coat" counteracts the scarcity by digging wells until it comes to a depth at which water may be obtained.

It's Results That Count

In cooking it's the results that count. So when a housewife starts to make Bread or Rools or Pies, naturally she wants her cooking to have that rich crisp, pleasing odor. But it must also have that whiteness, lightness and wholesomeness which is so essential to good cooking.

Much of this depends upon the flour—and thousands depend upon,

THE NEXT GOVERNOR.

J. F. Jacobson, of Lacquiparle County was nominated for governor of the state of Minnesota, on the first ballot, by the republican party in the state convention Wednesday. When we heard the good news, we did not regret the time and money spent in attending that County Convention last week to help put Red Lake county solid in line for him, instead of sending boys to mill to spill the grist that the old man had worked hard to raise, and we are of the opinion, judgeing from the ring of that convention, that the old men in other parts of the state went to mill them selves, and you bet they brought home the grist. The People nominated Jacobson, and the People will elect him.

Another nomination made by that Convention that was very satisfactory to us, up here was the re nomination of Hon Ira B. Mills for Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner, which will add strength to the ticket in the northern part of the state.

Safest Place in Trains.

"I have one rule for my family when they travel," said the conductor of the suburban train, "and that is for them never to ride in the rear coach or the first one and, preferably, not in the coach next to the last or first. The reason for it is so obvious that I should think the foremost and last cars of a train would have scant patronage from anybody who reads of railroad accidents. If there is a smashup, those are the coaches that suffer. It seems strange that some kind of a buffer is not put behind the locomotive tender and at the rear of the train. How many lives would be saved by a device of the kind one has only to study the statistics of railroad accidents to figure out for himself."—New York Press.

The Solemn Back Bay Butler.

Some Boston editor intimated that Back Bay butlers make love to the housemaids. One of them has replied in defense of his class, and incidentally he shows how far culture has got down the back stairs of Boston society. He writes:

"I do not flirt with any of the female members of the household, and it is no exaggeration to say that I am not better than the average butler of the Back Bay, so far as morals are concerned. I have educated my boy in France and England and am now giving him a postgraduate course at an American college. Our feelings have been hurt by the article to which I refer, and we have undergone a great deal of mental suffering from the annoyance unwittingly caused us."

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

KIND THOUGHT OF THE BRIDE.

Possibly Turned Silly Custom Into Something Really Worth While.

"The most considerate girl I ever knew got married yesterday," said the man. "She showed her thoughtfulness in a most unusual way. The day before the wedding she called the attention of the rest of the family to a row of old shoes standing in a downstairs closet.

"'I want you to throw these after the carriage,' she said. 'They are all mates. I collected them to throw away. I learned some time ago that certain poor souls who have hard work to get clothes of any description keep a lookout for big weddings. They hang around the house at going-away time and pick up the good luck shoes. Maybe they get a fit, and maybe they don't. Anyway, I've done all I could to accommodate them.

"'Here are six pairs of shoes to be fired after me. If somebody doesn't get fitted in that collection, it isn't my fault.'"

SUFFERED TWENTY-FIVE YEARS.

With Eczema—Her Limb Peeled and Foot Was Raw—Thought Amputation Was Necessary—Believes Life Saved by Cuticura.

"I have been treated by doctors for twenty-five years for a bad case of eczema on my leg. They did their best, but failed to cure it. My doctor had advised me to have my leg cut off. At this time my leg was peeled from the knee, my foot was like a piece of raw flesh, and I had to walk on crutches. I bought a set of Cuticura Remedies. After the first two treatments the swelling went down, and in two months my leg was cured and the new skin came on. The doctor was surprised and said that he would use Cuticura for his own patients. I have now been cured over seven years, and but for the Cuticura Remedies I might have lost my life. Mrs. J. B. Renaud, 277 Mentana St., Montreal, Que., Feb. 20, 1907."

Suicides in Natal.

The abnormal suicide wave which is passing over this country has been made the subject of very serious thought, and it is well that it should be so. In Natal within the past four weeks there have been three suicides of Europeans, which, on the basis of population, is four times greater than the suicide rate in England and Wales a deplorable state of affairs indeed in Durban a few weeks ago it was stated that suicides were taking place at the rate of one a day.—Natal Witness.

Why Not Both?

It is absolutely true that the British public goes to the theater to be amused, not to be instructed. It considers that it pays its money to be amused, and it sullenly resents the presence of any powder in the jam. The Fourth in Boomville

Celebration as Described by the Small Boy.

"BOOMVILLE Will Celebrate the Nation's Natal Day."

Sammy Smith and I stood with our hands in our pockets and read the notice in flaming red letters as "Cy" Smith unrolled the poster preparatory to tacking it on "Doc" Blaston's shoe shop. We didn't understand what that "natal day" business meant, but "celebrate"—that could only mean one thing this season of the year.

Tied a Can on the Pup.

Whoopee! Cracky! Boom! and Sammy and I shied a tin can at "Doc" Blaston's setter pup and dug down the alley as fast as four brown legs could carry us.

"Hey! Stub, it's a-goin' to be; they're puttin' the bill up now." Stub dropped the bait can half full of worms and joined the proclaimers of the glad tidings. Two minutes later we ended up in front of the bill to read further.

"I call that a mighty neat job of printin'," said the editor of the Weekly Banner, who had happened along.

"We broke the claws holdin' the arrows off our eagle wood cut two years ago and blamed if we could find the piece this year. The old bird looked mighty squatty until we hit upon havin' him sit on that log from the Mink Lumber Company's ad."

"Looks like that old turkey buzzard that roosts on the rotten log in Deacon Shuffecorn's pasture," sniffed old Prof. Krain. Krain had started a paper in opposition to the Banner three years before, but it had fizzled out after intermittent issues for six months.

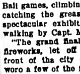
But there wasn't anything squatty about the birds of freedom, as far as we kids could see. Besides, we were busy reading down further what was going to happen.

"Fine shade, grand music, magnificent parade, most eloquent speakers in the state. Races! Races! Races! Ball games, climbing the greased pole, catching the greased pig, a grand spectacular exhibition of tight-rope walking by Capt. McMein.

"The grand finale, $95.50 worth of fireworks, let off from a stand in front of the city calaboose." These were a few of the features that would mar the usual lethargy of Boomville on July 4.

"Shore goin' to have $95 worth of fireworks; there'll be pinwheels, giant fire crackers and skyrockets, till you can't rest," said Sid Girkens. "I know, cause dad was at the meetin' the night they voted to have 'em."

It had been five years since Boomville had had a celebration. For 12 years before that time the eagle had screamed in vociferous fashion as regular as independence day came around. That was when the boom was on the town. In those days Jeff Dascom gave $150 to buy fireworks. Jeff borrows his chewing tobacco now. The bubble had bursted, the lean days had come and patriotism had waned in Boomville.



Turnd the Freezer.

The celebration this year was due to young Leon Talbert who had bought out old Shoebuckler's general merchandise store. He had offered to give $25 as the first contribution. His rival in business, old "Dan" Turner, across the street, growled and said he did it just for advertisement.

A man's business was the last thing attended to in Boomville during the next three weeks. Floats had to be built for the Goddess of Liberty and her attendants to ride on. Boomville had no trees that would do as a shade, for the drought three years before had killed even the trees in the city park. Where the young cottonwoods, 20 feet tall, used to grow, was an oat field. Beside the oat field was a stretch of ground that once bore the appellation of "Dascom boulevard." "Joe" Skinner said he'd have the best crop of potatoes on that ground this year ever raised in Boomville, if the bugs didn't hit 'em or the hot winds blow.

"I reckon they ought to be better than ordinary, bein' raised on that high-fintin' ground," he used to fling at Joe Dascom, who helped him hoe them.

A thin line of cottonwoods and a few scragged elms on Cowskin creek, five miles away, were the nearest trees to Boomville now. Jim McGood solved the shade problem. He would build an arbor, himself, if they would give him the sole privilege of selling lemonade and ice cream near by. Jim's offer was accepted.

On July 3 Sammy Smith and I were pretty busy. We kept the road warm between the place where Jim McGood was putting leafy branches of cottonwood, brought from the Cowskin grove, over a frame work of plank, and the back part of the livery stable where the floats were being decked in tinsel and red, white and blue bunting. We never had any real fun until late in the afternoon, when we tied a can on "Doc" Blaston's setter pup and set off a bunch of firecrackers in it.

We hated "Doc" Blaston and had even less regard for his setter pup, because he wouldn't chase a jack rabbit. We were sorry afterwards we did it, for that premature can spoiled a whole lot of fun next day. Every dog in Boomville decamped that night; even the cats roosted in the trees for two days.

A boom that rattled the window frames awakened me before day next morning. With no hat and only one suspender over my shoulder I scurried down to Uncle Billy's blacksmith shop. Uncle Billy was out in front shooting off the anvil. He had a whole quart can of powder. Carefully the square hole in the anvil was filled with powder and a hardwood plug whittled to fit it. A groove in one side of the plug was left for the fuse. Uncle Billy scratched the match down the leg of his overalls, touched the fuse and then hurried behind the shop door. The aged blacksmith was slightly deaf and liked a noisy Fourth. Thirteen times the powder was poured in and touched off.

The events of that day crowded upon each other fast and furious. The parade started half an hour late because the Goddess couldn't get her brown hair waving to the best effect. After the parade things dragged a little until the speaking began. We wouldn't have stayed around near the speaking except we sometimes got a dish of ice cream for turning a freezer for Jim.

Tha Deacon Was Vary Excitable.

The Hon. Timothy Todhunter gave the oration and Deacon Heffletower read the Declaration of Independence. That is he started to read it. He had taken a copy of the declaration from his hip pocket and started to read when Sammy Smith touched a cannon cracker off behind the speakers' stand. The deacon was naturally very excitable. He tried to proceed, but his hands jerked spasmodically. Suddenly the declaration parted in the middle where it had been folded in the deacon's pocket. They sent after a new declaration, but the crowd had left before it arrived.

The greased pig had been caught and the entries were just in for the slippery pole climbing exhibition when my recollection came to a vivid close. That night about nine o'clock I waked up with a bandaged eye, a swollen jaw and one arm in a sling. They told me Sammy Smith had climbed 'er and I went to sleep happy.

For the Babies.

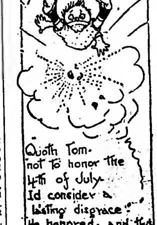
"I want to get some fireworks for my little boy—something that will be safe for him to set off by himself," explains the young mother.

"Yes, ma'am," replied the courteous dealer. "How old is your little boy?"

"He'll be 14 months and two days old to-morrow."

"I don't believe we have anything he could be trusted with."

"Oh, dear! Haven't you any safety pin-wheels?"



A Bit of Advice.

Tis the thumbs on little Willie
As he wanders forth to play.
It may look a trifle silly,
But he'll need the thumbs some day
He may chafe at the restriction
And protest against the plan;
But you'll have his benediction
When he gets to be a man.

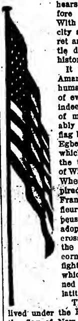
Where to Draw the Line.

We hear a good deal about a sane Fourth, but what is really needed is the ability to draw the line between harmless noise and a combination of train wreck, dynamite explosion and war with the improved implements of modern warfare.

OUR FLAG.

On history's crimson pages, high up on the roll of fame,
The story of Old Glory burns, in deathless words of flame.
It is the old red, white and blue, proud emblem of the free,
It is the flag that floats above our land of liberty.

—Benjamin Button.



The "Star-Spangled Banner" is generally taken for granted. One seldom hears its why and wherefore called in question. With its every display in city and hamlet, on turret and hall, comes a little discussion as to its history and development.

It transpires that the American flag is, like the human species, a thing of evolution. This is so, indeed, with the insignia of most countries, notably of England, whose flag began with old King Egbert's dragon upon which was incorporated the three Norman lions of William the Conqueror. When Edward III. aspired to the crown of France he added the fleur-de-lis. James I. dispensed with both and adopted St. George's cross and finally in 1801 the "Lion and the Unicorn" began their long fight for the crown, which has since continued on canvas, in every latitude of the world.

The colonies, of course, lived under the British flag. In 1680 the flag of New England was white, charged with St. George's cross in red surmounted with the crown. In the center was inscribed Jacobus Rex. While Manhattan was in possession of the Dutch the ships waved a flag on which was a beaver, the then insignia of the New Netherlands. 1707 the colonies adopted the Union Jack of Great Britain. This was formed by a combination of St. Andrew's and St George's crosses, and of course was typical of the fact that the two countries had become one when Queen Elizabeth died and the Scottish king succeeded to the English throne.

At the time of our revolt from British authority the Union Jack was in general use, usually bearing some patriotic motto of which "Liberty and Union" was the favorite. Directly after the battle of Lexington a new flag was improvised with the motto of the state of Connecticut, viz., "Qui transtulit sustinet." This soon gave way to regimental colors, each being distinctive in shade. At Bunker Hill a blue flag was chosen to designate New England troops—the first sign we see of union in the colonial army. This flag had St. George's cross in one corner. It was growing beautifully less within our limits and soon afterwards disappeared when Gen. Putnam displayed a red banner on Prospect hill with the motto "An Appeal to Heaven." The colony of Massachusetts sent out cruisers in the spring, supplying each with a white flag on which was painted a green pine tree. When armed vessels were commissioned in Washington they were furnished with flags of similar kind.

To Col. William Moultrie of South Carolina is due the honor of raising the first republican flag. It had a white crescent on a blue ground. This was unfurled on the east bastion of the fortress in Charleston harbor, June 28, 1776, while on the opposite side waved the flag called the "Great Union."

June 14, 1777, the Continental congress, realizing the inappropriateness of longer using British colors, resolved "that the flag of the 13 United States be 13 stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be 13 stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation."

The first national flag after this pattern was made by a Mrs. Ross, a lady of Philadelphia. She had some distinguished men to assist her, among whom were Benjamin Franklin and Gen. Joseph Reed. We are not informed whether these men, appointed by congress for the purpose, used the thimble, needle and thread that the lady herself employed. From her general character it is probable that Mrs. Ross declined to let them "boss the job," and proceeded in her own way.

The 13 stars of the flag of 1777 were arranged in a circle, although there was no officially prescribed form. In 1794, after the admission of Vermont and Kentucky into the union, it was resolved by congress that from and after May 1, 1795, "the flag of the United States be 15 stripes alternate red and white, that the union be 15 stars, white, in a blue field."

No provision was made by this act for future alterations, nor were any changes made till 1818, although a number of new states were admitted meanwhile into the union. On April 4 of that year a bill embodying the suggestions of Capt. Samuel G. Reid, who recommended the reduction of the stripes to the original 13 and the adoption of stars equal to the number of the states, formed into one large star, and a new star to be added on the Fourth of July next succeeding the admission of each new state, was approved by President Monroe, and the flag thus established was afterward hoisted on the hall of representatives.

WHERE SHE HAD THE BULGE.

Telephone Girl's Great Opportunity to Get Gloriously Even.

"You know that red-headed cashier that had the nerve to complain of me to the boss the other day," said the girl at the telephone desk, to a New York Times writer. "Well, I got even with him, all right. He ain't married, but he's got a best girl. His father owns a shoe factory over in Jersey, and rich—my! Well, she called him up the other afternoon at her usual time. 'Is Mr. Smith there?' she asks, in her most romentickist voice. 'Yes,' I answers, just as honeylike as she. 'It's his wife wants him, isn't it?' With that Miss Girl hung up with such a jerk my ear hurt. Smith goes around wondering why she does not call him up. Every time he dares he says to me: 'Has any one called me on the 'phone, Miss Limit?' And I look as innocent as a kid and shake my head 'No.' I tell you, us telephone girls can turn 'Joy to the Bride' into 'Nothin' Doin'' any time we please. Me for Us."

ALL IN THE FAMILY.

Afridi's Simple Explanation of His Easy Victory.

Many of the hill tribesmen in India join the British side and become most valuable recruits. Some years ago in a campaign against the Afridis one of the columns was much annoyed by a persistent "sniper" who followed it daily. Eventually one of the newly joined Afridi recruits requested leave to fall out for a couple of hours to settle the trouble. At the end of the time he strolled in placidly and flung down the head of the sniper.

On being congratulated by his officer and asked how he had managed to find his enemy so quickly, he replied laconically: "I know his ways, sahib."

"Why," said the officer, "was he a friend of yours?"

"My father, sahib!"

Her Explanation.

Otto E. Schaar, president of the Waiters' club of New York, in a recent argument on tipping, said to his opponent, sharply: "Your reply reminds me of a woman's reply in a German court. This woman was accused of poisoning her husband. The prosecuting attorney said to her: 'You have heard the evidence. The body contained enough arsenic to kill ten persons. What have you to say?' 'My husband,' the woman answered, 'was a big eater.'"

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

No other medicine has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women or received so many genuine testimonials as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Almost every one you meet has either been benefited by it, or has friends who have.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., any woman any day may see the files containing over one million one hundred thousand letters from women seeking health, and here are the letters in which they openly state over their own signatures that they were cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved many women from surgical operations.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is made from roots and herbs, without drugs, and is wholesome and harmless.

The reason why Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so successful is because it contains ingredients which act directly upon the feminine organism, restoring it to a healthy normal condition.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

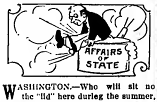
Information and Gossip Picked Up Here and There in Washington.

Keeper of Lid During Summer in Doubt



WASHINGTON.—Who will sit on the "lid" here during the summer, while the president is taking rest and recreation at Oyster Bay? None of the cabinet officials wants the job, and so far it has been a continual performance of sidestepping. Even when the president left for his Long Island home the other day only tentative plans for the dog days watch had been determined upon.

Secretary Root, who left at the same time, will be gone all summer. Assistant Secretary of State Bacon will be the lid sitter in the state department most of the summer.

Attorney General Bonaparte will keep out of Washington as much as possible during July, paying flying visits from Baltimore. In August he will be at the Aspinwall hotel in Lenox, Mass.

Secretary Metcalf has gone to California to spend the summer in the mountains. He will not be seen in Washington until frost comes.

Postmaster General Meyer will hie hence to the St. Lawrence to fish. Secretary Garfield is in Hawaii and will stay there for three months. Secretary Cortelyou will have a quiet summer, probably on Long Island.

Secretary Wilson will stay in Washington for some time on account of the business arising in connection with the enforcement of the pure food laws. If he takes a vacation he will go to his Iowa farm.

Secretary Wright, who will succeed Secretary Taft in the war department, will hardly be eligible to such a serious task as keeping the big lid down this summer. He will spend much of his time this summer in Washington, however. Secretary Straus has taken the seat on the lid and will have this throne of honor until some of the other members will consent to relieve him.

Picturesque Princess Invades Capital

PRINCESS VILMA LWOFF PARAGHY is in town. And that's not all. With her are three maids, by courtesy French; first, second and third atineho; marshal, courtier, butler, chef, and, for good measure, three or four other men servants.

And that's not all. And with her also are one small yappy, white woolly dog, one pair of guinea pigs badly in need of a hair-cut, a couple of young wolves, an ibis, a falcon, several owls, and a family of alligators.

And that's not all. With her also are several drays of the gaudiest luggage that any local hotel ever sheltered. It is all painted red, white and green—the Hungarian colors.

All these—princess, suite, menagerie and impediments—are at the Willard. They arrived from Hot Springs, Va., a few days ago in a private car. They proceeded to the hotel after some delay, in half a dozen carriages, and after considerable excitement on the part of the hotel employes her highness was finally established in a suite which comprises almost the entire southeast wing of the second floor. The princess had ordered a room with a balcony and was justly indignant when she found she had been relegated to the fourth floor, where there was no balcony.

In vain did the manager explain that the lower floors were not in use in the summer, that they were closed entirely and dismantled. They must be opened and refurnished. Madame wanted a balcony and must have a balcony. The closed rooms were forthwith opened and furnished in the shortest possible time and Mme. la Princess Peraghy was installed in a suite of something like 20 rooms with a balcony.

She has what figures as her second sitting room exclusively for her menagerie and is lamenting that she decided to ship a young bear, a dear little tiger kitten, and a furry little lion cub direct to her home at Nice.

She is Hungarian by birth and Russian by marriage, but that did not last long. Like any American girl, she had to get rid of her Russian prince.

Uncle Sam Starts a Crusade on Flies

UNCLE SAM is busy these days counting house flies. He has started a sort of fly census for the purpose of ascertaining the relationship between the little buzzing pests and typhoid fever. It is believed by some agricultural department entomologists that flies do an awful lot towards spreading typhoid germs around—in fact, several of them have been caught with the goods.

The plan, therefore, is to catch the wicked little insects, count 'em, and compile a lot of data for comparison with statistics furnished by the health department as to the prevalence of typhoid fever in localities where captures are made. The fly census has, therefore, been inaugurated in Washington and Pittsburg and may be extended to other cities.

Dr. L. O. Howard, chief entomologist of the department of agriculture, is in charge of the fly-paper squad, which posts sheets of good old sticky stuff around in public places and gathers them in again after captures of 48 hours have been made.

The greatest number of flies that have been enumerated at one haul so far is 2,600, gathered at the United States arsenal, an engineer post on the Potomac river.

The experts carefully count the victims, determine the length of time they have been dead, search them for germs, and do various other funny things that eventually may mean a lot in convicting Mr. Fly of transplanting disease. As soon as returns are in from the great "fly center"—Pittsburg—there may be some interesting data to give out.

Pretty Society Belle Studying Bugs

A BEAUTIFUL woman who leads a double life is the latest person of interest in Washington's smart set. The beautiful woman is Miss Harriet Richardson, and her double life is perfectly proper as well as highly interesting.

Three hours of each day she is Miss Richardson of the Smithsonian Institution, authority on the Isopods of North America, one of the "Who's Whos" in the American Men of Science and with a long string of degrees filling out the page after her name. The other 21 hours of the day she is Miss Harriet Richardson of Wyoming avenue, N. W., a society favorite.

Miss Richardson inherited a fortune from her father, C. E. F. Richardson, a wealthy land holder. She is one of the most exquisitely dressed young women in Washington, a skilled horsewoman, a globe trotter and an adept at bridge whist. Her suitors are many and some have been ardent. But thus far suitors have been unable to tempt her—for there are the Isopods.

Her first deviation from society's beaten path came when she refused to be a "bud," going to Vassar instead. But when, after taking a baccalaureate degree, she wished to go on studying, her family rebelled. It was then that Dr. C. W. Richardson, her brother, had the happy inspiration of taking her to the musty old Smithsonian institution, where his influence procured her the right to work as a volunteer.

Every morning from ten till one Miss Richardson is at her desk. There she has written her book, "A Monograph on the Isopods of North America," dealing with specimens furnished by the Harriman expedition to Alaska, and 15 shorter works, two of which she has just prepared for a Paris scientific paper.

Convention Aftermath

Men Prominent at the Republican Gathering

JAMES S. SHERMAN

James Schoolcraft Sherman of Utica, N. Y., nominee on the Republican ticket for vice-president, was born October 24, 1855, in Utica, N. Y., where he still resides. He has been a member of the national house of representatives since 1886, with the exception of one term, 1890-1892. He was chairman of the Republican national congressional committee in the campaign of 1906. He is a lawyer, banker and manufacturer and is the business as well as the political leader of Utica, being president of the Utica Trust and Deposit company.

Mr. Sherman was educated in the Utica academy and Hamilton college, being graduated from the latter institution in 1878. He was admitted to the bar in 1880 and at once took an active interest in political affairs. In 1884 he was chosen mayor of Utica and two years later was elected to congress.

For years he has been regarded as the best parliamentarian in the lower house, has been frequently mentioned as a candidate for the speakership. He was a formidable opponent of David B. Henderson when the latter was first elected speaker. He has acted as chairman of the committee of the whole through many a turbulent battle in the house, and, according to his friends, has shown his ability again and again to preside over the United States senate.

He has been chairman of two New York state conventions. In the work of the house he has distinguished himself as chairman of the committee on Indian affairs and as one of the most influential members of the interstate and foreign commerce committee.

HENRY F. COCHEMS

Henry F. Cochems, the Milwaukee lawyer who placed the name of Senator La Follette before the Chicago convention as a candidate for president, did it in a speech that startled the delegates and made a marked sensation among the old-time Republicans who were not accustomed to hearing the same sort of political doctrine expounded in G. O. P. conventions. For Cochems is even more of a radical than the man he introduced, and in telling why the Wisconsin man should be made president he took occasion to point out a good many things in the political and official world that he thinks need fixing up or cutting out.

Cochems is something of an unusual figure in politics over in Milwaukee. He was a famous athlete in the days when he was in the state university of Wisconsin, and made an especially notable name as a halfback on the eleven. Then, when he went to Harvard he lived up to his reputation by smashing a few athletic records while he was at the same time completing the three years law course in two years.

Since he returned to practice law in Milwaukee he has been active in politics. He was assistant district attorney for several years, and made a hot campaign for congress two years ago, being defeated. He has always been a staunch supporter of La Follette, and nominated him for governor in the convention of 1898, when Cochems was only 23 years old.

In his nominating speech at Chicago Cochems declared that conservatism in political affairs had come to mean stagnation, and asserted that the reforms which have made Theodore Roosevelt's administration notable and popular were all advocated and strongly urged by La Follette long before Roosevelt was made president.

J. FRANK HANLY

J. Frank Hanly, governor of Indiana, church worker, temperance advocate, lodge man, politician, who placed Mr. Fairbanks' name before the Chicago convention for the presidential nomination, has been much in the limelight during his career.

Gov. Hanly was largely responsible several years ago for the passage of the bill making it an infraction of the state laws to smoke, sell or give away a cigarette or even to be found with the materials for making one in one's possession.

He has a record for dogged persistence that bodes ill for evil-doers. He is the son of a cooper and was born in 1863 in Champaign county, Ill., in a log cabin.

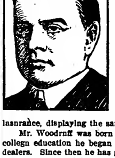
He knew much hard work and little of schooling, receiving his elementary education from his blind mother, and at the age of 16 he left home, walked over into Indiana, took to the woods with an ax and has made his own way unaided.

He devoted much of his spare time to reading books and studying and eventually became a school teacher.

In 1890 he was elected to the state senate, and in 1894 to congress. As a candidate for renomination, his district having been changed, he was defeated by 52-100 of a vote, in a scene of intense excitement.

In 1898 he was a candidate for United States senator, and narrowly missed being chosen. He presided over the state convention in 1900. Mr. Hanly is a Mason and an Elk, and a member of the Methodist church.

TIMOTHY L. WOODRUFF



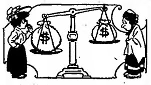
Timothy L. Woodruff, ex-lieutenant governor of New York, who placed the name of James S. Sherman before the Chicago convention as a candidate for the vice-presidential nomination, was born with a golden spoon and is famed throughout the land for his gorgeous waistcoats. "Tim" came into the world with that serious handicap of fame, a large inheritance. Popular opinion placed him in the "light-waisted" class, and kept him there for years. But "Tim," by his energetic and successful management of a large typewriter manufacturing company, compelled the public to realize that he was somebody after all. His next step was to compel the ruralists to realize that he knew as much about farming as he did about waistcoats. Then came another step forward, his entrance into the field of life insurance, displaying the same ability and energy.

Mr. Woodruff was born in New Haven, Conn., August 4, 1858. After his college education he began life in New York as a clerk with a firm of salt dealers. Since then he has gone forward rapidly and to-day is connected with a large number of financial institutions. He has always taken a great interest in educational affairs. All this time he has been interested in politics. He was one of the organizers of the Young Republican club of Brooklyn, and in 1884 he kept the club in line for James G. Blaine, becoming Mr. Blaine's personal representative in Kings county during the campaign that followed. His first public office was that of park commissioner.

Talk of New York

Gossip of People and Events Told in Interesting Manner.

Hetty Green Has Rival in Mrs. Jones



NEW YORK.—The richest woman in America—or in the world—may not be Mrs. Hetty Green. The greatest landowner in America may not be one of the Astors. These are conclusions that probably would be reached if the Green and Astor possessions could be valued correctly and figured compared with those which would represent the vast wealth of Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Jones of New York and Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island.

Further than that, the social crown of America, long held by the Astors by reason of their wealth, would belong to Mrs. Jones, if she chose to claim it, for her fortune is doubtless greater and her lineage in this country runs a century further back. She is related also far and near to nearly every one of the great families in New York and New England, whose names are written largely on the pages of American history from the days of colonial wars to now.

Probably no one, not even Mrs. Jones herself, could say accurately how great is her fortune. It is mostly in land. She acknowledges she owns and pays taxes on land in every school district on Long Island, in nearly every county in New York state, and in every state in the union except Texas.

The property immediately surrounding the old manor house at Cold Spring Harbor, where she lives in summer, is worth millions of dollars. Her husband, Dr. Oliver Livingstone Jones, is also a great land owner, but his possessions fall far short of his wife's. Then there is the Jones estate which is owned by some 25 heirs, which also runs up into scores of millions in value.

The other day she started a controversy with the city of New York about the ownership of the sunken meadows in East river. They are estimated to be worth $1,000,000.

The foundations of her vast fortune were laid by Maj. Thomas Jones, "who came from Strabone, in the kingdom of Ireland," and settled with his young wife near what is now called Oyster Bay, L. I., in 1693. He brought with him a comfortable fortune, won on the seas through privateering privileges granted him by James II., whose cause be supported in the battle of Boyne.

This fortune has been handed down from the eldest of one family to the eldest of the next through five generations, until now the bulk of the vast accumulations rests with Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Jones.

Flagler Retires from Standard Oil Co.

HENRY M. FLAGLER, at the age of 78, dropped quietly out of the Standard Oil Company the other day. Only a bare announcement was made public by the directors at the close of their meeting. It was coupled with the statement that his place as vice-president had been taken by W. H. Tilford, heretofore the treasurer of the company.

The passing of Flagler, although foreshadowed for some time by the feeble state of his health, is yet an event of the first importance in the great world of finance, in which he was so long a striking figure. The son of a Presbyterian minister in western New York, he engaged in several lines of business, and had "gone broke" when he met John D. Rockefeller and went into partnership with him in an oil refinery.

Mr. Flagler, according to the government figures, owns more than eight per cent. of Standard Oil stock, and has drawn $30,000,000 in dividends in the last ten years. He was one of six men who controlled $600,000,000 of Standard Oil resources.

Recently he extended his Florida East Coast railroad from Miami to Knight's key, over 15 miles of water and 19 miles of swamp.

Several years ago he divorced his first wife after she had become insane, and married a younger woman. He practically cut off his son by his first wife. The divorced wife is living in isolated luxury in a mansion on Riverside drive. It is believed she does not know she has been divorced. The second wife was a North Carolina seamstress. Newport society refused to receive her.

Helen Gould Is Sued by a Parlor Maid

MISS HELEN GOULD, philanthropist, charity worker and eldest daughter of the late Jay Gould, has been sued for $20,000 damages by a former servant on a charge of slander. Elizabeth Gouley, formerly a parlor maid in Miss Gould's house in Fifth avenue, is the complainant.

The young woman charges that in the presence of seven other men and women servants Miss Gould denounced her as a questionable character, using the plainest words to make her meaning clear, and accused her of indiscretions with the men employes of the household.

The complainant says she tried to get Miss Gould to apologize for her language, but failed. Then the suit was begun.

The papers were served on Miss Gould, after months of effort, the other day at her country home at Irvington-on-the-Hudson. Miss Gould is quoted as saying, when the papers were served, that the Gauley woman is demented.

Elizabeth Gouley is about 40 years old and has been in this country for more than 20 years, nearly all of which time she has spent in the service of New York families of wealth and position.

Hospital Devoted Solely to Cats and Dogs

PLUTOCRATIC dogs sometimes have appendicitis, just like their masters and are operated on to remove the vermiform appendix. There is a dog and cat hospital in this city in which there is a woman surgeon. She wears a sterilized cotton gown when she operates, and uses sterilized instruments and sterilized cotton bandages, just like in a real hospital. There is a long table in the middle of the "operating ward," and there, gently soothed with a few drops of ether or chloroform many a dog, quite unknown to himself, has parted with some portion of his anatomy.

One day this woman surgeon removed an appendix and found it full of coal. This is a specimen of the things puppies will eat. One day she removed a toy watch from a bright pup's digestive apparatus, where it had not digested.

A sick dog is as finical about his food as a sick person. One great dane who had received an injury to his spine refused to eat anything. He kept alive by having his mouth held open while raw eggs were thrown into it. He was fed despite himself and his life saved. The first thing he ate voluntarily was ice cream, which is as frequent an invalid dish in this as in a human hospital. Cod liver oil, malted milk, milk punches, beef juice, and pure cream are among the invalid dainties served.

One patron brings in her two little dogs periodically to have their teeth examined for deposits of tartar. This seems hardly necessary, as each little fellow has his own tooth brush and tooth powder and has his teeth brushed carefully twice a day. Each has his little bed as well as his own dog basket, where he sleeps upon a hair mattress beneath a down quilt.

The Vulgarity of Waste.

When you see a housewife who keeps bread lying around until it molds; who permits mildew to get into the clothes; who allows her stockings and those of her family to fall to pieces for want of darning; who cooks up a lot of food which she ought to know will not be eaten and that will be cast into the garbage can; who "thrashes through" her best frocks by putting them on to do kitchen work, you may be sure she is "tacky." You will never find a woman of that description who is not cheap and who hasn't a common streak in her as wide as a gate. Well, it is exactly the same with a people or a nation, says the Kansas City Star. When you see a country reckless in the use of its resources and heedlessly destructive of the treasures with which it has been endowed by nature, you can depend upon it that it possesses the ingredients of cheapness and inferiority. We laugh a great deal about the proverbial disregard of the future commonly witnessed in our "colored brother" as long as he has a dollar in his pocket. But what essential difference is there between the complacency of the "Senegambian" with the price of a meal and a lodging ahead, and the blind indifference of a country and its people that go ahead despoiling timber lands, consuming coal with heedless extravagance, permitting vast quantities of gas and oil to get away, and taking no care whatever to make provision for any reinforcement of the supplies which it consumes. So, while the congress of conservation at Washington is in mind, let us not forget that the wastefulness habitually practiced by the American people is not only wicked and hopelessly stupid, but that it is likewise cheap and "tacky" and reveals not one trace of sane judgment or proper breeding.

Canada After Settlers.

The Canadian Dominion has not yet found it necessary to begin the conservation of resources, though the time may come sooner than is anticipated. Just now the principal effort appears to be to attract settlers and to open up regions which the railroad companies are desirous of having developed. The announcement comes from Vancouver that the government of British Columbia is planning to sell vast tracts of land, having decided to dispose of $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 worth this year. In the operations the government will have the active aid of one of the big railroad concerns. An American has been engaged to manage the deal, says the Troy (N. Y.) Times, and part of the project consists of laying out a model city, with paved streets, sewers, water system and other conveniences. Another feature of the plan will be the employment of a landscape gardener to arrange surroundings that will be ornate and attractive. All this is done with a view to making settlers feel at home and providing them with advantages such as are seldom found in a frontier region. The contrast with the experiences of the earlier pioneers in the United States and Canada is impressive.

Automobiles have ruined so many macadamized roads that an international congress has been called to meet in Paris on October 11 to consider plans for saving the roads. The macadam road, as everyone knows, is composed of layers of crushed stone held together by a binding material rolled into the surface. This method of paving was devised for the use of iron-tired vehicles. As the iron-bound wheels roll over the road they crush the small stones, and the dust sifts into the crevices between the larger stones and binds them more tightly together. With judicious use, such a road improves with age. The automobile, however, runs on an air-filled rubber tire. This tire, instead of crushing the small stones, sucks the dust out from between the large stones, and the wind blows it away, leaving the roadbed rough and uneven. Road experts on both sides of the ocean have been seeking for some surface dressing that will seal the road when once made so tightly that the rubber tire cannot draw out the binder by suction. Oils with asphaltic bases, coal tar preparations and calcium chlorid have been used with some success in allaying the dust and preventing the wear of the roads, but they are not wholly satisfactory either here or in Europe.

Getting right down to a final analysis, one of the most successful navigators of the day is he who can paddle a canoe with a nervous woman of 150 pounds or upward as a passenger and land the cargo safely.

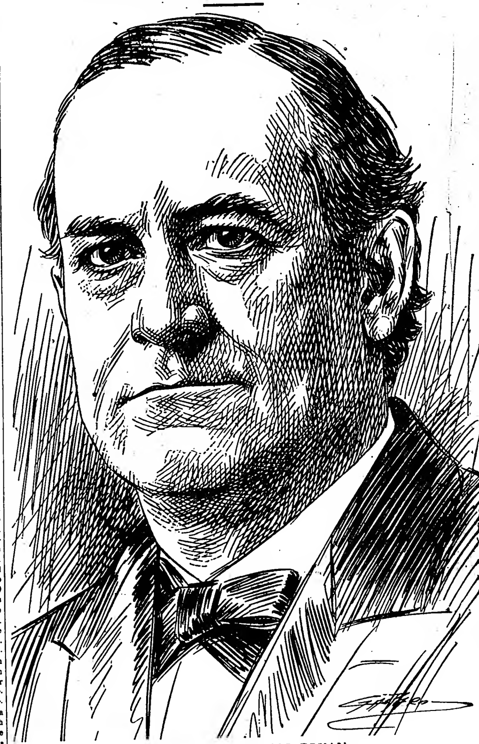
CONVENTION IS OPENED

Proceedings of the First Day in the Great National Gathering of the Democrats at Denver---City Elaborately Decorated in Their Honor



WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

Denver, July 7.—The Democratic national convention was formally called to order at noon by Thomas Taggart, chairman of the national committee, in the spacious auditorium erected by the citizens of Denver for the use of the convention.

Rt. Rev. James J. Keane, archbishop of Wyoming, one of the most eloquent and able prelates in America, made the opening prayer.

Call for Convention Read.

After the delegates and visitors had settled in their seats, Urey Woodson of Kentucky, secretary of the national committee, read the call for the convention, and a brief period of delay followed. The committee on rules then made its report, and the officers of the convention were announced. They are as follows:

Temporary Chairman—Theodore A. Bell, California.

General Secretary—Urey Woodson, Kentucky.

Assistant General Secretary—Edwin Sefton, Washington, D. C.

Sergeant-at-Arms—John I. Martin, Missouri.

Chief Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms—J. C. Fenn, Indiana.

Chief Doorkeeper—Eugene W. Sullivan, Illinois.

Parliamentarian—H. D. Crutchfield, Kentucky.

Chaplain for Opening Day—Rt. Rev. James J. Keane, archbishop of Wyoming.

Official Stenographer—M. W. Blumberg, Washington, D. C.

Temporary Chairman Theodore A. Bell, in his speech, frequently aroused his audience to enthusiasm, and the applause was especially generous and lasting where reference was made to the record of the party or the leaders whom Democrats delight to honor.

National Colors Used.

Red, white and blue were the only colors used in decorating the auditorium, and the decorations were the most elaborate ever seen in a Democratic convention. A unique feature was 52 huge stars artistically arranged on the ceiling. These stars represented the states, territories and insular possessions, the names appearing in blue letters and a white background in the center of each star. The points of the stars were red and white.

Directly over the speaker's platform, against the wall of the building near the junction with the ceiling, was a large shield, 16 feet high, carrying six flags 12 feet long draped in artistic folds. In addition to this main shield there were four other shields over the platform, each ten feet high. The six flags on these shields were eight feet long.

Just below the main shield hung a mammoth portrait of George Washington, 14 by 16 feet in dimensions. Red, white and blue bunting was draped from the sides of the shield to the bottom of the portrait of the "Father of His Country."

Directly under the last shield, on each side of the Washington portrait, was suspended a portrait, one of Thomas Jefferson and the other of Andrew Jackson. On each side of these pictures a large American flag was draped. These flags are 40 by 60 feet in dimensions. Beyond these pictures, at each end of the wall, and hanging above the gallery, was suspended a pendant, ten feet in diameter, upon which bunting was draped. Upon these pendants a tiger was painted. The back of the platform was banked with palms. Twenty stuffed American eagles, with extended wings, were suspended over the platform, each bird carrying in his bill red, white and blue silk ribbons that were draped back to the wall.

Balcony and Galleries Draped.

In the auditorium the balcony extends all the way around the huge building, but the galleries are limited to each end. The front of the balcony and the fronts of the galleries and boxes were draped with bunting, 55,000 yards being necessary to complete this part of the decorative scheme. At intervals of five feet shields, three feet high, were placed.

Thousands of yards of bunting were used in draping the corridors of the building and the walls of the balcony and galleries. Delegates were supplied with small American flags to wave when their feelings reached a pitch that compelled an extraordinary demonstration.

Although the decorations in the auditorium were elaborate, the street decorations were even more picturesque, and the illumination scheme was the most brilliant Denver ever attempted.

Fifteenth, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets, three of the main thoroughfares in the city, were revelations in color. On Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets there are eight iron ornamental electric poles to a block, four on each side of the street. On these streets the poles were draped with red, white and blue bunting. Wires were stretched across the street from these poles and from each wire two American flags were suspended. The flags hung over the street and were "weighted" to prevent them from becoming tangled and torn by the wind.

On Seventeenth street the scheme was the same, except there were only six poles to each block, two at each corner and two at each alley.

At each crossing two wires were strung diagonally across the intersection, from which red, white and blue incandescent lights hung. The business houses along the three streets were handsomely decorated with bunting and flags. Elaborate and costly electric display signs had been put in place on the buildings, and at night Fifteenth, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets were a blaze of light.

Electric display signs are one of the main features of business life in Denver. Every merchant has an electric sign, and as all of the streets that cross the three thoroughfares described are live business streets, the committee on illumination did not find it necessary to add much in the way of light to these avenues of trade. However, the business houses were handsomely decorated with bunting and flags, so the entire business section of Denver was a mass of color when the big convention opened.

The people of Denver, in addition to decorating their city and providing a beautiful and commodious auditorium for the Democratic national convention, seemed determined to convince every visitor that true western hospitality is not a thing of the past in this city. The real Denverite is hospitable because hospitality is in the atmosphere in the wonderful Rocky Mountain country.

NEAR DEATH IN LAKE MICHIGAN

OCCUPANTS OF VILLE de DIEPPE DRAGGED FOR MILES OVER SURFACE OF WATER.

Then Jump Up 7,000 Feet. Two More Competitors in the Big Balloon Race are Landed in Barbed Wire Fence.

Chicago, July 6.—Col. A. E. Mueller and George Schroeneck, the aeronauts who sailed in the French balloon Ville de Dieppe Saturday from Chicago in the endurance balloon contest came to earth near Benton Harbor, Mich., during the night after having been dragged for miles along the surface of Lake Michigan.

They saved themselves from worse fate only by throwing overboard every movable thing in the balloon basket and taking to the rigging.

They returned to Chicago yesterday morning by train. Neither were injured, but both were soaked to the skin and a sudden ascent to a height of 7,000 feet chilled both occupants of the balloon.

Schroeneck is only seventeen years old and it was his first ascent. Col. Mueller is an aeronaut of experience and that there was no loss of life was due entirely to his coolness and ability.

Of the other balloons, the King Edward, Canada's entry, landed near Port Huron, Mich.

The big Chicago of 110,000 cubic feet capacity, came to earth near Atwood, Perth county, Ontario, at 9:30 o'clock this morning according to a long distance telephone message to Chicago. The occupants, C. A. Coey and Capt. G. L. Bumbaugh, were reported well.

The United States landed a mile east of Pinkerton station, Bruce county, Ontario, at 8:30 o'clock.

The Columbia also crossed into Canada and while C. H. Leichliter and Capt. Martin Peterson managed to leave the car near Clinton, Ont., they were bruised and cut by being slammed into barb wire fences and trees and both required surgical attention. Capt. Peterson suffered a broken rib and a deep cut on his hand. Mr. Leichliter's injuries consisted of lacerations of a hand, of the face and of the instep.

The cold air current over Lake Michigan brought peril to other balloon than the Ville de Dieppe.

FIREBUG IN WAREHOUSES

Wisconsin Tobacco Grower Suffers Total Loss.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., July 3.—George Brewster's tobacco warehouses were destroyed by fire at 1 o'clock yesterday morning, and it is the belief of Brewster and the authorities that the fire was of incendiary origin. The state fire marshal has been asked to investigate. It is believed here that the fire was started by members of the Kentucky night riders, who are said to have come to Wisconsin to bring the tobacco growers not in the pool to time. Others believe it was set by a gang who have set other buildings on fire during the past few weeks. The company carrying insurance on Brewster's warehouses canceled its policy yesterday, and he had applied for insurance with another company, but the agent did not know whether it would assume the risk.

WILL NOT SELL WOOL.

Fourteen Cents Offered Keeps the Market Dull.

Pierre, S. D., July 3.—Wool buyers in this part of the state are offering about 14 cents for clips, but are not doing any great amount of buying at that figure, the growers holding out for better prices. A few sales have been reported from Belle Fourche at 16 cents, but not many deals are being made. The local growers are holding on for higher offers and expect to get them before the close of the season.

Washing Fluid Blows Up.

Bisbee, N. D., July 3.—Theodore Johnson was seriously burned about the face, head and hands this morning by an explosion of gasoline. He is employed at the Hotel Columbia as a chore boy, and in preparing a washing solution of gasoline and water over a fire in a range the gasoline exploded.

Adjudged Insane.

Menomonie, Wis., July 3.—John Welsh, late of Minneapolis, who stabbed his wife with a pair of scissors at Colfax last week, was adjudged insane and taken to Mendota last night. Mrs. Welsh is still in a critical condition.

NELSON WHIPS GANS.

Knocks the Negro Out in the Seventeenth Round.

San Francisco, July 4.—Battling Nelson to-day won the title of champion lightweight pugilist of the world from the man who defeated him at Goldfield, Nev., almost two years ago. He knocked out Joe Gans in the seventeenth round after as desperate a fight as any that had been seen here in years.

HEALTH BRINGS HAPPINESS.

Invalid Once, a Happy Woman Now.

Mrs. C. R. Shelton, Pleasant Street, Covington, Tenn., says: "Once I seemed a helpless invalid, but now I enjoy the best of health. Kidney disease brought me down terribly. Rheumatic aches and pains made every move painful. The secretions were disordered and my head ached to distraction. I was in a bad condition, but medicines failed to help. I lost ground daily until I began with Doan's Kidney Pills. They helped me at once and soon made me strong and well."

SMALL THING HE FORGOT.

May Have Accounted for His Proposal Being Turned Down.

Senator Beveridge described, at a dinner, an absent-minded farmer.

"The man was so absent-minded," he said, "that he couldn't open his mouth without making an arrant ass of himself.

"Once he courted a young woman. His suit looked promising for a time. Then, with a sorrowful visage, he ceased his courtship.

"'Yet she seemed infatuated with you, Jabez,' said I, one day when he came to me for sympathy.

"'She were, too,' Jabez agreed.

"'Well, what could have been the trouble?'

"'Dunno,' said he. He filled his pipe. 'Dunno; but when I proposed, she turned me down cold.'

"'Perhaps your proposal wasn't ardent enough?' I suggested.

"'Oh, it was fiery,' said Jabez. 'Hot as pepper. I told her she was the only woman I'd ever loved, ever looked at, ever thought of, or—'

"'But, said I, 'you forget, then, you were a widower.'

"'Jingo,' said Jabez, 'so I did.'"

Bells.

Bells are understood to have had their origin in China, but at so remote a time that no precise date can be given. Their first use was to clear the air of evil spirits and to drive off the storms. Old European records tell how the tolling of bells kept the devils from assaulting believers; hence their connection with churches. Bells may be traced in Europe back to the sixth century, but were not generally introduced into the western church much before the eighth century.

Another Stringency.

"Yes," said the first tramp, "times are certainly bad with our profession."

"In what respect?" asked the second tramp.

"There's a great stringency of ham sandwiches and cold mutton bones."—Detroit Free Press.

Proof is inexhaustible that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound carries women safely through the Change of Life.

Read the letter Mrs. E. Hanson, 304 E. Long St., Columbus, Ohio, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I was passing through the Change of Life, and suffered from nervousness, headaches, and other annoying symptoms. My doctor told me that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was good for me, and since taking it I feel so much better, and I can again do my own work. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me during this trying period."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

More Are Found.

St. Cloud—Are there still richer and greater iron deposits in Minnesota than the vast underground stretches of ore in the Mesaba and Vermillion ranges that have made hundreds of men wealthy and endowed the north star state with millions for generations yet to come? Is the so-called Cuyuna range really an extension of the Mesaba and does the ore deposit become deeper as it runs from the great workings at the northwest end to the yet undeveloped southwest?

Such is the opinion of D. H. Freeman, who has located an iron find of undoubted richness between Randall and Fort Ripley, on property owned by himself and his associates, mostly St. Cloud men.

The new find begins at Randall, a small station on the Staples cut-off of the Northern Pacific, fourteen miles from Little Falls, and extends to Fort Ripley on the east side of the Mississippi.

It is a continuation of the so-called Cuyuna range, but as Mr. Freeman asserts, is really the extension of the Mesaba, the richest iron ore range in the world.

This newly discovered underground mineral belt ranges in width from forty to sixty acres and extends for a distance of fourteen miles, with a few short breaks. The ore is found at a distance of from 80 to 100 feet from the surface.

Governor Johnson Armed.

St. Paul—It was an ugly looking six-shooter, probably made at about the time of the civil war, that Frank A. Day, private secretary to Gov. Johnson, received in an express package from Arizona. It is considerably the worse for wear and disuse, but that does not reduce its value, which is based on the fact or belief that it once belonged to the notorious Frank James, one of the gang of bandits who raided the Northfield bank back in the seventies.

The "cannon" was received from Cleve Van Dyke, formerly executive clerk in the governor's office, and is a gift to Gov. Johnson. In a letter from Warren, Ariz., Mr. Van Dyke stated that while in New Mexico recently he was given the revolver by Dr. Howard Crutcher, who had received it from Peter Bedell of Mexico, Mo., a member of the Jesse James gang, which made the famous raid in Northfield. He states that the pistol was carried in that raid by Frank James.

Swept Thru Culvert.

St. Paul—Swept thru a culvert by a rush of water, Henry Lynch, 12 years old, has had a remarkable escape from drowning. The boy lives at 167 Eaton street. His mishap was witnessed by several employees of the department of public works, who reported the incident. The boy was swept thru an 18-inch culvert running under State street, between Plato and Florida streets. The culvert is a pipe about 100 feet long, yet such was the rush of water that the boy was borne thru without being harmed.

The water bore him head first to the tunnel so quickly that, as he afterwards said, "he did not know what struck him." A moment later the struggling form shot from the other end of the pipe and rolled over in the water and sand.

The boy was quickly picked up and sent to his home near by, unharmed.

Ralphs Nearly Drowned.

Crookston—While returning with her husband, Mrs. George A. Ralph of Crookston, and daughter Dorothy, met with a peculiar accident between the Roseau river and Lancaster, Minn. Mrs. Ralph had been visiting at Badger, in Roseau county, with friends, and was lured by the fair weather to brave the difficulties of the Roseau river, and made the trip down with Mr. Ralph. Between Caribou and Lancaster they were thrown into a large pool of water by the breaking of the rear seat in which they were sitting, and had a narrow escape from drowning. Mrs. Ralph came into Crookston with her daughter.

NEWS NOTES.

St. Paul—A street car missed a switch at Seventh and Wabasha and threw a baby into the air, but luckily the baby fell on a pillow.

Minneapolis—Firebugs made five attempts in one night to start disastrous fires in the heart of the business district. The aggregate loss will reach about $3,000. The fire marshal has started an investigation and several arrests may follow.

Crookston—Five thousand people attended the first day of the celebration at McIntosh, Minn., east of here, of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the settlement of the Thirteen Towns. Politicians from all parts of the state were at the celebration.

South St. Paul—The flood in the Mississippi will reach seventeen feet above low water mark; a portion of the stock yards is inundated, and great damage on the flats along the river is anticipated.

Faribault—Authorities of Shattuck military academy were notified by the war department that the institution has again been selected as an honor school.

Minneapolis—James Flood started a fire in his cell in the Hennepin county jail and attacked the jailer when he went to extinguish it.

Cambridge—Good Templars from Isanti and the neighboring counties met here.

Greenbush—Homesteaders' cabins near here are reported swept away by the wind.

Stillwater—German Lutherans recommend new superannuate fund plan to joint synod.

Mankato—Girl and young man drown in futile attempt to save another girl's life near here.

St. Paul—Flat dwellers, driven out of their homes by high water, are compelled to live in the open.

St. Paul—Thirty-two more dogs are killed by the police in crusade against unmuzzled and unlicensed canines.

Duluth—Uncle Sam puts it up to Minnesota to drain the swamp areas in the northern part of the state.

Alexandria—Crop conditions were never better for this time of the season and generally are in a flourishing condition.

St. Paul—Fred Johnson, 35 Atwater street, is thrown from motor cycle while speeding at thirty miles an hour and sustains probably fatal injuries.

St. Paul—United States circuit court issues decree temporarily suspending order of interstate commerce commission reducing charge for the transfer of live stock in Chicago.

Mankato—The German Evangelical Lutheran synod of Minnesota, in annual session here, decided to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the synod two years hence.

Rochester—About a dozen representatives of the democratic party in the various counties of the First district assembled in Rochester to lay plans to overthrow James A. Tawney, the present congressman from this district.

Crookston—Kalih Cury, son of Beddy Cury, an Assyrian notion dealer at 70-71 West street, New York city, was robbed here by two men who afterward boarded one of the cars belonging to a circus company and both escaped.

Minneapolis — Former Governor John Lind of Minneapolis may be the next Democratic nominee for governor. A well defined movement is on foot to bring this about, and it is receiving the sanction of the leaders in the party.

Kasota—The coroner's jury which met here over the body of Russel St. John, seven years old, who was supposed to have been accidentally shot by Robert Jardine, aged ten, found the Jardine boy guilty of willful murder and committed him to the custody of Sheriff Teaster.

Winona—Gerald Manley, 17 years old, a son of Frank Manley, a conductor on the North-Western road, was killed almost instantly by taking hold of a live wire in the basement of William Krntz's candy store, where he was at work. A small boy who was assisting him was the only person who saw the accident.

Mankato—The body of Max Suess, who was drowned while trying to save the lives of two women who were bathing in Mud lake, was found and the funeral was held. From indications the young man was caught and held by a submerged barbed wire fence and made a terrible struggle under water to free himself.

Avoca—A severe wind and hail storm passed over Avoca destroying small grain and garden truck. Nearly all windows facing the storm were broken. St. Bernard's hall alone had 125 panes broken, while Woodman hall and other places had from twenty-five to fifty broken. The storm took in a strip about a mile wide.

St. Paul—Repairs are being made to three of the exterior marble columns on the second floor of the new capitol on the Park avenue side. The bases of these columns have been cracked by the action of the frost on the packing in holes in the bottom of the columns, made for handling them when fluting was being made on a lathe.

St. Paul—The headless body of a man, supposed to be Charles Adams, from Albany, N. Y., was found by Patrolman T. B. Ryan on the tracks under the railroad viaduct at Fourteenth avenue and Fourth street southeast, Minneapolis. The head was lying two rods away from the rest of the body. The rest of the body was not mutilated.

Minneapolis—All records of enrollment for ten years have been passed in the 1908 summer school at the University of Minnesota. Upon opening of the second week 1,100 students were registered, with a prospect of another 100 before the close of the week. The largest corps of instructors is reported also. They come from all parts of the state, from three or four of the smaller colleges, and from the ranks of city superintendents.

Moorhead—Edgar Swenson, son of Christ Swenson, was drowned in the Red River. He was fishing along the banks with a boy companion and in some manner lost his balance and fell into the swift current.

Washington—Salathiel B. Bedford was appointed postmaster at Rushmore, Nobles county, vice C. Mamstreet, resigned; Oscar Sanquest at Corbin, St. Louis county.

St. Cloud—First year's operation of truancy law shows that it has been effective in making more children attend school.

J. F. JACOBSON IS NOMINATED

FOR GOVERNOR OF MINNESOTA BY THE REPUBLICANS IN CONVENTION.

The Nomination Was By Acclamation, Young and Snider Withdrawing Leaving the Field Entirely to the Nominee.

Republican Nominees.

Governor—J. F. Jacobson, Madison.

Lieutenant Governor—A. O. Eberhart, Mankato, Renomination.

Secretary of State—Julius A. Schmahl, Redwood Falls, Renomination.

Treasurer—C. C. Dinehart, Slayton.

Attorney General—George T. Simpson, Winona.

Railroad Commissioners—Ira B. Mills, Moorhead (renomination); Charles E. Elmquist, Rush City.

St. Paul, July 2.—Jacob F. Jacobson of Lac qui Parle county received the tribute of a unanimous nomination for governor at the hands of the republican state convention in the Auditorium in St. Paul yesterday.

Rival candidates withdrew early in the day, realizing that it was impossible to stem the Jacobson tide. After Frank M. Eddy had placed Mr. Jacobson's name before the convention, it was seconded by Attorney General E. T. Young and by Captain S. P. Snider.

JACOB F. JACOBSON.

Joel P. Heatwole, the other candidate, was not in the hall and did not appear even after he had been appointed with the other two defeated candidates on a committee to escort Mr. Jacobson to the hall.

The convention was a record-breaker in its early stages for speed and for enthusiasm. There were roars of applause for Jacobson at every stage and also for his magnanimous rivals. Every nomination was by acclamation until the end of the ticket was reached. A ballot was then necessary on railroad commission, as the friends of J. H. Grass put up a stubborn fight against the slate. Charles E. Elmquist and Ira B. Mills were nominated, receiving 936 and 731 votes respectively, to 478 for Grass and 132 for A. C. Ashy.

At 11:20 Dr. A. B. Cole, chairman of the state central committee, called the convention to order. Rev. Mr. Hale of St. Paul opened the proceedings with prayer, calling for a continuance of the policies of President Roosevelt and the nomination of honest, sincere men. His prayer was so eloquent and patriotic that some of the delegates applauded heartily when the prayer was finished.

Mr. Cole called for nominations for temporary chairman. J. E. Diamond of Minneapolis presented the name of Judge John H. Steele. Robert C. Dunn of Princeton seconding the nomination on behalf of the friends of J. F. Jacobson, and in the interests of harmony. Dar Reese and other delegates also seconded the nomination. The vote for Steele was unanimous.

W. E. Lee then moved the appointment of a committee of fifteen on resolutions, one from each congressional district and six at large. Chairman Steele had hard work to read the names of this committee, which furnished some amusement. He appointed Frank M. Wilson of Red Wing, Tams Bixby, St. Paul; L. O. Cooke, Kellogg; L. S. Swenson, Minneapolis; E. Colester, Waseca; J. W. Andrews, Mankato; W. E. Lee, Mankato; George J. Bradley, Norwood; George W. Somerville, New Ulm; B. N. Anderson, Albert Lea; P. E. Dowling, Eveleth; H. L. D'Armes, Hector; D. P. O'Neil, Red Lake; Albert Berg, Warroad; R. B. Forest, Murray county.

A. J. Rockne of Zumbrota was selected for secretary and the following as assistant secretaries: C. S. Edwards, Albert Lea; David H. Lawrence, Two Harbors; and John A. Dalzell, Morton. Lawrence was a candidate for secretary and there was a little mixup that was settled by R. B. Brower.

Frank M. Eddy was greeted with an outburst of cheers as he stepped to the front of the stage to nominate Jacobson.

Tumultuous applause swelled from the big audience when Attorney General E. T. Young called for the floor and the scene resembled a national convention, for many of the delegates in their enthusiasm arose to their feet and waving their hats and handkerchiefs shouted to the top of their voices.

Captain S. P. Snider seconded the nomination of John F. Jacobson in a speech which he read.

From all parts of the convention hall there were calls for Mr. Heatwole, in the expectation that he would second the nomination of Mr. Jacobson. But there was no response.

Mr. Foss of the Grant county delegation and a member of the Isanti delegation also spoke briefly, seconding the nomination of Jacobson. J. G. Lennon of Hennepin then moved that the secretary be instructed to cast the unanimous vote of the convention for Jacob F. Jacobson of Lac qui Parle.

Ripley B. Brower of St. Cloud then moved that the nomination of J. F. Jacobson be made by acclamation and a rising of delegates to their feet. The entire convention arose and made the nomination unanimous.

M. J. Dowling of Olivia then moved that a committee of three be appointed to wait upon Mr. Jacobson and escort him to the hall. A. E. Rice of Willmar protested that Mr. Jacobson was not nominated yet, since all the convention had done was to pass a motion to nominate him by acclamation. He was overruled and Chairman Steele then appointed as the notification committee, Mr. Jacobson's three rivals, E. T. Young, S. P. Snider and Joel P. Heatwole. The last name was greeted with an especial round of cheers, since he had failed to make an appearance in the seconding speeches.

On motion of Dar F. Reese, the convention then went ahead to nominate the rest of the ticket. Lieutenant Governor O. A. Eberhart was placed in nomination by Dr. J. W. Andrews of Mankato, who said he had a short speech prepared, but was advised by the delegates to "cut it out," and did so. Eberhart was seconded by George H. Sullivan of Stillwater and John E. Diamond of Minneapolis, and on motion of Mr. Wilson of Mankato the nomination was made by acclamation.

O. T. Howard of Redwood Falls nominated Julius A. Schmahl for another term as secretary of state, and J. F. Calhoun seconded the nomination for Hennepin. J. F. Calhoun moved that the nomination be made by acclamation.

C. C. Dinehart of Slayton was renominated for state treasurer on motion of Mr. Todd of Slayton.

J. J. McCaughey of Dodge county nominated George T. Simpson of Winona for attorney general.

W. E. Lee, chairman of the committee on resolutions, presented a report containing fourteen planks. These, in brief, were as follows:

First.—An expression of deep admiration for the administration of President Roosevelt and regret for the loss of his services as president.

Second.—An expression of pleasure over the nomination of William H. Taft, as a worthy successor to President Roosevelt.

Third.—Indorsement of James S. Sherman for the vice presidency.

Fourth.—Indorsement of the entire national platform.

Sixth.—A demand for the revision of the tariff.

Seventh.—Indorsement of the work on the Panama canal.

Ninth.—Demand for additional railway regulation.

Tenth.—Approval of the tax amendment to the constitution proposed by the legislature.

Eleventh.—Equal rights plank, with a resolution presented by the American Federation of Labor favoring the enactment of the employers' liability act.

Twelfth.—A temperance plank, favoring the enactment of such legislation as would insure the strict enforcement of the local option and high license laws of the statute books.

Thirteenth.—Commendation of the state immigration bureau.

Fourteenth.—Favoring good roads.

The Temperance Plank.

The temperance plank is as follows: "The republican party has always stood for a firm and efficient regulation and control of the liquor traffic in this state, as is evidenced by the local option and high license laws in favor of which it declared in 1886 and subsequently enacted, and by many other laws thereafter written in our statutes, and we now favor and recommend such legislation as will strengthen these laws and insure strict enforcement.

Indians Have $1,000,000.

Ashland, Wis., July 2.—For the first time in the history of the Chippewa Indians of Northern Wisconsin they now have an even million dollars on deposit in the banks of Ashland, Hudson, Duluth and Bayfield. In 1905, only three years ago, the Bad River Indians had $328,000, the Courte Orielle in Sawyer county $14,000, the Red Cliff Indians $96,000 and Lac Flembean in Vilas county $75,000, the total being $513,000, which now in less than three years has increased to an even million dollars.

Parker Funeral Held.

Deadwood, S. D., July 1.—Funeral services over the late Congressman William H. Parker were largely attended by many of the friends of the deceased statesman. Col. Parker's remains laid in state all day yesterday in the city hall. Rev. Marshall F. Montgomery, rector of St. John's Episcopal church here, read the burial service. The pallbearers were: Thomas E. Harvey, Judge A. J. Plowman, Col. W. J. Thornby, John Hunter, State's Attorney R. P. Stewart and N. E. Franklin.

SPORTING FACTS AND FANCIES

In a recent game in Boston Silk O'Loughlin was stung four times. One ball smote him on the mask, another caught him in the leg, he bounced another off his toe and stopped one with his shoulder. "I wouldn't have been hit in the leg," said Silk, "if Lou Criger's legs had been men's size. They tell me Lou wears shin guards on the inside of his stockings and then his legs are so slight that you have to look a couple of times to see if he has two. With a husky catcher the possibility of being hit is much less. Tom Connolly has a steel cap which he wears over his toes. I am struck on the foot so hard that I usually lose a couple of toe nails every season. The worst blow I ever received was in Cleveland the morning of the Fourth of July last year. I was struck on the knee cap by a swift foul ball and that leg has bothered me ever since. Jack Sheridan is about the luckiest man behind the bat. He wears no protector and a little dinky mask, but he manages to escape the fouls. Jack has been looking at balls and strikes for so many years that he has a knack of protecting himself by moving with the catcher."

Before Pat Donovan assumed management of the Brooklyn team he was one of the greatest outfielders the game has ever known. He was never found wanting with the willow and his batting average rarely sagged below the .300 mark. In all respects he was the ideal baseball player.

Pat Donovan.

"Umpiring in the major leagues is hard or easy, according to the conditions that arise," remarked Umpire "Billy" Evans. "Usually—you might always say it is the rule—that it is in the least important games—assuming that any games are unimportant—that the most trouble arises, while in the games upon which a championship depends sometimes seem to umpire themselves. Ask any umpire who has been in the business for years, and he will tell you that his troubles come when least expected, and that he has his easiest days when he might naturally expect one continual row. Silk O'Loughlin and I were assigned to the all-important series between the Sox and Tigers in Chicago last fall. The pennant virtually hung on the result and we decided in advance to take extraordinary precautions against any trouble. There were four games in the series, and honestly an old maid could have umpired them without hearing a word that would have disturbed her notion of the proprieties. It's when two tail-end teams perform before 397 people at the far end of a season that the umpire wishes he had gone into business or stuck to the old farm. The game that the umpires like are the ones in which there are about 49 easy pop flies and in which every base runner is thrown out by 30 feet or more."

"A feature of the season in both big leagues is the remarkably large number of pitchers that have been used," says the New York Sun. "In half of the American league games up to the first of June a change of twirlers was necessary. The proportion of games in the National league for the same length of time in which a change of pitchers has been made is still greater, being fully a third more than contests in which no change in the box was made. There have been all the way from three to seven pitchers to a game. The man who has to keep record officially of pitchers' wins and losses has a mammoth and intricate task on his hands."

Failing to prove his charges that games had been "thrown" by the Memphis Baseball club, resulting in loss of the pennant of 1907 to Atlanta, Otis H. Stockdale has been suspended indefinitely by the Southern league board of directors, who probed the scandal. Stockdale appeared in person and denied that had made the charges as published in an Atlanta newspaper, but affidavits supporting Sporting Editor Taylor were introduced from Percy Whiting, a newspaper man, and R. G. Wilby, a traveling salesman.

Truth and Quality

appeal to the Well-Informed in every walk of life and are essential to permanent success and creditable standing. Accordingly, it is not claimed that Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is the only remedy of known value, but one of many reasons why it is the best of personal and family laxatives is the fact that it cleanses, sweetens and relieves the internal organs on which it acts without any debilitating after effects and without having to increase the quantity from time to time.

It acts pleasantly and naturally and truly as a laxative, and its component parts are known to and approved by physicians, as it is free from all objectionable substances. To get its beneficial effects always purchase the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists.

JUMPING AT A CONCLUSION.

Marriage Did Not Follow the Nineteen Year's Courtship.

In the amiable way of villagers, they were discussing the matrimonial affairs of a couple who, though recently wed, had begun to find the yoke of Hymen a burden.

"'Tis all along o' these hasty marriages," opined one caustic old gentleman, who had been much to the fore in the discussion. "They did not understand each other; they'd nobbut knowed each other for a matter o' seven year."

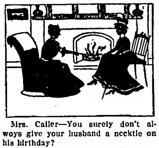
"Well, that seems long enough," said an interested lady listener.

"Long eno'! Bah, ye're wrong! When a body's coortin' he canna be too careful. Why, my coortship lasted a matter o' 19 year!"

"You certainly were careful," agreed the lady listener. 'And did you find your plan successful when you married?"

"Ye jump to conclusions!" said the old man, impatiently. "I understood her then, so I didna' marry her!"—Tit-Bits.

SHE BAMBOOZLES HIM.



Mrs. Caller—You surely don't always give your husband a necktie on his birthday?

Mrs. Athome—Yes, I do, and the poor dear doesn't even know it's the same one each time!

Case of Shocking Neglect.

Friend—What has become of Celestine, your maid?

Mrs. Snoblotts—I had to discharge her. She had no consideration for Fido.

Friend—Why, I always thought she took the most tender care of the pet.

Mrs. Snoblotts—So did I till I found she was using her own comb on him without first sterilizing it.

WIFE WON

Husband Finally Convinced.

Some men are wise enough to try new foods and beverages and then generous enough to give others the benefit of their experience.

A very "conservative" Ill. man, however, let his good wife find out for herself what a blessing Postum is to those who are distressed in many ways, by drinking coffee. The wife writes:

"No slave in chains, it seemed to me, was more helpless than I, a coffee captive. Yet there were innumerable warnings—waking from a troubled sleep with a feeling of suffocation, at times dizzy and out of breath, attacks of palpitation of the heart that frightened me.

"Common sense, reason, and my better judgment told me that coffee drinking was the trouble. At last my nervous system was so disarranged that my physician ordered 'no more coffee.'

"He knew he was right and he knew I knew it, too. I capitulated. Prior to this our family had tried Postum, but disliked it, because, as we learned later, it was not made right.

"Determined this time to give Postum a fair trial, I prepared it according to directions on the pkg.—that is, boiled it 15 minutes after boiling commenced, obtaining a dark brown liquid with a rich snappy flavor similar to coffee. When cream and sugar were added, it was not only good but delicious.

"Noting its beneficial effects in me the rest of the family adopted it—all except my husband, who would not admit that coffee hurt him. Several weeks elapsed during which I drank Postum two or three times a day, when, to my surprise, my husband said: 'I have decided to drink Postum. Your improvement is so apparent—you have such fine color—that I propose to give credit where credit is due.' And now we are coffee-slaves no longer."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

The Democratic party have not yet chosen the lamb to sacrifice on the alter of Jacobsons popularity

John Lind is to smart a lawyer to be the client, and allow the Democratic party to plead his claims to the governorship of Minnesota, this year.

Congressman Halvor Steenerson has filed for re nomination at the republican primaries He will have no opposition for the nomination and should have none for the election.

The newspapers in Polk county are pretty well decorated with the pictures of candidates for county office, while the Red Lake county candidates are still sleeping, getting married, and otherwise enjoying themselves.

The tales we used to read about "twenty years ago the land which you now occupy was a wildernes," are out of date, when compared with the up to date creameries and schools of the Eleven townships, of which it can be truly said; Four years ago the land which they now occupy was a wilderness, "where the wild fox dug his hole unseared by the tread of the white man."

We would like to know which city Taft is for for county seat, Red Lake Falls, or Thief River Falls? All Red Lake county politicts goes by which place a man is for, for county seat. If he should happen to be in favor of Red Lake Falls we might be accused of favoring them if we voted for him, and if he should be for Thief River Falls we might be accused of favoring them, if we voted for him. We suppose he is to busy to answer, even if we should write him, so we will give him a vote as the republican candidate for president of the United States, and run the risk of which place he favors for county seat.

For rapid dovelopement this part of Red Lake county can successfuly challange any other part of Minnesota, or Dakota. A stranger visiting this locality is surprised at the appearence of the country, when told that it was only opened for settlement four short years ago. A large portion of this rapid developement is owing to the kindness of the government in extending the time of payment on these lands. When the first years extension of time was granted, the people all used the money that they expected to make their payments with to buy stock and improve their farms. When the government did not insist on them making payment when the years extension was out, they bought more stock and made more improvements, by building creameries, so to day there are three morden Co operative creameries in successful operation on the Eleven townships, and the waveing fields of grain can be seen on every hand. The extension of time of making payment on these lands is due to the untiring efforts of our able representative in congress Hon H. Steenerson, who has been ever diligent in looking after the interests of the new settlers on this reservation.

LEGAL NOTICE.

To the Legal Voters of the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That a petition is on file in my office, signed by legal voters of said County to the number of Two Thousand Three Hundred Forty-Two, praying that the County seat of said County of Red Lake be changed to the City of Thief River Falls in said County, and that a special meeting of the County Board will be held at the Court House in the City of Red Lake Falls, Red Lake County, Minnesota, on the 25th, day of July A.D. 1908, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon to consider said petition at which time and place any legal voter of said County may appear in person, or by counsel and be heard.--Dated July 7th, 1908.

John B. O'Brien, County Auditor,
(Seal) Red Lake County Minnesota.

Soft and Light.

A lady famed for her skill in cooking was entertaining a number of her friends at tea. Everything on the table was much admired, but the excellence of the sponge cake was especially the subject of remark.

"Oh," exclaimed one of the guests, "It is so beautifully soft and light! Do tell me where you got the recipe!"

"I am very glad," replied the hostess, "that you find it so soft and light. I made it out of my own head."—Illustrated Bits.

How It Affected Him.

Mrs. Myles—When are you coming to call on us?

Mrs Styles—Oh, I really don't know!

"But you said you'd come soon and bring your husband?"

"I know I did, and I asked him last night to come over, and he said he'd like to dream over it, and, do you know, dear, he had an awful nightmare last night!"—Yonkers Statesman.

Great Writers Not Correct Writers.

There is not a single great author in our literature in whose works numerous errors have not been pointed out or thought to be pointed out. They are charged with violating rules involving the purity if not the permanence of the language. A somewhat depressing inference follows from the situation thus revealed. The ability to write English correctly does not belong to the great masters of our speech. It is limited to the obscure men who have devoted themselves to the task of showing how far these vaunted writers have fallen short of the ideas of linguistic propriety entertained by their unrecognized betters. As a result of these critical crusades there is no escape from the dismal conclusion that the correct use of the language is not to be found in the authors whom every one reads with pleasure, but is an accomplishment reserved exclusively for those whom nobody can succeed in reading at all.—Professor Thomas R. Lounsbury in Harper's Magazine.

Heartless.

"Sleeping, I dreamed a dream,"
He said, "you cannot guess.
Things are not always what them seem.
I dreamed that you said 'Yes.'"

"Did you, indeed?" she said
And gazed with thoughtful air
At him while he turned white and red.
"Tell me—what man was there?"
—New York World.

Treasuring.

Madge—How do you know you can keep a secret?

Marjorie—I know something about Dolly, and I'm keeping it from her until I get angry with her.—Puck.

Unpardonable.

He held her in his arms awhile,
She struggled to be free.
At last he let her go and said,
"I pray you pardon me."

He had not kissed her, had not made
Her struggle hard—she sighed!
"Ah, no, I cannot pardon you!"
She bitterly replied.

Reassuring.

Patient (to dentist)—I say, this gas is absolutely safe, isn't it?

Dentist—Don't worry, sir. In these times I couldn't afford to lose a customer.—New York Life.

Invariable.

To travel is a healthy life,
As all of us admit,
And yet it has, like everything,
Exceptions governing it.
For instance, take the traveling man,
Who never takes a trip,
No matter what the season be,
Unless he has the grip.

All Sound.

"Has the young man any avuncular relatives?"

"No, sir; he's got only two uncles and they're as sound as a dollar."—Baltimore American.

In Praise of Cockneys.

Cockneys are the best natured people under the sun. It is notorious that a big London crowd is of all crowds in the world the most harmless and the easiest to manage. But see them also in their ordinary collections, outside the gallery door of a popular theater or crowding in the carriages of an excursion train—what fun and kindness and wholesome give and take! A deliberately rude or offensive cockney is hardly to be met.—G. S. Street in Pall Mall Gazette.

The Mortality List.

Manager (of great exposition)—What alarms me is our mortality list. Assistant—Mortality list? Why, it's next to nothing at all! "I know better than that. More than one-third of the people that come through the turnstiles are deadheads."

A Financial Snob.

"You don't mean to say that you loaned Stickles your umbrella?"

"Yes. And it was economy to do it. It saves me the [illegible]

Euphemisms For "Mad."

In order to avoid the blunt word "mad" many euphemisms are resorted to in the English language. While "lunacy" refers to the supposed influence of the moon, "insane" simply means unhealthy; "imbecile" signifies only weak, and "crazy," meaning decrepit, almost corresponds to the slang "cracked." "A tile off," "not all there," "a bee in his bonnet," are only a few of the efforts slang has made to carry off the sad fact with an uneasy joke. "Lunatic asylum," for the old "madhouse," represents not only a great improvement in the institution, but also in the term used to designate it.

A Tiny Well Digger.

The mole is one of the thirstiest of animals. It never burrows at any great distance from water, and at times of drought when the supply of the needful element is diminished or cut off the "little gentleman in the velvet coat" counteracts the scarcity by digging wells until it comes to a depth at which water may be obtained.

Wolves of the Sea.

Of all the inhabitants of the ocean few are more destructive than the sea wolf, a kind of dolphin which attains when full grown a length of fourteen feet and a weight of 3,000 pounds.

A swift swimmer, it is quick in its movements, cunning as a fox and has an insatiable appetite. It feeds on the young of seal, whale and walrus and also on the tongue of the adult whale.

When a mother walrus perceives a sea wolf, she endeavors to throw her cub on to an iceberg if one is near. Failing this, she gets it on top of her head and swims with it above water. But this is vain. Diving far below, the fish of prey comes up with tremendous force, striking the frantic mother a terrific blow and jolting the cub off her head into the water. Here it falls an easy victim to the assailant and is soon devoured.

In its work of destruction the sea wolf is frequently aided by the thrasher, a fish which can deliver a terrible blow with its tail.

Got Something For Nothing.

Mark Twain told how he got something for nothing one day in the early sixties when he needed the money. He walked into a hotel and was petting a strange dog. General Nelson A. Miles, who chanced to be present, offered him $10 for the canine.

"To be frank," said the humorist to General Miles, "I haven't really got any right to sell you this animal, but if you'll give me $3 you may take the pup away when I'm not looking, and I'll not tell who took it."

The bargain was closed, and General Miles took the dog to his room. A moment later the dog's owner inquired for his pet, and Mark Twain offered to find the animal for $3. The humorist then went to General Miles' room and explained all, had the dog returned to him, gave the army officer back his money and returned the canine to its original owner. [illegible]

It's Results That Count

In cooking it's the results that count. So when a housewife starts to make Bread or Rolls or Pies, naturally she wants her cooking to have that rich crisp, pleasing odor. But it must also have that whiteness, lightness and wholesomeness which is so essential to good cooking.

Much of this depends upon the flour—and thousands depend upon,

Tom Sullivan came over from Crystal N.D. last week to spend the Fourth with friends and relatives and look after his farming interests here. He expressed himself as being agreeably surprised at the rapid improvement of the country.

Ole Howard had a seatious runaway on Saturday morning last, which however might have been worse. He was mowing hay with a young spirited team, when a bird flew up out of the grass and so frighiened them that they became unmanageable and ran away, throwing Mr. Howard from the seat and completly wrecking the mower. Fortunately both Mr. Howard and the horses escaped injury, but the mower was only fit for scrap iron.

C. W. Johnson arrived from Meda Illinois last Sunday, and will look after his farming interests in Deer Park.

NOTICE. The farmers boat will go down to Thief River Falls on Sunday morning, instead of Monday morning the next trip. This change of time will only be made for this one trip.

When Labor Did Not Tell.

A home missionary who visited Sing Sing prison took occasion to have a heart to heart talk with one of the convicts.

"Don't you know, my friend," said he, "that crime never brings success? It is only achieved by hard labor."

"I did six months of it at a stretch once, and I didn't come out no richer than I went in."

How to Get Poor Quick.

Do not try to save your loose change. It is too small an amount to put in the savings bank. It would not amount to much anyway, and there is great comfort in spending it. Just wait until you get sufficient worth while before you deposit it.

Do not try to economize. It is an infernal nuisance to always try to save a few cents here and there. Besides, you will get the reputation of being mean and stingy. You want everybody to think you are generous.

Just look out for today. Have a good time as you go along. Just use your money yourself. Don't deprive yourself for the sake of laying up something for other people to fight over. Besides, you are sure of today. You might not be alive tomorrow.—Success Magazine.

Helping the Postoffice.

In a history of the great advance in postal methods accomplished by Sir Rowland Hill is given this anecdote: To the postoffice of at that time tiny Ambleside came one day a well to do man to buy a stamp to put on the letter he was about to post. "Is this new reform going to last?" he asked the postmaster. "Certainly," was the reply. "It is quite established." "Oh, well, then," said the man, resolved to give the thing generous support, "give me three stamps!"

FEAR IN BATTLE.

Frederick the Great Ran Away, and Grant Was Afraid.

Some of the greatest soldiers whose names adorn history's pages entered their first battles with a feeling of fear in their hearts.

Frederick the Great simply lost his head at the battle of Molwitz. Had he not been a king it is safe to say that he would have been shot at the next sunrise. In the heat of the carnage he got an idea that the army under his command was being overwhelmed, so he put the spurs to his horse and dashed headlong among his soldiers. He rode many miles before he stopped in his wild flight. Late at night he was discovered hiding in an old mill, awaiting, as he thought, capture by the enemy. Then he discovered that the army he deserted had won the battle.

As Frederick was a prince, everybody tried to forget the incident just as quickly as possible. And after that when the king went to war he was just as brave as any other soldier.

General Grant in his memoirs tells us that, despite the fact that he was not new to the ways of war, he had a strange fear in his heart when as commander of the Union forces he found himself on the eve of his first battle of the civil war. He adds, however, that he came to find that "the other fellow" had a similar feeling.

In American history there is no more reckless warrior than the dashing Light Horse Harry Lee. It seems strange, therefore, to find that at the outset of the Continental struggle Washington had to reprove him for his "prudence" in battle. Lee, though, up and told Washington that he was just as brave as the general in chief, and he made good his word.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

What His Music Bill Meant.

An architect who had planned and superintended the building of a west side residence had turned over the completed house to its owner. The architect had been in nowise hampered in the expenditure of money, yet his customer, being a good business man gave his personal attention to the details of the cost.

"What does this mean?" he asked on a final inspection of the bills. "Three hundred dollars in a quartet of trained musicians. How can anybody have given a concert already in my house when no one is living there?"

"They were testing the acoustics of the rooms," the architect explained. "Every room in your house has been submitted to that test. There will be plenty of music there later on, and I certainly wouldn't want to finish the house without being sure that the sounding properties were satisfactory. In these days every private house or hotel that amounts to anything is put through the acoustic test before it leaves the architect's hands."—New York Sun.

Blind Man's Dreams.

One of the most intelligent inmates of a blind asylum, who came into the world blind, says that he never dreams of the things he has read about and never dreams of any thing or person that he has not in some way come in personal contact with. He dreams of music, of the voices of persons he knows, of such incidents as might happen at the home or in some place in which he has actually been, but never of incidents in other places or in other lands. Even although he has read descriptions of localities, of natural beauties, of the appearance of a street or a city, no idea of what they look like comes to him in the fancies of his sleep. There is a class of blind people who become blind when quite young. Such blind people never dream of any scene or object except those which have remained in the memory from what they actually saw before they became blind.—Pearson's Weekly

Fish in Inclosed Waters.

Most people not without education and a general knowledge of natural history are mystified by the presence of fish in inclosed waters. For many years there was open mouthed wonder over the perch, bream and crayfish found in the newly cut dams near the Macquarie river, in New South Wales In some cases the water had scarcely settled after the rain had filled the dam than the fish were observed, and the Australian farmers started a theory of spontaneous production. This obtained and gained wide credence until a Sydney professor chanced to pick up a wild duck and found its breast feathers and webbed feet well dotted with fertile and almost hatched fish ova, on which the "spontaneous production" theory was promptly withdrawn.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Old Time Mountebanks.

Coryat, describing the mountebanks he saw at Venice in the seventeenth century, who were adepts in the art of advertising, speaks of the "oration to the audience of half an hour long, wherein he doth most hyperbolically extol the virtues of his drugs and confections, though many of them are very counterfeit and false." And the author of a "Tour Through England" (1723) writes of a mountebank he saw in Winchester: "He cures all diseases and sells his packets for sixpence apiece. * * * It is a prodigy how so wise a people as the English are gulled by such pickpockets."

Doglike.

As usual, he complained that the biscuits were heavy, the coffee weak, the bacon burned, and so forth.

His wife in the end looked up calmly from her letters.

"Don't growl so over your breakfast," she said, smiling. "Nobody is going to take it away from you."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Almost an Insult.

"That suit you have on," said the chap who always talks whether he has anything to say or not, "is a dead ringer for one my brother has."

"Huh!" growled the fussy man. "What do you take me for—a clothes ringer?"—Houston Post.

TALES OF LAKE AND LONGSHORE

BEING the CHRONICLES of SOME FRESH-WATER SALTS

BY GEORGE TICKELL

A MARTINET OF THE LAKES

"As to this getting married and settling down," said Capt. Boggs, "I've figured it out that I can't lose anything. There's a bit of property to be considered, too, and then I ain't as young as I used to be, Bob."

"You're not," agreed the mate of the Uncas, heartily. "Nor as lively on your feet, you ain't. You've fell into fat something fierce, and wot hair there's left on your head ain't worth mentioning."

"Never mind about my hair," returned the captain, aggressively. "'Tain't hair but brains wot counts. And yours is mostly slush, fas as I can see. A man had to know somethin' to hold his job when I was a mate."

"I wouldn't have thought so," retorted Mr. Brennan. "Supposin' you cut out the history of your life and get down to business."

"Well, it's this way," said the captain. "You stand by to give me a hand, and I'll do the right thing when I get the money."

"Yes—when you do," remarked the mate. "But when 'ill that be?"

"Soon as the marriage is over," said Boggs confidentially. "The mother's a widow and old Bardell left her well fixed. Maggie's an only child, and has a nice fortune comin' when she gets hitched."

"How old is she?" inquired the mate.

"Past 20," returned the captain.

His mate indulged in a sinister leer.

"Why, you might be her father," he commented, cheerfully.

The captain's red face took on a purple tinge.

"That'll be enough of your sass," he growled. "This is wot comes of my condescendin' to let you in on my private affairs."

"I didn't ask you to," retorted the mate. "'Tain't my fault if the truth hurts so that you can't bear hearin' it. If the girl's easy enough to be taken in by a bloated, hard-headed, 50-year-old hazer like you, I'm willin' to help the trouble along. Wot d'ye want me to do?"

Capt. Boggs shook his head pityingly.

"It's your ignorance makes you so impolite, Bob," he said, complacently; "you don't know any better. But the point's this. Maggie has an idea that a captain's a mighty big man aboard his ship, and, of course, I want her to keep on thinking so. She read in the paper the other day where a captain of one of them warships put a feller in irons for disobeyin' orders. I told her that was nothing', that I chained up a couple of my men most every trip I made."

"That might go on the Atlantic," interrupted the mate, "but you'll find yourself in a queer box if you start tryin' any such capers with seamen on the lakes."

"D'ye take me for a born ijit?" queried the captain, warmly. "Don't I know that as well as you? But wot's to prevent her thinking that I can hang my men if I want to, providin' you do wot I ask you? She and her mother's goin' to take a trip to Chicago with us, and I mean to show 'em that I'm the whole thing on this boat. Are you on?"

"If you're figurin' that I'm goin' to wear handcuffs to oblige you, I ain't on, and you'd better sign another mate, and not lose any time about it, either," said Mr. Brennan, decidedly.

"Who's talkin' of havin' you wear handcuffs?" inquired the captain, disgustedly. "It'll all be make-believe, as I'm tryin' to explain, if you'll only listen, and not keep buttin' in with fool remarks."

"Fire away, then," said the mate, resignedly. "I'm listenin'."

"First of all," resumed Boggs, "we've got to make arrangements for the reception—"

The mate uttered an exclamation, and was about to speak, but checked himself, and sat regarding his commander with a patient, wondering stare.

"When they come aboard," pursued the captain, "you line up 12 of the crew at the gangway, six to each side, and you in the middle. I'll stand back by the funnel, and when they pass through the lines you wheel round and lead 'em up to me. Then all of you swing your hands to your heads—reg'lar navy style, and I'll salute back. After that you form a guard of honor and show 'em to the cabin."

The mate expectorated vigorously. "Sounds rotten to me," he remarked, disparagingly. "A girl with the sense of a rabbit oughter be made sick by such fool play. But it's your funeral. Go on."

"You don't know her, Bob," said the captain, strong in his superior knowledge. "She'll take it as a big compliment. Maggie's bin readin' novels that's full of such stuff, and the more style we throw on the better she'll like it. Another thing, you must tip off the crew that there's to be no familiarity with me. They must salute whenever they pass me and not speak unless they're spoken to first. And don't you come none of them free-and-easy back-slappin' ways and jokes with me. I've got to handle you like a nnderling."

The mate's under jaw stopped short in its pleasing task of masticating a freshly-cut cube of tobacco, as the owner glared open-mouthed at his superior.

"You've got to handle me like a wot?" he said in amazed accents.

"Like a nnderling," repeated the captain, with a satisfied air. "Underlings, Bob, are persons under you—servants, nigger flunkies, and such like that you can bash about and treat like dogs. Maggie asked me if I was harsh with my nnderlings, and I didn't know wot she meant till I found out from the shipping clerk on the docks. It's a good word."

"Mebbe it is, and mebbe not," said the mate, stubbornly. "But I dunno as I care to be rated with dogs, and blast me if I mean to be used like one."

"It'll be all right," pleaded the captain. "Can't you understand? I'll just pretend to knock you about a bit and holler at you. Before we make Chicago we'll have a row before the women, owin' to you not carryin' out an order quick enough. Then I'll pull out my gun and shoot you."

Bowed Magnificently to His Visitors.

"Never Mind About My Hair."

The mate uttered a howl of indignant horror, and half rose to his feet, clenching a fist of formidable dimensions.

"Sit down, Bob," expostulated the arch plotter. "Don't get riled; I'll only fire off a blank cartridge, and make out the shot missed you. Then I'll spare your life and order you back to duty, not wishing to spill blood when ladies are present. Maggie's fair nutty over heroes and gallant officers, like wot she's read about, and if that don't win her, nothin' will."

Mr. Brennan gave vent to a subdued growl of protest.

"I don't fancy them tricks with firearms," he said doggedly. "Most every day you hear of some one bein' shot by a gun that ain't loaded. Fine game it 'ud be if a bullet slipped in accidental and you plugged me."

"There ain't no law could touch me if I did," responded Boggs, impatiently, "long as I didn't mean it, that is. I dunno but what Maggie 'ud think all the more of me. Girls likes a man wot's summat reckless."

By a powerful effort of will the mate swallowed the lump that had arisen wrathfully in his throat.

"Summat reckless!" he repeated, in a voice of bitter irony. "An' the law couldn't touch you, eh? And wot about me? Where do I come in at? D'ye think I'm chump enough to hire out as a blasted target for a leather-headed, lovesick scow skipper to plump lead into?"

"Go easy, Bob," said the captain, soothingly. "Your nerves is a bit shook and you need a little liquor. Hand out the bottle and we'll talk this thing over."

Still grumbling over the cold injustice shown to his feelings, Mr. Brennan secured the desired refreshment from an adjacent locker. As the contents of the bottle waned beautifully less the captain's arguments became more eloquent and convincing, and the mate grudgingly acknowledged the beauty of the proposed scheme, in which he finally promised to play his part. A stipulation that his officer should personally superintend the loading of the death-dealing weapon was cheerfully acceded to by the triumphant captain.

Mrs. Bardell and her pretty daughter, arriving on board the good ship Uncas the following morning, were flattered and surprised by the manner of their reception. Capt. Boggs, resplendent in a gold-braided cap and jacket; the latter glittering with highly polished brass buttons, swelled perceptibly with exultant pride as he bowed magnificently to his visitors. He almost regretted the fact that the Uncas, being engaged solely in cargo traffic, carried no other passengers who might have witnessed his exalted state. The dignity of the proceedings was somewhat marred by the irrepressible grins of the deckhands who formed the escort of the party, but with this trifling exception all passed off smoothly.

From the moment the Uncas cast off from the wharf at Buffalo and commenced her voyage, the autocratic sway of Capt. Boggs assumed truly gorgeous proportions. The crew, entering into the spirit of the thing, cringed before his scowl like the abject subjects of some savage monarch. His slightest orders were issued in a voice of stentorian tones and with impressive emphasis, so much so that the hapless cabin-boy, who was deemed unworthy of initiation into the secret of the trip, was reduced to a state of terror-stricken misery under the conviction that his master had become suddenly insane. On the second day a report by the mate to the effect that one of the men was ill and unable to work stirred the commander into a frenzy of royal rage.

"Roust him out!" he roared, tempestuously. "I'll have no skulking aboard my ship."

"Ay, ay, sir," rejoined the submissive Brennan, touching his cap respectfully.

"Stop a moment," thundered the captain. "If he ain't up and hustlin' inside of ten minutes, into the irons with him, the extra heavy ones."

The mate departed, and Miss Bardell, who had listened in round-eyed wonder to the dialogue, ventured a timid remonstrance.

"Perhaps the man is really ill," she said in sympathizing tones.

"Not him," responded the captain, grandly. "Don't pay any attention to those fellows, my dear. A pack of lyin', desprit ruffians, so they are. My life wouldn't be worth a nickel if I didn't keep 'em down. Why, I dassant be without this weapon night or day."

He produced a large revolver as he spoke and gazed at it lovingly.

"Three times in the last four months," he said, hoarsely, "I've had to turn loose this cannon when my crew tried to murder me."

Ha Ventured to Squeeze It Gently.

"How awful!" breathed the girl, while her mother groaned in horror. "Did—did you shoot anyone?"

"Had to," returned the captain, briskly. "It was their lives or mine, you see."

"I had no idea such terrible things happened on the lakes," said Miss Bardell, thoughtfully. "Strange that the papers never mention anything about it."

"Dead men tell no tales, and a captain's king on his ship," responded the veracious Mr. Boggs. "'Sides which the owners are rich men with lots of influence and whenever there's any trouble afloat they manage to keep it hushed up, so that the public don't get to hear of it."

"But there's your mate," suggested the girl. "He—he's such a quiet, good-looking fellow, and not a bit like a ruffian."

The captain eyed her suspiciously.

"Looks ain't everything," he commented grumpily. "Brennan's as bad as the rest, only he knows what to expect if he bats his eye at me."

Miss Bardell said no more, but her behavior to the mate that night was extremely gracious, and much to Boggs' surprise she paced the deck with the second in command for nearly an hour, while the captain glared wrathfully at them from his station on the bridge. The highly gratified Mr. Brennan was not unconscious of the interest he had awakened in the breast of his fair companion, and he improved the shining hour by dwelling pathetically on the hard fate of seamen condemned to stand the abuse of a tyrannical captain.

"A holy terror, that's wot he is," said the mate. "There ain't a harder man sailin' the lakes. I wouldn't have the weight on my conscience as he's got—not for a whole fleet of steamers. It's a awful thing to have human blood on your hands. And the men ain't to blame; there's not one of the crew that 'nd hurt a fly. But he's got the ear of the owners and they back him up in all his deviliments. Mebbe I'm too soft-hearted for this life, though, and anyway I oughtn't to speak agin him to you."

"Why not?" demanded the aroused Miss Bardell.

"Oh, well," said the artful mate, hesitatingly, "I dunno. When a girl's in love with a man it ain't exactly right for another fellow to run him down to her."

"Has he been telling you that I'm in love with him?" inquired Miss Bardell, with the dawning light of battle in her brown eyes.

"I didn't say so," returned the mate.

"But you meant it, though," said the girl, sharply, "and I just tell you that I'm not. Horrid beast! Why, he's worse than an Uncle Tom slave driver. I wouldn't marry a man like him if he was worth a million, after the way I've seen him act on this trip. What would he treat a wife like?"

"I fancied I heard him say you was fond of heroes," remarked the designing mate.

"Heroes!" repeated the girl, scornfully. "I don't call it heroic to bully a poor little cabin boy and torture sick men. And the way he treats you is scandalous, shoving you around and insulting you whenever he feels like it. I don't see how you can stand it. I don't believe a really brave man would put up with such conduct."

The mate flushed.

"I ain't afraid of him," he asserted, doggedly.

"Well, you act like it," rejoined the girl, crisply.

"See here," said Brennan, "if I show you before the trip's over that I ain't afraid of him, may I come and see you when we're ashore?"

"Do that," said Miss Bardell, decisively, "and—and you can come to see me as often as you like."

Her hand rested for a moment in the mate's broad palm and he ventured to squeeze it gently. The pressure was timidly returned.

As the Uncas neared Chicago her commander excelled all his previous efforts in the terrific role of fresh-water martinet. The cabin-boy crouched like a frightened hare at his approach and the deckhands fled before him like leaves in the path of a hurricane. The dinner failing to meet with his approval, he summoned the trembling cook to his presence and berated him with extraordinary vigor, ending the harangue with an order to the mate to convey the culprit to the hold and have him flogged. Mr. Brennan, standing at attention, suffered his features to relax into a sardonic grin.

"Aw, cut that out," he said with insolent emphasis, "and don't be makin' a monkey of yourself."

The captain answered what he supposed to be his cue, by producing his revolver and presenting the shining barrel at the mate's head.

"Mutiny, by heavens!" he roared, while the widow shrieked aloud and her daughter gasped. "Another word, you hound, and I'll blow your brains out!"

The mate took a step forward and a loud report rang out. His next move erred grievously from the schedule arranged, for before the smoke faded away a heavy fist collided violently with the captain's jaw and he dropped with a resounding crash. Brennan picked up the gun where it had fallen, and thrusting the weapon into his pocket assisted the fallen martinet to his feet.

"You ain't fit to be trusted with firearms," he said, curtly. "Open your head to me again and I'll knock it off your shoulders."

Boggs stared stupidly at the traitorous destroyer of his hopes and then turned to the women, who were gazing upon the heroic mate with intense admiration.

"It was all a joke, Maggie," he said, appealingly, but Miss Bardell tilted her nose at a scornful angle and walked away, holding her mother's arm.

"Look here," said the infuriated one to the grinning mate. "What kind of a game d'ye call this? Wot does it mean?"

"It's all a joke, as you said just now," explained Mr. Brennan, blandly. "Can't other folks have a little fun as well as you?"

"Wait till we're ashore," stormed the incensed captain. "I'll show you what it means to assault your superior officer, my lad!"

"Oh, all right," responded the mate, lightly. "P'raps you think the law allows you to pull a gun on a man for nothin'. And remember, I've got witnesses that you tried to shoot me."

He turned and made his way to the cabin, where Mrs. Bardell and her daughter sat discussing his act of valor.

Almost Like a Blow.

George Conklin, the famous animal trainer, was talking to a reporter at the circus in New York.

"The secret of animal training is gentleness. Nothing sudden or brusque must be done. An unexpected caress may anger an animal more than a kick in the ribs.

"Sudden, brusque, unexpected things never go, no matter how well they are meant. Once I was showing in Scotland."

Mr. Conklin smiled.

"We trainers," he said, "supped one night with a Scotch admirer. The old man was the soul of hospitality, but I admit I was rather startled when he leaned towards me and said:

"'Stick in, man Conklin, stick in. Yer frien' Coot's twa muffins aheid o' ye.'"

A Remarkable Recovery.

Mrs. Frank Stroebe, R. F. Romance and Reality.

"Let the youngsters have their romance—en' it'll be all the better for 'em ef they git e purty good dose on it; but don't hide from 'em the fact that thar's somethin' in the shape of trouble a-waitin' for 'em up the road," said Mr. Billy Sanders. "Not big trouble, today shore, but jest big enough to make 'em stick closer together. It ain't no use to try to rub out the fact that life is what it is. It's full of rough places, an' thar are times when you have to leave the big road an' take a short-cut through the bamboo briers for to keep from slippin' in a mudhole. The briers hurt, but the mudhole mought smifflicate you. It ain't no use to deny it, trouble is seasonin'. I never know'd it to hurt anybody but the weak-minded, the willful an' them thet was born to the purple."—Joel Chandler Harris, in Uncle Remus' Magazine.

Hurt a Convict's Pride.

A church missionary had a letter recently from a convict begging him to reform the writer's wife, who was also in prison.

The convict—who is serving a long term—was very anxious about the matter, because, as he said: "It was no credit to him to receive letters from such a place as prison."

Another convict, in the course of a letter to his brother, a pauper, remarked: "Well, Jack, thank goodness I have never sunk so low as the workhouse yet."—London Daily News.

THE HAT PHARMACY

By LYDIA FELICIA PERKINS

(Copyright, by Shortstory Pub. Co.)

The little town of Democrat was established. Democrat had once cherished great ambitions, but that was before Empire, the neighboring town, but five miles away, got the courthouse. Only one who has lived in a small ambitious town knows the bitterness of the defeated at such small triumphs and the ill-concealed exultation of the successful. The people of Democrat, after this blow, sank into a doze that might have deepened into a Rip Van Winkle sleep if the new pharmacy had not been located in the center of the town.

The oldest and the youngest and intermediate inhabitants watched the construction of the new building from the moment when the first load of bricks was dumped—watched the evolution from a mass of brick, lumber and mortar of an imposing building—a building that looked down superciliously on the post office and the Metropolitan hotel.

When the stock was in, and a soda-water fountain besides, the citizens were invited to an opening. And while the amiable visitors gawked around at the handsome furnishings, a phonograph sputtered and buzzed out Sousa's marches, and a languishing voice sung "Old Kentucky Home" as natural as life, and as an encore "Old Black Joe," which made the audience cheer feverishly. Then the proprietor urged Phyllis Hackett, the belle of Democrat, to sing into the phonograph because Lem Bond said she could sing "purtier than it could." But Phyllis refused. Then every one was treated to soda water and went away rejoicing.

But it was not of the phonograph nor the soda water that every one of them hummed about when out of ear shot. It was of the proprietor, Julius Murray, who, during the entire evening, wore his soft gray hat pulled low over his face. And it was not long before the people on the outlying farms around Democrat had heard that the "boss" at the drug store wore a hat on all occasions.

"Do tell!" the incredulous yokel would cry, and "drop in" casually, staring innocently at the proprietor in the hat, and before parting would leave a dime or nickel behind him—taking a glass of soda water or a tune on the phonograph as an equivalent. The news grew and waxed extravagant, as gossip will, and it was full-grown rumor that the bell-boy at the Metropolitan hotel said that the drug store man slept and ate with his hat on.

Phyllis Hackett's father was a large landholder in Democrat and was quite willing to interest others in this land. The next time he went over to Empire to attend court he told every one about the excellently equipped drug store—and the man in the hat played a prominent part in the narrative. He so interested a drummer that the man went over with him in his buggy, and before he shook the dust of Democrat from his feet had left some sample goods in the drug store, and Murray was to get a handsome commission on all that he sold.

This was a shrewd move on Hackett's part. The drummer, in his own interest, spread the news wherever he stopped, and more drummers came, and more goods were left at the drug store, and the man in the hat, within a year, had to enlarge his building to accommodate his thriving trade.

Phyllis Hackett, following her father's injunctions, told her young friends in Empire about the soda water and the phonograph, and especially emphasized to the girls the mysterious proprietor, who was just "awfully handsome" and wore his soft hat well over his face. So it became quite the fashion for crowds of young people to come over on moonlit nights to listen to phonograph selections and drink soda water.

The county paper came out with a long article with scare headlines—no names given—of a man who, for some mysterious reason, always wore his hat. It cited other remarkable incidents in history, and wound up in a lurid sea of mixed metaphor and figures of speech, and spoke of "The Black Knight" who wore his visor and iron gloves on all occasions. But the article appealed to the public, and was the best sort of an advertisement for the man in the hat, whose business increased with each day, and with his growing prosperity the town was naturally benefited. And the people of Empire were obliged to come to Democrat for their drugs.

Then, thanks to the drummers, the railroad that had been threatening to throw out an arm from Metropolis, ten miles away, and for which Empire had fought and schemed and prayed ever since it secured the courthouse, sent surveyors over to Democrat. Hackett took charge of them and entertained royally—drove them around to the drug store—introduced them to Murray, who treated them to the best soda water, and Phyllis completed the conquest by presiding at a dinner given to them.

Julius Murray came over to Hackett's that night and walked with Phyllis on the lawn, and with his soft voice spoke tentatively on those subjects that interest two young things under the moon and mellow stars. And Phyllis, while she longed to know why he never took off his hat, was attracted because he did not, and because she knew not why.

When it became a regular occurrence for Murray to stroll on the lawn with Phyllis, and when Bond always found him ahead of him, he quarreled with Phyllis. She proved obdurate and he threatened to knock off the fellow's hat. This, however, was merely breath.

The surveyors went back to Metropolis and reported Democrat a thriving and satisfactory town, with iron ore in the immediate vicinity. So the railroad came.

On the evening that its arrival was celebrated in Democrat, after a jollification at the drug store, Bond and Murray both asked Phyllis at the same time to walk home with her. She shyly turned to Murray.

For she had learned to love the soft gray hat because it shadowed the most disquieting and fascinating eyes she had ever met. She was magnetized by the eyes beneath the hat, but still more curious about the hat above the eyes, and as it is a well-known fact that a woman's curiosity is only equaled by her goodness, the hat prevailed.

The first question she put after saying "Yes" to Murray was not, "Where did you get that hat?" but:

"Julius, why do you wear that hat?"

He looked long and peculiarly into her eyes.

"Guess," he answered.

"Because you are—bald?"

"No."

"Oh, Julius, don't tell me they are right when they say it is a disguise!"

"Do you believe them, Phyllis?"

"You know I don't," she answered. "Yet people will talk."

"Promise you won't hate me when you know my reason, and I will promise to throw it aside when we marry."

He Threatened to Knock Off the Fellow's Hat.

Her sweet arms clasped him about the neck trustingly, and curiosity struggled with love in her face lifted to his.

"Papa says," the girl continued, "that all on account of your hat—I mean you—the town has become so prosperous, and that you brought the railroad here."

"Promise me, dear, that you won't turn from me."

"Surely not, Julius," she said, anxiously.

"I was very poor and ambitious," he began. "I tried many ways to make money. My father had died much in debt, but he left me his little drug business, and I sold out, paid off his debts, and Providence led me to Democrat. I knew that if I bought a small stock of drugs and went into business as my father had before me, I would fail, as he had, so I built things on a large plan. Then, knowing that advertising was everything, I decided to do something eccentric to attract custom, and wore a hat all the time. Do you hate me for my scheme?"

He swept off his hat and waited her answer.

Of course she was in love and her answer is not worth chronicling, as it was undoubtedly complimentary.

Though the proprietor discarded his hat on his wedding day, as he promised, yet the business, started so well, increased with the years, and every one still called his imposing drug store "The Hat Pharmacy."

Looking on the Bright Side.

According to the Philadelphia Ledger, a farmer was anxious that his son should become a minister, and for this laudable end he sent him to college for four years, but to his great disappointment the youth balked at the ministry and set himself up as a horse trader. The old farmer told his grief to a neighbor, who, however, took a more optimistic view of the matter.

"Oh, I wouldn't feel so badly about that," he said. "As a hoss trader Bill will probably lead more men to repentance than he ever would have done as a preacher."

DAIRYING WITH A SEPARATOR.

It Makes the Work Much Easier and Gets More Cream.

I have just had my first experience with a cream separator, writes a woman correspondent of Farm and Home. At first, or until I had some experience in washing and taking care of it as it should be, I thought that it made more work than in the setting of cans of milk in cold water, but since using it for four weeks, I find it is just the thing.

If one wishes to patronize the creamery, it is much better to have the separator cream to sell. One must always cool the new separated cream before putting it with other cream. It should always be churned at a lower temperature than the skimmed cream. I think that 56 degrees is about right for summer weather.

If butter is not of the right color it does no harm to use a good butter color. White butter never looks so nice as yellow butter, even though it tastes just as good. When one wishes to pack butter to keep for some time, it is best to put in a new jar, and after it is packed and tied up, turn the jar bottom side up in a good cool, dry place.

DAIRY NOTES.

Dehorn the calves with caustic potash as soon as the button begins to form on the head. If the operation is delayed till the little horn becomes a half inch long, the potash will prove ineffective or there will be a growth of deformed horns.

Feed extra well while the cows are shedding. They will need feed to keep up the flow of milk and an additional amount to make the new growth of hair. Feed rich in protein, such as bran, oats, chop, alfalfa, clover, oil meal and the like, are needed.

The first thing to take into consideration when feeding the dairy calf, especially the heifer that is intended for the dairy herd, is to see that it is kept growing from the time it is placed in the feeding lot till it has matured. Any neglect that will cause a standstill in growing will cause a dwarfing of the organs of milk production and the calf will not make the producer she should.

An Illinois reader has some cows that refuse to eat grain. Their tastes can tell better than the attendant what they should eat. We would have some oats and corn ground into chop and offer them this and, if they refuse, turn them into the pasture and let them make their gains on the pasture ration. Gains on pasture are usually the cheapest of all gains and it will mean more money to this questioner's purse than to feed grain.

Have a Good Dairy Herd.

No matter how small the dairy herd of the farm is, the farmer should take pride in having it a good herd. In some of our western states the average number of milch cows on farms is only two, three or four. But if these are all good cows, the returns to the farmer in a series of years will amount to a good deal. Many that own poor cows do not stop to figure out what they lose from having them. One thing they lose of which they never take an account and that is the profit on a good cow that could be kept in place of the cow that pays nothing or worse. Thus the cow that just pays her way and nothing else is in the place of a cow that might pay $30 per year or more. That possible profit is part of the loss, and in ten years it amounts to $300.

Change Pasture in Midsummer.

The pastures at time of the cattle being turned into them are generally good. Very little grain should be fed to cattle after they are turned into the pastures. In midsummer, when the pastures become short, the best method is to change pasture.

Sow turnip seed in season, particularly Swedish turnips, which need longer to mature. If sown too late the bulbs fail to reach profitable size.

Keep the cultivator going every week.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twentytwo per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirtyseven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse, but you must see that it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Castoria causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. A. F. Peeler, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an efficient and speedy remedy."

Dr. E. Down, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in my practice for many years with great satisfaction to myself and benefit to my patients."

Dr. Edward Parrish, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild laxative effect and freedom from harm."

Dr. J. B. Elliott, of New York City, says: "Having during the past six years prescribed your Castoria for infantile stomach disorders, I most heartily commend its use. The formula contains nothing deleterious to the most delicate of children."

Dr. C. G. Sprague, of Omaha, Neb., says: "Your Castoria is an ideal medicine for children, and I frequently prescribe it. While I do not advocate the indiscriminate use of proprietary medicines, yet Castoria is an exception for conditions which arise in the care of children."

Dr. J. A. Parker, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact, it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments."

Dr. H. F. Merrill, of Augusta, Me., says: "Castoria is one of the very finest and most remarkable remedies for infants and children. In my opinion your Castoria has saved thousands from an early grave. I can furnish hundreds of testimonials from this locality as to its efficiency and merits."

Dr. Norman M. Geer, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "During the last twelve years I have frequently recommended your Castoria as one of the best preparations of the kind, being safe in the hands of parents and very effective in relieving children's disorders, while the ease with which such a pleasant preparation can be administered is a great advantage."

In Bad Case of Eczema on Child—Disease Had Reached a Fearful State—His Order Resulted in Complete Cure.

"When I was small I was troubled with eczema for about three months. It was all over my face and covered nearly all of my head. It reached such a state that it was just a large scab all over, and the pain and itching were terrible. I doctored with an able physician for some time and was then advised by him to use the Cuticura Remedies which I did and I was entirely cured. I have not been bothered with it since. I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment but do not know exactly how much was used to complete the cure. I can safely say that Cuticura did a lot for me. WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT

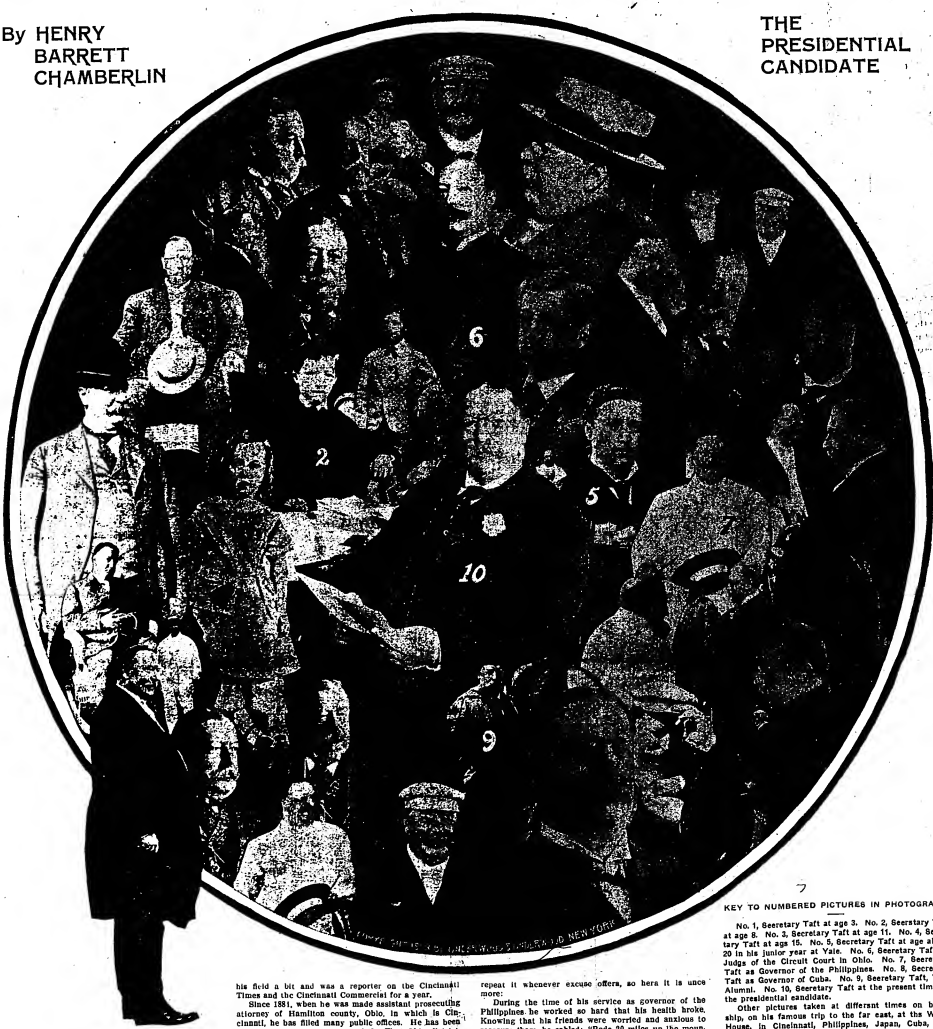
By HENRY
BARRETT
CHAMBERLIN

THE PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE



KEY TO NUMBERED PICTURES IN PHOTOGRAPH.

No. 1, Secretary Taft at age 3. No. 2, Secretary Taft at age 8. No. 3, Secretary Taft at age 11. No. 4, Secretary Taft at age 15. No. 5, Secretary Taft at age about 20 in his junior year at Yale. No. 6, Secretary Taft as Judge of the Circuit Court in Ohio. No. 7, Secretary Taft as Governor of the Philippines. No. 8, Secretary Taft as Governor of Cuba. No. 9, Secretary Taft, Yale Alumni. No. 10, Secretary Taft at the present time as the presidential candidate.

Other pictures taken at different times on board ship, on his famous trip to the far east, at the White House, in Cincinnati, Philippines, Japan, Cuba, San Francisco, etc.

SHOULD William Howard Taft be chosen by the American people as the twenty-sixth official tenant of the White House he will be the biggest man on the biggest job in the gift of the people of these United States. More than that, he will be the first president who has actually traveled around the world before induction into office, as well as the only one who has had the opportunity to personally familiarize himself with all of the territory subject to the authority of the chief executive. He is the first man to have what might fairly be called a presidential training, for his governmental service has been of a nature peculiarly fitting him for what President Roosevelt has declared to be "the hardest job in the world."

William Howard Taft organized himself for the presidency by selecting Ohio as his natal state—he was born at Cincinnati, September 15, 1857—and in the event of election, will place the Buckeye state on an equal footing with Virginia as the "Mother of Presidents." From the "Old Dominion" have come Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe and Tyler, while Ohio has furnished William Henry Harrison, Hayes, Garfield and McKinley.

The father of the present secretary of war was a secretary of war during the administration of President Grant and also attorney general in the same cabinet, so the son has heredity in his favor, both as a lawyer and as a war secretary. His training has been along executive and judicial lines rather than legislative as as is readily disclosed by the record of his achievement.

Graduating from Yale in 1878, the second in a class of 121, his degree of LL. B. came from the law school of Cincinnati College in 1880, the same year that he was admitted to the Ohio bar. Then he broadened his field a bit and was a reporter on the Cincinnati Times and the Cincinnati Commercial for a year.

Since 1881, when he was made assistant prosecuting attorney of Hamilton county, Ohio, in which is Cincinnati, he has filled many public offices. He has been collector of internal revenue of the First Ohio district, assistant county solicitor of Hamilton county, Ohio; solicitor general of the United States; United States circuit judge of the Sixth circuit; president of the United States Philippine Commission; civil governor of the Philippine Islands and secretary of war. In 1903 he declined the appointment as associate justice of the United States supreme court. He acted as provisional governor of Cuba, following the insurrection of 1906, and during his incumbency of the secretarial office has visited Panama, Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines, returning to this country by way of Russia. The mere narration of the facts will indicate that the man who is fat and fifty, is also fit.

There is likely to be much said of the fatness of Taft during the impending campaign. And in truth he is fat, very fat. Once when asked by a newspaper man how much he weighed, he answered with great solemnity: "No gentleman weighs over 300." This, bye-the-bye, was after a six months' course of the most painstaking effort to reduce his adipose tissue. He managed to pull under the 300 mark by taking off 80 pounds and then stopped. If he is tipping the beam at less than 300 to-day he does not look the part. But the fatness of Taft is not offensive. His flesh is well distributed and I should prefer to call him an expansive man rather than a fat one. He is big of frame, wide of shoulder as well as girth and his supporting columns are well proportioned to carry his bulk. He is alert, active and carries himself very well, although it must be admitted that in a coat known to trade and commerce as a Prince Albert he is almost as wide across the back as a furniture van.

He is not sensitive concerning his weight, is the portly secretary, and will laugh as good-naturedly as the next man when the stock joke of Washington is repeated in company—and it has been repeated so many times that it should be familiar to everyone who has heard of Taft. It is, however, considered proper to repeat it whenever excuse offers, so here it is once more:

During the time of his service as governor of the Philippines he worked so hard that his health broke. Knowing that his friends were worried and anxious to reassure them, he cabled: "Rode 20 miles up the mountain to-day. Feeling fine." Whereupon Secretary Root wired back: "Fine, but how is the horse?"

All jokes pertaining to Taft are Gargantuan as witness the oft repeated one: "Secretary Taft rose in a street car the other day and gallantly gave his seat to two ladies." Then there is the story known as the trousers incident. It was to the effect that while in Russia an accident happened to his dress clothes and he kept the czar waiting an hour while a force of tailors mended the tear.

But the fatness of Taft is merely physical. It does not extend to his mentality. At college he was an honor man. In athletics he displayed great prowess. He was the stroke of his class crew and the best wrestler in the gymnasium. His popularity was unquestioned and his sense of honor so keen that when the regularity of his election to a class post of honor was questioned he declined the office, only to be unanimously chosen to the same place immediately afterwards. In those days he was known as "Big Bill" and "Big Bill" he is to-day,

The habit of hard work was already his. It was his when he went to Washington as solicitor general, during Harrison's administration. It may have been this habit of hard work which drew to him the friendship of another strenuous and energetic official, Civil Service Commissioner Roosevelt. The friendship formed at that time has strengthened with the passing of the years and to-day no man, barring, perhaps Charles P. Taft, is more eagerly enthusiastic for the success of "Big Bill" than Theodore Roosevelt.

It was in the interval between his service as solicitor general and as governor of the Philippines that, in his capacity as United States circuit judge, he rendered certain decisions affecting labor which have brought criticism from labor leaders, but even these have not questioned his integrity.

In 1900 a man was needed in the Philippines. A man who, in the words of McKinley, was big, strong, patient, tactful yet firm, and willing to kill himself with hard work if necessary. Judge Day, then secretary of state, suggested that Taft be sent for. Taft came and when told that he was needed in the Philippines, said that he did not want to go as his ambition was for judicial, not executive work. But he accepted the post and since then has loomed big on the political horizon.

In the eight years that have passed he has shown that America can successfully pursue a colonial policy and has impressed himself upon the imagination of the people. He is very much of a reality to the general public and he bulks as large in the affections of the people who know him as he does in present day politics.

HENRY BARRETT CHAMBERLIN.

Raps at Foreign Artists.

The New York correspondent of the Berliner Tageblatt makes fun of Frau Ernestine Schumann-Heink for renouncing her allegiance to the emperor of Austria and becoming a citizen of the United States. She was sure of all her rights, he thinks, because of the American citizenship of her husband, Mr. Rapp, and became a citizen of the "Land of Dollars" only for the advertisement which was sure to follow. In the same letter the writer says that Schiller has also been annexed by the Americans, the great poet's tragedy, "Cabale und Liebe," having been placed on the stage in New York, slightly changed, under a new title, without credit to the author. After describing the performance the writer says: "In the royal tomb at Weimar, the body which rests in the casket decorated with the silver laurel wreath of the women of Hamburg certainly turned about."

Delegates to the Denver Convention Complete Their Task

Scenes of Tremendous Enthusiasm When Name of Nebraskan Is Presented—John Worth Kern of Indiana Choice for Vice-President.

Denver, Col.—In the early morning hours of Friday William Jennings Bryan was nominated for the presidency by the Democratic national convention. Only one ballot was necessary, the Nebraskan having an overwhelming majority of the votes.

Tired as they were, the delegates and spectators greeted the result of the ballot with roars of applause, and marched about the hall cheering and singing.

The nomination was made unanimous.

Clock Is Stopped.

Leading up to the nomination were hours that began with picturesque enthusiasm, which grew into uncontrollable disorder. The nominating speeches were made amid scenes akin to panic at certain stages.

At 12 o'clock midnight the convention clock was stopped, so that constructively the nomination of Bryan would take place at Thursday's session of the convention. Will the Friday hoodoo be overcome by this technical evasion? is a question that was in the minds of enthusiastic Bryan Democrats, as they wended their way from the convention hall in the early morning hours.

Wild Scene of Confusion.

A wilder demonstration than that over the first mention of Bryan's name on Wednesday followed the concluding word of the speech of Ignatius J. Dunn of Nebraska, which formally presented the name of Democracy's champion to the convention.

An hour and seven minutes, against the one hour and 28 minutes of the day before, marked the cheering and tumult, but the densely, overcrowded auditorium made the confusion worse confounded.

Nobody had any respect for the rights of anybody else. Everybody was there to see the spectacle, if not to take part in it, and those not able to look out for themselves were trampled upon.

Gov. John A. Johnson of Minnesota and Judge George Gray of Delaware were placed in nomination along with Bryan. Small as was the following of either, in comparison with that of the Nebraskan, the scenes of confusion, owing to the uncontrollable size of the crowd, were approximately great.

Gov. Johnson was placed in nomination by Winfield Scott Hammond of Minnesota, Connecticut yielding to the gopher state.

Judge Gray's name was presented by Irving F. Handy of Delaware. Mr. Handy felt how sadly he was in the minority when, after he had talked awhile, the crowd attempted to choke him off.

Ovation for Johnson Speaker.

It was a thing worth noticing that by far the best nominating speech of the convention was made by Mr. Hammond in presenting the name of Gov. Johnson. He had a hard task before him, because he followed not long after a characteristic Bryan demonstration, lasting more than an hour.

As the speaker rapidly sketched the early life in poverty of Gov. Johnson and passed on to his political triumphs when he was elected governor the first time in the face of 160,000 majority for Roosevelt, the thing seemed to catch the imagination of the delegates.

The galleries took up the cry, so that at the conclusion of Mr. Hammond's rather brief but forcible speech a demonstration was set on foot which by careful nursing was made to last 25 minutes, or about a third the time devoted to Mr. Bryan, whereas everyone knew that the Minnesota man would not have one-tenth as many votes as his Nebraska rival.

Seconding Speeches.

Seconding speeches for Bryan were made by Senator Gearin of Oregon, Gov. Glenn of South Carolina, and Gov. Claude Swanson of Virginia. Gov. Glenn's speech created much excitement, being devoted largely to a defense of Bryan against attacks branding him as a Socialist. At the conclusion of his remarks, which were not in accord with the spirit of the convention, Permanent Chairman Clayton, who at the day session has superseded Temporary Chairman Bell as wielder of the gavel, exclaimed that William Jennings Bryan needed no defenders, and elicited tremendous applause.

The opening session lasted three hours and brought about the completion of the permanent organization of the convention, with the resounding address of Congressman Clayton of Alabama, permanent chairman of the convention. When the session opened at night, every formality of organization had been accomplished and the decks were clear for the supreme work of adopting the platform and naming the candidates.

The scenes within the convention amphitheater repeated those of previous days in the magnitude of the gathering and the eager enthusiasm of the throngs. There were frequent demonstrations as the names of party idols or Jeffersonian principles were pronounced, but there was no repetition during the early session of the tumultuous record-breaking demonstration of Wednesday.

The address of the permanent chairman, Mr. Clayton, proved to be a caustic arraignment of the failure of Roosevelt policies and an enunciation of Democratic doctrine. The ringing voice of the orator and the emphasis of his gestures stirred the listening thousands to frequent demonstrations of enthusiastic approval.

At 2:30 o'clock the platform committee was not yet prepared to report, and the convention took a recess until evening, so that all remaining differences of detail on the platform could be reconciled and the document be ready for adoption and the presidential nomination be reached before the adjournment of the night session.

It was 7:50 o'clock when Chairman Clayton began to rap for order, which he secured within the minute.

Ollie James of Kentucky moved that a committee of three be appointed to wait upon the platform committee and ascertain when it would be ready to report. The motion prevailed and Mr. James, J. Thomas Heflin of Alabama and F. P. Lynch of Minnesota were named. Mr. Lynch's appointment was the first recognition the adherents of Gov. Johnson had received in the choice of convention committees.

"In November next," said Chairman Clayton, "we will witness in New York the Tammany tiger drowning the Republican elephant. Therefore I invite to the stand, for a speech from a Democrat to a Democratic convention, Senator Thomas F. Grady of New York."

Senator Grady was given a most enthusiastic welcome as he appeared on the rostrum. When he declared that the convention could nominate no candidate and adopt no platform that would not receive the united and enthusiastic support of the New York democracy, he was given still greater applause and returned to his seat amid cries of "Grady." "Hurrah for Grady."

Champ Clark Is Heard.

"I am sure the convention will be glad to concur in the request of Missouri to hear from old Champ Clark of that state, one of the knightliest Democrats who ever drew glittering blade in defense of the party." It was in these words that Chairman Clayton introduced the next speaker, whose appearance on the platform was a signal for great cheering.

Mr. Clark predicted that the Democrats would sweep the country from sea to sea, that on the fourth of March next a Democratic president would be inaugurated, backed by a Democratic house, and the people would then come into their rights.

The galleries, with a profound ignorance of the manner in which the convention should be managed, broke in with cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"

When quiet was restored, the chair recognized Mr. James of the committee sent to ascertain the probability of an early report from the committee on resolutions. Mr. James reported that the committee would not be ready to report before midnight. He then made a motion that the rules be suspended and that the nominating speeches for presidential candidates be made, with the understanding, however, that no ballot should be taken until after the report of the committee had been received.

The motion was adopted, and the rules were declared by the chair to be suspended, and nominations to be in order.

Nominations Called For.

"The secretary will now proceed to call the roll of states for nominations for the office of president of the United States," shouted Chairman Clayton.

"Alabama," called the clerk.

The chairman of that delegation arose and was recognized.

"Knowing that Nebraska will make no mistake in nominating the right man," he said, "Alabama yields to Nebraska."

"I. J. Dunn of Omaha will speak for the Nebraska delegation," announced the chairman of that state, while the cheering which followed the first statement from Alabama continued unabated.

Dunn Nominates Bryan.

Mr. Dunn, who was to make that speech of the convention in which the greatest interest was felt by the delegates and the spectators, is scarcely of middle age. His clean-cut, determined-looking, clean-shaven face is surmounted by dark brown hair, which owing to the emphatic manner in which he emphasized his speech with his head, was soon touching the center of his forehead. He spoke clearly and with a pleasing manner of delivery.

Big Demonstration Starts.

Mr. Dunn brought out the name of "William Jennings Bryan" with intense dramatic force, and the response from the great throng was electric. The delegates sprung up, the galleries followed suit, and the demonstration was under way in a manner that promised to rival Wednesday's exhibition of enthusiasm.

A few moments after the cheering began an immense oil painting of Mr. Bryan was lowered from behind a monster American shield which had reposed over the chairman's desk ever since the convention began. The appearance of the picture raised the pitch of the outburst, and the delegates were still cheering wildly when the convention adjourned.

INDIANA SECURES THE HONOR.

John W. Kern of That State Named for Vice-President.

Denver, Col.—The building of the national Democratic ticket, which was begun at 3:41 o'clock Friday morning, was completed at 5:10 o'clock Friday afternoon with the nomination by acclamation of John W. Kern of Indiana for the vice-presidency.

When the meeting was called to order at 1:40, the nomination of a candidate for vice-president was at once proceeded with. Gov. Thomas of Colorado placed in nomination Charles A. Towne. John J. Walsh named Archibald McNeill of Connecticut. Hill of Georgia urged the claims of Clark Howell for the position.

Thomas R. Marshall presented the name of John W. Kern of Indiana, and the convention enthusiastically took up the cheering which was started by the delegation from the Hoosier state.

Gov. Folk of Missouri seconded the nomination of Mr. Kern.

Hill of Georgia withdrew Howell's name and seconded the nomination of Mr. Kern.

Charles A. Towne also withdrew from the contest, and urged his friends to unite on Kern.

The withdrawals increased the vigor of the demonstrations in favor of Kern, and on the motion that he be nominated by acclamation, which was carried, the cheering resembled closely the enthusiasm which had been evinced at the nomination of Mr. Bryan the day before.

Wearied by the two tumultuous sessions, the delegates left the convention hall and the great gathering was at an end.

Sketch of Kern's Career.

John Worth Kern was born in Howard county, Indiana, December 20, 1849. He graduated from the University of Michigan in 1869 at the age of 20 years, with the degree of doctor of laws. His first official position which brought him into the public eye was when fulfilling his duties as a reporter of the supreme court of Indiana, which office he held from 1885 to 1889. For four years—1892 to 1896—he was a state senator. He became city attorney of Indianapolis in 1897, and held that office for four years. A year before he gave up the office he ran for the gubernatorial chair in Indiana, and was beaten. Four years later—in 1904—he also tried for the governorship on the Democratic ticket and was again defeated. Later he received the complimentary vote of the party for United States senator.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

States Still After Taxes.

St. Paul—In addition to the taxes on gross earnings voluntarily reported by railroads and other public utility companies assessed under that plan, the state public examiner's department has succeeded, up to date, in collecting $270,000 on gross earnings omitted by the companies from their reports since 1902.

A considerable proportion of this amount has been collected recently as a result of a series of examinations of the books and accounts of the railroad companies, conducted by E. W. McGrew, deputy examiner.

In most cases the railroad companies have paid the claims of the state without protest, but in some instances there have been differences of opinion between the state officers and the officers of the roads as to the liability, and under those circumstances it has been necessary for the state to begin suit.

Anton Schaefer, public examiner, now has in hand a report under which the state will begin suit against the Soo road for $40,760.88 back taxes. This company recently admitted its liability for $10,000 of the taxes shown in the report and paid that amount.

A Bad Woman.

Rochester—A woman giving her name as Mrs. Adolph Nelson, and claiming to live near St. Paul, came into town Saturday night and put up at one of the rooming houses. In the morning she went to a lunch counter to get something to eat, and going behind the counter took possession of a knife and some dishes and threatened to clean out the establishment a la cowboy.

The proprietor sent for a policeman, who succeeded in capturing the woman and caging her. The next morning she appeared before the city justice and admitted that she was drunk and disorderly. She said it was morphine, but she admitted that beer also had something to do with it.

The justice fined her $5, which she paid.

Grow Alfalfa in Valley.

Crookston—Joel G. Winkjer, formerly deputy state dairy inspector for this part of Minnesota, now assistant dairyman for the government at Manhattan, Kan., and traveling over three of the West Central states, urged the farmers of the north valley here to take up the development and cultivation of alfalfa, the growth of which has been commanding a great deal of his attention and study. In Oklahoma they raise five crops a year which sells for more than $10 a ton, and in Kansas they raise four crops a year, which sells for $12, and he believes that a crop of better quality could be raised in the soils and climate of the north valley than anywhere else in the country.

Narrow Escape.

St. Paul—The hair comb which she wore at the back of her head saved Clara Ziesler, 674 Lee avenue, from being killed. Enraged with jealousy, her escort, said to be Stanley Ross, 315 Fauquier street, shot at the girl, shattering the comb to bits. The bullet penetrated her skull, inflicting a long gash in her scalp. Her injuries were declared not to be fatal at the city hospital. Ross, who is accused of the shooting, escaped after the shooting and had not been located by the police at a late hour.

The couple went to White Bear, and, it is said, quarreled several times on account of the actions of the young women with other men of her acquaintance.

Big Men at Fair.

Hamline—Special and urgent invitation is to be given by the board of managers of the Minnesota state fair to William H. Taft, William Jennings Bryan and Gov. John A. Johnson to speak at the 1908 state fair during the week of Aug. 31. The form and urgency of the invitation will depend upon the efforts of President B. F. Nelson, Vice President C. Milton Griggs, and Secretary C. N. Cosgrove, who, at the meeting of the board of managers, were made a special committee on securing these speakers for the state fair next fall.

Village Loses.

Crookston—The jury in the suit brought by Mrs. Laura M. Gaylord, wife of Attorney Gaylord, of Fertile, Minn., against the village of Fertile for $10,000 for damages alleged to have been incurred by slipping on ice caused by a broken waterspout in that village was decided in favor of the village by the jury. Attorney Gaylord dropped his case against the city for the same accident upon the verdict. Court has adjourned sine die.

NEWS NOTES.

St. Cloud—Black flies work great havoc among poultry in Minnesota.

St. Paul—The summer vacation schools open with big attendance of 350.

Minneapolis—Sheriffs of twenty states meet and hold interesting sessions.

St. Paul—Only two cities in the country exceed St. Paul's building record for June.

Minneapolis—Banker Joseph U. Barnes, convicted of larceny, is denied a new trial.

Rochester—A terrific electric storm which prevailed here did a great deal of damage in and about the city.

White Bear—Sigurd Dahl rescues Alma Peterson from drowning in Bass lake at great risk of his own life.

St. Cloud—Frank Randall of the reformatory pleads for official hangman before convention of sheriffs in Minneapolis.

St. Paul—Body of John Sundstrom, contractor, found in pasture near Snelling avenue with a bottle of carbolic acid by his side.

Crookston—The graded road between Crookston and Maple Lake will be opened by a parade of twenty-eight automobiles.

Duluth—The nineteenth annual convention of the Minnesota Bankers' association will open in Duluth on Friday, July 24, continuing through the next day.

Minneapolis—The Minnesota Retail Jewelers' association and the Minnesota Association of Optometrists opened a three-day joint meeting at the West Hotel.

Minneapolis—Gus Winberg broke his promise to Judge David F. Simpson and he must go to the state reformatory, leaving behind a wife and child with no means of support.

Crookston—Guttom Grundeson, a farmer living near McIntosh, says the world is coming soon to a terrible end, and his words have instilled fear in the heart of the little community in which he lives.

Washington—Minneapolis has been selected as the next meeting place of the National Young People's Christian union of the Universalist church, July 7 to 14, 1909, the sessions of one day to be held at St. Paul.

Duluth—While mentally unbalanced John Norska, eighty-eight years old, attempted to assault his wife, aged eighty-seven years, with an ax, according to a neighbor, and a warrant was issued and served on him.

Minneapolis—A gold bridge, which was torn or knocked from someone's mouth and which was found on the river bank near the government dam, may be a clue to a murder which has not yet been brought to the notice of the police.

Rochester—A house occupied by John Jensen was struck by lightning and the siding torn away at one corner. Jensen was stunned and his infant child, sleeping near the corner, was made insensible from the shock. A tree in the yard was splintered.

Crookston—The spectacular race for sheriff in Polk county is further complicated by the entrance and filing of D. D. Horton, a moving picture man of Crookston. Mr. Horton is the ninth candidate for sheriff and has lived in this county for twenty-seven years.

Duluth—The Duluth police have received a letter from A. Dupraw of Fort William asking their co-operation to recover his daughter Olive, aged eight years. He does not give any particulars, but says that he has reason to believe that the child was kidnapped.

Montevideo—Montevideo is at last to be a city. At a special election held here a charter incorporating Montevideo as such was adopted. There were 118 votes for and 18 against the charter. A special election will be held soon to comply with the charter.

Mankato—With the filing of James T. McCleary for the Republican congressional nomination in the Second district, a three-cornered fight for that nomination is practically assured, as Gilbert Gutterson is said to have announced his intention of entering the race. P. A. Ewert of Pipestone has already filed.

White Bear—In a quarrel following a Fourth of July outing Clara Zeisler was shot in the head by Stanley Ross as the couple stood on the street near the girl's home, 764 Lee avenue, St. Paul. The bullet did not penetrate the girl's skull, and although her scalp is badly torn it is expected that she will recover soon.

Faribault—The high water in Straight river has weakened the dam belonging to the Polar Star electric light plant to such an extent that a portion of it has gone out. The race leading from the dam has become nearly dry and many fish that were in the race and unable to escape are being caught by barefooted boys, who wade out in the mud

THE SUNBEAM.

Henery Funkley, of Bemidji is the latest to file for the republican nomination for representative from this district. This will make two candidates from Beltrami county.

Our Governor Johnson did not get clost enough to see the party, when Bryan recieved the democratic nomination for president at Denver. He recelved 47 votes, to Bryns 892 1/2. John is a pretty good fellow, but he got so far away from Minnesota, that trip.

William Michelet, of Thief River Falls is being "boomed" for the republican nomination for county attorney by a democrat paper in Red Lake Falls. Wouldent these Red Lake county politicts take the cake? We believe we will be haying next week and get them round.

All political questions in Red Lake county are decided by whether a man is favorable to Red Lake or Thief River Falls for county seat. Norman County Index.

This rule only applies to the two cities, and not to the voters in the eastern part of the county, who generly vote for the man of their choice, but either side always claims him.

There is a strong demand upon John Lind to to take the democratict nommatition for governor There is little question of the outcome if Lind should get into the race. He would be elecied. Red Lake Falls Gazette.

Yes he would be elected to return to his law practice, with a majority that would surprise him. But the above was published in a democratic paper, that the editor has fed at the public crib for nearly four years and sounds like the bawl of a hungery calf that was affraid of loosing his breakfast.

The Feeding of Dogs.

"No dog kept indoors and indeed very few outside should be fed on meat nor should he be fed from the table at mealtimes, as he will soon become a nuisance, especially when there are visitors. If he is always fed at the conclusion of a certain meal—dinner, for instance—he will wait patiently until the prescribed time. It is a good plan to feed after one's midday meal, giving plenty of green vegetables, bread and potatoes, with a very few scraps of finely cut meat, the whole well mixed and some gravy poured over it. If two meals are given, one should be at breakfast time and one in the evening. One should consist of only a little oatmeal and milk or a piece of dry dog biscuit.

"At no time should the dog have more than he will eat, and if he leaves anything on his plate except the pattern his allowance should be reduced or a meal omitted."—Suburban Life.

The Shoulder Strap.

If it were possible to compile such data it would be extremely interesting to know to what extent women have influenced the uniforms and equipment of their fighting states. A little instance in point is the steel curb shoulder strap of the British cavalry. When Sir George Luck was setting out for Kandahar during the Afghan operations Lady Luck, knowing probably something of the fighting methods of the tribesmen, whose four foot knife can cut clean from shoulder to belt, sewed a couple of steel curb chains under each of the shoulder straps on her husband's tunic. As a protection from sword cuts these proved so effective that at the end of the campaign Sir George made a report in relation thereto, with the result that they were adopted as a permanent feature of the cavalry uniform.—Harper's Weekly

The Way of the Law.

A man who goes to law may not be in the poor suitor class when he starts, but is liable to be before he finishes.—Washington Star.

Too High For the Barber.

"I heard something new in the barbering business this morning," said the gray headed man. "I am occupying a room on the top floor of a sky scraping apartment hotel. This morning I sent for a barber to come up and shave me. He came, but when he saw to what an altitude he had attained he looked uneasy.

"'Would it inconvenience you to come down to the regular barber shop?' he asked.

"I answered that it would not particularly put me out, but that I would like to know the reason for his request.

"'The fact is,' he said, 'I never like to shave anybody at this distance above the ground. No barber likes to. We seem to be particularly sensitive to height. It makes us nervous. Most barbers will not undertake a job above a certain number of feet in the air. Of course if you insist I will shave you here, but you would probably get a better shave ten floors below this one.'

"Well, just out of natural cussedness I refused to humor the fellow's whim. As a consequence he nearly cut my throat. Whether he did it through nervousness, as he claimed, or pure cussedness of his own I don't know. Whatever it was, that is a peculiarity of barbers that I'd like to have explained."—New York Sun.

Much Law, Poor Case.

Among lawyers there is a saying that in the trial of a case an attorney if light on facts must be heavy on law. The other day an attorney was preparing to leave his office in one of the big office buildings to go to the courthouse to try a case. From the shelves of his library he had taken many large law books containing decisions and opinions of higher courts. At intervals a boy went in and out of the door, and each time he bore in his arms a stack of the books, which he carried to an express wagon that stood in the street below. The attorney was to use the books in the courtroom. Another lawyer, who is of southern birth and who always addresses his friends with some army title, watched the boy as he went in and out carrying the law books. Then he dug his hands deep into his trousers pockets and said to the lawyer:

"Well, Ah'll aweah, kunnel, you must have no case at all."—Kansas City Times.

TURPENTINE.

Moths will leave if it is sprinkled about.

Turpentine and soap will remove ink stains from linen.

Turpentine will remove wheel grease, pitch and tar stains.

Clean gilt frames with a sponge moistened in turpentine.

It will exterminate roaches if sprinkled in their haunts.

A few drops on a woolen cloth will clean tan shoes nicely.

A few drops added to water in which clothes are boiled will whiten them.

An equal mixture of turpentine and linseed oil will remove white marks from furniture caused by water.

Ivory knife handles that have become yellow can be restored to their former whiteness by rubbing with turpentine.

Carpets can be cleaned and colors restored by going over occasionally with a broom dipped in warm water in which a little turpentine is added.

Splendors of Cafes.

The cafes and hotels of New York are rivaling each other in the almost oriental splendor with which they have fitted up small rooms for dinner and after theater parties. At one cafe near Broadway the sides of one of these rooms are composed entirely of mirrors, after the French fashion, while the ceiling is covered with green leaves and grapes, bunches of pink and purple grapes of glass, within which are electric lights. The effect is that of a beautiful arbor. Another cafe has mirrors reflecting small red lights throughout the room, while the ceiling, also of mirrors, is an exquisite imitation of moonlight, the effect of which is obtained by electrics inclosed in globes of the color and sheen of moonlight seen through a delicate tracery of faint green leaves.—Exchange.

A Sad Case.

A Chicago physician was one day called to attend a sick child in a "shabby genteel" quarter of the Windy City.

"Madam," said the doctor to the mother, "you should send this child into the country for several weeks each summer."

"I am sorry to say, doctor," responded the woman, "that we are not rich enough to do that."

"Then," suggested the physician, "have her sent by the fresh air fund."

"Oh, doctor," exclaimed the woman, "we are not poor enough!"—Harper's Weekly.

Too Selfish.

Citiman—What's the matter with all you Swamphurst fellows? You don't seem to like my friend Backlotz. Subbubs—No; he's selfish. Citiman—Oh, come now! Subbubs—That's what he is. A barn near him caught fire the other night, and he put it out without waiting for the rest of us members of the Swamphurst Hose to reach the scene.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The Comfortable Fortune.

"What is your idea of a comfortable fortune?" asked the ambitious youth.

"One," answered the man of experience, "that is big enough to buy you everything you want and not big enough to attract the attention of the grand jury."—Washington Star.

A Bungler.

Very few persons acquit themselves nobly in their maiden speech. At a wedding feast recently the bridegroom was called upon, as usual, to respond to the given toast, in spite of the fact that he had previously pleaded to be excused. Blushing to the roots of his hair, he rose to his feet. He intended to imply that he was unprepared for speech making, but, unfortunately, placed his hand upon the bride's shoulder and looked down at her as he stammered out his opening (and concluding) words:

"This—er—thing has been thrust upon me."—London Tit-Bits.

Oddities of Sight.

The two eyes really see two objects. If the two forefingers be held, one at the distance of one foot, the other two feet in front of the eyes and the former be looked at, two phantoms of the latter will be observed, one on each side. If the latter be regarded two phantoms of the nearer finger will be observed mounting guard, one on each side.

Good and Evil.

Accustom yourself to submit on every occasion to a small present evil to obtain a greater distant good. This will give decision, tone and energy to the mind, which thus disciplined will often reap victory from defeat and honor from repulse.—Colton.

Gallant.

Wasps Jaws Make Colony's Nest.

Wasps readily succumb before the increasing cold of autumn. The few that escape the merciless scourge of mortality are the queens of next season. They pass the winter in some warm cranny, and when the spring arrives each comes forth from its hiding place and seeks a suitable place for the nest that is to be. This found the queen repairs to a fence or tree trunk and with her jaw rasps off a bundle of wood fiber which when moistened with saliva and kneaded forms the paperlike substance of which the nest is entirely constructed.

Just as bees have invented a peculiar nest building material in wax, so wasps have prepared a special durable paper for the same purpose. The queen mother lays the foundations of the city with her own jaws. She attaches a sort of stalk of wood paper to a chosen support. This may be the branch of a tree, a root in a cavity below ground or a beam in a garden shed. The stalk prepared, the queen builds a few shallow cells, in each of which she lays an egg. As these mature, hatch and develop into worker wasps the labor of the little colony is turned over to them, and thus a vast nest with thousands of cells is evolved.—Chicago Tribune.

The Wrong Nell.

Nell is a girl who lives up on Capitol hill. On Mondays a woman comes to Nell's house to wash clothes. The woman's name is Nell too. One Monday Nell, the girl, was in the sitting room reading when the telephone rang. Nell, the washerwoman, answered the ring. Nell, the girl, then heard Nell the washerwoman, say:

"Yes, this is Nell."

Silence.

"How's that?"

Silence.

"What! Am I mad because you kissed me last night? Look here, man, you're too fresh. Who are you anyway? I never kissed"—

Just then the telephone receiver was wildly snatched from her hand. Nell, the girl, blushing furiously, had grabbed it. She hung it on the hook.

"He wanted me," she said. "He always tries to tease me that way. I—I never kissed him in my life."

As she disappeared up the stairs the washerwoman smiled and said:

"That's a big one."—Denver Post

It's Results That Count

In cooking it's the results that count. So when a housewife starts to make Bread or Rools or Pies, naturally she wants her cooking to have that rich crisp, pleasing odor. But it must also have that whiteness, lightness and wholesomeness which is so essential to good cooking.

Much of this depends upon the flour—and thousands depend upon,

Their Substitute.

One of "Private John" Allen's favorite stories is about a Georgia bishop.

One of the members of the bishop's church met the reverend gentleman one Sunday afternoon and was horrified to find the bishop carrying a shotgun.

"My dear bishop," he protested, "I am shocked to find you out shooting on Sunday. The apostles did not go shooting on Sunday."

"No," replied the bishop, "they did not. The shooting was very bad in Palestine, and they went fishing instead."--Cleveland Leader.

He Was Spurned.

"Believe me," said old Gotrox, "although I'm an old bachelor I'm sure I could learn to be a good husband. You know, a man is never too old to learn."

"Nor too old to yearn, perhaps," replied Miss Pechis; "also I'm sorry to say you're not too old to spurn."--Philadelphia Press.

Always Something Lacking.

Love is like a waltz. It never quite fulfills all one expects of it. Either the man's lead is too fast or too slow, his hold too light or too loose, he stumbles over your gown or steps on your feet, and if everything else is right it is the wrong man.--Life.

Looking Forward.

"Progress is becoming extremely rapid."

"Yes, indeed. In the year 3000 or so lightning will have to get a move on if it wants to be considered fast."

Washington Whisperings

Interesting Bits of News Gathered at the National Capital.

Seek Reason for Halt in Alien Tide

WASHINGTON.—Immigration officials who at first regarded the decrease in immigration as of a temporary character, have determined upon an investigation to discover its cause. The continued falling off cannot be accounted for, and it is considered necessary to take steps to ascertain whether anything not now apparent to the United States is being done to deter people in foreign countries seeking new homes from finding them here.

It is known that the peonage investigation in the south has resulted in the posting of notices in some countries of Europe warning its laborers not to come to the United States, but this has never been seriously regarded as a reflection upon conditions here.

When the unusual departure of the laboring classes to Europe occurred during the early winter it was attributed to the dull times following the financial flurry. It is doubted if this condition, which has now been to a considerable degree supplanted by a steady demand for labor, can be held responsible for the continued decrease which records kept now show. Serious objection is made in certain countries of Europe to the rate at which emigration to the United States has reduced their population. The United States will now seek to learn through its representatives abroad whether the methods taken to keep immigrants from this country are such as to misrepresent conditions here.

The number of immigrants for May was 36,317, as compared with 184,686 last year, and 150,927 in May, 1906. The immigration from Russia, which was 35,506 in May last year and 28,817 in May, 1905, this year, dropped to 3,880. Immigration for six months, including May, show an equally large falling off, the total for the period being only 227,283, as compared with 674,684 last year and 616,508 the previous year.

Austria-Hungary, Italy and Russia show the largest decreases. The decrease of those coming from Italy for the month of 32,591 suggests that peonage prosecutions have been well and perhaps not always truthfully advertised. Small increases are shown from China, the Pacific islands, British North America, British Honduras and Mexico; all other countries show decreases.

Gaines Will Be Missed from the House

JOHN WESLEY GAINES, the silver-tongued orator of Tennessee, the guardian of the Jackson Hermitage and bearer of the Democratic ark of the covenant in congress for 12 years, will no longer grace the floor of the house.

After his present term expires he will return to Tennessee to take up the simple life and muse on the "ashes of empire" and "what might have been."

For John Wesley Gaines had ambitions as well as ability. He dreamed of a day coming when the southland would claim its own and when another Andy Jackson would sit in the presidential chair and scatter the evil birds from the sacred temples of Democracy.

But from these wild dreams Mr. Gaines has just received a rude awakening.

In the primaries in the Sixth Tennessee district he was defeated for the renomination. Joseph W. Byrne, a cold-hearted corporation lawyer, who told the voters that Mr. Gaines was of no account in congress, seems to have been taken at his word, for Mr. Byrne won over Mr. Gaines by a big majority. As the nomination is tantamount to an election, Mr. Byrne will take his seat next March.

But Washington will miss Representative Gaines. For, in truth, he was one of the most popular men on the Democratic side. Above all will be missed his annual request for an appropriation for the care of "the Hermitage."

John Wesley has filled more pages of the Record than any living human being since the beginning of the government's history. If speech be silver, he has coined more of it than all of the mints since the crime of '73. John Wesley first sprang to fame when "Bob" Taylor was governor of Tennessee. One day there came to the gubernatorial sanctum a tall youth who said:

"I am John Wesley Gaines."

"Have a chair, Mr. Gaines," said "Bob."

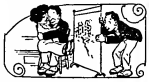
"I am Col. Cole's son-in-law," impressively added the visitor.

"Take two chairs, Mr. Gaines," said "Bob."

Whereupon John Wesley became famous. He campaigned against J. R. McReynolds for congress when that young scion of the tennis cabinet chartered a street car and a brass band and went out to create a bigger noise than John Wesley. He didn't, and Gaines went to congress.

Now cometh young Joe Byrns to smite the Goliath of the Sixth Tennessee district. While he may fill the place with credit, there will be an aching void of dense and dignified silence where once the corridors of the national house rang with the echoes of a people's wrongs.

Spies Hired by Both of the Goulds



THE filing of a suit for absolute divorce by Mrs. Frank J. Gould has revealed how both Mrs. Gould and her husband have been employing private detectives to watch one another. Mrs. Gould placed detectives on her husband's yacht, Helenita, and it is said the evidence secured by these men will play an important part in Mrs. Gould's suit. Mr. Gould in turn placed detectives in his wife's home as servants, it is alleged.

Mrs. Gould will seek her freedom on statutory grounds. The most sensational feature in the action has to do with an episode on Mr. Gould's yacht, in which a young singer, whose name has not been divulged, played a leading part.

It will be alleged, according to report, that Mr. Gould has for several years been training this woman's voice for the grand opera stage under the best masters in Europe, and that she accompanied him on long cruises on his yacht. A specific act of misconduct with the young woman will be alleged to have taken place three or four years ago at Sidney, N. S. There will be much testimony from former members of the Helenita crew.

This, it is said, was only one of a number of acts of misconduct to be charged by Mrs. Gould against her husband.

Mr. Gould has had his wife shadowed for a long time, though it was not until her old butler, Paul, found one of the jealous husband's paid agents peeking through a keyhole that even the servants suspected the house was filled with private detectives.

At the present time acquaintances of the Goulds say, Mrs. Gould has spies in her husband's establishment and the husband has spies in his wife's.

Big Money Earned by Women Embalmers

THERE are several jobs in New York for women that are "going begging." The work pays ten dollars or more per day, and in some instances over a hundred per week, yet there is practically no one to take up the occupation.

"There are only three women in New York who do this work, which is embalming," said the night manager of an undertaking establishment.

"These three are kept so busy that we are compelled, in numerous cases, to confess our inability to comply with the wishes of patrons who prefer women embalmers, and so we have to intrust the work to men instead."

"It is really much easier than nursing in a hospital," said another, "for the embalming methods of the present day are very simple. But where there are thousands of women who are anxious to become nurses there are none who desire to start on this work.

"A woman can show a greater amount of sympathy for the bereaved relatives than a man is capable of doing.

"In many ways they seem so fitted for the work, and it is beyond my comprehension why women don't enter this profession.

"The fact that they do not fear the presence of death can be easily proven by inquiry at the morgue or at any police station. More women than men gather at these places after some tragedy.

"There are embalming schools in this city where woman can enter upon a course in this work, but very few do. Upon graduation they can obtain work immediately, and probably get one or two cases a day at ten dollar each.

"You would?" exclaimed Henley in honest surprise, and to this day he can't understand why Miss Fairley thinks him a man of little taste and less tact.

Telepathic Thirst.

News travels so fast nowadays as to render one almost speechless with wonder at the achievements of the wireless telegraph and telephone, says the Palmyra (N. Y.) Journal. One night last week we won a case of whisky at the Elks' fair in Lyons, and the night we brought it home there were three church members, a town official and two members of the band on hand to meet us on getting off the car. Since our arrival many people whom we have hitherto believed respectable have gone out of their respective ways to speak kindly to us.

Athlete Finds Better Training Food

It was formerly the belief that to become strong, athletes must eat plenty of meat.

This is all out of date now, and many trainers feed athletes on the well-known food, Grape-Nuts, made of wheat and barley, and cut the meat down to a small portion once a day.

"Three years ago," writes a Mich. man, "having become interested in athletics, I found I would have to stop eating pastry and some other kinds of food.

"I got some Grape-Nuts, and was soon eating the food at every meal, for I found that when I went on the track, I felt more lively and active.

"Later, I began also to drink Postum in place of coffee, and the way I gained muscle and strength on this diet was certainly great. On the day of a field meet in June I weighed 124 lbs. On the opening of the football season in Sept., I weighed 140. I attribute my fine condition and good work to the discontinuation of improper food and coffee, and the using of Grape-Nuts and Postum, my principal diet during training season being Grape-Nuts.

"Before I used Grape-Nuts I never felt right in the morning—always kind of 'out of sorts' with my stomach. But now when I rise I feel good, and after a breakfast largely of Grape-Nuts with cream, and a cup of Postum, I feel like a new man." "There's a Reason."

SPORTING GOSSIP

Ball players who are in the habit of betting on the games are fearing that Ban Johnson will drive them out of the American league. Johnson has sent out a circular letter appealing to the club owners and managers to kill all gambling. Ban intimates that it will go hard with any player caught wagering as much as a "nickel" on a ball game. In an official bulletin Johnson orders club owners to stop the betting. One player who always backs himself to win, or, at least, claims he does, is John Powell of the St. Louis Browns. Powell asserts that his income from his wagers is more than his salary as a player. While the authority of the owners and of Ban is confined to the grounds, their influence and that of the players, properly directed, will be a powerful factor. Baseball has been free from the gambler's black hand. It is so essentially a part of the American life that it would be a shame to permit the encroachment of any evil. And once the hydrahead of gambling enters, just so soon will baseball begin to lose its hold upon the public. Long ago gamblers bet high on baseball, and some wagers ran into four figures. In Louisville a plunger framed a deal with three players—Devlin, Nichols and Cramer—to throw a game upon which he had a fortune staked. The plot was exposed and the men were barred from baseball for all time. The expose almost killed baseball in Louisville. It is said that some players bet upon the games. They lay their money upon their own team, however. But the practice should be checked now, and Ban Johnson reasons that a player who bets on himself gets into company where temptation is always present, and some day it may prove too strong to withstand.

Albert Bridwell, the clever young shortstop of the New York National club, was born in Portsmouth, O., 27 years ago. He made his professional debut with Columbus, in the spring of 1903, and finished the season with Atlanta. In 1904 he made such a splendid showing with Atlanta that the Cincinnati National league club drafted him and he was that team's regular shortstop in 1905. In 1906 he was traded to Boston for Infielder Jim Delehanty, and he remained with Boston until last winter when he was included in the famous trade of Bridwell, Needham and Tenny by New York to Boston for Bowerman, Dahlen, McGann and Ferguson. Bridwell, to date, has done splendid work for New York, ably replacing the veteran Dahlen.

"Silk" O'Loughlin is a firm believer that the baseball fans of to-day would prefer to witness a low score, great pitching and fast fielding game, than a veritable slugging bee, productive of a dozen runs or more. "The truth is," said O'Loughlin, recently, "that about two or three hard hitting big score games in a season is quite enough. These 15 to 5 games are too much like old-fashioned village three-old-cat for the red-blooded fans of to-day. The truth is, too, that the games that make new fans and bring the old ones out the next day are the 1 to 0, 2 to 1 and 3 to 2 contests in which, from start to finish, a hit or a brilliant fielding play will turn the tide of victory or defeat. The fan who declares he likes to see 'slugging' believes what he says, but he is mistaken. If it is the visiting team that is doing the 'slugging' this fan doesn't get over his madness for a week. The games that live in one's memory are the games in which both pitchers are at their best; in which the ball is all the time in play; in which the hitting is just hard enough to make sensational fielding possible, and in which a score is so close that the result is actually in doubt until the twenty-seventh putout has been made on both sides." O'Loughlin sees 154 games a season and has the opportunity to test the temper of all kinds of crowds.

The west is the real country right now. In the American league the four western clubs lead the procession, and the four eastern teams are at the bottom. In the National, three western teams are at the top, and only one in the second division.

John Anderson leads the White Sox with an average of .296. Harry Davis leads the Athletics with .228.

HADN'T WALKED ALL THE WAY.

Prisoner at Least Had Change While Crossing River.

"Down in Alabama," said John D. Fenrhake, "there's a deputy marshal who doesn't let any such trifles as extradition laws stop him. Term of court was about to begin at one time, and a gentleman who was out on bail was reported to be enjoying himself over in Georgia. Deputy Jim went after him. Next day he telegraphed the judge: 'I have persuaded him to come.' A few days later he rode into town on a mule, leading his prisoner, tied up snugly with a clothes line. The prisoner looked as if he had seen hard service.

"'Why, for heaven's sake, Jim,' said the judge, 'you didn't make him walk all the way from Georgia, did you?'

"'No, sir,' said Jim.

"'I hoped not,' said the judge.

"'No,' said Jim, 'part of the way I drug him, and when we come to the Tallapoosa river, he swum.'"—Woman's Home Journal.

TWO CURES OF ECZEMA

Baby Had Severe Attack—Grandfather Suffered Torments with It—Owe Recovery to Cuticura.

"In 1884 my grandson, a babe, had an attack of eczema, and after trying the doctors to the extent of heavy bills and an increase of the disease and suffering, I recommended Cuticura and in a few weeks the child was well. He is to-day a strong man and absolutely free from the disease. A few years ago I contracted eczema, and became an intense sufferer. A whole winter passed without once having on shoes, nearly from the knees to the toes being covered with virulent sores. I tried many doctors to no purpose. Then I procured the Cuticura Remedies and found immediate improvement and final cure. M. W. LaRue, 845 Seventh St., Louisville, Ky., Apr. 23 and May 14, '07."

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

A Big Canal.

St. Peter—"If the people of the state would spend one-tenth of the time talking about improving the rivers of their state that they do in denouncing the railroads, there would soon be transportation facilities here for all the crops that this section of the Northwest can raise for several decades," said George Welsh, commissioner of immigration for Minnesota.

Mr. Welsh is pushing the idea of canalizing the Minnesota river, and he grows enthusiastic over the prospects that it offers to give the people of the southern and western part of the state an outlet for their products.

He presented the matter to the residents of Renville county July 4, when he spoke at Fairfax. Congressman Volstead, by previous arrangement, also spoke on the same subject in a neighboring town.

The plan of Mr. Welsh is to deepen and straighten the channel of the Minnesota from its mouth at Fort Snelling to Big Stone lake on the western border of the state. He then proposes that, by locks, Big Stone lake and Traverse lake be connected so that communication could be established between the Red River of the North and the Mississippi. This line of waterway, he points out, could provide a cheap means of moving the crops of this state, as well as those of Canada immediately to the north.

Health Too Expensive.

St. Cloud—"The creameries would be under little or no additional expense to pasteurize all the milk and cream," said W. W. Wall, secretary of the state dairy and food department, in discussing the best method of ridding the state of infected milk. "Every creamery in the state now has a pasteurization plant to treat the skimmed milk returned to the farms, and it would be only a little more trouble to pasteurize all the milk.

"Denmark is the most advanced dairy country in the world, and all of their milk and cream is pasteurized. Denmark has practically all the English butter trade.

"I must confess that I don't like pasteurized milk nor cream, but I am willing to sacrifice my taste, because we can't get money enough from the legislature to have $1,000,000 worth of cattle slaughtered every year."

Lawlessness Rebuked.

Crookston—The lawlessness of the last few months in the North country seems suddenly to have come to an end with the discovery in this city by the police of headquarters of a systematic robbery of this city and vicinity extending over six months, and the conviction after the sensational confession of Nolan and conviction of Zalinski, the bank robbers of Stephen.

Aulis Potteway, a negro, who came here from Minneapolis, was arraigned before Judge Wilde on the charge of grand larceny, and was bound over to the grand jury under bail of $500. Potteway was janitor of the Merchants' National bank building of this city on the salary of $7 per month, his only visible income. Notwithstanding that he spent large sums, maintaining horses and equipages in which he entertained the colored section of the city.

St. Paul—The first Democrat to file with the secretary of state for elective office was numbered 23. He is John Adlard and he files from the Fifty-seventh district for representative. This district includes Grant, Stearns and Traverse counties.

Eveleth—All the mining towns of the two iron ranges and Duluth have united, through the medium of commercial clubs, upon a harmony policy that should do much toward benefiting the whole county. Good roads was the keynote of the convention held here.

Mankato—A horse thief stole a horse belonging to Mrs. Christ Holtze, who lives eight miles west of this city, while it was in a barn in this city, and sold it to Ald. George Atchison. Later the owner found the horse as it was being taken to Mr. Atchison's pasture.

Crookston—Erskine, east of here, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of the opening of the Thirteen Towns, of which the whole eastern Polk county and Clearwater county is composed. An extensive program of sports and addresses made up the entertainment of the day and 3,000 people from the surrounding country attended.

Minneapolis—With tears streaming down his cheeks, Owen Barrett, also known as Ball, a prisoner in the Hennepin county jail, having admitted the hold-up of a Northern Pacific train in Minneapolis last April, penned a letter to his sweetheart in Iowa, releasing her from him and urging her to wed some man who is not "a base criminal like me."

Crookston—The Crookston United States land office returns for the last month show the largest business of any month this year. The total receipts were $11,395.52; $1,054.88 on sales of public lands; $3,358.60 from sales of Chippewa lands; $5,725.26 from sales of Red Lake lands, and $1,256.78 fees and commissions. This makes about 15,000 acres that have passed now into private ownership and cultivation.

ROOTING AT THE OLYMPIC GAMES.

ENGLISH FAIR PLAY A MYTH

TUG OF WAR TEAM VIOLATES RULES OF THE CONTEST.

Men Wear Steel Shod Shoes—Americans Retire After Making Protest That Is Not Allowed.

London.—A serious controversy has arisen between the American athletes and the British Olympic association. The Americans' chief cause of complaint is the arbitrary manner in which their protest against "the flagrantly unfair method of conducting the tug-of-war," was dismissed. Every unprejudiced spectator present at Friday's meeting was convinced that the Americans were justified in refusing to go on with that event.

The United Kingdom had three teams entered in the tug-of-war, made up of the police of the city of London, Liverpool and the metropolitan forces. The drawings brought the American and Liverpool teams into the arena first. The American team complied with the rule which says:

"No competitor shall wear prepared boots or shoes or boots or shoes with any projecting nails, tips, sprigs, points, hollows or projections of any kind."

The Liverpool police appeared in enormous shoes which had steel rims around the heels. The Americans pulled, under protest and making little effort, and then filed a formal protest, which was ignored.

In the semi-final in the fancy diving competition, George W. Gaidzik of the Chicago Athletic association won his heat by a handsome margin. He scored 85.6, while Zurner of Germany was second with 82.8.

As was expected, C. M. Daniels of the New York Athletic club won his heat in the first round of the 100-meter swim, his time, 1:05 4-5, being several seconds below that of the winner of another heat. The heat winners in this contest included H. J. Hebner of the Illinois Athletic club and L. G. Rich, Brookline Swimming club.

London.—Thursday was America's day in the Olympic sports at the stadium, both big events which reached the finals, throwing the discus, free style, and putting the shot, being carried off by Martin J. Sheridan of the Irish-American Athletic club, and Ralph Rose of the Olympic club, San Francisco, respectively.

London. — The gold medals went to Great Britain, France and Sweden, as the winners of the finals of Wednesday's events at the Olympic games. Great Britain was a double winner and France and Sweden each secured one first.

WOMAN FASTS FIFTY-SIX DAYS.

Remarkable Efforts of Mrs. John F. Dietz of Wisconsin.

Winter, Wis.—Mrs. John Dietz, wife of the famous defender of Cameron dam, has just finished a fast of 56 days. Not only does she know no ill effects of this world's record-breaking effort, but she probably owes her life to it. She underwent the trying ordeal to cure appendicitis and according to her husband she has succeeded.

"Mrs. Dietz has just concluded a 56-days' fast and now is free of all pain," declared Mr. Dietz. "She lost 50 or 60 pounds in weight but she will soon regain that."

She was unable to get a doctor because of the legal war that has been waged against Dietz for five years. Dietz has not been arrested during all that time, although all the court machinery of the state was invoked.

Shriners Select Louisville.

St. Paul, Minn.—The Imperial Council of the Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine Wednesday elected officers headed by E. I. Alderman, Marion, Ia., as imperial potentate, and decided to hold the conclave of 1909 in Louisville, Ky. Four cities were contestants for the gathering of next year, Seattle, Louisville, Atlantic City and Detroit. The matter was referred to a committee which reported in favor of Louisville.

ALABAMA TROOPS CALLED OUT.

Strike Situation Is Serious—Fatal Conflict at Adamsville.

Birmingham, Ala.—While the reports concerning the strike situation are greatly exaggerated, there was sufficient cause for alarm to induce Gov. Comer to order the militia of the district to sleep on their arms and remain in readiness for an emergency call.

Friday Gov. Comer, together with Sheriff Higdon and a number of deputies, made an automobile tour of the strike district. So impressed was the governor with the seriousness of the strike situation that on his return to Birmingham three local companies of militia were ordered under arms. A mixed company numbering 100 men went to Adamsville, where Friday afternoon an engagement between strike sympathizers and deputies took place, in which one deputy was killed.

Montgomery, Ala.—Troop D of the First squadron, Alabama cavalry, which has been in camp here participating in the practice shoot, received orders Friday afternoon to report in Birmingham to Sheriff Higdon. The troops left Montgomery on an early train Saturday.

BANKER ZOTTI ARRESTED.

New Yorker Arraigned on Charge of Grand Larceny.

New York. — Frank Zotti, head of the banking institution of Frank Zotti & Co., on Greenwich street, which went into the hands of a receiver on Wednesday, was taken into custody Friday and arraigned before Magistrate Corrigan on a charge of grand larceny. The banker was remanded to the Tombs under $25,000 bail for examination.

The specific charge against Zotti, according to the affidavit of the police, is that he failed to forward to Bulgaria $225 given him by a customer of the bank. Detective McConville in the affidavit adds to the specific charge, that "he had been given to understand that the defendant had withheld other monies amounting to more than $100,000." The banker declared he was the victim of a plot to ruin him. He said that three Pittsburg men had started the trouble which resulted in a receiver being appointed for his bank recently.

HISTORIC BUILDING BURNS.

Structure in Which First Volunteer for Civil War Enlisted.

St. Paul, Minn.—By the burning of a one-story frame building at Market and Third streets, the structure in which the first volunteer for the union armies enlisted in 1861 was destroyed. The building was erected in 1857.

When President Lincoln issued his call for volunteers Gov. Alexander Ramsey of Minnesota, who was then in Washington, was accorded the privilege of offering the first regiment. Immediately a recruiting office was opened in the building that was burned, and within a few minutes Charles Eichler enlisted.

MERCHANT CALLED FIREBUG.

Owner of Fond du Lac Store Arrested on Arson Charge.

Fond du Lac, Wis.—On complaint of State Fire Marshal T. M. Purtell, Isaac Rosenblatt, manager and part owner of the Fair store, one of the largest dry goods stores in Fond du Lac, was arrested on the charge of arson Friday afternoon. It is alleged that he set fire to his store on the morning of July 13. When Rosenblatt was arraigned in court he waived examination and the case was adjourned until July 24. Bail was fixed at $5,000.

Follows His Sister to Death.

Pittsburg, Pa.—William Moffit of Sistersville, W. Va., who came here to attend the funeral of his sister, who committed suicide Tuesday, ended his own life in a manner almost identical with that employed by the young woman.

E. W. CHAFIN NAMED

CHICAGO LAWYER HEADS THE NATIONAL "DRY" TICKET.

CHOSEN ON THIRD BALLOT

Prof. A. S. Watkins of Ohio Is Put Up for Vice-President at Columbus Convention—Platform Is Short.

Columbus, O.—For president, Eugene W. Chafin, Chicago; for vice-president, Prof. Aaron S. Watkins, Ada, O.

The above ticket was nominated Thursday by the Prohibitionist national convention, both men being chosen unanimously. The full indorsement of the convention was not, however, given to Mr. Chafin until after three ballots had been taken.

On the first two ballots Mr. Chafin did not show a great amount of strength, receiving but 195 out of 1,083 votes on the first and 376 out of 1,087 on the second ballot. His nomination was practically assured, however, when the roll call began for the third ballot. His own state, which had voted largely for Daniel R. Sheen of Peoria, and the New York delegation, followed by those of Indiana and Wisconsin, came over to Mr. Chafin, and on the third ballot he received a total of 636 votes. The strongest competitor of Mr. Chafin was Rev. William B. Palmore of St. Louis, who received 274 votes on the first ballot and 418 on the second, and a comparatively small vote after it was evident that the nomination of Mr. Chafin could not be prevented.

Palmore Refuses Second Place.

The convention up to this time had run smoothly and without the slightest friction. It was decided to make Mr. Palmore the vice-presidential nominee and he was named by acclamation. He declined to accept the office, however, and persisted in his attitude despite the strong urgings of his friends. The convention, finding itself confronted with the necessity of naming another vice-presidential candidate, and many of the delegates, being anxious to catch the early night trains for their homes, became involved in a deep parliamentary tangle. The rules were several times suspended and the suspensions immediately revoked. Finally it was decided that Prof. Watkins should be named by acclamation.

There was no opposition to him at the moment and Chairman Scanlon was on the verge of declaring Prof. Watkins the nominee when delegates in various parts of the hall broke in with a flood of motions, counter motions, amendments and suspensions of the rules.

Watkins on First Ballot.

An extended debate followed which finally resulted in the restoration of the rules and a ballot for the vice-presidency. Three men were named, Prof. Watkins, T. B. Demaree of Kentucky and Charles S. Holler of Indiana. The ballot resulted in the nomination of Prof. Watkins by an overwhelming majority, and he was immediately thereafter, upon motion of the Kentucky delegates, made the unanimous choice of the convention.

Both the presidential and vice-presidential nominees are candidates for governor in their respective states on the Prohibition tickets.

Eugene W. Chafin, who leads the Prohibition party this year, is an attorney residing in Chicago. He is a native of Waukesha county, Wis., and for some years practiced law there.

The forenoon session of the convention was devoted to the discussion and adoption of a platform which is probably the shortest on record, containing not more than 350 words.

RETURNS TO HIS PRISON CELL.

Escaped Prisoner Gives Himself Up at Indiana Penitentiary.

Michigan City, Ind.—Thomas McCarthy, aged 40 years, for whose capture the warden of Indiana state prison here has had a reward standing for three years, returned to prison Tuesday evening voluntarily and gave himself up, with the prospect of serving 12 more years, unless the governor or parole board should release him sooner.

In 1905 McCarthy escaped after having been paroled. He went to the Pacific coast and after leading a precarious existence he joined the Salvation Army at Yakima, Wash. His conscience troubled him and after he had earned enough money he started back to prison, paying all his own expenses.

St. Paul's Population 225,300.

St. Paul, Minn.—St. Paul on June 1, 1908, had a population of 225,300, according to the new city directory for this year, which will soon be ready for distribution. This estimate is based on an increase of 12,566 names in the 1908 directory over that of 1905, when the state census showed St. Paul to have a population of 197,025.

FLEET REACHES HONOLULU

BATTLESHIPS ENTER HARBOR OF THE ISLAND CAPITAL.

Welcomed by Thousands—Entire Run from San Francisco Was Pleasant and Uneventful.

Honolulu.—The Atlantic battleship fleet arrived here at noon Thursday. By universal consent the day was made a complete holiday, all business being suspended and thousands of people from the different islands of the territory assembled on Diamond Head and other heights and points of vantage southeast of this city to view the approach of the armada.

Early in the morning the crowds began scrambling up the bluffs to catch the first sight of smoke above the southeastern horizon, and the first realization of the long-cherished hope came at 7:30 in the morning, when a message came from the leper settlement on the Island of Molokai that the fleet had been sighted there, steaming in line of squadron formation at a speed of ten knots. An overcast sky prevented the watchers near here from seeing far out to sea, but the patience of the lookouts was rewarded by the appearance of the Connecticut off the entrance to the channel at noon.

During the entire run to Honolulu the fleet experienced pleasant weather and smooth seas. For two hours or more daily, except on Sunday, the fleet had tactical evolutions and at the same time routine drills were carried on. No noteworthy incidents occurred on the entire voyage, and as a matter of fact, this, the first leg of a long cruise, was rather more uneventful than usual. The fleet never had to stop or slow down nor did any of the ships have to fall out of formation through accidents to steering gear.

The health of the crews has been very good and there have been no deaths or serious accidents since leaving San Francisco. The Nebraska, which was left behind when the fleet sailed from the Golden Gate on account of scarlet fever cases among her crew, overtook the fleet at 6:30 a. m. Wednesday.

THOMAS D. JORDAN DEAD.

Indicted Ex-Comptroller of the Equitable Expires Suddenly.

New York.—Thomas D. Jordan, formerly comptroller of the Equitable Life Assurance society, dropped dead of heart disease late Tuesday afternoon in the Wall street station of the subway. Mr. Jordan had parted from his son, Frank B. Jordan, only a moment before, and a messenger overtook the young man on the street and informed him of his father's death. It was in the course of the Armstrong committee insurance investigation that Mr. Jordan's name came prominently before the public. It was brought out then that Comptroller Jordan had secured loans aggregating $685,000 for himself and James W. Alexander former president of the Equitable, from the Mercantile Trust company, and that these loans had been covered up on the books of the company. This $685,000 came to be known as the "yellow dog" fund.

As a result of the disclosures the grand jury found 18 indictments for forgery and one for perjury against Jordan. Only recently Mr. Jordan appeared before Justice Goff to plead not guilty to the indictments. His trial was set for the fall.

TRAIN HURLED INTO DITCH.

White Mountain Express Wrecked, One Woman Being Killed.

Greenwich, Conn. — One woman was killed, two were perhaps mortally injured, and nearly a dozen persons were seriously hurt when the White Mountain Express, of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, was wrecked 100 feet west of the station here at 9:20 o'clock Thursday morning. Spreading rails caused the ten-car train to leave the tracks while it was crossing a bridge over Steamboat road, and five of the passenger coaches, including four Pullmans, were hurled into a ditch, where they collapsed like paper boxes. That so few of the 180 passengers were killed or injured seems little short of miraculous, as the train was going 50 miles an hour.

Plan to Help Illinois Blind.

Springfield, Ill. — The state board of public charities, at a meeting Thursday, authorized the appointment of a commission by President Billings of the board to ascertain the number of blind in the state and to formulate plans for the employment of the adult blind and for improving the efficiency of the state care in other particulars.

J. M. Greene Dies Suddenly.

Chamberlain, S. D.—J. M. Greene, formerly Republican national committeeman, the foremost citizen of Chamberlain, was found dead in his bed here Wednesday, supposedly of heart disease.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30, 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

The Minnesota editors are to take their summer outing trip next week.

There are some good Republican politicians that predict, that if they defeat Bryan this year, they will know they have been in a race.

There was "some slip between the cup and the lip", and the County Commissioners will not meet to act on the county seat removel petition tomorrow.

We note that some of the republican papers, that have had a goodeal to say about harmony in the party, are commencing to slyly knife some of the nominees on the state ticket. Better have a care gentlemen, or you will stir up a hornets nest before you are aware of it.

Jacobson will have the largest vote in Norman county ever cast for governor He richly deserves it, for he fought the people's battles in the legislature for years without asking any reward Now the people have a chance to repay him for his loyalty to their interests and they will do it,— Norman County Index.

Hennepin county, cast and counted 49020 votes at the last general election, Of these there were 28404 democratic votes. 14 410 republican votes, and only 939 socialist votes, and yet the Socialists comes up from there and advise us to show our strength and vote the ticket. Why don't they show their strength and vote it themselves?.

Polk County have so many candidates for sheriff, that the man who has the most relation, that are voters is pretty sure to win. Orin Daniels seems to be in the lead, and he deserves to be, as he certainly would make a first class sheriff, and the people are not taking any chances of not getting a good officer, if they elect him.

There never was a time when the northern part of the state of Minnesota needed their ablest and best men in congress, than at the present time. Other states and other parts of this state are sending their ablest and best men and so are we. but occasionaly some one comes up from Minneapolis and advises us to elect a man to represent the big Ninth Congressional District in congress, that would have to inquire of a policeman to find the Capitol building when he got to Washington. Minneapolis have their (republican) Frank Nye, to represent them, while Duluth have their J. Adam Bede (Republican) to represent them, while we have Halvor Steenerson (Republican) to represent us. Now when them fellows comes up here advising you to kill the interests of your home country, by putting a new party man in congress, just tell them to go back home and jump into the "swim" themselves, and if they find the water just right, we might try it.

Out of It.

"Yes, he makes a big hit with her. He has a green automobile, and it matches her dress."

LUDWIG THE LUNATIC

Patti Once Threw Him Into a Frenzy of Madness,

A FREAK OF THE CRAZY KING.

He Frightened and Enraged the Great Diva by His Strange Whims, and When She Finally Sang For Him In Munich it Drove Him Wild.

When Patti was in the first heyday of her fame Ludwig II., the mad king of Bavaria, set his heart on having her sing for him at his private auditorium in Munich. He wrote letter after letter, begging, imploring, offering extravagant sums of money, but Patti resolutely refused to go. She had heard too many stories of Ludwig's freaks and was desperately afraid of him, but at last the king offered her a sum so enormous that it seemed ridiculous to refuse it. Then the singer plucked up courage and started for Munich. When she and her maid alighted at the station not even a carriage was there to meet them, and they had to inquire the name of the best hotel and call a cab. That was the first shock to the diva's nerves and temper. After luncheon she started out to see the town and incidentally to examine the posters announcing Europe's greatest singer. Not a mention of her name could she find. She rushed back to the hotel and told her maid to pack the trunks.

Just at that moment a resplendent officer delivered a letter from the king. The letter stated curtly that his majesty would wait for her at 7 o'clock precisely in the royal palace, where his singer in ordinary, Mme. Fischer, would give her farther directions. Mme. Fischer would also sing with Mme. Patti the duets which his majesty wished to hear. A programme was inclosed. Patti wept with rage.

"I have never been treated so brutally," she said. "I shall leave at once. Tell the king so. I will not sing—never, never, never!" The officer pleaded with the irate prima donna. His majesty had been wild with excitement ever since he knew she would come and had not slept for three nights, so great was his joy at the prospect of hearing her.

"Besides," added the officer, "you know your king is—is—is"—

"Crazy," snapped Patti. "Yes, that's very comforting, isn't it? I don't know why I ever came." Just then she caught sight of this postscript:

"The king commands Mme. Patti to appear in pure white, without any color whatever, and not by any means to wear a satin gown, but soft wool. Silk is painful to his majesty."

"His majesty will have to be pained. I have no white woolen gown except my peignoir. I shall wear red velvet."

"Red!" groaned the officer. "Oh, no, no! Red sends his majesty into fits. If you appear in red, he will scream and have convulsions. Oh, do be patient, madame! I will bring Mme. Fischer to you. She understands the king's nerves. She will explain."

He fled from the room, and shortly after Mme. Fischer appeared upon the scene. She soothed Patti into good humor and also attacked the white wool peignoir and transformed it into a most becoming Greek robe.

Before 7 the royal carriage arrived at the hotel and Patti went to the palace. She was led through dimly lighted rooms and corridors into Ludwig's private theater, which was in utter darkness save for the moonlight that entered through the windows. Patti stood upon the dark stage, while an orchestra, somewhere out of sight, began a soft prelude. Through the gloom she could just make out a white face in the royal box opposite the stage. Not another auditor was in the great hall.

Patti felt the cold shivers creeping over her. She shook with nervousness and fear, and when she should have begun her aria not a sound could she make. She opened her mouth, but her throat was paralyzed from nervous terror. There was a pause. The king sprang up and leaned forward out of the box, his white face gleaming in the moonlight. The violins repeated the prelude. Patti gathered herself together and made one heroic effort. Her voice rang out into the great empty place, and the king sank back into the dark box.

Patti, though badly scared, made the effort of her life and finished the aria from "La Traviata" triumphantly and stood flushed with victory. Dead silence. Not a sound came from the gloom before her. She went off the stage in a temper. Mme. Fischer was behind the scenes, and Patti waited with her for the signal to sing the next number. A messenger appeared at the door. His majesty had had enough music and had gone to his apartments. For a moment Patti stood stunned. Then she laughed. The rudeness was so colossal that it was funny. Mme. Fischer took the diva to supper and then home.

The next morning Mme. Fischer called at the hotel once more, accompanied by the court chamberlain, who bore the promised check, an autograph letter of thanks from the king and some jewels of great value. King Ludwig, Mme. Fischer said, was in one of his maddest moods, wild with regret, cursing himself and cursing Patti. He had walked the floor all night, groaning that he was a traitor, for Patti's voice had so ravished his senses that for one moment he had gone over to Italian music and had been false to Wagner, the one musician who alone had satisfied his majesty's soul.

"That was better than having bored him," added Patti, shrugging her shoulders.

Her Sunday Knitting.

"Years ago," said an Auburn woman eighty years young, "it was counted a sin among the good wives of the little Maine town where I was born to waste a single moment of time. I have heard my grandmother tell the story of one dame who much scandalized the church people on one never to be forgotten occasion. People who went early to church were surprised one Sabbath morning to see Aunt Betsy sitting away up in front, gray yarn stockings in her hands and her knitting needles clicking merrily away as she worked. The minister stopped in surprise as he passed her on his way to the pulpit, but the old lady was not one whit disturbed by his disapproving air. Smiling serenely, she said complacently: 'Thought I'd knit a stitch while the people are gathering. I never was one to waste a minute, elder.' And the good dame continued to click her needles, while the horrified minister hastened to his desk. Not till he began his sermon did Aunt Betsy lay aside her Sunday knitting work."—Kennebec Journal.

She Investigated.

What Elsie's sister wanted to know was where Elsie got that beautiful silver mounted walking stick. But Elsie didn't want Elsie's sister to know, so Elsie's sister got Elsie's father to ask Elsie.

"I found it," Elsie poutingly informed her father, "floating like a schooner on the waves one day when I was bathing."

But two days later Elsie's sister said to Elsie:

"Come—tell me! What is his name?"

"Name!" repeated Elsie blankly. "What do you mean?"

"I mean, dear," said Elsie's sister, "that last night I tried to make that stick of yours float in the bath, and—well, darling, it sank!"—Pearson's Weekly.

Carlyle Was a Terror.

The domestic infelicity of the Carlyles is common knowledge, but it is not inappropriate to give Mrs. Carlyle's view of her husband. "If he would only be satisfied!" she used to sometimes complain of Carlyle. "But I have had to learn that when he does not find fault he is pleased, and that has to content me."

On one occasion when Carlyle was away from home Mrs. Carlyle busied herself to get all in perfect order for her husband's arrival, and when all was complete—his dinner ready, his armchair in its usual position, his pipe and tobacco prepared, all looking as comfortable as possible—Mrs. C. sat down at last to rest and to expect him with a quiet mind. He arrived, and "after he had greeted me, what do you think he did? He walked to the window and shook it and asked, 'Where's the wedge of the window?' And until we had found that blessed wedge nothing would content him. He said the window would rattle and spoil all."

It's Results That Count

In cooking it's the results that count. So when a housewife starts to make Bread or Rools or Pies, naturally she wants her cooking to have that rich crisp, pleasing odor. But it must also have that whiteness, lightness and wholesomeness which is so essential to good cooking.

Charlotte Bronte's Last Tribute.

"He will not separate us—we have been so happy!" These were the last words of Charlotte Bronte when, having become Mrs. Nicholls and having lived with her husband only nine months, death came to snatch the cup of domestic felicity from the lips of the happy pair. A low, wandering delirium came on. Wakening for an instant from this stupor, she saw her husband's woe worn face and caught the sound of some murmured words of prayer that God would spare her. "Oh," she whispered, "I am not going to die, am I? He will not separate us—we have been so happy!"

MR. SYLVESTER E. SMITH, Room 218, Granite Block, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "Peruna is the best friend a sick man can have.

"A few months ago I came here in a wretched condition. Exposure and dampness had ruined my once robust health. I had catarrhal affections of the bronchial tubes, and for a time there was a doubt as to my recovery.

"My good honest old doctor advised me to take Peruna, which I did and in a short time my health began to improve very rapidly, the bronchial trouble gradually disappeared, and in three months my health was fully restored.

ITCHING HUMOR ON BOY

His Hands Were a Solid Mass, and Disease Spread All Over Body—Cured In 4 Days By Cuticura.

"One day we noticed that our little boy was all broken out with itching sores. We first noticed it on his little hands. His hands were not as bad then, and we didn't think anything serious would result. But the next day we heard of the Cuticura Remedies being so good for itching sores. By this time the disease had spread all over his body, and his hands were nothing but a solid mass of this itching disease. I purchased a box of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment, and that night I took the Cuticura Soap and lukewarm water and washed him well. Then I dried him and took the Cuticura Ointment and anointed him with it. I did this every evening and in four nights he was entirely cured. WAGNER GIVEN CREDIT FOR PLACING PIRATES ON TOP

Pittsburg Fans are tumbling over themselves in their willingness to contribute to the big fund, which will be expended on one of the greatest ball players baseball has ever known—Hans Wagner. Thousands of dollars have already been subscribed.

At the time of this writing Pittsburg is in first place, largely because of Wagner's brilliant playing and hard hitting.

The Pirates cannot boast of many sluggers this season, but the team has been batting very consistently as a whole since it recovered from its recent severe slump, and the bingles have been on the timely order in nearly every game. The team has but two men in the .300 class of sluggers—Hans Wagner and Roy Thomas. The latter has been hitting better since he joined the Pirates than for many years, with the result that his name is now emblazoned upon the league's roll of honor as a .300 hitter. Wagner is nearly always above the .300 mark, and, if he is not found leading the league when the official figures are given out at the close of the season, many Pittsburg fans will lose their guess. Wagner's record as a batsman has never been equaled, and it is never likely to be.

The other day, "The Flying Dutchman" made the two-thousandth safe hit he has hammered out since he entered fast company. Just think of this record! Two thousand times this wonderful exponent of the greatest of all sports has come to the plate and landed safely on the ball. Not only has he made this remarkable number of hits, but his record as a run-getter is also marvelous. He has scored more than 1,000 runs in the 12 years that he has been in fast company, and there is no doubt at all that he will have passed the 1,100 mark before the close of the present campaign. He has stolen 500 bases, has taken part in more than 1,500 games, and has been at bat nearly 6,000 times. His grand batting average for the 12 years, counting his present mark of .305 for the present season is .347.

They say that Wagner is drawing a salary of $10,000 this season from the Pittsburg club. If that is true, can anybody have the hardihood to say that he does not deserve every cent of it?

WON PENNANT WITHOUT SIGNS

Boston Americans Under Jimmy Collins Had No Signals.

Pitcher Jesse Tannehill, traded by Boston to Washington recently, the other day revealed the astonishing fact that the Boston team, under Collins' management, won two championships without signs. Said he:

"One hears much of signs on a ball team, and yet some of the most successful teams never had any signs. The Boston Americans, under Jimmy Collins, won two pennants, and they never had any signs. Of course, the catcher signaled the pitcher, but there was no hit-and-run sign nor anything else. The players went through a game. If the man on first stole, the batter tried to help him out, but there was no sign for the play, and yet the team played great ball. I was with New York, and I know that we spent a whole lot of time trying to get the Boston's signs. To my utter surprise, I learned, after joining the Boston team, that they did not have any. Jimmy Collins does not believe in them, and I guess he's right. There are more games lost because of a mix-up in signs than are won by them. The most successful team, to my notion, is the one which has the fewest signs. Signs bother the average player, and he is so anxious about the signals that he forgets everything else, with the result that he does not hit when he would if not hampered by signals."

TWO UMPIRES NECESSARY IN EVERY BALL GAME

President Kilfoyle of Cleveland Club Believes Arbitrators Make Decisions Too Quick.

"There isn't a doubt according to my way of thinking as to the advisability of having two umpires instead of one in every game," says President Kilfoyle of the Cleveland club.

"Good umpires, however, are scarce; scarcer, probably, than good ball players, and goodness knows they are hard enough to find. Every American and National league club is represented by a scout all season and the 16 of them do not find a handful of new players from April to October.

"Probably Ben Johnson figures that eight poor umpires would be worse than six 'tolerable' ones, but it ought to be possible to find four more men in the O'Loughlin-Sheridan-Evans-Hurst-Connolly-Egan class. They are good men and I am sure each one of them has done his level best in every game played.

"I think the trouble with most umpires is that they give their decisions too quickly. If they would all take a second or two to see the finish of a play there would be far less fault found with their decisions.

"The double umpire plan would probably mean the appointment of four new arbitrators, making ten in all—or two extra men for emergencies. There are six umpires now, giving two cities in the league the benefit of the double umpire system every day. Even if only eight umpires were on the staff it would be a change for the better. In rare instances where one of the arbitrators failed to appear the arrangement would be no worse than it is now."

GOSSIP OF THE DIAMOND

Al Selbach is clouting the ball at a .297 clip for Harrisburg, in the Tri-state.

Ball is letting down materially in batting. This has hurt the Highlanders severely, as the subinfielder's slugging had helped them over many a rough place in the road.

Maddox is winning a long string of games. He looks like the wonder he was touted, all right.

Mathewson keeps right on pitching 1905 ball. He seems to be fully as great as ever.

Mitchell, one of the batting sensations of last season, is hitting about .190 this season. The Reds are falling back largely on this account.

Madison, Wis., has a second baseman named Mee. Where are Himm and Il playing?

Brown is not only pitching wonderful ball, but doing the best batting of his life this season.

Ald. Diehl, the rich Cincinnati politician, who plays ball now and then, just for fun, and managed to lead the American association with the stick last season—hitting .393—cut in again at Toledo the other day, just to kill time. He made four hits by way of diversion.

Purtell, the young White Sox, is getting along in fine style and is a credit to the team.

Jimmy Barrett, the former Detroit star, has a batting average of .280 with Providence. He has accepted 51 out of 52 chances, stolen five bases, and got five assists from the outfield in 29 games. Manager Duffy says that Barrett has proved a great help to the Providence team.

Eddie Collins is putting up such a good game at short and hitting so well for the Athletics that Manager Mack can't take him out now to make room for Barry.

Because Hardy, the Nashville player substituted for Seabaugh, wore tan shoes in a Southern league championship game recently at Montgomery Umpire Fitzsimmons ordered the game forfeited to Montgomery after waiting the prescribed time for Hardy to adopt regulation togs. Manager Bernhardt protested, and the league directors will be asked to rule on the decision.

BED-BOUND FOR MONTHS.

Hope Abandoned After Physicians' Consultation.

Mrs. Enos Shearer, Yew and Washington Sts., Centralia, Wash., says: "For years I was weak and run down, could not sleep, my limbs swelled and the secretions were troublesome; pains were intense. I was fast in bed for four months. Three doctors said there was no cure for me, and I was given up to die. Being urged, I used Doan's Kidney Pills. Soon I was better, and in a few weeks was about the house, well and strong again."

WAS ONLY RED BLOOD.

And Three-Year-Old Had Been Told That It Was Blue.

Three-year-old Allan had a very aristocratic grandma, who prided herself on her own and her husband's blue-blooded ancestry. She told him heroic deeds of them and warned him from ever playing with boys of low degree.

One day Allan came screaming upstairs to his mamma and grandma, holding his hand up covered with blood, where he had cut his little finger. They were both greatly alarmed, as he was a child who rarely cried or complained when hurt. Mamma washed the blood off and, examining the cut, said:

"Why, dear, it's not so very bad. Does it hurt you so much?"

"I'm not cryin' 'cause it hurts," he said, "but 'cause it's only red blood, and grandma said I had blue."—Philadelphia Ledger.

"William," said the head of the firm, looking at his watch, "I have business out of town this afternoon and may be detained several hours. If anybody should call—"

"Ther' ain't no ball game to-day, Mr. Spotcash," interrupted the office boy.

"I said nothing about ball games, William," rejoined his employer, eying him sternly. "However, my business is such that it can wait until some other day. That will be all just now, William."

Had Seen Attended To.

An Italian went up to the civil service commissioners' rooms in the federal building the other day to be examined for a laborer's position. He answered most of the questions correctly. Finally they asked him if he had ever been naturalized. He seemed a bit puzzled, but at last his face lighted up.

DROPPED COFFEE

Doctor Gains 20 Pounds on Postum.

A physician of Wash., D. C., says of his coffee experience:

"For years I suffered with periodical headaches which grew more frequent until they became almost constant. So severe were they that sometimes I was almost frantic. I was sallow, constipated, irritable, sleepless; my memory was poor, I trembled and my thoughts were often confused.

"My wife, in her wisdom, believed coffee was responsible for these ills and urged me to drop it. I tried many times to do so, but was its slave.

"Finally Wife bought a package of Postum, and persuaded me to try it, but she made it same as ordinary coffee and I was disgusted with the taste. (I make this emphatic because I fear many others have had the same experience.) She was distressed at her failure and we carefully read the directions, made it right, boiled it full 15 minutes after boiling commenced, and with good cream and sugar, I liked it—it invigorated and seemed to nourish me.

"This was about a year ago. Now I have no headaches, am not sallow, sleeplessness and irritability are gone, my brain clear and my head steady. I have gained 20 lbs. and feel I am a new man.

"I do not hesitate to give Postum due credit. Of course dropping coffee was the main thing, but I had dropped it before, using chocolate, cocoa and other things to no purpose.

"Postum not only seemed to act as an invigorant, but as an article of nourishment, giving me the needed phosphates and albumens. This is no imaginary tale. It can be substantiated by my wife and her sister, who both changed to Postum and are hearty women of about 70.

"I write this for the information and encouragement of others, and with a feeling of gratitude to the inventor of Postum."

BORAX! NATURE'S DISINFECTANT, CLEANSER AND PURIFIER

Everybody realizes the necessity of some method of purification of sinks, drains and utensils in which may lurk the germ of a dreaded disease.

Health is a question of cleanliness and prevention.

Most people are familiar with the use of disinfectants in their ordinary sense—all of which are unpleasantly associated with disagreeable odors, on which are depended to kill the contagion (which disinfectants must of necessity be of a more or less dangerous character) and must be used for this purpose and for no other, and in consequence kept from children and careless handling.

There is, however, within the reach of all our readers a simple, safe and economical article that will not only answer for every disinfecting purpose—but can also be used for a multitude of domestic cleansing and purifying purposes—Borax.

Borax is a pure, white harmless powder coming direct from Nature's laboratory; in fact Borax has often been called "Nature's Cleanser and Disinfectant."

Two tablespoonfuls of Borax in a pailful of hot water poured down the grease-choked pipes of a sink, or flushed through a disease-laden drain, cleanses and purifies it, leaving it clean and sweet.

Bed clothing and clothes used in a sick room can be made hygienically clean and snowy-white, if washed in a hot solution of Borax water.

Kitchen and eating utensils, used during illness will be kept from all possibility of contagion if Borax is used when washing them. Pure as snow and harmless as salt, and because it can be used for almost every domestic and medical purpose, Borax must be considered the one great household necessity.

The Candy Girl.

He was one of those sentimental chaps who imagine the only way to capture a girl's heart is to send her volumes of poetry. Selecting a book of seasonable verse he sent it to his lady fair with the following scribbled on the fly-leaf:

> "Dearest, as I seek your heart,
> A book of verse I do impart!"

And the pretty but sensible girl, who did not care a rap if Shakespeare had been a pirate instead of a poet, returned the verses with the following lines:

> "To the woods with this sludge.
> If my heart you'd really budge,
> Send me up a pound of fudge."

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

The Great Northern Must Pay.

St. Paul—Gross earnings taxes paid to the state by the Great Northern road will be increased $60,000 a year if a decision filed by Judge O. B. Lewis in the Ramsey county district court is upheld by the higher courts.

The suit to which Judge Lewis' decision applies has been in the Ramsey county court for years. It was begun by the state to enforce payment of the gross earnings tax of the Great Northern road at the rate of 4 per cent as provided by a law of 1903, and involves the difference between that rate and 3 per cent, which the company contended was its rate of taxation as fixed for all time by a territorial law.

For every year since the enactment of the law of 1903 the company has paid taxes at the rate of 3 per cent, and the state, to bring the legal question to a test, began suit for 1 per cent additional on the earnings for 1905, the total tax at 4 per cent for that year being $120,734.38.

The beginning of the present Great Northern system was the old Minnesota & Pacific, for which the territorial legislature granted a charter in 1857, in which it was provided that the company should pay 3 per cent on its gross earnings in lieu of all other taxes. The railroad company has contended that under the terms of this charter it is exempt from the requirements of the law of 1903.

Lid on Diners.

Minneapolis—It is unlawful for railway companies to sell liquor in their dining or buffet cars, a custom which has long been in practice. This is the opinion of the state attorney general's office, written yesterday afternoon by George W. Peterson, assistant attorney general.

The question of the right of the railways to sell liquor to their patrons has never before been presented to the attorney general, but no permission to conduct a retail business can be found in the law, and in the absence of that permission the act is declared unlawful. The decision will affect nearly every railway line in the state.

"My opinion," says Mr. Peterson, "is that the sale is unlawful, and that chapter 16 of the Laws of 1905 does not contemplate the sale of liquor on trains."

If this opinion is sustained by the courts the railroads are liable to prosecution in every county through which their dining cars run.

Grotesque Holdup.

Minneapolis — Two highwaymen eclipsed all records for daring when they entered Striegl & Glassbrenner's meat market, 2003 Washington avenue south, locked Mr. Glassbrenner in the refrigerator and looted the cash register.

The men entered the place when no one was there but the proprietor and asked for some lard. To get this Mr. Glassbrenner had to go into the refrigerator. As he went in one of the robbers sprang for the door and closed it on the outside with the night lock.

The two men then went to the cash register, opened the drawer and took the money, amounting to about $40.

Glassbrenner at first attempted to open the door and failing in this he broke the glass in a window with his fist. He was badly cut in doing so, but he crawled through the window and out into the market just as the men darted out the front door.

Much Cash.

St. Paul—Minnesota had more cash on hand the 18th than on any day since the state was organized. The total of $3,013,274 was credited to the state, all drawing interest at 2 per cent. The pile may get still higher, but never before has it passed the $3,000,000 mark.

This plethora of cash is due to the advance payments by the three large counties. The public examiner last year suggested that it would be only fair to advance money on payments due the state, just as they do to the various cities and special funds. Not for a month or more after the taxes are received is the amount to the state figured, but by handing over a good share of what will be the state's the interest which formerly went to the counties for a month and a half or two months, now goes to the state.

Advance payments have been made by St. Louis county, $225,000; Hennepin county, $150,000; Ramsey county, $100,000.

Minneapolis—For ten years preceding last year, when the sane Fourth idea was first realized in Minneapolis, the average fire loss per year on this day was $1,918.12. In 1907, when the sane Fourth was first celebrated, the total fire loss was only $35. This year the total loss from fire on the Fourth was only $25.

Crookston—Mrs. George F. Carpenter, wife of one of the prominent and wealthy merchants of Crookston, was buried beneath the ruins of a heavy automobile five miles west of Crookston. Her legs were broken in two places and she received other injuries about the head and body. Her recovery is believed probable.

Minneapolis—The generosity of one visiting Shriner and his wife appeared when a South Dakota noble and his lady presented Maternity hospital in Minneapolis with $500. Part of the fund is to be used in endowing a bed for some little waif for one year, and the rest is to be applied on the mortgage against the hospital building.

Hamline—Demonstration that the Minnesota state fair has one of the fastest, if not the fastest, mile tracks in the world, and is in proud possession of the champion track builder in the person of C. Milton Griggs, vice president and superintendent of speed, was made before 5,000 people July 4, when Lady Maud C paced a mile in 2:05½ during the Twin City Driving association's meet.

LIBERTY DAWNS FOR TURKS

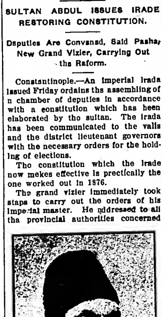
SULTAN ABDUL ISSUES IRADE RESTORING CONSTITUTION.

Deputies Are Convened, Said Pasha, New Grand Vizier, Carrying Out the Reform.

Constantinople.—An imperial irade issued Friday ordains the assembling of a chamber of deputies in accordance with a constitution which has been elaborated by the sultan. The irade has been communicated to the valis and the district lieutenant governors with the necessary orders for the holding of elections.

The constitution which the irade now makes effective is practically the one worked out in 1876.

The grand vizier immediately took steps to carry out the orders of his imperial master. He addressed to all the provincial authorities concerned a circular telegram convening the chamber of deputies, in which he pointed out that the method of forming the chamber is determined by an organic statute which, according to the official communication, is "an illustrious institution of the sultan."



Abdul Hamid II.

Startling as was the sudden dismissal of Ferid Pasha from the grand viziership and the appointment of Said Pasha in his place, this step was as nothing compared to the sensation created in all quarters by the official announcement that the sultan had decided to convoke a parliament.

Belgrade, Servia. — Cipher dispatches received Friday night from the European villages of Macedonia declare that the Young Turks are complete masters of the situation.

Vienna.—It is reported here that the towns of Monastir, Uskub and Saloniki are in the hands of the Young Turks. Order has been maintained everywhere.

Hughes Will Run Again.

Saranac Inn, N. Y.—Gov. Charles Hughes will accept a renomination if the Republican party of this state desires him to again be its candidate. In a statement made public Friday night the governor so declared himself and said the personal reasons which prompted him to say privately some time ago that he did not desire a renomination are not controlling and that "if renominated I ought to accept."

Eight Cadets Suspended.

West Point, N. Y.—Eight cadets in the United States Military academy here were sent to their homes Thursday as a result of hazing members of the fourth class.

WINS IN OLYMPIC MARATHON.

American Captures Great Olympic Games Race.

London.—It would be no exaggeration in the minds of the 100,000 spectators who witnessed the finishing struggle of the Marathon race at the Olympian arena Friday, to say that it was the most thrilling event that has occurred since that Marathon race in ancient Greece, where the victor fell at the goal and, with a wave of triumph, died. And it was won by an American.

It was an American day and the resentments of Thursday, which rankled strongly in the breasts of Americans here when they came to the stadium, were forgotten not only in the victory of John F. Hayes, the Irish-American Athletic club runner, but in the splendid record made by the other Americans, who were well to the front in the line of those that finished.

Six Americans started in the Marathon race and nine English runners. Of the first ten men to reach the coveted goal, four were Americans.

The second man was Hefferon of South Africa. The first Englishman who crossed the line came in twelfth. He was W. T. Clarke.

Dorando was first to enter the stadium at the finish. He staggered, dazed and delirious, and in the last 300 yards fell four times and was helped up by track officials, who finally half-carried him across the line. Because of this he was disqualified.

TWO DEAD, TWELVE WOUNDED.

Boston. — Two dead, a man and a woman probably shot fatally, and ten others suffering from bullet wounds, sums up the record of the murderous career of two bandits who Wednesday terrorized the Jamaica Plain district, eluding the pursuit of hundreds of policemen and thousands of citizens. Starting on Tuesday night by entering a saloon in Jamaica Plain, three men, who are supposed to be Italians, killed one man with revolvers, wounded two others and, rifling the cash register, got away with $90.

Early Wednesday evening, after the police had searched for them unsuccessfully all day, two of the robbers again appeared in Jamaica Plain and, firing revolvers, ran through the most thickly settled part of the district, leaving a trail of victims behind them.

Early Thursday the pair were supposed to be hiding in Forest Hills cemetery, which was surrounded by several hundred heavily armed policemen.

Herbert S. Knox of Roslindale, night watchman at the cemetery, is the victim who is dead.

Boston.—One of the bandits who "shot up" Jamaica Plains, killed two persons, wounded 11, and then took refuge in a cemetery, was killed by the police, another was wounded and the third was arrested.

Forty Hurt in Collision.

Lovedale, Ill.—Forty persons were injured, some of them probably fatally, and more than a dozen so severely that they had to be taken to hospitals. Tuesday in a head-on collision between two Aurora, Elgin & Chicago cars at Lovedale station. The disaster occurred when the coaches were each running at a speed estimated at 40 miles an hour and the crash when they came together was terrific.

"Bill" Hazard Is Rescued.

Bassett, Neb.—"Bill" Hazard made his escape from jail at the place Friday. Several weeks ago he broke jail at Gregory, S. D., where he was held on the charge of stealing horses, and was captured last Thursday at Newport by Sheriff Marsh of Rock county and placed in jail here.

STANDARD OIL WINS

COURT OF APPEALS KNOCKS OUT $29,240,000 PENALTY.

JUDGE LANDIS REVERSED

His Conduct of the Famous Rebate Case Is Severely Arraigned and a New Trial Is Ordered.

Chicago.—Federal judges in the court of appeals lifted the burden of a $29,240,000 fine from the shoulders of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana Wednesday and reversed the judgment of Judge Landis, by which the heaviest fine ever imposed in a federal court was saddled upon the oil company found guilty on 1,462 counts of accepting rebates from railroads. Speedy rehearing of the case, which has attracted widespread attention, is considered improbable, and the counsel for the oil company contend that a second conviction cannot be obtained.

The case was remanded with instructions that a new trial be held.

The jurists making up the court of appeals are Judges Grosscup, Seaman and Baker.

Judge Grosscup delivered the opinion of the court, Judges Baker and Seaman concurring, and in sharp arraignment of the conduct of the trial judge intimated that he may have presumed to hold himself above the law.

Judge Landis Called Arbitrary.

The decision declares that the manner in which Judge Landis decided upon the number of offenses that had been committed by the defendant company was arbitrary. It holds that some other method than the one he used should have been applied.

Then it passes to the amount of the fine, which it declares was "sufficient to have wiped out many times the property of the defendant." The court holds that the only company on trial was the Standard Oil Company of Indiana. It says that this corporation alone could be punished and that to attempt to punish its holding corporation would be to assert that a person could be punished who was never before the court or who had never stood trial. This, the judges say, would be to assert a startling principle of law.

Others Than Commerce Law.

The court declares that the arraignment of the violation of an interstate commerce law was to be commended and that the results of such violations were not too strongly stated. It says, however, that the interstate commerce law is not the only one in the United States, and that it is because there are others that the case is reversed and remanded.

On the amount of the fine, the upper court said:

"Did the court in the fine imposed abuse its discretion? The defendant indicted, tried and convicted was the Standard Oil company, a corporation of Indiana. The capital stock of this corporation is $1,000,000. There is nothing in the record in the way of evidence that some of the assets of the corporation were in excess of that amount. It may therefore be safely assumed that but for the relation of the defendant to another corporation not before the court, the court would have measured out punishment on the basis of the facts just stated."

The judges then commented on the punishment of the defendant in such a large amount and continued, saying:

"Briefly stated, the reason of the trial court for imposing this sentence was because it was brought out on examination that the capital stock of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana was principally owned by the New Jersey corporation, a corporation not before the court. The trial court, adding that in concessions of the character for which the defendant before the court had been indicted, tried and convicted, the New Jersey corporation was not a 'virgin' offender.

"Can an American judge, without abuse of judicial discretion, condemn anyone who has not had his day in court? That to our minds, is strange doctrine in Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence."

President Orders Re-Trial.

Oyster Bay, N. Y. — President Roosevelt has directed the attorney general to take immediate steps for the re-trial of the Standard Oil case.

Battleships Resume Their Journey.

Honolulu.—The Atlantic battleship fleet bade adieu Wednesday to the hospitable shores of Hawaii and at 2:30 p. m. the flagship Connecticut left her wharf and steamed outside the harbor entrance where the fleet assembled preparatory to weighing anchor at six o'clock and sailing away to Auckland, N. Z.

Haskell for Democratic Treasurer.

Guthrie, Okla. — Gov. C. N. Haskell has been tendered the treasurership of the national Democratic committee. Formal announcement, carrying his acceptance, it is said, will be made when the committee meets for organization in Chicago Saturday.

ASKS FOR A FIGHTING NAVY

PRESIDENT ADDRESSES CONFERENCE ON NEW BATTLESHIPS.

Yacht Mayflower Runs Down Lumber Schooner and Saves Crew on Way to Newport.

Newport, R. I. — Pleading for popular support for a "first-class fighting navy," a navy capable of seeking out the enemy and "hammering him into quits," President Roosevelt was the central figure here Wednesday in the most notable conference of American naval officers ever called together to consult and discuss, in a broad, general way, the future United States battleships.

The president spoke publicly for more than half an hour, and then the conference went into executive session for one hour. During this session the president took a leading part in the discussion. He argued as a layman, he explained, and did not attempt to give advice to professional men. He impressed upon the officers, however, that it was given to them to keep the American navy abreast of the times and to make it the hard-hitting, efficient fighting force which he believes to be a guarantee against the possibility of war. Mr. Roosevelt characterized the navy as the cheapest form of safety insurance policy the nation can obtain. The president sailed for Oyster Bay in the afternoon, but the battleship conference will continue here and in Washington until definite plans for the ships to be laid down in the near future are decided upon.

When the trim little cruiser yacht Mayflower, flying the president's white crested flag of blue at the main truck, steamed into the harbor Wednesday morning nearly two hours behind schedule time, with her bowsprit missing, one anchor gone, bowplates dented and six strange figures in black oilskins and sou'westers gathered in the bow, she brought the story of an adventurous night's run in the blackest fog of the summer and of a collision in which the lumber-laden schooner Menawa was cut practically in two by the president's yacht.

PRINCE LANDS AT QUEBEC.

Warships Salute Wales and Governor General Welcomes Him.

Quebec, Que.—The prince of Wales landed from the British battleship Indomitable Wednesday amid the deafening roar of guns from the international fleet of British, French and American warships, and the tumultuous demonstrations of 50,000 persons massed upon the wharves and the terraced heights of the city.

It was a spectacle of truly royal splendor, for the latest type of British Dreadnought, with the royal standard flying came to anchor among the double column of foreign warships and the prince was welcomed ashore by Earl Grey, governor general of Canada, Premier Laurier and the assembled dignitaries, flanked by thousands of soldiers and a multitude of people.

Quebec, Que.—The prince of Wales had another day of strenuous activity beginning Friday morning with a grand review of the troops, sailors and marines on the plains of Abraham, then officiating as the title deeds of this historic battlefield were turned over as a permanent memorial, between times attending gala luncheons and dinners, and finally at night mingling with the gay throngs of beautifully-dressed women at the state ball at the Parliament building. About 23,000 men took part in the review.

BISHOP POTTER IS DEAD.

Noted New York Prelate Succumbs After Long Illness.

Cooperstown, N. Y.—Henry Codman Potter, seventh Protestant Episcopal bishop of the diocese of New York, died Tuesday night at "Fernleigh," his summer home here, after an illness of several weeks. The bishop was unconscious all day and the end, which came at 8:35 o'clock, was peaceful and quiet. The prelate was 74 years old.

Gathered at the bedside of the dying churchmen were Mrs. Potter, his wife; Mrs. Mason C. Davidge, who came from California, and Miss Sarah Potter, his two daughters; Alonzo Potter, his son; Edward S. Clark, Stephen C. Clark and Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Clark. Mrs. Charles Russell and Mrs. William Hyde, his two other daughters, who are abroad, have been notified.

Cooperstown, N. Y.—The funeral of Bishop C. Potter of the diocese of New York was held in this village Friday morning. The services were in the historic Christ church.

Lightning Kills Guardsman.

Gettysburg, Pa.—As the result of a terrific electrical storm which passed over the Pennsylvania National Guard encampment here Thursday night, it is reported that three troopers were killed and two score injured, some of them seriously, by being struck by lightning. The tent occupied by Gov. Stuart was blown down, as were a number of others.

THE SUNBEAM,

BY W. G. HUNT.

Minnesota will again take their place in the republican column in November. Jacobson is the leader that can lead to Victory.

There is not a nominee on the repulican state ticket that is more satisfactory to the farmers of northern Minnesota than Judge Mills for Railroad and warehouse Commisioner.

The Red Lake Falls Gazette claims they are republican. To late whipping up old boy Jacobson has passed the last quarter and is on the home strech.

St Hilaire is getting up a potition to establish a County School of agriculture at that place which had ought to meet with a ready response throuout the county. Push it along

The democratic papers seems to do a goodeal of worrying about Jacobsons method of eating pie but the most that troubles them is that he will take the cake in November.

The new road law has certainly not worked as good as the old method in this locality as there has comparitivly been little or no road work done either in Deer Park township or Highlanding this year. Last year under the old system you could see the road improvements on every hand at this season of the year. Where are they now? What road work has been done in either the township of Highlanding or Deer Park this year? The answer must be nothing. On this side of the river in this town ship there has been a little ditching done, but when you get on the north side of the river there has been comparitively nothing done. If the law was passed to give some people good wages and hang up the road work it is fulfilling its mission, as there has been no poll tax work done in our township, that is certain. Now some of the people want to saddle hands onto the town to make more soaps and less work.

The campaign for the republican nomination for sheriff of this county should receive the careful attention of the voters. There seems to be only two prominent candidates in the field at the present time viz: Lewis Nelson sometimes called "It", on account of his ineficiency and Jones of St. Hilaire a gentelman who is very little known in the eastern part of the county, althou we understand he is a man that has the reputation of being very well qalified for the position. There has been some talk of the east end of the county putting up a candidate for this office but up to the present time he has not shown up J. W. McGinty who has filed for the democratic nomination will undouctly make a strong campaign for election in November and he is a man of whom no one can say "He is not qualified in every way for the position." The better element in Thief River Falls realize that they made a mistake in foisting the present incumbent onto an unsuspecting people by thier solid vote two years ago and will not give him that solid support this year.

Boost Red Lake County.

Some of our enterprising and public spirited citizens have started a movement which promises to develop in to a material benefit for Red Lake County.

It is the establishment of a county school of agriculture and domestic economy within the borders of our own county, Our late legislature provided for such a school, and it is up to us to hustle and take advantage of thier act, and have the assistance of the state and make use of the legislature's appropriation.

All of us can see and appreciate what a benefit this institution would be to this county, giving a course of instruction similar to that given by our State University Farm School at Minneapolis. Here we can have an institution of learning at our very doors' where our childern could receive instruction from able professors in the elements of agriculture, including instruction concerning the soil plant life, animal life of the farm, butter making and dairying, a system of farm account and the common branches; and instruction shall also be given in manual traing and domestic economy, in fact, most of the branches for which many of our children travel to Minneaolis to attain at a heavy expense. will be taught. The course of instruction will be prescribed by the dean of the college of agriculture of the state university.

This school will be open to all of our young people who desire to attend free of cost

Our county commissioners appear to be heartly in favor of establishing this school; and with the support of our people we can have it. The school should be located near the center of the county, the logical place being near St. Hilaire where it could be easily reached by all from any part of the county.

A school of this kind will mean a wonderful addition as an eductional institution and will surely prove a powerful factor in the developmant and up building of the resources of our county This project is a worthy one and should receive the hearty co operation and support of every farmer and citizin of Red Lake County. Let's get busy now and work for it; all to geather.- St Hilaire Spectator.

"That cousin of yours is in a sad predicament."

"Still in good spirits, however."

The favor of great men and the praise of the world are not much to be relied on.—French Proverb.

Catching a Bride.

Among certain Siberians the bridegroom is not permitted to have a wife until he can catch her. But they do not give him a fair race in the open. The bride, surrounded by her female friends, awaits him in a big tent. As soon as she sees him she runs off. He follows like Hippomenes after Atalanta. But instead of obstacles being thrown in the way of the bride they are thrown across the path of the bridegroom. The pursuing groom falls over old women, chairs, tables, stones and fishing rods or is tripped up by ropes. Only when it is feared he might give up and sulk and go away without the fleeting lady is he permitted to overtake her. Then as she falls into his outstretched arms it may be imagined she utters some equivalent of "This is so sudden!"

A Live Steak.

"It is a mistake," said the president of the New York Waiters' club, "to think that an Englishman always wants his beef excessively rare. As a matter of fact, the English like their beef better done than we do. I once saw a waiter," he continued, "serve an English duke with a cut of very, very rare sirloin. The duke looked closely at the slice of bright red meat. Then he said:

"'Waiter, just send for the butcher, will you?'

"'The butcher, sir?' the waiter stammered.

"'Yes,' said the duke. 'This beef doesn't seem to be quite dead yet.'"

His Remedy.

"Out of a job?"

"Yes—and they put a woman in my place."

"Gee! Well, I'll tell you—why don't you marry the woman?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Hard and Soft.

"What," asked the teacher, "does anthracite mean?"

"That's a kind of coal," said little Willie.

"Yes. Anthracite coal is what we call hard coal. So 'anthracite' must mean 'hard.' Now, can you tell me what 'bituminous' means?"

"That's coal, too," Willie replied.

"But it isn't the same kind of coal that anthracite is, is it? Bituminous coal is what we commonly refer to as soft coal. Now, Willie, let us see if you can form a sentence containing the words anthracite and bituminous."

Willie thought the matter over for a minute and then said:

"Here's one: 'This morning before pa started downtown ma wanted $5 for groceries and things, and she tried to get it by saying bituminous words, but pa gave her an anthracite look, and when he disappeared around the corner she was weeping bituminously.'"

It's Results That Count

In cooking it's the results that count. So when a housewife starts to make Bread or Rools or Pies, naturally she wants her cooking to havo that rich crisp, pleasing odor. But it must also have that whiteness, lightness and wholesomeness which is so essential to good cooking.

Much of this depends upon the flour—and thousands depend upon,

Better turn out to election next Tuesday and give that proposition to bond a black eye, for there is a "woodchuck" in that wood pile, and don't you forget it

Olaf Hanson the Hilda merchant has made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. an invoice and sale were held yesterday of the bankrupt stock.

Ole Tommerdahl of Star township commited suicide on Sunday morning last by taking carbolic acid. He leaves a wife and two young children. No cause is known for the rash act as he was in moderate circumstances.

Stephen Singer the Kratka merchant was a passenger down river on this mornings steamer, on his return home from Hilda, where he made a deal for the bankrupt stock of the Hilda store yesterday.

At the annual school meeting held at the Highlanding school house on Saturday evening last, P.Sullivan was elected director for two years and W.G.Hunt for cleark for three years. It was voted to have eight months school the comming year if the board secures a first grade teacher, or six months school by a second grade teacher.

It would be a good idea to circulate a petition asking some of them township bodders to move out of Highlanding, if they want to make their living by trying to saddle a bond onto this town to give a few people a "rake off" on a road grader, to stand beside the road and rot, for as soon as the "boodle" got for the bonds is exhausted and the work of fixing the roads commences, you could not get a farmer to put his team onto the grader at all, but the bonds will be there sticking like a mustard plaster, and drawing interest while you are sleeping, and the road grader is a rotting.

Vote down the bond scheme at Tuesdays election,

Mr. Berncth Olson, and daughter Annie, of Garnes left for Canada last Monday evening, for a few weeks visit with their daughter and sister.

A TERRIBLE CONDITION.

Tortured by Sharp Twinges, Shooting Pains and Dizziness.

Hiram Center, 518 South Oak street, Lake City, Minn., says: "I was so bad with kidney trouble that I could not straighten up after stooping without sharp pains shooting through my back. I had dizzy spells, was nervous and my eyesight affected. The kidney secretions were irregular and too frequent. I was in a terrible condition, but Doan's Kidney Pills have cured me and I have enjoyed perfect health since."

CUTICURA CURED FOUR

Southern Woman Suffered with Itching, Burning Rash—Three Little Babies Had Skin Troubles.

"My baby had a running sore on his neck and nothing that I did for it took effect until I used Cuticura. My face was nearly full of tetter or some similar skin disease. It would itch and burn so that I could hardly stand it. Two cakes of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment cured me. Two years after it broke out on my hands and wrist. Sometimes I would go nearly crazy for it itched so badly. I went back to my old stand-by, that had never failed me—one set of Cuticura Remedies did the work. One set also cured my uncle's baby whose head was a cake of sores, and another baby who was in the same fix. Mrs. Lillie Wilcher, 770 Eleventh St., Chattanooga, Tenn., Feb. 16, 1907."

A SURGICAL OPERATION

If there is any one thing that a woman dreads more than another it is a surgical operation.

We can state without fear of a contradiction that there are hundreds, yes, thousands, of operations performed upon women in our hospitals which are entirely unnecessary and many have been avoided by

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

For proof of this statement read the following letters.

Mrs. Barbara Base, of Kingman, Kansas, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"For eight years I suffered from the most severe form of female troubles and was told that an operation was my only hope of recovery. I wrote Mrs. Pinkham for advice, and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has saved my life and made me a well woman."

Mrs. Arthur R. House, of Church Road, Moorestown, N. J., writes:

"I feel it is my duty to let people know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered from female troubles, and last March my physician decided that an operation was necessary. My husband objected, and urged me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and to-day I am well and strong."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, and backache.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

DETROIT'S MAINSTAY IN THE BOX

"WILD BILL" DONOVAN

"Wild Bill" Donovan, the Detroit American League pitcher, is conceded to be one of the best slabmen in the national game to-day. He lost his first game of the season a few days ago after winning nine straight victories.

BASEBALL IN THE DAYS OF ANSON AND SPALDING

E. J. Roe Says National Pastime Was More Exciting Then Than It Is To-Day.

"In my time we used to line 'em out," E. J. Roe of Kansas City, a ball player in the days of Capt. Adrian C. Anson, A. G. Spalding, George Wright and Charles Comiskey, said the other day in speaking of old and modern baseball.

"Hit and run plays, squeeze plays, sacrifice hitting and bunting were unknown," he continued. "Every man went to the plate and the only idea he had in his head was to lose the ball. The infielders made few errors in those days, because they did not have many chances. The outfielders were the players that were kept busy. I used to play first base for the old Canton, Ill., Reds. They were considered the second best team in the state at that time. Anson and Spalding played on the Rockford team, which was considered the best in the state. I played many games in the summer of 1879 against them. Charley Comiskey was just breaking into the game at that time and was a pitcher for the Dubuque team. Pitchers in those days did not throw curve balls and there was no such thing as overhand pitching. The pitcher threw the ball with an underhand motion. They never tried to give a man a base on balls, but wanted him to hit it.

"The salaries in those days were jokes compared with what ball players receive at present. There was no regular salary for playing on the home team. It was an honor that every young man coveted. The rivalry among the small towns to possess a winning ball team was intense. This rivalry was the only opportunity a ball player had to make money. Some club that was anxious to win a game would send to a town where there was a good team and hire from one to three players. These men each received five dollars a day and their expenses for going to this town. That was considered good money, and sometimes an extra fine player made as much as $25 or $30 per month. With no more money than that in sight, and that only for two or three months a year, baseball looked like a poor way to earn a living, and I did not stay in the game very long. I played a few years after leaving school at the time I was 17 or 18 years old, then gave it up for something steady.

"I still enjoy the game and go when I have an opportunity, but I fail to see where the present day game has anything on the game we used to play. In fact, I believe there was more excitement in our games than there is now. No man went to bat in the old days and struck out attempting to hunt a ball. The scientific batter in our day was the man who could place his hits. The player who could place the hits into a certain uncovered territory was the only scientific batsman. The rest of them hit the ball as hard as they could and trusted to luck. Another thing we had in those days was the club spirit. The present ball players seem indifferent. So long as the salary check comes regularly they do not seem to care whether they win or not."

Cannot Slide Well.

"If Harry Niles could slide well," said Lajoie, "he'd be the most dangerous base runner in the big league. His natural speed and ability to get a quick start severely handicap a catcher; but somehow or other he seems to stop the moment he hits the turf. Often he misjudges the distance and dives too soon, stopping before he reaches the sack. It's a fault that can be easily corrected. When Niles does correct it, no one will lead him at base stealing."

After Two Southern Slabmen.

After looking over the Southern league for pitching material Charles Ebbets of the Brooklyn club has decided Perdue and J. Duggan, right handers, with the Nashville club, are the most promising and has offered Manager Bernhard $4,000 for their contracts. Perdue was tried out by the Chicago Cubs two years ago.

BALL STARS TO INVADE FAR EAST NEXT WINTER

Pilgrimage to Japan, China, Hawaii and Philippines by Strong Aggregation Being Planned.

For the first time since the great American game of baseball became a reality the stars of the diamond will invade the orient next winter under the guidance of Jesse Woods, the well-known Honolulu sporting man, and Mike Fisher, the manager who chaperoned so many ball nines in various cities of the Pacific coast during the last eight years. If the trip proves a success—and all indications point that way—it will undoubtedly result in one of the greatest triumphs that the pet pastime of Uncle Sam has ever known, and the game has managed to achieve new wonders every year since its birth half a century ago.

Encouraged by the success of last season's invasion of Honolulu with a nine made up almost wholly of Pacific coast league players, Woods and Fisher decided at its conclusion to undertake the trip far across the broad Pacific. Carefully they laid their plans and so eagerly were they received by all who heard of them that the magnates went at their work with a zest until now they are being boomed throughout the orient.

Little by little the famed tossers of the National and American leagues heard of the wonderful pilgrimage planned by Woods and Fisher. Applications for places on the tourist team came pouring in daily, and now the men engineering the deal can have their pick of the nation's stars.

Woods has sailed for the orient on the steamer Mongolia for the purpose of making the final arrangements and booking the team at the larger cities of Japan, China, Philippines and the Hawaiian islands. His trip will cover a period of three months, and upon his return on October 1, Fisher will have perfected the arrangements at this end of the world, and the party will be ready to invade the far east.

The team will sail direct to Yokohama, where it plays a series of games with the leading Japanese nines of the big city. From there it visits Tokyo, Kobe and Nagasaki. Finishing its tour of Japan, the team goes next to the Philippines and then through China. On its way home the stars will stop over at Honolulu, where the natives will again be waiting to greet them as they were last year.

Jack Bliss, of the St. Louis Nationals, Claude Berry of the Seals, and Pat Donahue of the Boston Americans, likely will be the catchers. In the box will be Orvie Overall of the world's champion Chicago Cubs, and "Big Bill" Burns of the Washingtons. On first, Frank Chance, Hal Chase, "Jiggs" Donahue and Joe Nealon will shine, alternating in the outfield.

Joe Delehanty of Washington, seems assured of the second place position, while Bill Devereaux will do the honors at third. Ty Cobb, the champion hitter of the Detroit Tigers, and George Hildebrand, the popular Seal left fielder, will complete the team—as strong an aggregation as ever toured any foreign country.

Curtice Not to Join Giants.

Harry Curtice, the Notre Dame baseball player, who is under contract to the New York Giants, will not report to that club, but instead will remain in the service of the university, having signed a contract to take the management of all of Notre Dame's athletic teams, succeeding T. P. McCannon of Corning, N. Y. Last season Curtice was coach of the Notre Dame baseball team. He is now at the Notre Dame summer school at Lawton, Mich.

Griffith Thinks Stone Greatest Batter.

"You can talk of Cobb, Lajoie and all the other great hitters, but to my mind George Stone, of the St. Louis Browns, is the best hitter in the American league. He may not always have the highest percentage, but you never see him hit at a ball over his head or one on the ground, and he is one of the few left-handers who is not disturbed by a left-handed pitcher," remarked Clark Griffith.

A PERFECT TERROR.

Horace—Yes, I'm a fearful fellow when I'm roused.

Maud—Really! What time do they waken you?

Politeness.

It was the last day of the term in one of our public kindergartens. The children were all seated around the tables thoroughly enjoying the treat of ice cream which the teacher always provided on this occasion.

Glancing around the room at the beaming faces of the children, the kindergartner noticed one child pick up his plate and lick it.

She went up to him and said in a low tone of voice: "Freddie, put down your plate; it is not polite to pick it up and lick it."

Fred obeyed at once, quietly placing his plate on the table. He then put his head down to the plate and licked it.

Weary Willie's Complaint.

William J. Rynn, president of the supreme council of public hackmen of New York, said the other day that the winter panic had reduced the hackmen's receipts considerably.

"We'll have to come down to English rates—12 cents a mile instead of 50 cents—if we have many more such panics," Mr. Ryan said. "Everybody felt the pinch. I overheard a tramp grumbling in a public square.

"'The trade ain't like it used to be,' he said. 'Here ten times running today I've asked for a bit of bread, and what do they give me? Why, durn it, just a bit o' bread.'"—Exchange.

HEALTH AND INCOME

Both Kept Up on Scientific Food.

Good sturdy health helps one a lot to make money.

With the loss of health one's income is liable to shrink, if not entirely dwindle away.

When a young lady has to make her own living, good health is her best asset.

"I am alone in the world," writes a Chicago girl, "dependent on my own efforts for my living. I am a clerk, and about two years ago through close application to work and a boarding house diet, I became a nervous invalid, and got so bad off it was almost impossible for me to stay in the office a half day at a time.

"A friend suggested to me the idea of trying Grape-Nuts, which I did, making this food a large part of at least two meals a day.

"Today I am free from brain-tire, dyspepsia, and all the ills of an overworked and improperly nourished brain and body. To Grape-Nuts I owe the recovery of my health, and the ability to retain my position and income." "There's a Reason."

Costly Popularity.

France's cruiser Leon Gambetta is named after the famous politician, who died on December 31, 1882. In the times of his intense popularity Gambetta had an experience which he was wont to tell against himself. In Paris admirers unyoked his horses and dragged the carriage to his house. Gambetta would narrate this with an air of pride, and he would add, with a smile: "But I never saw my horses again!"

WESTERN CANADA IS FIRE SWEPT

FERNIE WIPED OFF THE MAP AND FATE OF OTHER TOWNS IS IN DOUBT.

More Than a Hundred Lives are Lost in Crow's Nest Pass. Starvation Faces Thousands of Refugees Who Fled to Open Places.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 3.—The town of Fernie, B. C., is wiped off the map as a child cleans a slate. Michel, fourteen miles distant, is in flames.

The fate of Hosmer, Olson and Sparwood, intervening towns, is in doubt, they being cut off from all communication.

Over one hundred lives are known to have been lost, seventy-five of them in Fernie alone.

The financial loss is estimated between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000.

/A territory of one hundred square miles in extent is a seething mass of flames. Through it are scattered hundreds of lumbermen and prospectors so the actual loss of life will not be known for days.

The properties of the Canadian Pacific and the Great Northern railways are destroyed, their bridges and rolling stock burned, so that it is impossible either to enter or leave the burning area.

The inhabitants of the towns have fled to open districts in the vicinity in the hope of safety. From towns in the east and west the inhabitants are escaping as rapidly as possible. The railway companies have placed all available trains at their disposal.

Unless there is change of wind within the next twenty-four hours the whole of the Crow's Nest pass country will be left to the flames.

There is no possibility of estimating the loss of life and property which will result, for the flames are driven by a half gale, making it impossible to put up a fight against their advance.

The conflagration is the greatest which has ever visited Canada, and ranks only with the San Francisco disaster.

At present 3,000 people are camped in the open their only shelter being huts of brush and blankets.

Fire is not the only danger. Starvation has been added to the situation.

At present the fire is following the crest of the mountain chain above Sparwood, eating down into the valleys on either si e.

INDIAN KILLS GIRL

Little Rising Sun Confesses to Brutal North Dakota Murder.

Bottineau, N. D., Aug. 1.—When called to plead yesterday to the charge of murder in the first degree for the slaying of 16-year-old Alexandra Siedel, at Somber, the Indian, Little Rising Sun, pleaded guilty and stated to the court, thru his interpreter, that, at the order of Joe Peltier, he struck the blow with a shotgun that killed her while Charley Peltier held her arms behind her to keep her still.

The first blow was struck across the forehead and knocked the girl's brains out. Then they dragged her on the bed, broke a lamp on the bedding, set fire to the place, rifled the house and escaped into the woods. The Indian said he saw Joe Peltier kill old man Seidel.

On account of his youth, being only 16, he was given a life sentence. The Peltiers, both older men, were sentenced to be hung at the state penitentiary at Bismarck, Feb. 9 next. This ends the case of what seems to have been an old-time Indian massacre and the officers have made a quick clean-up.

ELECTROCUTED.

Two Men Moving a Hay Derrick Instantly Killed.

Bozeman, Mont., Aug. 1.—Plato Brock and Robert Walsh were instantly killed on the Matt Neibail ranch yesterday morning. In moving a hay derrick the cable end was swung up and it came in contact with the power line of the Madison Electric Power company.

The two men were holding a chain attached to the derrick, and when the cable touched the power wire, carrying 40,000 volts, they were killed instantly.

Sixty Run Down by Train.

Port William, Ont., Aug. 1.—A Canadian Pacific express train ran into a gang of sixty section men employed on the double track at Osco. Three men were killed and a fourth is so badly injured that he will die. The men had stepped from the westbound track to allow a freight train to pass.

"HELP! HELP!!"

SANDS DIES AWFUL DEATH

VANDERBILT'S STEPSON DIES IN AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT.

Smash-up and Explosion of Motor Car Occurs Near Stepfather's Beautiful Country Seat.

Paris.—In one of the most terrible automobile accidents in many years in France G. Winthrop Sands, a stepson of W. K. Vanderbilt, was killed Wednesday morning just outside the grounds of Mr. Vanderbilt's beautiful country seat, the Chateau St. Louis De Poissy, 20 miles from Paris.

Mr. Sands was driving his 50-horse power car along at a terrific clip, in a desire to reach the chateau, where Mrs. Sands and her infant daughter were staying. He had always been known as a reckless driver and, as he had been delayed at railroad crossings, he opened the throttle wide as he approached the chateau grounds.

Almost immediately a tire burst and the machine crashed into a tree, turning turtle and burying Mr. Sands under the forward part and pinning the chauffeur, Pickins, to the ground. An explosion followed and in a moment the car was in flames.

Peasants working in the adjoining fields were the only witnesses to the accident. They rushed to the rescue, but fearing a further explosion of the gasoline tank and deterred by the sweep of flames, they stood idly by, not knowing how to give assistance to the injured men. Finally they managed to raise the rear of the car and release the chauffeur, and a little later, after beating down the fire, they dragged out the torn, bleeding and burned body of Sands.

Help soon arrived from the chateau, which is in the center of Mr. Vanderbilt's great breeding farm. The injured men were carried to the house, where it was found that Sands was beyond the hope of recovery, but that the chauffeur was not seriously injured.

BIG FIRE IN PHILADELPHIA.

Hamburg-America Pier and Quantities of Merchandise Burn.

Philadelphia.—The Hamburg-America line pier of the International Mercantile Marine company, at pier 46 South Delaware avenue, was destroyed by a spectacular fire Friday night, entailing a loss estimated at $400,000. The German steamer Albano, from Hamburg, was anchored at the pier and had to be towed out into the river. The cargo of the boat was on the wharf and was destroyed together with great quantities of merchandise, including 1,000 bales of burlap.

Detroit Man Slays His Wife.

Detroit, Mich. — Crazed by the heat and also somewhat under the influence of liquor, Tim Minahan, a lineman, wound up a quarrel with his wife by shooting her twice through the head and the heart Wednesday, killing the woman instantly. Minahan then turned the revolver upon himself and inflicted a dangerous wound in his forehead.

FARMAN FLIES WELL.

Successful Tests of French Aeroplane Are Made.

New York.—Rising from the ground like a giant bird and darting through the air at express train speed, Henri Farman's aeroplane, the interesting heavier-than-air flying machine he brought here from France to demonstrate his ability to fly, made its initial flight in this country late Friday afternoon at Brighton Beach.

It rose from an especially prepared runway at the will of the inventor and after attaining a height of 25 feet flew straight ahead on a direct line, finally alighting with exquisite grace when the noted air pilot diminished the motive power.

During the brief space of time in which the aeroplane was skimming over the center field of the racetrack, the few hundred spectators, most of whom were friends of the inventor or rival aviators, watched the flight with breathless interest. The instant the trim-looking machine landed cheers rent the air—cheers far more enthusiastic and vociferous than those of a racetrack crowd. Farman was surrounded and literally hugged by the jubilant aeronauts. Members of the Aero Club of America, under whose auspices Farman will conduct his public flights at Brighton Beach, wanted to carry the successful inventor off the field on their shoulders.

TO BUILD G. A. R. BATTLESHIP.

Veterans in Ohio Start Movement for Popular Subscription.

Marion, O.—A movement to raise money by popular subscription to build a mammoth United States battleship was inaugurated Friday by Owen Gray post, G. A. R., at Larue, this county. The only request to be made of the national government, according to the resolutions adopted by the post, is that the battleship shall bear the name "Grand Army of the Republic," as a memorial to the veterans of the civil war. It is expected that every Grand Army post in the country will take up the movement. Contributions of one dollar or more are to be received from all citizens.

PECULIAR DEATH OF A GIRL.

Leakage of Heart, Caused Probably by a Needle Point.

Warsaw, Ind.—Within five minutes after she awakened her mother early Friday to tell of a peculiar sensation that had come over her, Violetta Bowen, aged 16, passed away from leakage of the heart. It is one of the most peculiar cases that has ever come to the attention of local physicians. A post-mortem examination developed that a minute sharp instrument, resembling the point of a needle, had entered her heart through the arteries.

Michigan Convention Dates.

Grand Rapids, Mich. — The Republican state central committee at a session here Wednesday afternoon decided to call the state nominating convention for September 29 at Detroit. James O. Murfin of Detroit will be temporary chairman. The county conventions were called for September 9. E. E. Alward of Clare was made secretary of the state committee and Charles Moore of Detroit treasurer.

Christiania.—The French battleship Verite, having on board President Fallieres and convoyed by a squadron of French warships, arrived here Friday afternoon. King Haakon boarded the battleship and greeted M. Fallieres.

PICK HISGEN-GRAVES

INDEPENDENCE PARTY NAMES ITS TICKET.

HEARST'S KEYNOTE TALK

He Rakes Over Old Political Faiths—'One Man Nearly Mobbed for Suggesting Bryan as a Candidate.

Chicago.—For President—Thomas L. Hisgen of Massachusetts.

For vice-president—John Temple Graves of Georgia.

The friends of Mr. Bryan made an effort during the night session to bring his name before the convention and the man who atempted it nearly produced a riot and narrowly escaped physical violence at the hands of the indignant delegates. The man who sought to place Mr. Bryan in nomination was J. I. Shepard of Fort Scott, Kan. He did not succeed in his mission, for being called to order by the convention and questioned by Chairman Charles A. Walsh, he admitted that it was his intention to name Mr. Bryan. That was the first and last time he mentioned the name of the Democratic leader. He was promptly ruled out of order by the chairman and under the guard of several sergeants-at-arms he was hustled out of the hall while some of the incensed delegates vainly attempted to strike him with fists and one of them swung at him savagely with a cane.

Three Ballots Needed.

The nomination of Mr. Hisgen was made on the third ballot, his chief competitors being Milford W. Howard of Alabama and John Temple Graves of Georgia. Reuben R. Lyon of New York received a complimentary vote on the first ballot and William Randolph Hearst had 49 friends who voted for him on the first two ballots.

The nomination of Mr. Graves was made unanimously, all the other candidates having been withdrawn.

Mr. Hearst's Speech.

In the course of his "keynote" speech, Temporary Chairman Hearst said:

"In 1792 Thomas Jefferson, who had penned the principles of the Declaration of Independence, founded the Democratic-Republican party to perpetuate those principles.

"In 1840 this party, founded to be the party of the people, had become the party of privilege, and the Democratic party came into being and crystallized about the personality and principles of Andrew Jackson. In 1854 the Democratic party had become the property of an arrogant aristocracy, which denounced the self-evident truths of the Declaration of Independence as 'self-evident lies.' Then the Republican party was born to restore the action of the government to the principles of Washington and Jefferson, and Abraham Lincoln led it to victory.

"Is it not time, is there not need, for a new party which shall take up the work of the parties of Jefferson, of Jackson and of Lincoln and preserve for us and for the citizens of the future the rights and liberties which these parties in their hour of usefulness preserved for the citizens of their time?

Calls Old Party Faithless.

"The old parties, in this day of their decadence, are no longer equal to this work, for they have become unfaithful to the principles which inspired them and unworthy of the patriots who founded them. The Republican party is the open and avowed handmaiden of the trusts. It scorns those who would rescue it, repudiates those who would reform it, and glories brazenly in its profitable infamy. The Democratic party is merely envious of its sordid sister's ill-gotten finery. It upbraids her at one election and imitates her at the next. The Republican leaders are the political attorneys of trusts and monopolies, the representatives in public life of those giant corporations which have superseded the people in this republic as the source of power and the seat of authority."

Lyncher Killed; Negro Hanged.

Pensacola, Fla.—At the cost of one man killed and many wounded, some of whom will die, a mob at 11 o'clock Wednesday night succeeded in taking Lee Shaw, a negro, from the Pensacola jail and lynching him in the public square of the city. The lynching followed a battle at the jail, the building being desperately defended by the sheriff and his deputies.

Woman Killed; Body Burned.

New York.—In the finding of the half-charred body of a young woman early Wednesday morning in an isolated section of Williamsburg, Brooklyn, one of the most atrocious and cunningly-planned murders that has been given to the police to solve in many years was revealed.

TO FIGHT OIL DECISION

CONFERENCE OF AUTHORITIES AT LENOX, MASS.

Attorney-General Bonaparte Announces That Attempt Will Be Made to Secure New Hearing.

Lenox, Mass.—After an all-day conference of the leading government prosecuting officers and Frank B. Kellogg of Minnesota, one of the special counsel for the government in certain civil suits, it was announced by Attorney General Bonaparte Wednesday that every effort would be made to secure a revision of the recent decision and opinion of the United States circuit court of appeals in the case of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, and that an application for a reargument of the case and a motion for a modification of the opinion would be submitted to that court.

The following statement was made by the attorney general:

"The government will make every effort in its power to secure a revision of the recent decision and opinion of the circuit court of appeals for the Seventh circuit in the case of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, either by the court of appeals itself, or if necessary by the supreme court of the United States. The gentlemen who have been in consultation with me all unite in my opinion that in the interest of the impartial and effective administration of our laws, such action on the part of the government is imperatively demanded by the circumstances of the case and the possible consequences if this opinion should stand as authority without question by the government. To this end an application for a reargument of the case and a motion for a modification of the opinion will be submitted to the circuit court of appeals on behalf of the United States at the earliest possible moment. Other appropriate steps will be taken afterward, their character to be determined by the court's action upon this application."

F. DORR SUSPENDS BUSINESS.

Prominent Broker Closes His Many Offices.

San Francisco.—Frederick Dorr, a broker with offices in this city, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, Butte, Mont., and Spokane, Wash., a member of the New York stock exchange and the Chicago board of trade, telegraphed Tuesday from New York to his local manager to suspend business. Lack of patronage, due to dull times, is the cause given for the suspension.

He maintained expensive offices in Los Angeles and this city, with leased wires connecting them with eastern cities, Dorr wired from Chicago:

"No one has lost any money, or will. I am not trying to sell my membership in any exchange. They are absolutely clear, and no money is being borrowed on them."

ASSAULTER BURNED AT STAKE.

Greenville, Tex., Public Square is Scene of Dire Vengeance.

Dallas, Tex. — "Tad" Smith, a negro boy, 18 years old, charged with criminal assault on Miss Viola Delancey at Clinton, Hunt county, was captured by officers Tuesday. He was taken before the young lady and identified. The prisoner was then hurried to the Greenville jail. Before arriving there, however, a mob of citizens overpowered the officers, took the prisoner and prepared to hang him. This idea was given up, however, and the mob agreed to burn him at the stake. Fagots were piled up in the public square at Greenville and the negro was placed thereon. Kerosene oil was poured on and a match applied. Smith slowly burned to death while 1,000 people witnessed the execution by fire.

Parachute Jumper Killed.

Jackson, Mich.—William Oliver, a young aeronaut of Mason, Mich., was killed Thursday while making a parachute drop at Hague park, on Vandercook lake near here. Just as the parachute filled the strings on one side snapped and the aeronaut dropped 2,000 feet to his death, the parachute trailing, a useless rag, after him. Oliver landed near a crowded merry-go-round and lived five minutes after being carried to the nearest house.

Wife-Slayer Is Dead.

New York.—Dr. Andrew Bergen Cropsey, the veterinary surgeon who shot and killed his wife in her home at Bath Beach a week ago, died suddenly in the Raymond street jail, Brooklyn, Tuesday. Heart disease, according to the prison physician, was the cause.

Iowa Merchant Found Dead.

Iowa City, Ia.—The body of Edward Eckert, a jeweler of Marengo, was found partly submerged in the Iowa river near Amana. Two bullet holes were in the temple.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Law Is Valid.

St. Paul—The state board of control by a decision of the supreme court will now be able to proceed with the location and erection of the state hospital and farm for inebriates. The court has affirmed the decision of the lower court in a test case brought by the board of control against the city of Morris and held the law constitutional which sought to establish the farm.

The law was passed by the last legislature and provided that 2 per cent of the income from liquor licenses in all the municipalities of the state was to be sent to the state treasurer for a separate fund for the maintenance of a farm and hospital for habitual drunkards. Morris refused to pay the 2 per cent, alleging that it was taking property which was not subject to a tax and that the state didn't have the right anyway to put a man in a hospital because he drank too much and the law must be wrong. But the supreme court, in a decision written by Chief Justice Start, says that the law is all right and that nothing was enacted which cannot be carried out in a legal manner.

First New Grain.

Minneapolis—First new grain from the harvest fields northwest struck town the 27th, the Great Western bringing in a car of barley, shipped by C. D. Orr, of Northfield, to McIntyre-French of the Chamber of Commerce.

Much interest always attaches to the first movement and buyers watch it closely as price and quality indication for the big run later on. The Northfield car tested 47 pounds to the bushel, was a good barley, of medium color, and with buyers crowding about and inspecting it, was sold finally to T. M. McCord for 56 cents a bushel. Such a price for barley, after taking out freight and charges, leaves a profitable return for the producer, and as there is a good big barley crop in the Dakotas and Minnesota this year the season has opened auspiciously.

A car of new rye, from Ottawa, shipped to Brenner, was received here later. It was delivered to W. T. Fraser.

Lemon for Women.

St. Paul—The attorney general's office slipped a lemon to the women of Minnesota when it rendered an opinion that women would not be allowed to vote this fall on a constitutional amendment concerning the qualifications of county superintendents of public instruction. The opinion was written by C. Louis Weeks of the attorney general's department on a letter of inquiry from J. W. Olson, state superintendent.

Women are permitted to vote on matters pertaining to the schools and as the amendment relates to the officers of the schools, many believe they should be allowed to cast their ballot for the amendment to Article 7 of Section 7 of the constitution, which relates to school officers.

But the legal opinion shuts out the women of Minnesota from the only possible chance they have had since the creation of the state to vote on a proposition of state-wide interest.

Nine-Word Name.

Hamline—After considerable correspondence with the representative of the United States government, it has been discovered that the name of the chief of the Sioux Indians, who are to make the attack on Fort Ridgely on the State Fair grounds each evening of the Minnesota State Fair, from Aug. 31 to Sept. 5, is Wicaeta-hunkexni-matooyuspe, the translation of which is "Man-that-runs-slow-to-catch-the-bear."

Experts in nomenclature are invited to make any suggestions as to capitalization of this nine-jointed name that may occur to them. This is, in no sense, a prize contest, although the State Fair officials regard it as a prize name.

Wool Center.

Minneapolis—Minneapolis, in being selected as the storage point for the National Woolgrowers' association, which met at Cheyenne, Wyo., not only receives marked recognition of its importance as a distributing center, but gains a valuable addition to its annual volume of business. One immediate benefit will be the investment of $100,000 in a plant for the storage of wool, while it is awaiting shipment.

BRIEF NOTES.

Duluth—Eli Mattich must spend 20 years in prison for the killing of Rode Donjovich on April 20.

Rochester—Mortimer Marley, driver for a general delivery concern, was severely injured in a runaway.

Minneapolis—A Winona boy who lived four years with broken neck dies following operation in the hospital.

Thief River Falls—The Press is booming the establishment of a county school of agriculture and domestic science for Red Lake county over there.

County seat removal seems to be dead and politicts dull,

Now the Democrats are accusing Jacobson of being in with the Standard Oil Co. because he is going to tour the state in an automobile.

It seems to be the only candidate for office, that in making any campaign, and he may land the nomination and election, while the other candidates are waiting for the weather to get cooler.

The bonding proposition carried at last Tuesdays election as might have been expected in view of the fact that there had been a grader agent in the township for some time offering precentage to voters to favor the scheam. The people were so busy haying that the bonders had everything their own way.

There is a good prospect that the bonds voted at last Tuesdays election will not be legal as to this years assessed valuation as the matter will be taken into the courts by the opposition. The county and state board of equalization have not passed on the assessed valuation of Highlanding yet

We note that candidate Nelson is useing the same cuts to get votes that he used two year ago He should have one of his pictures taken at the present time, and placed under the one he had taken two years ago, and mark one, "before taking," and the other one, "after taking." Of course he would have to have them copyrighted to prevent them from being stolen and used by some patent medicine company

If there ever was harmony in the Republican party of this state it is at the present time. The following from the Princeton Union is the seniment that prevails throughout the state:

"On several occasions during the past four months the Union has advanced reasons why Hon. J.F. Jacobson should receive the republican nomination for governor. Now that he is the unanimous nominee of his party for that position it is unnecessary to reiterate those reasons at ttis time. Suffice it to say that the republican state convention simply registered the will of an overwhelming majority of the republican voters of the state py nominating Mr. Jacobson.

There is no reasonable excuse for any man who claims to be a republican to refuse to support Mr. Jacobson. His record is an open book. He stands on that record He has made no pledges to any man or set of men, and he will make none, save such as he will make to the general public.

We believe he will be elected by a large majority over any canidate his oppenates may name and he will prove a model governor he will be governor in fact as well as in name.—Thief River Falls News

STORY OF THE FLOOD

One of the Strange Legends of the Yuma Indians.

CAUSE OF THE GREAT STORM.

The Tipping Up of the Earth Caused the Deluge Which Engulfed the World—The Mysterious Ark and the Escape of the Chosen Few.

To this day the great deluge recorded in the Bible is a mystery to the North American Indian. He will not be led to believe that the flood was brought about by the sins of man. He is equally unwilling to believe that it was the work of an angry God, as he could not see how the Almighty should be so unjust as to punish the Indians of America for the naughty things of a race of people across the ocean. Another reason which makes it still more difficult for the Indian to believe that the flood was a punishment to the world is the fact that with him there is no sin. In his language there is no such word, nor does he expect to be punished for any of his acts.

But though there is no equivalent to the word sin in the Indian language (nor in the Indian mind until the Christians came), the Indians have their philosophy in regard to what is commonly so termed. Some of their teachers (most of whom claimed to have been taught the philosophy of life and its laws directly by disembodied spirits or by ethereal beings from other planets) taught that as man lives here so is his life hereafter. If he is quarrelsome or warlike here, so he will be in the more spiritual life. If he is serene and contented here, so he will be there, etc.

The deluge, as described by the few who were miraculously saved, was the more grandly terrible in that it came on suddenly. From the highlands occupied by the Indians they saw the waves of the sea sweep in upon the land and recede, only to advance with immensely increased volume and stupendously huge breakers. Then there came a terrific storm that seemed to blow from all and in all directions. The storm caused huge waterspouts which appeared over the wild ocean as far as the eye could see. The terrified people fled to the mountains, but these were all soon to be submerged with the exception of one. This mountain which alone remained uncovered by the flood is called Avee-hellah (Mountain of the Moon), yet today it is not a very high mountain.

For awhile before the mountains became submerged there was a great calm, and a dense fog covered the earth. Then suddenly a mighty boat appeared to the awed view of the Indians. It approached and stopped at the several mountains still uncovered by the waters, and at each point where it touched, as if guided by invisible intelligence, the Indians, as if obeying an unspoken but potent command, entered the boat.

The boat rested first at a place called Avee-qua-lal (mountain peak), now Pilot Knob, on the border of Mexico. There was a mesa on the top of this mountain, though at this day it does not exist, and on this mesa the Indians first celebrated their delivery. This they did by playing sacred games, chanting sacred songs, etc. On rocks at the foot of this peak there are hieroglyphics in an unknown language which some of the Indians believe were made by those who survived the flood

Petrified driftwood is still to be seen two-thirds the distance up the sides of Avee-hellah, which drift, the Indians say, was deposited by the waves of the great flood

The Indians, having rested for a time on the mountain peak, again entered the boat and were carried eastward, eventually to a small valley. Here they again rested, and then, leaving the boat, they wandered from one place to another, after a time returning to the valley. To their surprise, the boat was gone. It could not have floated away, for the land was dry whereon they had left it, the flood having subsided after a great calm of its waters. The boat could not have crumbled to pieces, for there had not been time for its decay. They could only conclude that the mysterious boat, having fulfilled its mission of preserving a few of their race, had disappeared as miraculously as it had appeared

The spot where the mysterious boat, or ark, had rested was marked by the Indians placing there a huge log. They called the place Qual-jo-para (boat's resting place). This spot is held sacred by the Indians, who will seldom point it out to strangers. Not many hundred years ago, it is said, some Indian warriors were passing the spot, and one of them to show his skepticism shot an arrow into the side of the great log. Immediately a stream of blood gushed from the spot pierced, and the skeptic fell dead. The story of the event was carried to all the near tribes, and since then Indians passing the place fear to even look leisurely at the log.

A reason given by the Indians as the probable cause of the flood was that there was a tribe of Indians who, like Columbus, believed that the earth was not flat, but round, and to prove whether this theory were true thousands from the different tribes banded together and started out on a journey to find the edge of the earth if it was flat. The flood occurred soon after the Indians started on this journey, so that they really believed that those adventurers had reached the edge of the earth and their weight had tipped the earth to such an extent as to cause the water to rush in on the land.—Los Angeles Times.

Suggested by a Lady.

"Let me have five two-cent stamps, please," said a lady to the polite young man behind the counter in the post-office.

"Yessum," he said, handing them out.

"Can't you let me have them in one piece?" she added.

"Certainly, ma'am," said the young man. "Can I send them home for you?"

"Oh, no; I don't live far away, and I am going straight home. I wouldn't put you to the trouble."

"No trouble at all," said the polite official. "I haven't very much to do today, and I could easily spare an hour."

"Very much obliged," said the lady smiling sweetly. "Dear me," she added, putting on a stamp, "what a bother it is to stamp letters! Why can't we send letters and let the postoffice send in their bill once a month?"

"They might just as well," said the obliging young man sympathizingly. "I'll mention the fact in my next report to Washington."

"Will you? How nice! But you mustn't mention my name. Say the idea was suggested by a lady."

A Metaphor With a History.

To "know a hawk from a hernshaw" is a metaphor with a curious history It is a comparison drawn from falconry. "Hernshaw" is a corruption of "heronshaw," or young heron, a bird which was a common prey of the falcons. To know a hawk from a hernshaw is therefore to be able to distinguish the falcon from its prey. A further colloquial corruption crept into the phrase—"to know a hawk from a handsaw," a form used by Hamlet in one place. Possibly the distinction between a hawk and a hernshaw was found not to be strong enough for the purposes of the proverb.—Manchester Guardian.

It's Results That Count

In cooking it's the results that count. So when a housewife starts to make Bread or Rools or Pies, naturally she wants her cooking to have that rich crisp, pleasing odor. But it must also have that whiteness, lightness and wholesomeness which is so essential to good cooking.

Much of this depends upon the flour—and thousands depend upon,

Trivial Cause of a Bloody War.

In the year 1654 a Polish nobleman became obnoxious to the laws of his country by reason of his having committed a crime. He fled to Sweden, whereupon John Casimir, king of Poland, wrote to Charles Gostavus, king of Sweden, demanding the surrender of the criminal. The king of Sweden on reading the dispatch noticed that his own name and titles were followed by two "et ceteras," while the name of the king of Poland was followed by three. The missing "et cetera" so enraged the king of Sweden that he at once declared war against Poland. The war was carried on with great bitterness until 1660, when a peace was signed at Oliva, near Danzig. A contemporary writer (Kochowsky) poured out his lamentations on the war in these terms: "How dear has this 'et cetera' been to us! With how many lives have these two potentates paid for these missing eight letters! With what streams of blood has the failure of a few drops of ink been avenged!"

A Horse's Toe Nails.

Few persons realize that a horse' hoof is really the same thing as the toe nails of human beings or of animals having toes. The horn of a hoof grows just as a toe nail does. The hoof grows more rapidly in unshod horses than in those wearing shoes and it grows faster in horses which are well groomed and well fed. It on an average the horn grows about third of an inch a month Hind hoofs grow faster than fore hoofs. The toe of the hoof being the longest part, it takes longer for the horn to grow down there than at the heel. For instance, the toe will grow entirely down in from eleven to thirteen months while the heel will grow down in from three to five months. As the new horn grows out any cracks or defects in the old gradually work down to where they can be cut off, just as with human finger nails you can watch the progress of a bruise from the root to the tip.—New York Sun.

Dictionary Users Modest.

"Men are never so modest as when they go to use a dictionary," remarked an attendant at the public library. "As a rule, when you see a man go to a public dictionary or one in any place where other people are around you'll see him look about furtively as if in fear somebody might see him. Men who make no pretensions at having any great amount of knowledge [illegible] theless seem to be [illegible] to have any one think that they do not know the [illegible] [illegible] just [illegible] a word in the dictionary just ask him what it is he is looking up and see if he will tell you. You'll find in at least nine cases out of ten that he won't tell you. He's afraid you'll know it and have the fun of enlightening him."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Are You Going To Build?

Do You Need Lumber?

DO YOU WANT TO BUY WHERE YOU CAN GET IT THE CHEAPEST?

I have the Agencey for a large quantity of good lumber down at Plummer, which I desire to sell, and before you buy lumber it will pay you to call at the Highlanding Creamery and get my prices, as I can save you money.

Trained.

"My men work well," said a police commissioner, "because they are well trained. Training, you know, is everything."

He paused and smiled.

"Two physicians were discussing," he said, "a certain pretty nurse.

"'Was she a trained nurse?' said the first physician.

"'She must have been,' replied the other. 'She hadn't been in the hospital a week before she was engaged to the richest patient.'"—Washington Star.

A Limited Luxury.

Two Irishmen were discussing the phenomenon of sleep. Said one, "Oi hear as wan av thim poethry lads calls it 'bald nature's hair reshtoorer.'"

"Yis," assented the other; "shlape's a grand luxury. It's a pity a man can't kape awake long enough to inj'y it. Jist whin he's thinkin' phwat a foine long shnooze he'll be havin', begorra, it's mornin'!"—Judge.

Gallant Lover.

"Silly boy," she said, "why did you get offended? Though my words were severe, you might have seen that I was smiling."

"Well," he replied magnanimously, "your mouth is so small I didn't notice it."—Philadelphia Press.

ALL RUN DOWN.

Miss Della Stroebe, who had Completely Lost Her Health, Found Relief from Pe-ru-na at Once.

Read What She Says:

MISS DELLA STROEBE, 710 Richmond St., Appleton, Wis., writes:

"For several years I was in a run-down condition, and I could find no relief from doctors and medicines. I could not enjoy my meals, and could not sleep at night. I had heavy, dark circles about the eyes.

"My friends were much alarmed. I was advised to give Peruna a trial, and to my joy I began to improve with the first bottle. After taking six bottles I felt completely cured. I cannot say too much for Peruna as a medicine for women in a run-down condition."

Pe-ru-na Did Wonders.

Mrs. Judge J. F. Boyer, 1421 Sherman Ave., Evanston, Ill., says that she became run down, could neither eat nor sleep well, and lost flesh and spirit. Peruna did wonders for her, and she thanks Peruna for new life and strength.

IT SEEMED INCURABLE

"From the age of three months until fifteen years old, my son Owen's life was made intolerable by eczema in its worst form. In spite of treatments the disease gradually spread until nearly every part of his body was quite raw. He used to tear himself dreadfully in his sleep and the agony he went through is quite beyond words. The regimental doctor pronounced the case hopeless. We had him in hospitals four times and he was pronounced one of the worst cases ever admitted. From each he was discharged as incurable. We kept trying remedy after remedy, but had gotten almost past hoping for a cure. Six months ago we purchased a set of Cuticura Remedies. The result was truly marvelous and to-day he is perfectly cured. Mrs. Lily Hedge, Camberwell Green, England, Jan. 12, 1907."
